and the finest Raw-Silk next the Perſian. The Country is full of Caſtles and Towns, and the Inhabitants are employed either in manufacturing their Silk, Cotton and Herba, (which by the way, is the Rind of a Plant, that being pill'd off yields a fine Thread, which is woven into thoſe pretty Stuffs, known to us by the name of this Country) and Civiliz'd ſo far as from vicious Pirates, to become of a very courteous and affable Diſpoſition. This Kingdom had formerly a Prince of its own, who was a Potent Monarch, but overcome by the great Mogul in 1582, and the Country made a Province of his Empire. Afterwards the Governors he had appointed in it, ſet up for themſelves; ſo that Sha-Jehan, the Father of Aureng-Zebe, was put to the trouble of conquering it a ſecond time: ſince when it has been undisputedly ſubject to that Emperor: And is divided into Four Parts, viz. 1. Bengall proper, otherwiſe nam'd the Government of Ouleſſer or Jagannet, being the Maritime part. 2. Patana the Eastern Part. 3. Elabas, or Heliabaſs, the Northern; and 4. Prurep, Mid-land. Before we proceed to the account of the Cities, 'tis neceſſary to Correct an Error very common in the Maps, which ſet down Bengall as the chief City, whereas indeed there is either no ſuch Town, or at moſt but a very obſcure one; our Merchants and Sea-men that have been there ſo often, know no ſuch place, and according to the accounts of the ſituation of the City Bengall, it ſhould ſeem they mean Chatigan, a place of conſiderable Traffick, call'd Porto Maggiore by the Portugueſe, ſeated at the mouth of the Eastern Branch of the Ganges, over againſt the ſuppoſed Bengall. The chief Cities of this Kingdom being, Heliabaſs or Preja, ſuppoſed to be the Paliſotbra of Strabo and Ptolemy, which was the Metropolis of the Gangarides; it ſtands in the Northern Conſines, at the Confluence of the Gemini with the Ganges, and is at preſent a very ſtrong Fortification, built about a hundred Years ago, being a Stone Caſtle with a ſtately Palace, the Seat of the Governor of this part of the Kingdom; ſurrounded with three Walls and a deep Moat. The Indians pretend to ſhew here the Sepulchre of Adam and Eve, in an ancient Subterranean Cave. Bameres or Benarou on the Eaſt ſide the Ganges, is a handſome built large City, the Houſes of Brick and Stone, higher than uſual in India, and noted for an Indian Univerſity, as is alſo Nudnea. Cannourwe on the Weſt ſide the Ganges. Saſeren near the great Pool Banrea, a ſpacious City of high Houſes, built of a Foſſil dug in the neighbouring Quarries, and burnt to the hardneſs of Stone. Ratas, ſomewhat diſtant from the River to the South-weſt, is a Fortreſs ſeated on an inacceſſible Hill, and ſurrounded with three Moats full of Fiſh, and the Walls of that extent, as to incloſe large Fields; all which render the Place impregnable. Soumelpore, notable for the fine Diamonds found in its River, ſuppoſed to be waſhed down from the neighbouring Mountains. Pattana, ſeated on the Weſt ſide of the Ganges, and not on the Eaſt as ſome Maps place it, is for Largeneſs and Richneſs not exceeded by any in the Kingdom; but its Buildings are not answerable, being but low and mean; 'tis two Miles in length (two Leagues ſays Tavernier) and very Populous. This is the Reſidence of a Governor of the neighbouring Country, and the Seat of an Engliſh and a Dutch Factory, and eſpecially notable for Salt-Petre. A little below Pattana lie the Ruins of Gourra, once the largeſt City in the World, being a hundred Miles in compaſs: It was the Seat of twenty ſix Kings of Bengall, every one whereof diſdaining to live in the Houſe of his Predeceſſor, built a ſumptuous Palace, which chiefly contributed to the mighty extent of the Place: thus far Mr. Marſhal, an Engliſh Traveller in thoſe parts. But Father Toſi with more propability tells us, the Walls are nine Miles in compaſs, and encloſe the Ruins of many noble Palaces; at preſent the place is almoſt depopulated. Malda, a little diſtant from the River, is a large Town with a good Trade, and the Seat of an Engliſh Factory. Casſimbazar, ſeated at the Efflux of the Eastern Arm of the Ganges, in the Latitude of 26 D. is a City of very great Traffick, eſpecially for Silk. Rajmahal, on the Eaſt-ſide of the Ganges, at a little diſtance from it, and on a ſmall River that falls into it, which made a commodious Haven, and brought a conſiderable Traffick to the Town, it is well built, and was ſometime the Seat of the Governour of Bengall; but Tavernier ſays the Haven is choaked up, and the Trade removed to Decca, ſomewhat more to the Eaſt, and ſeated on the little branch that runs croſs the Iſland, made by the two Arms of the Ganges, in Lat. 24. 30. and extends in length, along the Banks of the River five or ſix Miles. It is the Seat of the Viceroy or Governour of Bengall proper, and a place of very great Trade; reſorted to by Merchants from China and divers parts of India, and is adorned with many good Buildings, eſpecially the Houſes wherein the Engliſh and Dutch Factories reſide. 'Tis exceeding populous, very rich, and abounds with all Neceſſaries. Satigan ſtands near the ſame Lat. as Decca, on the Eastern branch of the Ganges, a little below where the River Caor falls into this Stream; and was a place of conſiderable Trade, but declined ſince Huguely is grown up. Chatigan, ſtands on the ſame branch of the Ganges near its mouth, and is a place of conſiderable Traffick, and by way of Eminence called Porto maggiore by the Portugueſe. Over againſt it on the ſame River, the common Maps place Bengall, whereof we have already ſpoke. Huguely or Ouguely, ſtands on the Weſtern or main Stream of the Ganges, in a ſmall Iſland in the middle of the River, about 30 Leagues from its mouth, in the Lat. 24. 10. Lon. 106. 30. of whoſe Original we are told, that the Portugueſe about 100 Years ago came hither, and built little Hurts to vend the Commodities they had brought from divers neighbouring Parts, and were ſo far encouraged by Eckbar, the Mogul then Reigning, that they built a City, and had the entire poſſeſſion of it, till turning Pirates, the Mogul expelled them; but the City however encreaſed, and became a large, populous and wealthy place, the chief in all theſe parts for European Trade, at leaſt for the Engliſh, who had a very conſiderable Factory here; but that the Factory is now removed, perhaps forced by the unwholiſomneſs of the Air, and ſettled at Fort William, which was built in the Reign of his late Maſteſty at Calcutta, ſeated on the Ganges below Huguely. Farther to the South-Weſt on the Bay of Bengall, and at the Mouth of the River Guenga, in the Lat. 22. Lon. 103. ſtands Ballaſore, formerly named Ballapur, a reaſonable good Haven and a Town of great Trade, where alſo the Engliſh have a Factory. But this and Huguely have both the miſfortune to ſtand in a bad Air, which makes them at ſome times of the Year ſubject to unhealthineſs. Aſſepore ſtands on the ſame Coaſt, ſomewhat more to the South: which, as alſo Piepey, Bangia and Angelim, are Towns of Trade. Many other conſiderable Towns are in this Kingdom, but theſe and as many as the brevity of this work will let us enumerate: and therefore shall pass on to ORIXA, a Province formerly part of the Kingdom of Golconda, but now entirely cut off, and made part of the Mogul's Empire; it lies between the River Guenga on the North; and Golconda on the South, that is from the 20th to the 23d D. of Lat. The chief Town which gives Name to the Province, stands in the middle of it on a Hill, 100 Miles from the Sea. Besides which Ramana, seated on the River Guenga; Carapara, Mancipatam and Palhor on the Coast, are reckoned principal Towns of this Province: whose South part bears the Title of Talengand.

From hence crossing the River Guenga, we enter the Kingdom of BERAR, a Province seated on the West of Bengall; on the North of Orixas; and between them two Malvay and Chandis. The chief City is Schapor, not very considerable, nor are there any Towns of any great Note mentioned by Travellers in this Country.

CHANDIS or KANDISH that lies next to it, is a Kingdom of larger Extent; bounded on the South by Orixas and Decan; on the North by Malvay and Chitor; on the East by Bengall; and on the West by Guzarat. It has the advantage of a good Soil, being watered with the Guenga, and the River Tapte which rises in its Mountains, and passing Westward falls into the Bay of Cambaya at Surat. Upon this River stands the Capital City Bram-pore, whence sometimes the whole Kingdom is denominated, a large place, but the Buildings low, and the Air unhealthy; it is fortified with a strong Castle and reckon'd a good Frontier, where the Governour resides, who is commonly a Son or some near Relation to the Emperor: The Town is noted for the manufacture of fine Calicoes interwoven with Gold, which they vend abroad to divers Countries: A few Miles North from Bram-pore stands Haffera, a Fortress of impregnable Strength, being seated on a craggy Mountain, and furnished with 600 pieces of Ordinance. Taulneure, seated on the River Tapte, is a considerable City, as is also Mondoue, on the Frontiers of Chitor. Canow, a City from which the Country is by some named the Government of Canow; in whose neighbourhood stand Saddisee, Caddor and Sawbon. The South part of this Kingdom is inhabited by Bancans, who were for some time governed by a King of their own: Their chief Towns are Daytatote (whereof the King was allowed to keep his Title after the Mogul had conquered him) Netherbery and Salotte: And on the Mountains in the South-West is the Country formerly possessed by a certain Raja named Partaspha.

On the South of Chandis lies the Province of BALLAGATE, which was formerly Subject to the King of Decan, but now a Province of the Mogul's Empire. It is a fruitful and pleasant Country, well beset with populous Towns and Villages. According to Thiuvemat 'tis one of the richest Provinces, and yields the Emperor 25 Millions per Annum. The chief Town at present is Aureng-abad, to which the Trade is removed from Daltabad; it is a very large and populous Town but has no Wall. The buildings are of Stone pretty high and neat, the Streets are large with fair Trees growing in them, and the Houses provided with pleasant Gardens. The Governour of the Province resides here; he is always a Prince of the Blood, and Aureng-Zeb himself in his Fathers time enjoyed it.

Daltabad, which was the Capital of the Province, and a Place of great Trade when under the King of Decan, is a good large Town surrounded with Stone-Walls, Battlements and Towers mounted with Canon, with a Citadel on a Hill which is strongly Fortified, and three other Forts at the foot of the Hill, all which make it esteemed the strongest place the Mogul has, and a valuable Frontier: the King has a Palace in the Cittadel. The Dominions of this Emperor extend still more to the Southward; part of the Province of Telenga, and the small Province Baglana, both taken out of the Kingdom of Decan, being subject to him.

Beder, the Capital of TELENGA, is a large City encompassed with Brick Walls, and Towers mounted with Cannon, some of which are extream large, and a Garrison of 300 Soldiers, and 700 Gunners, which are kept in good order, by reason of the importance of this Frontier Town against Decan. The Governour is always a Person of the highest Quality, and lodges in a Castle which stands without the Town; the other chief Town is Calion.

BALAGNA, is a small Tract of Land lying between Ballagate on the East, Guzarat on the North, Telenga and the Mountains of Sevagy on the South, and the Portuguese Country on the West. The chief Town is called Mouler. I find nothing considerable of this Province, and therefore shall now end my account of the Empire of the Great Mogul, having lead my Reader quite round it.

BUT Having received an ample Relation of the Death of Aureng-Zeb, and the Succession, by the Shipping now just come in since the Printing of what we have said in Page 94. we cannot omit inserting it here.

A Relation of the Death of Aureng-Zeb, and the Battle between his Sons, &c. sent from Fort St. George, in January 1706-7.

ON the 28th of the Moon Zulkhaida, being Tuesday (which answers to the 18th of February 1706-7.) between twelve and one of the Clock in the Afternoon, died Aureng-Zeb, in his Camp at Amadnagar, three Days Journey from Aureng-Abad, in the 1118th Year of the Hegira, in the 91st Year of his Age, and in the one and fiftieth Year of his Reign. His Body was soon after without much Ceremony carryed to Aureng-Abad, and there interred in a Garden. About the beginning of his last Sickness, he dispatched his youngest Son Kam-Bachsh to Vijapore, whereof he made him a Grant, and also of the Kingdom of Golconda. And his other Son Azem Tura he ordered the contrary way toward Malvay, apprehending what would be the Fate of the Youngest, if he fell into his Hands, and in taking leave, gave him his Ring off his Finger. To this Second Son he gave (as generally it is reported) all the Deccan Country, except Vijapore and Golconda before mentioned, which contains in it, besides those 2 Kingdoms, four great Subah's, viz. the Subah of Aureng-Abad, the Subah of Zopher-abad, the Subah of Berar, and the Subah of Chandish: And two Subah's more in Hindowsten, viz. the Subah of Guzarette, and the Subah of Malwa: And the rest of the Empire he left to Shah Aalam. Azem Tura (or Azem Shah) was not advanced very far on his Way, when News was brought him of his Father's Death, whereupon he immediately returned to the Camp, and with the consent of all the Omrabs present, on the 10th of the next Month, viz. Zul-geah, he ascended his Father's Throne, and in some Time after he removed to Aureng-Abad with the Army, and having staid there the first 10 Days of the Moon Mehrum (which are Days of Lamentation for the Death of Husein and Hasan, and reckoned unlucky) about the middle of this Moon, which fell upon the 5th or 6th of April 1707. he began his March towards Hindowstan, hoping to get to one of the two Capital Cities, viz. to Dellie or Agra, before the Eldest Brother, but he failed: For being advanced near the Banks of Chunpull, [Tahambul, &c.] he find his Brother with his Army to be encamped on the other side; whereupon he put his Father's Harem, i. e. his Women, and all his own Baggage into Guailler under the Care of Ashad Khan, &c. and then advancing towards his Brother, he gave him Battle.

The Accounts we have of this Action from several Parts differ very much in many Particulars; but they all agree in this, That in the beginning of the Battle, Azem Shah's Army had the Advantage of the Enemy, and the Victory for some time seemed to be on their side; for they broke the first Fougé (Brigade) of the Enemy commanded by Azem Uddeen, second Son to Shah Aalam, Baz Coan who commanded the Vanguard being killed, and almost all his Men; and forced Azem Uddeen to turn his Elephant, and retire with his Troops in great Disorder for a whole Krow (or League) leaving his Tents and all his Baggage as Plunder to the Enemy. Hereupon Azem Shah bore the Naghara of Victory. But Azem Uddeen in some time rallied again; and his Father and elder Brother coming up with their Fougés, both Armies engaged; and the Fight was maintained very obstinately on both sides for a long time. At last Beedar Becht, Azem Shah's Eldest Son, who fought in the Front of his Father's Army, happened to be killed on his Elephant; whereupon the Elephant turned, and his whole Fougé was put into Disorder and ran away, and with him, I think, was killed his Son, Beedar Dell. In some time after Wala Jac, Azem Shah's Second Son was likewise killed upon his Elephant, and his Fougé put to the Rout: When Azem Shah saw his two Sons were dead, he grew Desperate, and said all is now Lost, I have nothing left me but to Die; and rushing into the thickest of the Enemy, was there killed: But how, or by what Hands he received his Death, is variously reported. This Battle was fought on the 19th Day of Rebia Ul Ah, Anno. Heg. 1119. which in our Account was the 8th of June, and Trinity Sunday, 1707. about ten Leagues from Agra.

Since that Battle Shah Aalam hath continued in quiet Possession of the Throne, and hath nothing to fear but his own Sons, who are four in Number, and have so jealous an Eye upon one another, that none of them dare leave the Court for fear of what may be practised in their Absence by them that stay behind, for which reason the Empire is in a great Measure yet unsettled.

Kam Baisic, remains yet possessed of Vishnapore, and Shah Aalam they say, is willing he should continue so; but his Sons will not Consent to it. There hath been a constant Talk ever since the Battle of Chunpull, that one of Shah Aalam's Sons was coming with an Army into the Deccan Country, to settle Affairs in all these Parts; but hitherto no Prince hath come down, and no Army hath been sent into Deccan that we hear of.

Since the Writing of the Account above, we Advis'd from several Parts, that the true Reason why the Government is not yet settled, is, that Ragepours have surrounded Agra, and block'd up the Avenues to the Place, permitting none to go in or come out, but whom they please: And it by reason of this Blockade that there are no Governors sent to the several Provinces of the Empire, no Orders for Coining of Money with Shah Aalam's Stamp, or for Praying for him at their Masjids, &c. Himself, his Sons, and all great Omrabs being shut up in that City.

The Occasion of this Blockade we understand to be this. Shah Aalam upon the News of his Father's Death, left Cabul, where he had been Viceroy for some Years, and marched with his Army directly towards Dellie; and at the same time wrote to the Rajahs or Heads of the Rajapours (which Nation it is said his Mother was) to come and assist him in his Expedition; The Ragepours promised to come to his Assistance, provided he would give them his Kowl, to restore to them the same Privileges and Immunities which they enjoyed in Shah Jehan's time. This Shah Aalam granted without much difficulty; and thereupon the Rajahs or Heads of the Rajapours joined him with their Forces, and promised to stand by him, as long as he should sit on the Throne, or die in the Attempt, which some of them Actually did in the Battle of Chunpull: After Shah Aalam had gain'd the Victory in that Battle, and was now in quiet Possession of the Throne, the Ragepours minded him of his Kowl, and desired his Majesty to put it in Execution.

Shah Aalam, who never cared much which way the World went, much less now in his dotage and old Age, was not unwilling to perform his Kowl; but his two Eldest Sons vehemently opposed it, urging that they could never answer it to God or to the World, if after Aureng-Zeb had gone so far to destroy Idolatry out of the Empire, and to establish the true Religion in its stead, that they should now Consent to the setting up of Idolatry again.

Thus matters stood, by our last Advices from those Parts.

Now, in order to understand the Contents of this Kowl, we are to know, that Aureng-Zeb, after he found himself establish'd in the Throne, out of his great Zeal for Mahometanism, order'd all the Pagodes or Heathen Temples within the Empire to be shut up; their Images to be broken, buried in the Ground, or otherwise made away with; order'd Beef to be publickly kill'd and sold in the Bazaars; And their Temple at Kaussee to be demolished, which to the Hindoos was a Mother-Temple, a Place of singular Holiness above all others, and to which they went in Pilgrimage from all Parts of the Empire. And besides all this, he laid a Poll-Tax, or more properly, a Lock-Tax, upon the Hunnood, (Hindoo People) throughout the Empire; obliging all People that wore a Lock of Hair upon the Crown of their Heads, (which the Hindoos all do) to pay a certain Sum Yearly to the the King. The Wealthy and the Able were oblig'd to pay 20 Rupcas a Head, and so downward in proportion to their Ability. And whatever Town or Country they came into, they were obliged to pay this Tax, if they could not produce a Certificate, that they had paid it already in the Place of their Abode. The poorer sort in order to evade this Tax, have sometimes cut off this Lock, but that would not excuse them: And if they urg'd, they had nothing to pay it with: the Answer was, Then you must turn Mahometan. This Tax is call'd Faziah. Now Shah Aalam in the aforementioned Kowl promised to remove all these Grievances, viz. To take off this Tax, to permit them the free use of their Temples, to rebuild Kansee, and to suffer no Beef to be killed or sold publickly.

The Names of the twelve Moons, or Months, which make up the Mahometan Year, are, 1. Meherum. 2. Sepher. 3. Rebia ul Au'l. 4. Rebia ul Acher. 5. Giamadee ul Au'l. 6. Giamadee ul Acher. 7. Rejeb. 8. Shaban. 9. Ramezan. 10. Shawal. 11. Zulkaida. 12. Zulhaja.

These twelve Moons make up the Mahometan Year, without any intercalation of Days or Months to bring it to answer with the Solar: so that every new Year begins 11 Days sooner than the former. For instance, Suppose the Moon Meherum in the 1119. of the Hegira, began the 22d. of March; in the Year 1120. it will begin on the 11th. of that Month. So that their Festivals and Solemn Times, do not fall on any set Time or Season of the Year, but run round. For Example, Their Ramezan or Lent, which in the Year 1696. fell in April, in the Year 1707. fell in November. And by this Account we find, that though Aureng-Zeb died in the 91st. Year of his Age, according to their reckoning; yet, according to ours, he wanted about two Years and a half of it.

Of the Peninsula of INDIA,

WITHIN THE

G A N G E S.

For a Map consult that of the MOGUL's Empire, to which this is annexed.

THE Peninsula of INDIA within, or on the hither side of the River Ganges, is seated between the 90th. and the 100 Degr. of Longitude; and between the 8th. and the 20th. Degr. of North Latitude, being contiguous on the North with Indistan, but otherwise surrounded by the Sea; that is, the Indian Sea on the West and South, and the Bay of Bengall on the East: It is divided from Ceylon by the Straights of Manar, on the South-East, and is distanced from Malacca and the Peninsula beyond Ganges, near 300 Leagues, by the Intervention of that Great Bay or Sea, to which in general, is given the Name of Bengall, though the inner Part of it only, may properly bear that Appellation. The breadth of this Land in the North Part is near 500 Miles, but decreases Southward, growing narrower by Degrees till it end in a Point at Cape Comorin.

The Air is excessive Hot, being seated under the first, second, and part of the third Climates of the Torrid Zone: So that the Inhabitants for the most part go naked: Nevertheless the Soil produces plenty of all Necessaries, as Rice, divers sorts of Fruits. Pepper, and some other Spices, Cotton and Silk; but especially this Land yields Diamonds, and other precious Stones, and its Sea affords Pearls. A great Ridge of Mountains runs along the middle of the Country, from Bisnager to Cape Comorin; they are called the Mountains de Gate or Ballagate; and it is very remarkable, that at the same time that the Weather is sultry Hot on one side of these Mountains, it is severely Cold on the other side, though in the same Degree of Latitude. A great Number of the Towns and Castles on the Coasts of this Peninsula, are in the Possession of the Portuguese, English, and Hollanders.

The Country contains a great Number of Kingdoms, but those for the most Part are very small, and the Rajas or Kings, Tributaries or Homagers at least, to a more powerful Monarch; wherefore it will not be necessary to divide it according to its Kingdoms, but we shall rather consider it in five large Parts, viz.

- The Coasts and Country of Malabar.
- Decan*, with Curcan, Balaguata and Canara.
- The Kingdom of Golconda.
- The Kingdom of Bisnagar with the Coasts of Coromandel.
- The Principalities of Gingi, Tanjour and Madura, with the Fishing Coast.

MALABAR, lies on the West side of the Mountains Ballagate; but Geographers are not agreed of its extent, with respect to the Northern Boundary; some carrying it as high as Cape Derame, or Cabo des Rames, and the River Aliga near Goa; and so include Canara in that general Name; but Sansen and others cut off that Country, and so Malabar is to be reckoned no farther Northward than the River Cangeretia, a little beyond Conenor; between which and Cape Comorin in the South may be reckon'd about 350 Miles, but its breadth is at most 100 Miles, and in the Southern Part not half so much. It is divided from Coromandel on the East by the Ridge of Mountains, and on the West and South, it is washed by the Indian Sea. The Coasts have many commodious Bays and Harbours, which invite Merchants from all Parts: but it is much infested by Malabar Pirates, except where the European Establishments hinder them. The Country is watered with many Rivulets, and the Soil is fruitful in Pepper, Cardamom, Ginger, Aloes, Bezoar-stones, Salt-Petre, Wax and Honey, Cotton, Coconuts, &c. The Pepper of Calecut is lesser in Grain, than those of Canara and Cochin, and the best of all grows in the In-land Countries; this Plant is of a weak small Stem, and upheld by Poles like our Hops, each Stem bears six Bunches of a foot long, each of which contain many Grains; they are gathered green in October and November, and being dried in the Sun, turn black. The Winter in Malabar begins in May and continues till November, during which time the Rains fall. In January, February, and March, the Weather is excessive hot in the day time, but in the Night as cold, and every Day they have a Sea Breeze, and every Night a Land Wind. From June till November the Winds are so boisterous, that the Coast is scarce Navigable. [Baldus.] The Country was formerly all subject to one Monarch, but at present many Kings Reign there, over whom he of Calicut pretends a Superiority, and called himself Zamorin or Emperor, but his Glory is passed away, and his Country is at present a kind of Aristocracy, thus we are told by Modern Travellers; but I find by Baldus, that in the Year 1662. the Zamorin reigned with great Power. However, we shall consider the Country as it was formerly governed; for the Revolutions are so various and frequent, that it is impossible to trace them.

The chief Kingdoms of MALABAR, are those of Calecut, Canonor, Cranganor, Cochin, and Coulam, besides which there are many others; as Travancor, adjoining to Caulam, Porcha, and Calecoulam, the former adjoining to Cochin, and the latter to it; the English trade to Porcha, and the Dutch have a Factory there. Muterta, Marta, and Batymena, three other small Kingdoms adjoining also to Cochin, and divers small Principalities subject to the Zamorin. There are also eleven small Kingdoms in the Mountains, viz. Mangate and Paru; the Kingdom of Pepper, Turnbale, Changanate, Changanor, Trivilar, Panapely, Angamale, the Kingdom of the Tecantutes, and the People of the Mountains of Panda; and lastly, at the top of the Mountains live the People call'd Mallians, whose chief Town is Priate. The Cities of chiefest Note in all these Kingdoms, are these.

Entering this Continent on the South, we first meet Cape Comorin, heretofore call'd Cory, Comaria, and Comaria Extrema: Situate in the 7th. Deg. 30 Min. of North Latitude, 60 Leagues West from the Coast of Ceylon; in passing thence Northward, is seen

COTATE, the Capital of the Kingdom of Travancor, a Place of great Traffick, and adorned with a Christian Church built in the Year 1600. Travancor, which gives name to the Kingdom, supposed to be the Cotary of Ptolemy, and Matadavalur, a large City in the same Kingdom.

COULAM, the Capital of the Kingdom thence denominated, is a large City seated in a most fertile Soil and healthy Air, in the 9th. Degree of North Latitude: it has the advantage of a very commodious Haven at the mouth of a River, and was taken by the Portuguese in 1505. who built a new Town, and strengthened it with good Walls, and a Fortrefs, but were however beaten out by the Dutch in 1661.

CALECOULAM, the Capital of another Kingdom, was formerly a good City, but being destroy'd by the Portuguese in 1523. it hath ever since continued in low Estate; however, for the sake of the Spice Trade, the Dutch have a Factory there.

PORCA,

FORCA, the Capital of a small Kingdom of about 50 Miles extent, where the English have a Factory for Pepper, which grows plentifully there. Catapely is the name of the chief Town of Batymena Kingdom, as Podiagabo, otherwise Mavlycare, is of Manta; and Muterta of the small Principality of the same Name.

COCHIN, the Capital of a powerful Kingdom, whose Prince is the only one in Malabar that dares dispute with the Zamorin of Calecut; is a large City, or rather two Cities a Mile and half asunder, but however almost united by Suburbs: The upper or ancient Cochin, stands about four Miles up the River from the Sea; and is the Seat of the King, whose Palace is a fine Building after the European manner; the Streets are large and the Town populous: The lower or new Town stands two Miles lower on the same River, which makes a commodious Haven; it was built by the Portuguese, and had many Christian Churches, whereof that of the Jesuits was the finest, having a stately Tower and a Ring of Bells. 'Tis a place of great Traffick, and was possessed by the Portuguese from the Year 1504. till 1663. when the Dutch beat them out, and have ever since possessed it; and as both Baldæus and Nieuboff confess, destroyed many of the fine Churches and Convents, and reduced the City to a much smaller Compass, for the sake of fortifying it the more strongly; the River runs on the South side of it, and on the West it is washed by the Sea, the Haven has 17 or 18 Fathom Water (says Baldæus) at High-tide, and the Town stands in the 10th Deg. Lat. Vaipin, a small Island in the River, which was formerly a notable Sanctuary, is now possessed by the Dutch, who have built a Fort in it called New Orange.

CRANGANOR, the Capital of the Kingdom of that Name, stands upon the River Chatua, 20 Miles North from Cochin, and not far from the Sea: The Portuguese built a Fort near it, and took the City, but were beaten out of both by the Dutch in 1662. It is situate on the Banks of the River about a League from the Sea, defended by a Wall of Earth, and a Stone Breast-work, which had seven Bastions and the Wall of Earth three more. At the point near River, remains still a strong Stone Tower for Defence of the River; and on the opposite side of the River towards Cochin, stands the Redoubt called Pallipert, on an Island named Baypin, which extends to the River of Cochin. (Nieuboff.)

From Cranganor Northward lies the Kingdom of CALICUT, whose King, as we have said, was called Zamo. in or Emperor, and was a powerful Monarch, able to bring into the Field an Army of 100000 or more. He had a vast Revenue arising by Tributes, Customs, and the Monopoly of Pepper. The City Calicut stands upon the Sea-shoar in the 11th. Degr. of North Latitude; a large Place, being as some relate eleven Miles in Compass, but the Buildings very ordinary; it was a City of great Trade, and was notable 200 Years ago, especially for the Portuguese Wars against it, but now a poor and obscure Place; the Palace stands about a Mile from the Town, it is large and surrounded with a low Wall, but the Apartments are proper and well adorned. Panane, about 50 Miles from Calicut, is a Place of Trade also, having an excellent Haven: 'Twas here the Portuguese first arrived, when they discovered the East-Indies; and by the Zamorin were at first well entertained, but had afterwards long and grievous Wars with him, wherein the two Castles that guarded this Haven were demolished: Palur, where the Zamorin sometimes resided. Chale, not far from Calecut, where the Portuguese once had a Fort: and Parangale a Town of considerable Traffick; are the other chief Cities of this Kingdom. Which being the most considerable, the whole Country of Malabar is sometimes called Calecut. Several small Principalities are subject to the Zamorin: As TANOR, a petty Kingdom, whose Capital of the same Name, is a Sea-port between Cochin and Calicut; CURIGA between Panane and Cranganor; PANUR, COTIGAN, BIPUR, CUCURAN, and AVRIOLA, In-land Countries; and Chombays, Badara and Montingue, three Ports lying Northward from Calecut: But it must be owned however, that his Dominions are not very large; for from Cochin, which as we have said, is the Capital of a considerable Kingdom, it is not much above 100 Miles to CANONOR, the chief Town of another Kingdom, which is the most Northern Part of Malabar, a Country of fertile Soil, whose Capital of the same Name is seated about 12 Miles from the Sea, upon the River Balipatam, which makes an excellent Haven, and the City was a Place of great Trade, but decay'd of late Years, says Baldæus. The Portuguese built a Fort here in 1505. which encreased into a Town, and was call'd new Canonor; it was taken from them in 1664. by the Dutch, who still hold it, and drive a good Trade there for Pepper.

From Malabar, Northward to the Confines of the Empire of the Mogul, lies the large Country which bears the general Name of DECAN or DE-CAM, though that Kingdom be but a small Part of it: It is bounded on the North, by the Kingdom of Guzarat; on the South, by Malabar; on the East, by the Kingdoms of Golconda and Bijnagar; and on the West, by the Ocean. It comprehends the three Kingdoms of Decan, Cuncan, and Balaguata, the Island of Goa, the Island Salsidewa, and some other smaller Islands; and the Countries of Canara and Salsette. The Country in general is very fertile, producing many excellent Fruits, and much Cotton, whereof the Inhabitants make very fine Cloath; the Land also yields Diamonds, and other precious Stones; and affords excellent Pasture to divers sorts of Cattle bred here, and sold to Goa and other Places.

To proceed in our travelling Method, the Province of CANARA is first in our way, call'd by some Tulimar, and by others the Kingdom of the Chatins; it is divided from Canonor in Malabar on the South, by the River Cangerecora; and from Cuncan on the North, by the River Aliga; having the Ocean on the West; and the Kingdom of Bijnagar on the East: The People are as black as Ethiopians. (says Gimelli.) It is divided into many petty Kingdoms, but is all subject to the King of Bijnagar: Of these Kingdoms, the chief are BATICALA, ONOR and GARZOPA.

Baticla, the chief City of that Kingdom, stands in the 13th. Degr. of Latitude, on a small River, about a Mile from the Sea, but is no Port; the Country round it is very fruitful, and the City is (says my Author) a beautiful well built Place; this Kingdom extends pretty far within Land, and is the more powerful of the three.

Next

Next to it Northward lies ONOR, whose Capital of the same Name stands on the River Mogeu, in the 14th Deg. Lat. where the Portuguese had a strong Fort and good Trade, and the English have now a Factory; the Pepper of this Place being heavier and more esteemed than any other. Thirty Miles South from hence stands Bacolor, another Fort and Town of good Trade, built by the Portuguese, but now subject to the Dutch.

GARÇOPA, that gave Name to that Kingdom, stood on the same River Onor, but was ruined by the Portuguese; who about 5 Miles from it, built a large Fortress called Gonçada Neghar. Ikkeri, Abileni and Sagier are the chief Indian Cities of Garçopa.

On the Coast of Canara lies the Island ANCHEDIYA, about 25 Miles in Compass, where is a very good Haven, and therefore taken by the Portuguese at their first arrival in these Parts, and by them well fortified: But their chief, and at present almost only Factory in India, is GOA, a City of a League and half in Circuit, situate in an Island called Tilsoa, of 27 Miles compass, made by two Mouths of the River Mondoa, says Baudrena; (the Maps call the River Gazim, and 'tis often denominated from the City, and called the River of Goa;) which falls into the Ocean a few Leagues below the Town, making a very commodious Haven, which is extremely well guarded by Forts. This City is the Seat of the Vice-Roy, the See of an Arch-Bishop, and the Supream Court of Judicature for all the Portuguese Asia, as well as its Staple of Trade: It is adorned with many sumptuous Buildings, fair Streets, abundance of Churches and Convents. The Cathedral is large, with an arched Roof supported by Columns, and curiously adorned with Figures; and though the Walls of the City be slight, the Island is so well guarded by Forts, that it is reckoned the strongest in India. The Houses in this City are the best in India, and the Inhabitants are about 20000. whereof the least part are Portuguese; for the Indian Women are so intermarried with them, that the Mestiza's and Canarines are the greater number. It was taken by Alphonso d'Albuquerque, the Portuguese Vice-Roy in the Year 1511, and 15th Deg. of Northern Lat. The Portuguese do also possess the neighbouring Country of Salfette, where they have two Forts; and the Country of Bardes (mentioned below) and reckoned to have 100000 Subjects in Goa, Salfette and Bardes.

From hence Northward lies the Kingdom of CUNCAN or VISAPOR, 120 Miles from North to South, and 200 Miles from East to West, having Decan on the North; Canara and Goa on the South; the Ocean on the West; and Ballaçate on the East. Linschoten calls it Idalcan, from the Title of its King; it is now by Europeans commonly named the Kingdom of Visapor, from its chief City of that Name. The King Idalcan was a most formidable Enemy to the Portuguese, and attacked Goa with 70000 Men.

VISAPOR, the chief City of this Kingdom, stands a great way within Land, upon the River Mandua or Degazim, and is of very large Extent, even 20 Miles in Circumference, but then the Houses are scattered wide; 'tis however surrounded with Walls and 1000 pieces of Cannon, besides five strong Forts; a mighty piece of Ordinance in this Place is much talked of, being able to carry a Bullet of 800 weight: In the middle of the City stands the Kings Palace, which is a Castle strongly Fortified, and guarded by 2000 Men. On the same River somewhat lower, stand Solapour and Paranda. On the Coasts stand Wingerli or Mingrela, a Dutch Factory near Goa. Bardes, the Capital of a small Country thence Denominated; and Fort de Aguade nearer Goa, belonging to the Portuguese. Caipaten more Northward; Centapur; and Dabul in the Lat. of 17. 45. a Place of good Trade for Pepper and Salt, but somewhat diminished by the Neighbourhood of Goa and Suratt, in the middle between which it stands.

The Revolution or rather new State erected here in the last Age by Sevagy, is so considerable, that we cannot omit giving the Reader a short account of it, as we find it related by Tavernier and Thevenot.

SEVAGY, who was the Son of a Captain of the King of Visapores Guards, and born at Bessaim, was of a restless turbulent Spirit, and rebelled in his Fathers life time, putting himself at the Head of a Parcel of Rasboores, (which are like Banditti) and lived in Power in the Mountains. The King punishing the Sons fault in the Person of the Father, committed him to Prison where he Dyed, for which Sevagy resolved to be revenged, and therefore the more furiously pursued his Depredations, and by the Booty that he got in Plunder, he soon grew formidable enough to seize some Towns, and erect a little State, and resolved to Wage perpetual War with the King. But the King being Dead, the Queen Regent complying with some of his Demands, obtained Peace. Hence he turned his Arms upon the Mogul's, and plundered some places belonging to that Emperor, who immediately sent an Army against him, but the Raja skulking in the Mountains, and by surprizes and Stratagems wearying and outwitting the Emperors Army, they were forced to retire. He then entered upon that bold Action, the Plundering of Suratt, which he effected by the hasty and silent march of one Part of his Army, whilst the other lay Encampt to Face the Enemy, and make an appearance that the whole Army was there. That wealthy City was rifled for 4 Days together, by the 4000 Men he brought with him, whilst the Inhabitants fled, and left it to his Mercy. The English and Dutch saved their Factories by the force of their Guns and Courage, and the Monastery of Capuchins by the power of entreaty was not touched; every House else was plundered, and an inestimable Wealth carried off, the Cowardly Governour shutting himself up in the Castle all the time. This happened in the Year 1664. and as it was a sensible Affliction to the Great Mogul, he resolved to revenge it, but the State of his other Affairs not permitting him to do it by publick Force, he purposed to effect Sevagy's Ruine by private cunning. He therefore appeared to applaud his Courage, and expressed a desire to see so great a Man, promising him Protection if he came to Court. Sevagi had the Courage to accept this offer, and having put his Army under a good Commander, with orders to be always upon the Guard, he boldly went to Court, where he was to all appearance kindly received; but after some Months, perceiving a coldness in the King, he openly complained of it, and told the King himself, that he apprehended he had a Design to put him to Death, altho' he came to Court without constraint, and under the Protection of the Royal Parole; at the same time letting him know, he had left those behind him that would Revenge his Death; The King fearing to hurt him, lest it should cause an Insurrection of the Raja's, assured him he designed him great Honours, and proposed to him to march with him to the Siege of Candabar, which Sevagy promised, provided he might Command his own Forces, the King agreed to that, and at the Raja's request, gave him Passports for their coming to him: But he used these Passports to another purpose, for by the help of them he got Horses to be aid for him, at such Stages as he appointed, and then privately (with his Son who had been with him all the while) got out of Town, and crossing the Rivers, mounted the Horses that were ready for them, and rode Day and Night till he came to his Army. My Author, who is Thevenot, carries the Story no further, for this happened but a little before he was in India, which was in the Year 1666. But our Merchants who have been there since, tell us he was a potent Enemy to the Mogul all his Life time; and Gimelli who was there in 1695. tells us his Successor the third in Descent named Ramrao, was able to bring into the Field 50000 Horse and as many Foot, of much better Soldiers than any the Great Mogul has. That he maintained continual Wars with both the Mogul and the Portuguese, and was Lord of all the Coast from Chaul to Goa, which is a space of near 200 Miles, and within Land to Visiapor, and had Forts all over the Country, in inaccessible Mountains, besides good Cities and Towns exceeding well Fortified.

Northward from hence between Cuncan and the Mogul's Frontiers, lies the Kingdom of DECAN strictly so called, small of its self, though it gives the general Name to all these Countries, for its Breadth is not above 60 Miles, and its Length from East to West about twice as much. Golconda is its Eastern Boundary, and on the West a narrow Tract of it extends to the Sea; the chief Towns are Chaul, on the Sea-coasts in the 19th Deg. Lat. at the Mouth of a River which makes a large Haven, taken by the Portuguese and very well fortified, having a Castle that is esteemed impregnable: the Trade of this Place is diminished through the neighbourhood of the English and Dutch; but the Portuguese retain it, and are at a great expence in maintaining a Garrison in it. Danda and Sefardon are two other Ports in this Kingdom: and within Land are, Andanagar, seated on the River Guenga, towards the Confines of Golconda, sometime the residence of the King: and Bider, by some reckoned the Metropolis of the Kingdom; but Sanson names Kerky so: and the ancient Travellers speak of the City Decan as the chief, and make it a strong and well built City with a noble Palace; though 'tis probable they mean Andanagar, which is sometimes called Danaga, and by Strangers might be corrupted into Decan, with the Name of the Kingdom.

BALLAGATE, is a small Kingdom seated among the Mountains of Gate, whence it is denominated; between Decan on the North; Cuncan on the West; Golconda on the East; and Bijnagar on the South. This Kingdom being reduced by the Great Mogul, has been spoken of in our account of his Empire.

Having given an Account of the Western Part of this Peninsula, we proceed now to the Eastern; from the Frontiers of the Mogul's Empire to Cape Comorin, on the East side the Mountains of Gate, where we meet with many Names of Countries, as Narsinga, Golconda, Delli, Bijnagar, Coromandel, &c. but the whole seems properly to be divided but into two Kingdoms, viz. Golconda and Bijnagar, and three Principalities, viz. of Tanjouwer, Gingi and Madura; Coromandel and the Fishing-Coast, being general Names of the Coast of all this Country.

GOLCONDA, is the North-East part of this Peninsula, and situate between the Mogul's Countries on the North and North-East; the Bay of Bengall on the East; Decan and Ballagate on the West; and Bijnagar and Coromandel on the South. The famous River Guenga divides it from the Mogul's Dominions on the North, and the Mountains of Gate are its Boundary on the West. This Kingdom was formerly called Orixa, from a Province on the East towards Bengall, which was sometime part of it; but has been conquered by the Mogul and intirely cut off; and by that means the Extent of the Kingdom is much restrained, being, instead of 330 Miles in Length, as J. du Barros represents it, now not above 200 Miles. The Name of Golconda is taken from a strong Fortrefs to which the King retired when in Danger from the Mogul. The Country is very fruitful, yielding Rice, Fruits, Indigo, Cassia the best in India, says Tavernier, Pasture and Cattle in great plenty: But that which chiefly recommends this Country is the Mines of Diamonds, the richest in the World. These were discovered about a hundred Years ago by accident (a Country fellow finding one at Plough) and were immediately seized on by the King, who Farms them out for a vast yearly Rent, even 300 thousand * Pagoda's, says my Author, and yet retains to himself all the large ones that are above twenty Carats in weight. This rendered the King very powerful, but he was often attacked by the Great Mogul, who envied him this Possession. He was an absolute Prince, Heir to all his Subjects, and Master of their Lives; but all this has not been able to protect him; for the Great Mogul, by continual Warring upon him, has at length got the Victory: and for some Years last past, he has been confined in an honourable Imprisonment, the Mogul possessing his Country. The People are of an Ingenious and Virtuous Disposition, except where Trade debauches them, and therein they sometimes recede from the Morality they are generally noted for:

* The Pagoda is a piece of Gold, of which there are old and new ones, the old ones are of most value, being worth 5 and a half Roupies, whereas the new are but four Roupies. (Thevenot.)

They are reckoned exquisite in the Painting of Caricatures. The Air is extreme Hot, but the Land is well watered with Rivers and Lakes, and besides they contrive large Receptacles for Water in the rainy Monsoon, which they let out at pleasure to water the Fields in the most sultry Season. The chief Cities and Places are, Bagnagar the Metropolis, seated in a very long Plain, surrounded by high Hills at some distance, in 17 D. 10 M. Lat. 15 Leagues from Visapor to the East. The City together with the Suburbs, is above three Miles in Length, and is very populous, being inhabited by rich Bankers, Jewellers and skilful Artists, among whom are Persians, Armenians and Forks. The English and Dutch have Factories here. In the Suburbs, which is called Evengabad, dwell the Tradesmen and Merchants, none but Gentry and Nobility inhabiting the City. The Houses of the common People are low and ordinary, having Earth Walls with flat Terrass-roofs to take the Air upon, but the dwellings of the Gentry are fine. The City is adorned with several Meidans or Squares; The Kings Palace, A sort of Castle called the four Towers, and many fair Gardens. Of the Meidans, that adjoining to the Palace is the fairest, being surrounded with Terras Walks and Ballustres, adorned with two Tribunals for the Coronals or Ordinary Judges, and two fair Basons of Water. In the middle of this Square within view of the Palace, the Elephants are made to Fight, having at first a Wall betwixt them, which when their Fury is raised, they throw down and encounter with great rage. The Palace is 350 Paces in length, the Walls of Stone adorned with Turrets, and the inside is accounted to be very beautiful, but Strangers are not permitted to enter it. There are such reservatories for Water, that it is made to rise to the highest Apartments, and the Terrassed roofs are built upon such Arches, that there are fine Gardens on them, and as some report, Trees of wonderful Magnitude growing in them. The four Towers is a square Building of 10 Fathom broad and seven high, which is entered on every side by large Arches. At the Corners stand the four Towers which are 10 Fathom high, and well adorned with Galleries and Arches. To the tops of these Towers the Water is raised, and thence conveyed through Pipes to the Palace. The Gardens are large, and made pleasant by long shady Walks of Palm and Arecia Trees, many Ponds or Basons of Water, together with Fruit-Trees, and some few Flowers. At two Leagues distance stands the Castle of Golconda, where the King usually resided, and kept the Royal Treasury. It is of large Compass, even 12 Miles say some Authors, the Walls of Stone built round about a high Hill, whose top appears like a Sugar-loaf in the middle, the Walls are surrounded with deep Ditches divided into Tanque's or Ponds full of fresh and clear Water, provided with five round Towers, which we may call Bastions, all well furnished with Cannon. The Situation of this place, with respect to the Water, Soil and Climate, as well as the Strength, particularly recommended it to the King's approbation, and caused the whole Kingdom to be denominated from it. This Fortrefs after a Siege of nine Months was taken by Aureng-Zeb in the Year 1686. The King taken Prisoner, and I suppose the whole Kingdom subjected to the Mogul. Condapoy, an impregnable Fortrefs of large Extent, comprehending great Fields of Rice, and Orchards of Fruit Trees, but so surrounded with Rocks, as to be inaccessible.

Cundavera another strong Fortrefs; as is also Bellumconda, and sixty three others conveniently seated on the Frontiers all round the Kingdom, and mostly built on Rocks; but the most noted Place of all is Gani or Coulour, for the sake of the Diamond Mines in its Neighbourhood; the Country about is craggy and mountainous, and formerly so thinly inhabited, that this was but a very poor Village, though now a very large Trading Town, which it must needs be, since there are (says Tavernier) 60000 People employed in the Mines: This Town is 160 Miles distant from Golconda to the East, and 180 North from Matfulipatan, a Port at the Bay of Bengall, at the Mouth of the River Nagundi the Southern Limit of the Kingdom; which is the chief Place for Foreign Traffick in all this Kingdom, altho' it be small, it is well peopled, the Streets are narrow, and the Houses built of Wood. The Trade consists chiefly in Chites, and the Haven is extraordinary good. Guadivari gives Name to the Cape, on the East of Matfulipatan. Binilipatan, a small Port with a Dutch Factory, and Manchepatam more Northward on the same Bay.

OF the DIAMOND MINES.

Having all along been careful to give the Reader such pieces of Natural History of the Countries we have passed through as are generally desired to be known, we cannot omit a short account of the Diamond Mines, which we shall choose to do out of a Tract upon that Subject extant in N^o 136. of the Philosophical Transactions, which seems to be written by one that was an eye Witness of what he wrote. The parts of the World known to contain Diamonds are, the Island Borneo, and the Continent of India intra, and extra Gangem. Whereof those supposed to be in Pegu are not wrought, because the King suspects the discovery of such Wealth would tempt his Neighbours to invade him. The Diamond Mines in this Continent of India, intra Gangem, are generally adjacent to the rocky Hills and Mountains which run quite through it. And 'tis supposed all those Mountains contain them, but the greatest part of them being possessed by petty Raja's of ancient Hindows, who hold no Commerce with the Moors, 'tis not known that they dig for them, but rather believed they forbid it, for the same reason as the King of Pegu. But in the Kingdoms of Golconda and Visapor, there are so many Mines worked, as may supply all the World, and many more forbid to be wrought, to avoid their being too common. In the Kingdom of Golconda there are 23 Mines employed, whereof that of Coloure or Quoloure was the first made use of, and afforded great Numbers of very good Stones, but it is now almost exhausted. But Currure, which the King has taken from a neighbouring Hendown Raja, is the most famed for large Stones. Milwellee, or the new Mine, because found out but in the Year 1670. Affords the greatest quantity and well shaped Stones, but then they are but very small. Muddenburg far exceeds all the rest for Diamonds of a delicate shape and Water, and of various sizes, some very large. But the Water there is so bad, that it destroys the Health of those that Drink it, which makes few Adventure to Work it. In these that we named and in many of the others, which 'twould be tedious to enumerate, the Diamonds are found scattered in the the Earth, and within two or three Fathom of the Surface. Whereas in others, as at Wazzergerre, Munnemurg, Zonagerre, Purville, &c. they are found to lye in a Mineral in the bodies of the Rocks 40 or 50 Fathom deep, in which case they dig into the Rock five or six Foot deep, and then by Fire soften the Stone, and so proceed, till they find the Vein which runs under the Rock frequently two or three Furlongs. All the Earth is brought out, and being carefully examined, afford Stones of a large size, and pretty good Water, but of ill shapes. The Earth where the Diamonds are found is of a yellowish, or in some places reddish colour, and sometimes adheres to the Stone, with strong a crust that 'tis difficult to get it off. To find the Stones, the Workmen build a sort of Cistern of Stone made tight with Clay or Earth, and the Walls which are the sides of it supported by strong Banks, having a Vent or small passage on one side, a little above the bottom, which is only plugged; then they throw into it all the Earth they have dug, and pour Water upon it sufficient to Dissolve it all, which they hasten by breaking the Clods and stirring it about; thus keeping it in motion, the lighter part is carryed off in Mudd, when the vent hole being opened let's out the Water, thus they continue washing till it be pretty clean, and then in the middle of the Day, when the Sun is at full Height, they very carefully look over all the Sand, at which they are so expert, that the smallest Stone cannot escape them. They never make their search but at that time of the Day, because the steady brightness of the Sun assists them very much to discover the Diamonds, whereas a Cloud intervening would make them slip them over. The Undertakers are fain to watch their Labourers with great Care, lest they conceal what they find, and are even fain to be careful that their Labourers expose not a Stone of larger size, which if the Governour should hear of, he would seize it for the King. The Governours of the Mines covenant with the Adventurers, that all the Stones they find under a Pagoda Weight shall be their own, but the great ones above that Weight to be for the King. A Pagoda is nine Mangelleens, and a Mangelleen is five Grains and three fifths, whereas a Carat is four Grains. These Governours use the Adventurers and Miners very Tyrannically, and by squeezing and Taxing keep them always very Poor, at least they are always forced to appear so to avoid their Gripping, 'tis is spoken of Golconda, for in Vijapore they are kindly treated and permitted to enjoy their own. This Trade is almost wholly carryed on by Banneans of Guzerat, and the workers in the Mines are all Gentiles, no Mos ever applying themselves to it.

BISNAGAR, lies on the South of Golconda, beginning at Matfulipatan and the River Nagundi, and runs Southward as far as Cape Comorin, six hundred Miles in Length; but it is now contracted; for Gingi, Madura and Tanjouwar, that were formerly Provinces governed by this Kings Officers, are at present separate Principalities under Homage only to him: Westward 'tis stretched out over the Mountains, as far as the Indian Sea, and comprehends Canara already described next to Malabar: So that at present we shall confine our selves to the Kingdom of Bisnagar on the East side the Mountains, (which excluding the Principalities) is about 250 Miles from North to South, bounded by the Mountains on the West, and the Bay of Bengall on the East. The Soil is fruitful, being well watered with Rivers, the Pastures covered with Cattle, and the Forests filled with Lyons, Tygers, Elephants, Boars and Staggs. The Air is extreme Hot at all times, but in the Winter (which is distinguished only by great Rains for three Months together) the Nights are severely Cold; and as we observed before, the Seasons here are directly contrary to what they are in Malabar, though it be in the same Latitude. The Inhabitants are well shaped, Tawny Complexioned, of effeminate Lazy Tempers, but the Manufacturers are ingenious in making and painting Calicoes, which is the chief Trade of the Country. The King assumed mighty Titles, and was in effect a powerful Prince. J. du Barros and other Authors tell us, he brought an Army of near eight hundred thousand (whereof 34000 Horse) besides 600 Elephants, against Idalcan: And Barboza says there are 900 Elephants and 100 thousand Men constantly maintained for the Guard of the Kingdom; to furnish which Expence, he has the fortune to have some Diamond Mines in his Dominions, but his grandeur is diminished.

The whole Kingdom (excluding Canara) may be divided into two Parts, viz. BISNAGAR properly so called, and COROMANDEL. The former being the Inland Country, and the latter the Sea-Coasts. The chief Cities of Bisnagar are the Capital of the same Name, or otherwise called Chandegry, thought to be the Madura of Ptolomy: it is a very large City, seated on a Hill near the Banks of the River Nagundi, in the Heart of his Dominions, and therefore the usual Seat of the King; it is guarded by a strong Citadel and three Walls. Narsinga, seated also on the Nagundi, below Chandegry, is also a large City, and so considerable, that the whole Kingdom is frequently Denominated from it, and was sometime the Regal Seat. Pelour, another large City, whence the Kingdom is sometimes named. Chativero is the Seat of a Prince of this Country. Cirangapatam Southward from Chandegry. Pelagong, a very large City near Bisnagar; and Tripity on account of its famous Indian Temple ought not to be omitted; it stands on a high Mountain, and is resorted to from all parts of the Kingdom: Great droves of Monkeys are kept in it as sacred and highly revered; and even the King preserves a Tooth of one of those Animals as a precious Relick.

COROMANDEL, is extended along the Coasts of the Bay of Bengall, from the Limits of Golconda to those of Madura, that is, from the 16th to the 15th Deg. of Northern Lat. some extend it much farther both North and South, but this seems to be its truest Bounds. 'Tis so fruitful in Rice, that Texeira says, it took its Name from that; yet at some times for want of usual Rains the People perish through Famine, and sell themselves into Slavery for Food. The Inhabitants make fine Calicoes and Muslings, with which they purchase the Commodities of other Nations, or rather by selling them to the English and other Europeans are enriched so as to be able to purchase all Foreign Necessaries. The Coast has many commodious Havens, which makes it a Place of great Traffick, but the Ports are mostly in the Hands of Europeans, the English especially have Madraspatan and the Fort of St. George, whereof more in its place.

The chief Towns proceeding from North to South are these. Matfulipatan or Massalapatan, although already mentioned in our accounts of Bisnagar, because seated on the North side of the River Nagundi, which parts that Kingdom from this, is yet by Geographers reckoned in the Limits of Coromandel: But it is however in the Hands of the King of Golconda, and is his Mart for Diamonds, being indeed the chiefest for that Commodity in all the Indies; and therefore the place is much resorted to, and the English and Dutch have constant Factories in it. 'Tis a large well built and beautiful City, but the Houses stand stragling at distance from each other: wherein resides a Governour annually deputed by the King of Golconda, who lives in great State and Splendour; the Customs of this Port are reckoned to amount to 14000 Pagoda's per Annum. And the Town is seated, as we have said, at the Mouth of the River Nagundi, on the Bay of Bengell, in the Lat. of 16 D. 30 M. Pentapuli or Petty-Pole, about 20 Miles more Southward, stands on a Promontory washed by a large River, which winding about makes it a Peninsula, and falls into the Bay of Bengell; it is a Port of somewhat difficult Access, and a place of Trade for Cloths, Pindita's, Bettelea's, &c. The Inhabitants are of different Nations, and the Town is Tributary to the King of Golconda: The English have a Factory here, as have also the Dutch. Carceiro, Calceour and Penne, smaller Towns, are noted for a Plant used in Dying. Fort Gueldrick, a Fort and Factory of the Dutch, stands a few Miles up the Country; 'tis strongly Fortified, secured by a good Garrison, and is the Seat of their Trade in these parts, and therefore may be reckoned the chief Factory. But the Goods are shipped off at Palicatea a Town ten Miles off, that stands at the Mouth of a River on the Sea Coast possessed also by the Dutch: but the Haven is not a very good one. Meliapur famous in Ecclesiastical History for the Martyrdom of St. Thomas the Apostle, who planted Christianity in these parts; was formerly the chief City of Coromandel: but being ruined, the Portuguese in the Year 1523. began to Rebuild it, and in the Ruins of an ancient Church, they found (at least they affirm so) the Bones of the Apostle, which were immediately enshrined, and the new City named St. Thomas, which is a place of considerable Trade for Calicoes and such Linnens of a finer Colour than any other. The French seized this place about 30 Years ago, and held it for sometime, but were at last beaten out by the Moors.

Madraspatam, seated on the same Coast a few Miles Northward from St. Thomas, in the 14th. Deg. of Lat. is a Town possessed by the English, and more known by the name of the Fort denominated from our Champion St. GEORGE, in which resides the Governour, and General Factory for all the concerns of the East-India Company, beyond Cape Comorin, upon the Continent of Golconda, Bengal and Pegu. The English Town is surrounded with a strong Wall, the Sea washes the East side of it, a broad Ditch the South and West, and on the North side lies the Indian Town; The Fort stands in the middle, which as well as the Town, is of Quadrangular form, with four Bastions raised very high: and in the middle of it, stands the Governours House, a noble Structure of Stone and well adorned: the Bastions of both the Town and Fort are well mounted with Cannon, and the Place is very strong: The Governour lives in very great State, and in compliance with the Custom of those Countries, never goes abroad without a great attendance of Factors and Merchants, Servants and Guard, Drums and Trumpets, and several Palankeens or Sedans of Ladies; he has a constant Guard of 300 or 400 Moors, and raises 1500 Men at Summons; besides the Garrison, which consists of 700 Soldiers in constant pay. This Place has been possessed by the English near 100 Years under an annual Tribute to the King of Golconda: The Indian Town as we have said, lies on the North side of the Fort, and is sometimes called Maderass; it consists of divers Streets of neat but low Houses inhabited by the Moors. Since the Portuguese have been beaten out of St. Thomas, they have been entertained at Fort St. George, and a Chapel appointed for their Worship.

Pontichery, a small Town and Fort where the French have a Factory; is seated on the same Coast, a little below Meliapur. This place was taken by the Dutch in the former War, but restored to the French by the Treaty of Ryswick, and being an inconsiderable place has not been attempted this War; and for ought appears they still possess it.

Tirepolier, in the Latit. 11. 45. is a Fort and Factory of the Dutch, being near Carcal, where they have a House. Negapatam, which in the Indian Language signifies the Town of Snakes, because of the number of those Reptiles found here; is the most Southern Port of Coromandel, seated upon the Sea Coast in the 10. D. 45. M. of Lat. and washed by a large River, but however no good Harbour; the Portuguese did possess it till 1650. that the Dutch took it from them, and notwithstanding the Attacks of the Naique of Tanjouwar still retain it. Not far from them, the Danes have a Fort named Tranguebar; and also the English have a Fort named St. David, seated on the Coast not far South from Negapatam. Tavernier in his Journey through this Country, gives us the names of many Inland Towns of Coromandel, but those being not frequented by Europeans, nor in themselves considerable we shall omit, and only say, that at every 20 or 30 Miles distance there are Towns. Villages, or Pagods, i. e. Heathenish Temples, all over the Country.

The three Principalities or Naiques of GINGI, TANJOUWAR and MADURA, take up the rest of this Peninsula, extending from the Frontiers of Bisnagar and Coromandel to Cape Comorin. They were heretofore, as we have said, part of the Kingdom of Bisnagar, but the Governours have now thrown off the Obedience, and are Absolute Princes.

The most Northern of them is GINGI, a small Country on the West of Coromandel, towards the Mountains of Gate, and adjoining to Bisnagar. The chief City of the same Name, stands in the Lat. of 11. 30. and about 80 Miles from the Sea: a large and populous City, the Seat of the Naique, who is a rich Prince, and his Country a fruitful Land; the Inhabitants make fine Calicoes, and receive in exchange for them all the Foreign Commodities they want. Cidambran is another principal City of this Country, and notable for the many Magnificent Pagods and Gentile Devotions paid there.

TANJOUWAR, lies on the South and East of Gingi, taking its Name from the City where the Naique resides, situate near Negapatam, in the middle of his Dominions, which are not much larger than those of Gingi. Nagapatam, possessed by the Dutch; and Tranguebar by the Danes; and Fort St.

David

David, already mentioned, are by some reckoned to stand in the Limits of this Princes Dominions.

The Naique or Principality of MADURA, lies more to the South, extending from the Confines of Tanjour to Cape Comorin, and comprehending the Coast commonly called the FISHING-COAST from the Fishing for Pearl, which is the chief employment of the Inhabitants; who dive into the Water and bring up the Oysters, which being opened yield many Pearls: but these are a small sort, and the Employment is not very profitable, wherefore would not be followed, but that the Country is Barren, and they have no better Livelihood. The chief Cities are Madura, thought to be the Modura of Ptolemy, a large Place and the usual Residence of the Naique; seated at the foot of the Mountains, in the Latit. of 9. 45. Tutecory, seated in the middle of this Coast, a handsom well built Town, subject to the Dutch since the Year 1651. Cailpatam, a famous Market for Pearls. Manoncor; Trichandur; Manapar and Jacancury, are all Port Towns on the Straight of Manor.

Thus have we Travelled round this Peninsula, and viewed all its Countries and chief Cities, wherein we have made use of the best Lights that are given us by Travellers and Geographers. But must own, The Revolutions that have happened here by the Wars of one Prince upon another, but chiefly the Conquests of the Mogul; have made great Alterations in the Limits of Kingdoms, Power of the Princes, and condition of Cities and Towns; thus Calcut which was formerly so eminent a City, is now an inconsiderable Town; and the Kings of Gelconda and Bisnagar, that were lately such Potent Monarchs, are now reduced to a low Estate, and the former is even a Prisoner to the Mogul. But these Revolutions having not been particularly related by Travellers, and our Merchants frequenting only the Coasts, we have not been able to obtain a better account than is here given, which we hope is not very much different from the present State of the Country.

We shall next proceed to the other Peninsula, seated on the East of the Bay of Bengall; and stiled the Peninsula of India beyond the River Ganges.

I N D I A

G A N G E S.

For a Map consult that of the MOGUL's Empire, to which this is annexed.

THIS Large Tract of Land, which we call by the general Name of INDIA without or beyond the Ganges, comprehends three large Empires, and very many petty Kingdoms, or rather a great number of small Kingdoms Subject or Tributaries to the three Empires of AVA and PEGU. SYAM under which Malacca and Cambodia are Comprized. TONKIN, and COCHINCHINA or the Anamitick Empire, as Sanfon calls it.

The main Land is seated between the 10th and the 35th Degrees of North Latitude, and between the 110th and 130th Degrees of Longitude. To which must be added the Peninsula of Malacca, which shoots out Southward, to within two Deg. of the Equinoctial Line.

The Boundaries of the whole are, Tartary on the North, China on the East, the Mogul's Empire on the West, and the Indian Ocean on the South.

It is in general a Low Countrey between Mountains; furnished with many Rivers, especially four Large ones, the Caor, the Cosmin, the Capuma or Pegu, and the Menan, which flow from the Great Lake Menan, on the Northern Frontiers, and running quite thro' the middle of the Land, fall into the Sea. These Rivers are so enlarged by the melted Snows off the Mountains on the Confines of Tartary, as to overflow the Land, at least the Southern part every year, which enriches the Soil, and renders it Fertile in all common Fruits, Rice and Herbs. But as to any extraordinary produce of this Land, I find not any credible Testimony, especially that it abounds with Gold (as the Name of Aurea Chersonesus given by the Ancients to the Malacca Peninsle seems to Promise) does not at all appear. 'Tis true, the situation between India and China, the neighbourhood to the Spice Islands, and the no vast distance from Japan, together with the many convenient Bays and Harbours on the Coasts renders it convenient for Trade, and therefore the Portuguese and the Dutch made Settlements at divers places on the Coasts, and have reaped great Profit by the Commerce.

Of the Monarchy of P E G U and A V A.

THE Geography of the Northern part of this Country is less known, than is that of the Countries we have passed through, for it lyes so much within Land, that no modern Travellers have visited it, and therefore the best we can do is to put the old Accounts in the truest Light we are able.

The King of PEGU was formerly Supreme Lord of the greatest part, having no less than twenty other Kingdoms besides his own of Pegu under his Dominion. But we are told that Monarchy is pulled down by the several Invasions of the two powerful Kings of AVA and STAM. The former of which at this Day, either actually Possessing, or feudally Commanding all the Countrey between India on the West; China on the East; Tartary on the North; Syam on the South; and Tonquin on the South-East, which is an extent of at least 1000 Miles from North to South, and above 400 from East to West. A Land so well watered with Rivers, that it must needs be Fruitful; and in effect we are told it produces all things necessary to Life; together with Rubies and Musk, as Doctor Heylin tells us, as also Topaz, Amethysts, Jacynths and Sapphires, according to Sceron; And Elephants and Rhinoceros are very numerous here.

The Principalities or Kingdoms which composed the Monarchy of PEGU, are thus named by Baudrand, viz.

PEGU. MARTABAN. TANGU. TIPOURA. TRANSLANE. ABDIRA. BACAT. CASSUBI. CHACOMAS. ZANGOMA. LARGART. MANDRANELLE. MANAR. MOANTAT. PRON. TAZATAT. LAVAT. TOTAT. VILEP. CABLAN. CAOR.

To which are now added the Monarchy of AVA, which comprehended the Kingdoms of AVA. ARACAM. BRAMA. CANARENE. COMOTAT and MARSIN.

Our Maps are not particular enough to shew us the Situation and Limits of all these Districts: By shewing the Seat of the chief Cities, that we can obtain information of, the Reader will find the general site of the several Provinces, which is all that we can give him.

AVA, the Capital of the Kingdom to which it gives name, stands on the River Caypumo or Pegu, in the Latitude of 20 Deg. or according to some Maps in the 25th. Deg. The King keeps his Court here, and it is a Place of Trade for Jewels and Musk.

PEGU, the Capital of the Kingdom of that name, stands on the Western Bank of the River Caypumo (which is also denominated from this City,) near its mouth, into a Bay of the Sea in the Latitude of 18 Deg. well seated for Trade, and resorted to by European Merchants, the Traffick on the Natives part, is Ginger, Rice and Silver, which they give for the Spice, Silks, Calicoes, and other Goods. The City was used to be honoured with the King's Court, but since the King of Ava, has had the Dominion, 'tis probable 'tis less constantly here. This King according to the old Relations, was exceeding powerful even next to the King of China, and capable of bringing an Army of 1500000 Men, and 800 Elephants into the Field, as Gasp. Balbi related about 100 Years ago. The City was divided into two Parts, whereof one Part was the King's Court only, and the other Part well inhabited by Merchants. This Country is exceeding fruitful in Rice and other Grains, affordeth also Rubies, Civer, Lacca, and a great Numbers of Elephants, among which some White ones, which being a great Rarity, the King gives it as an addition to his Titles, and the King's Dominions extended very far, as will be seen by the many Nations we shall have occasion to mention, that were his Vassals.

MARTABAN, a small Kingdom subject to him, lies next to Pegu on the Sea-Coast to the South-east. The chief Town of the same name, stands near the Sea in Lat. 16. The Soil round about it is so Fertile, as to yield a treble crop of Rice as some relate, which enables them to send abroad great quantities of that Grain.

BREMA or BRAMA, another Kingdom within Land, formerly subject to Pegu now to Ava, a Place Dr. Heylin makes the Mother Country of the Bramins or old Indians, whence the present Priesthood descended. He extends this Countrey very far, even 150 Leagues one way, and twice as much another, comprising the Kingdoms of Ava, Tangu and others, as well as this under that denomination. The chief Town of the same name stands on the River Menan, in Lat. 20 Deg.

TANGU Kingdom adjoins to it on the South, and was a Place sometime notable in History for the Ambition of its Vice-roy, who A. D. 1467. setting up for himself, became Lord of this and the Neighbouring Countries, but the Succession lasted not; now subject to the King of Ava.

ARACAM, seated near the Sea-Coast at the mouth of the River Colmin, between Pegu on the South, and Bengall on the North-west. The Capital of a Kingdom which was sometime considerable, as taking ing part with the Usurper of Tangu above mention'd in pulling down the King of Pegu. The Portuguese had made some Settlements hereabouts, at the beginning of the last Century, but were expelled. The Island Sundiva which they possessed, lay near adjacent to this Coast.

VERMA, an In-land Country on the Frontiers of Bengall, and on the North of Arracham.

COMOTAGE, on the North of Verma, and adjoining to Mogulistan, another small In-land Kingdom was formerly subject to Pegu, now to its own King. The chief City of the same name, stands on the River Caor in Lat. 28 D.

CAOR, on the North of Comatage, formerly also subject to Pegu, but now to its own King; so perfectly In-land, that we know nothing of it. The Maps set down its chief City on the River of the same name, in Lat. 32 Deg. and 130 Miles South from the Lake Chimay.

TOTAT, whose chief Town of the same name, stands on the Caor, was also formerly subject to Pegu, now under its own Government.

LARGARAY, seated near the head of the River Menan, a little below its Efflux, from the Lake Chimay, in Lat. 33 Deg. is the Capital of another Kingdom subject to Pegu.

TAVAY, on the Menan.

TATATAT, with in Land, both now under their own Government, tho' formerly subject to Pegu.

TRANSIANA, also now free, the chief City stands on the Menan River, in Lat. 26. Deg.

TIPRA or TIPOURA, lying between the two Rivers Cosmin and Caypoumo, with in Land, is also under its own Jurisdiction.

CASSUBI, adjoining to Tipra on the East, is also a Country which has thrown off the Government of Pegu.

CANARANE, named also CAYPOUMO, and thence the River otherwise call'd Pegu is denominat'd, a Country formerly under Pegu, but gained its freedom, however its King is still Feudatory to the King of Ava. Its chief City seated on the River Pegu in Lat. 24. is by Baudrand represented as a large well built Place, Populous and Rich, and esteem'd one of the best in these Countries.

VILEP, a small Kingdom under its own Government, lies on the South of Canarane.

MANDRANELL, a Country lying between Cassubi on the North, and Taratay on the South; the chief City seated on the Pegu River, is subject to the King of Pegu, as are also MOANTA in the Mid-land, and MANAR upon the Frontiers of Siam, and on the River Menan.

Between Brama and the Frontiers of Siam, lies the Country named JANGOMA, possessed by the People called Laos, a Stout and Warlike Nation, and their Country a rich and fertile Soil.

The Old Relations extant in Hackluit, render this King so excessive Rich, that when the King of Tangu took the City of Pegu, he found as much Treasure, as 600 Elephants could carry. What the present State of it is, we are not appriz'd; for as I said before, 'tis too much within Land to be visited by Strangers, and the Natives have never come amongst us.

Of the Kingdom of

S Y A M.

THE Kingdom of SYAM or the Country of the SIAOMS, otherwise by themselves named the Country of TAI, or Free-men, as Lonbire tells us, extends from the Frontiers of Jangoma in the North, down to the City Parani in the Isthmus, which joins Malacca to the Continent, in the South; and on the East side of that Bay to the River Chautebon, which parts it from Cambaya; in Form like a Horse-shoe, round about the Gulph of Syam. In length on the West side, from the 7th. Deg. to the 22d. Deg. of Lat. which makes 900 Miles; and on the East side, from the 12 Deg. (in which the mouth of Chautebon River lies) to the 22d. which makes 600 Miles. And in breadth in the upper Syam, or the part above the Gulph, near 300 Miles: But in the lower Syam, which is the Isthmus of Malacca, not above 100 Miles.

It is bounded with a Ridge of Mountains on the West, which divide it from Pegu; on the East by another Ridge of Mountains, which divide it from Cochin-china; on the North, another Mountain parts it from the Country of Laos; and on the South, Malacca, the Gulph of Syam and Cambaya are its Boundaries.

Thus Seated it is a large Valley, thro' the Bosom whereof the large River Menan flows, and receives divers other Rivers, which are so encreased by the melted Snows falling off the Mountains, that the whole Land is annually like Egypt, overflowed and made exceeding Fertile.

The

The Products of the Earth, are Rice, Cotton, Sugar, Cinnamon, but not right good; Pepper, but not in much plenty; and of Fruits, Tamarinds, Bananas, Mango's, Ananas, Coco, Limes, Jumbos a Fruit like a Citron, Lemons, Citrons, Oranges, and Pomgranates, and several others peculiar to the Country. Of Trees, the chief is the Bambou, which they use in Building; they have also the Aquila or Aloes, which is a very hard Wood and affords an excellent smell; the Arec and Betele Trees, which affords the Fruit and Leaf, which they chew continually; and divers others not known among us.

There appears great quantity of Gold in the Ornaments of their Temples, and large Images of that Metal, which give us room to believe there were anciently Mines of it in this Country; but if there were, they are exhausted; for divers Europeans employed by the King, could discover only Copper, a bad sort of Tin, such as the Tea-Canisters brought hither are made of, Chrysal, Antimony, Emeralds, white Marble, and Iron, in the Bowels of their Mountains. Mr. Loubiere indeed tells us that one Mr. Vincent a French-man of his Acquaintance, said he had found a rich Oar, which he judged to be Gold, but would not discover it.

The Iron Mines near Campeng-pet, are so excellent as to rise pure Steel, whereof excellent Scymitars, Ponyards, and Knives are made. But they are such bad Forge-Men, that they cannot make an Anchor, nor even Chizels or Saws.

Of Animals, here are found Elephants, Rhinoceros, Tygers, Deer, Buffaloes, Oxen, Cows, Goats, Sheep, Hogs, &c. Of Birds they have divers sorts of lovely and various colour'd Feathers, but 'tis observ'd there are none that have Musical Voice. They have both tame and Wild Fowl for Food, to those that will kill, but that part of the People that are of the Bramin Faith, are much displeased to see them catch'd.

Their Earth is a sort of Mud and Clay, as the Waters leave it after the Inundation, which is easily Plow'd, and yields mighty Crops of Rice, so as to enable them to send great quantities abroad, to the neighbouring Islands and Countries, who for want of such Inundations are often reduced to Famine. The higher Land affords some Wheat, but they are not careful to propagate it, contenting themselves with Rice, neither is it indeed good, being too dry.

The People are a mixture of divers Nations, whom Flights from their own Countries, or the prospect of Gain has brought hither; for it is supposed the lowness of the Land, and the inconvenience of the annual Inundations, made the Country longer unpeopled than its neighbourhood; and in effect, they seem by their Form and Manners, to be of the extraction of India, China, Tonquin, &c. They are of rude unpolished Behaviour, unacquainted with the deeper Parts of Literature, which their natural Lazyness keeps them from penetrating into, altho' their Fancy be lively, and Apprehension quick. Their Children are taught to Read, Write and cast Account, by their Talapains or Priest, but further Learning they are not fond of; Poetry indeed employs their Wits, and Judicial Astrology with other Divination they are fond of. Altho' they are very Covetous, they are very Honest in Dealing; in Behaviour Courteous, but Puffilanimous, and Lazy; the Mechanics work little and not well, all desire to be Merchants, which with Fishery is their chief Employment. The common People go almost naked, wearing only a painted Calico round their Waste and down to their Knees, but the better sort put on a Shirt, or Vest of Mulling, and sometimes a Mantle, with a Cap and Slippers: Notwithstanding they go thus almost naked, they are very Modest, and carefully conceal the Privy-Parts. They are in Stature of the smaller size, but well proportioned, and their Complexion Brown. Their Food is Rice and Fish, and their Drink, Water: Wine is not here produced, but being brought from Schiras, is drank by them with delight; but their common Debauch is in Tari and Neri, the juice of the Coco and Arec-Trees.

The King according to the Custom of the East, is an absolute Monarch; he gives the Land to whom he pleases, and takes it away when he will, wherefore no Families can be enobled by Estates. Nor is there any Nobility but by Offices, which the King confers and takes away at Pleasure; whence says Loubiere, 'tis no uncommon thing to see, the Son or Grandson of a Lord rugging at the Oar. All the Men in the Kingdom except the Talapains or Priests, are listed Soldiers, and bound to serve the King six Months; he Arms them; but they Maintain and Cloath themselves; and when no Wars are, he employs them in such Services as he thinks fit. Wherefore the People that are able, commute for this Service, and contract with him to be excused for a quantity of Rice, Aloes-wood, Elephants, Cattle or other Commodities, or Money. The King is the Grand Merchant of the Kingdom, and has the Monopoly of all the Staple Goods, as Tin, Ivory, Saltpetre, Sulphur, Lead, Sapan-wood, Arack, Arms and Skins, which he sells to the Dutch. He hath Taxes upon all Plow'd-Land, upon Boats, upon Furnaces that distil Arack, upon the Fruit-Trees, Customs upon Merchandize, and other considerable Revenues, which render him excessive rich, and his People extream poor.

In Religion the Siamses are stupid Idolaters, worship Images, and have very extravagant Dogmata: But in Morals their Doctrine is good, they are forbid to Lie, to Steal, to commit any sort of Impurity, to Drink Wine, or any intoxicating Liquor, or to Kill, which last they observe with great strictness, and eat no Beasts but what die naturally: They are commanded to fear God, fast on certain Days, and do no manner of Work on those Days; &c.

The Kingdom of SIAM is divided into the Upper and the Lower; the Upper which is the Northern Part, is subdivided into Seven Provinces, which bear the Name of the chief Cities, viz.

Pourselouc, Sanqueleuc, Lacontai, Campeng-pet, Concrepina, Pechebonne, and Pitchai.

The Lower or Southern Part contains the Provinces of Chantibon, Petclon or Berdelong, Tchiai, Tenasserim, Ligor, Patana, and Ibor.

The Situation of these Provinces are thus,

Pourselouc, is the most Northern, the chief Town, is seated on the lesser River Menan, in the 20th. Deg. of Latit. A City of great Commerce, and Fortified with 19 Bastions.

Sanguelouc, lies on the West of it in the same Latitude, a considerable City.

Lacontai, on the South of Sanguelouc.

Campeng-pet, on the South of Lacontai, in Lat. 18 Deg. on the West side of the River Menan, the Province extending to the Frontiers of Pegu, famous for the fine Iron-Mines near it.

Pe-

Peelebon, Cocon-repina, and Pitchai, do not appear in the Maps, but may be supposed to lie on the East and South of those before named.

The Provinces of Lower Siam, marching from East to North-west, and then down Southward lie thus.

Chantebon, as Loubier calls it, but the common Maps name it Liam, stands at the mouth of the River of the same name, and near the Coast of the Gulph of Syam, in Lat. 12. on the extream East Part of Syam.

Tenasserim, lies on a River of the same name, that 15 Leagues below, falls into the Bay of Bengall, in the mouth of the Isthmus of Malacca, 180 Miles South-west from the City of Syam.

Ligor in the Peninsula, in the Gulph of Syam, near the Sea-Coast in the 8th. Deg. of Lat.

Patana, seated also on the same Bay, in the 6 Deg. 30 Min. of Lat. is reckon'd into the Dominions of this King, but it only pays him Homage, being governed by their own Magistrates, whose Chief is a Woman chosen by themselves, and always an old one that she may not Marry.

Zor, Jhor or Fibor, is the most Southern part of the Peninsula of Malacca, which, altho' the King of Syam may put into his Title, yields him no Obedience, being governed by its own King.

Having thus given you a general Geography of the Kingdom, we will proceed to as much particular as we can pick out with certainty.

The City of SYAM, otherwise named ODIA or ODIO, and formerly called INDIA, is a large City seated in an Island, in the form of a Purse, made by the windings of the River Menan, in the 14 Deg. 20. M. Latit. Longit. 120 D. 30 M. The Streets are large and straight, and in some places paved with Bricks laid edg-ways. Most of the Streets are watered with Canals, over which are many sorry Bridges made of Hurdles, and some few of Brick. The Houses are low, built of Wood, according to the common method in this Country, raised 12 or 13 Foot from the Ground, upon Pillars of large Bambou's, to prevent inundation, with a sorry Ladder instead of Steps. They have usually but one Story, and where in Grandeur a difference is made of Apartments, the Floor of one Room is raised a step or two, and the next Room as much, and so forward, every Apartment being proportionably more honourable, as it is raised. And therefore the Roofs are of different height, the Walls are but Hurdles hanged with painted Cloath, and the Floors the same cover'd with Matts or Carpets. In fine, the Houses appear neat, but not at all Magnificent. This is the general manner of the Houses of the Natives; but the Europeans that have been amongst them have built Brick Houses, and some of the better sort have imitated them. Altho' every House stands upon much Ground, by the means of having but one Story, and withal are generally furnished with Gardens, yet not above a sixth part of the Ground within the Walls is built upon, but then the Walls go quite round the Island, which is 2300 French Fathoms long, and 1200 broad. The Kings Palace stands on the North side of the City, and is not of much better Structure than the rest, except that it is built partly of Brick.

Louvo, seated to the North of Siam, near the East Bank of the River Menan, is notable for the Kings Palace of Pleasure, where he has fine Gardens. This Palace is also built of Brick.

Bancock, seated in an Island of the Menan, about seven Leagues from the Mouth of that River into the Sea, is a Town of Note, and is secured by Forts on the Banks of the River. This is the place where Custom for Merchandize is paid.

On the Northern Frontiers of Siam towards Pegu, stands the City Cambori; and towards the Frontiers of Laos, the Town of Corazema both famous.

Scotati, in the Latitude of 16 Deg. near the Menan, is also a considerable City.

Thus we have extracted all that is proper to the purpose of this Work, out of the Relation of Monsieur Loubiere, and that of the six French Jesuits, who having been the latest Travellers thither, we thought most proper to be followed, and not being able to Collect more from them, finish here our Account of Syam, rather than Copy the uncertainties of hear say Informations.

OF THE Peninsula of MALACCA; Or the Ancient Aurea Chersonesus.

THE Neck of Land adjoining to Syam on the South, and stretching out S. E. to N. W. from the 1st to the 8th Deg. of N. Latitude, is now commonly called Malacca, from the City of that Name, and surrounded by the Sea on all sides but the North, where it joins to the Province of Ligor and Patana already mentioned in our account of Syam. A Country of about 300 Miles in length, and 150 in breadth. The Portuguese in 1511. planted themselves in it, and have ever since had some footing there, but the Dutch have mostly driven them out. The Air is exceeding hot, but the Soil however not bad, for it produces Rice, Fruits in great plenty, Cattle, Game of both sorts, wild as well as tame Fowl. And Elephants, Tygers, wild Boars, &c.

The Language of this Country is the most Copious and Polite of any in the Indies; and therefore is commonly used all over its parts, and is called the MALAYAN-Tongue. A Dictionary whereof has been lately Printed at London, by Captain Bowry.

The Country is divided into many small Kingdoms subject to their own Princes, but their Power is not considerable, and the Dutch and Portuguese have always lived undisturbed by them.

The City MALACCA, seated on the Western Coast, in the 2d Deg 30 M. Lat. in the straight which divides this Peninsula from the Island Sumatra, is 1800 Paces in Circumference, whereof 600 on the Sea side on the East side runs a River, and on the N. W. stands a Mountain, round which a Channel is cut from the Sea to the River, and thereby the City made an Island. It is strongly Fortified with high and thick Walls, and a Fort on the other side the River. The Portuguese first Fortified it, but the Dutch who took it in 1640. now possess it. It is inhabited by 2 or 300 Families Dutch and Portuguese, together with Malayans and Chinese in the Suburbs. And is a handsome and populous Town, some of the Streets spacious, and the Dutch Houses of Stone, but the common Structure is of Bamboo and low. The walking Canes which we use in England, come mostly from this place. It is well supplied with Fish and Fruits, and is considerable for its convenient Situation for the Passage to China and Syam, but not very notable for its own Traffick. (Dampier.)

Sincapoura, seated on the same Coast, about 100 Miles South-East from Malacca, is notable for giving Name to the Straights of Sumatra, and stands upon the most South point of all Asia. It was considerable for Trade before the building of Malacca, and had its own King.

Ibor, the Capital of a Kingdom which we spoke of in our account of Syam, stands at the point of this Continent below Sincapoura. It was a large considerable City before the Portuguese in 1603. destroyed it. The King of it being thereby driven from thence built another City higher up the River, which he called Batusabar. (Nieubouff.)

Pahang and Potingaram, on the Eastern Coast are Port Towns. And Patana, the Capital of a Kingdom which we mentioned in our account of Syam, is a noted Mart Town.

Queda, over against it on the Western Coast, is also a Port Town.

OF CAMBODIA or CAMBOYA.

C*ambodia*, lyes on the East side of the Bay of Syam on the North; Cochinchina on the East; and the Ocean on the South. The Western part is Mountainous and Desert, the midland lyes low, and has the River Mecon running quite through it from North to South, which overflows Annually, and drowns the neighbouring Lands. The Country yields Venison, Beef, Pork, Goats, Poultry. As also Oranges, Citrons, Mango's and Coco's, together with Rice in very great plenty.

It is governed by its own King, who is Tributary to the King of Syam. The chief City Cambaya is seated on the River Mecon, in the 12th Deg. Lat. it consists of one large Street, built on a high ground to protect it from inundation. The Portuguese have a Factory here, and receive in Exchange for the Goods they bring, Rice, Wax, Lacque, Benzoin, Brass, China, Iron, &c. The other Towns of note are Lauweck on the Mécon, 100 Miles above Cambaya, which Baudrand makes the Capital City. (Tarran.)

Tarrana, Langor and Cara, three Port Towns on the Western Coast.

On the Coast of Cambodia, at no great distance from the Shoar, there lye a parcel of small Islands, whereof the chief as being the biggest and the only one that is inhabited, is

Condore or Puli-Condore, Pulo signifies Island, so Pulo Condore is as much as to say Condore Island. It lyes 20 Leagues South and by East from the Mouth of the River of Cambodia in 8 D. 40 Min. Latir. It is about four or five Leagues long, lying North East and South West, and not above four Miles broad in its largest part, and in other not above two Miles. The next Island in bigness lyes so conveniently at the West end of it, that it forms a commodious Harbour. In some parts the mold is black and pretty deep, but the greatest part is Sandy; divers tall and large Trees fit for any use grow upon it, among which, one they call the Dammar-Tree. yielding a clammy juice of a brown Colour, which being boiled becomes like Tar, and may be boiled to the consistency of Pitch, this Tree is three or four Foot Diameter, and must be wounded very deep Horizontally, and again Perpendicularly, and making a sufficient Cavity, the juice flows down into it. Here are Mango-Trees; a Tree bearing a Fruit like a Grape; and wild Nutmeg-Trees. Of Animals here are Lizards, Guano's, Pidgeons, a small sort of Cocks and Hens, which run wild in the Woods, and are good Food, Limpits, Muscles and Turtle. There be many small Brooks of fresh Water which dry up in the heat of Summer, but Wells may be dug in some parts to supply during that Season. The Inhabitants are of small Stature, dark Complexion and good shape, civil in their behaviour but very poor: they are of Cochinchina extract, and are Idolaters. Their chief employment is making Tarr or Diammar from the Tree above mentioned, and transporting it to Cochinchina. (Dampeir.)

The Situation of this place is very commodious for carrying on a Trade with China, the Philippine Islands, Tonquin, Cochinchina, Camboja, Syam, and all that Eastern Coast: And was therefore possessed for some time by our new English East-India Company, who in the Year 1702. settled a small Factory here which had taken a Party of Natives from Celebes to serve and assist them; but these People rose in Rebellion the beginning of March, 1705. Burnt, Murdered and destroyed the whole Factory, their Houses and Goods, in so much, that but very few escaped.

TONQUIN;

A N D

COCHINCHINA or ANAM.

THE Continent which we intend to comprize in this Chapter, extends from the 11th Deg. to the 25th Deg. of Lat. lying beyond Syam and Cambodia, the upper part which is Tonquin, extends to the Frontiers of China, and the lower part is bounded by the Sea, named the Bay of Tonquin. It consists of the three Kingdoms of Tonkin, Cochinchina and Chiampa.

TONQUIN, Tonkin, or Tonchin, borders on the North and N.E. on the Kingdom of China, on the West upon the Country of Laos or Fanzema, to the South upon Cochinchina, and the South East it is washed by the Sea. The Soil is rich, and fertil watered with divers Rivers, the chief of which is large and divided into two Branches, which fall into the Bay, one whereof called Rokboo, at the N. W. corner of it, at 20 Deg. 6. M. N. Lat. The other Domea, 20 Leagues N. E. of it in 20 D. 45. M. which is both larger and deeper than the other, and frequented by European Ships.

The Air is healthy and pleasant in the Dry Season, but is very hot if the Sun appear in the Monsoon. The Rains begin in May, and last to September, and cause great Land Floods; but from November to March, the Weather is dry, warm and pleasant.

The Soil produces every thing necessary to Life, viz. great Store of Rice, Potatoes, Herbage, Melons, Bonana's, Mango's, Oranges, Limes, Cocoas, Mulberries, Betele, &c. Of Animals, they have Elephants, Buffalo's, Bullocks, Goats, Deer, Hogs, some Sheep, Dogs, Cats, Lizards, Snakes, Scorpions, &c. They abound in tame Fowl, as Cocks and Hens, Ducks and Geese, and have Partridge, wild Ducks, Teal, Hens, Turtle-Doves, Pelicans, Parrots and Parrokites, &c. Their Rivers and Ponds abound in several sorts of good Fish, and the Sea furnishes them with Sea and Land Crabs, Crawfish, Shrimps and Prawm, besides Sea Tortoizes; they have also plenty of Anchovies. Of all which the Markets are well furnished, as also of the Flesh of Horses, Elephants, (whose Trunk is esteemed a delicacy) Cats and Dogs.

The Land abounds with Villages, and People who are clean limbed and middle sized, and not so tawny as the other Indians, they are Ingenious, Docile and Faithful, and make curious Silk Stuffs, and Lacquer'd Ware. The common People wear Cotton-
R Cloth,

Cloath, but the Mandarins green and red English Cloath. Their Houses are low with mudd Walls, and Partitions of Reeds or Cartes, with mean Furniture. The Trading part of the People are Civil, the Mandarins or Magistrates Proud, the Soldiers Insolent, and the Poor addicted to Theft.

The Government is Tyrannical under two Kings, the one who is the lawful Successor called Boua, is kept in the Palace a kind of Prisoner, while the Cores of an usurped Race exercises the Government, this has 300 Horse and 200 Elephants, in his Stables and maintains an Army of between 70 and 80000 Men, whereof 30000 near his Person.

The Religion is Pagan. And the Language has an Affinity to the Chinese, and is written in that Character.

The chief Cities.

Cochin or Kecia, the Metropolis is seated on the West-side of that Branch of the great River named Dona, which is as broad as the Thames at Lambeth, 50 Miles from the Sea, on a Sandy rising ground with neither Walls nor Ditches, the Houses, which are about 20000, are of Structure above mentioned with Vaults of Brick, being them to secure Goods from Fire, to which the Town is very Subject, the Streets are broad and ill paved. The English have a Factory here, and a House of low but handsome Structure. The Dutch have also a Factory and House. The King has three Palaces here, with large Stables and fair Court Yards, to draw up Soldiers in. The Kings Houses are built of Timber, two of them are but mean, but the third is more Magnificent, and is surrounded with a Wall faced with Brick three Leagues in Circumference 16 Feet high, and as much thick.

Higher up in the Countrey upon the same River stands Henan, another City inhabited by Soldiers and some Chinese Merchants, and a French Factory.

The whole Kingdom is divided into eight large Provinces, viz. the East and West Provinces, the Province of Cochin in the middle of them, and the Provinces of Tenan, Teneha and Ngeam on the Frontiers.

The Bay of Tankin is made by the Island of Ayem, which lies in 19 D. N. Lat. on the East and the Countrey of Cochinchina on the West, it is 20 Leagues wide, and has 40 Fathom Water in its full depth, but a great Shoal called Pracel lies across it, with Channels however on each side, for Ships to pass.

This much I have extracted from Dampier, who was there in 1693. and being a faithful relation, thought him a proper guide; and suppose what he has furnished, is sufficient to give the Reader such an Idea, as he expects from a Book of this Nature.

COCHINCHINA, extends above 100 Leagues along the Sea Coast, reckoning from the Kingdom of Champa, in the South to the Frontiers of Tenkin on the North, between the 11th and 17th Deg. of N. Lat. bounded on the West by a Ridge of Mountains, where live a Savage People called Kemat, who will not submit to Government.

The name of Cochinchina, has been given, is by the Portuguese, for the Natives call it Ayam, the West Countrey because West of China, whereof some say it was formerly part. Cochi is the Japanese Name, as signifying West in their Tongue, and because the Japanese introduced the Portuguese into the Trade of this place, they made use of their name of it, but in regard the Name was too much a-kind to Cochin, on the Malaba-Coast, where they already Traded, to distinguish this, they called it Cochinchina, q. d. the Chinese Cochin.

It is divided into five Provinces, viz. Sinua, which lies next to Tankin, wherein the King resides. Cachiam, wherein the Prince his Son governs. Quangya, Quignin, otherwise called Pulucambi and Renan.

It was formerly part of the Kingdom of Tankin, but of late Subject to its own Prince.

In this as in all other places between the Tropicks, there are two Seasons, the Dry and Wet, each lasting about six Months, sometimes a little more or less. In the Dry Season the Air is generally very Hot, excepting that on and near the Sea Coast, it is a little cooled every Day by the Sea Breeze. In the Wet Season it is cooler, by reason of the continual Rains. These Rains which are constant and Periodical, (and not the Snows and Rains on Mountains only) are the cause of the Freshes or inundation of the Indian Rivers, as also of the Egyptian Nile.

Accordingly, the Climate is Temperate here, for altho' the Summer Months of June, July and August be violently hot the Sun being then in the Zenith; in the Months of September, October and November, the Air is cooled by continual Rains which fall on the Mountains of Kemois, whence the Waters falling overflow the Lands, these Floods happen once a Fortnight, and last three Days at a time. In December, January and February, there are cold Northerly Winds, and in the other three Months, there appears a pleasant verdant Spring.

These inundations render the Land very fruitful, producing three Crops a year of Rice, together with Oranges, Bananas, Ananas, Melons, the Can, Gnoo, Giacca and Durion, delicious Fruits peculiar to this and the neighbouring Countries. Areca and Betele, and divers other Fruits as well as Herbs, &c. They have Cattle and Fowl and Fish in plenty. And a sort of Food common to most parts of the East; namely, the edible Birds Nest; there is a small Bird like a Swallow, which builds his Nest in the Rocks upon the Sea Coast, composing it of the Sea Froth, and a juice out of its own Stomach, which hardens in the Sun, and is almost Translucent, this Nest being softened in warm Water, and pulled into small pieces, is usually put into Broths: it is very nourishing, but of little taste, as I am informed by a very ingenious Gentleman, who has Travelled in these parts; altho' Father Borri, a Missionary here, applauds it as a most delicious Food.

Here is such plenty of Silk, that the very Peasants are clad with it, and the Mulberry-Trees grow in large Plains, as plentifully as common Hedges with us. The Silk is not so fine and soft but stronger and more substantial than that of China.

They have Timber of various sorts, whereof that called Tin is so hard as to be incorruptible, and serves for Anchors. And the Aquila-Tree grows on the Mountains of Kemois, the Wood whereof has a most fragrant smell, the older the Tree the more is the Scent, and therefore the Calamba, which is the Wood of an old Tree, is much the more valuable, and is also rare, because these old Trees, grow on high inaccessible Mountains; this is the Kings Monopoly, none else being allowed to sell it, and it is a most valuable Commodity in China, where they use a Block of it for a Pillow. I suppose this to be the Aloes-Tree, for I find the two Names used Synonymously. Elephants and Rhinoceroses are plenty here.

The People are in shape and colour like the Chinese, that is, of the lower Stature, Olive colour'd, with flat Noses, and small Eyes. In Manners, civil and courteous, kind to Strangers, and more Polite than their Neighbours, encouraging Learning equal with Military Arts, and Study Morality and the Sciences in Universities, where Professors confer Degrees. They are much more decent in their Cloaths than their Neighbours, being clad in Silk, and their Body quite cover'd; their Garments are of various colour, and are beautiful enough; the Men wear loose Gowns, and swath their lower parts with Bands of Silk instead of Breeches: The Women wear a Wastcoat close to their Bodies, and divers Petticoats, with a Vail over all, and their Hair hanging loose behind. Their Food is chiefly Rice, and fit cross'd leg'd on the Ground, round a low Table. In their Feasts, which they make with great Pomp, they ordinarily have 100 Dishes of Flesh, Fowl, Fish, and Fruits: The Country produces no Grapes, and therefore instead of Wine, they drink Arack.

Their Language is somewhat like the Chinese, but is written with much less Variety of Characters. The Learned Language is different from that commonly spoken: And their Religion is Pagan. Lastly, The Men are reckon'd Braver and better Soldiers than any of their Neighbours.

The King is the Descendant of an Usurper, who about 100 Years ago threw off the Government of Tonquin, but pays him large Tribute for Peace Sake: He is able to bring 80000 Men into the Field, who use Fire Arms, and are good Marks-men.

The Portuguese had formerly a Trade here, and the Chinese come Yearly hither on Traffick.

Thus far I have borrow'd from Father Borri, a Mileneze Jesuit, who was one of the first Missionaries in this Country.

Cochin-china affords Gold, and I believe a small quantity of Silver, (tho' of this latter I am not certain) but no Pepper nor Porcelain, as Dr. Heylin and Sanfon relate.

The chief City which bears the Name of the Kingdom, and is the Place of the King's Residence, stands in the 16 Deg. of North Latit. not far from the Sea.

Other Cities and Towns mentioned by Travellers, are, Bouten an excellent Haven, Caccian a Royal Seat, and resorted to by the Chinese for Trade, and Senso formerly a Mart-Town, but now decay'd, because its Harbour is choak'd with Sand.

CHIAMPA which is another smaller Kingdom, is the South Part of the same Continent, the Town which gives Name to the Country, stands on the Sea-Coast, in the 12 Deg. North Lat. But Sanfon Names Pulocacem as its Capital, but that must be a mistake, for Pulo signifies an Island, but it is not likely that the Metropolis of a Country on the Continent, should be seated in a small Island.

Some Geographers have reckon'd this Country Part of Cambodia. But it is now under the King of Cochinchina.

And thus much for India extra Gangem.

On the Coast of INDIA.

IF Before we enter upon our account of these Islands, we speak a word or two concerning those our Ships touch at in East-India Voyages, altho' they are described in their proper places, we trust our Reader will not think the Repetition impertinent. I mean Santa Helena and Mauritius.

SANTA HELENA, so named by the Portuguese, because discovered on St. Helen's Day, lies in the 16 D. 12 M. South Lat. Longit. 12 D. from Ferro, 350 Leagues West of the Coast of Angola in Africa, 550 Leagues North West from the Cape of Good Hope, and 510 Leagues East from the Coast of Brazil. It is a small Island, not above 10 Miles over over, but is a most excellent Soil. When the Portuguese first discovered it, they stocked it with Goats and Hogs, and planted divers Fruits and Herbs, all which have flourished ever since, and our Seamen find here plenty of fresh Provisions, and which is better, they are sure to be cured of the Scurvy, for not only is the Air serene and wholesome, by reason of the fresh Breezes, but also the Land yields Herbs, which infused in a Bath, supple their Limbs, and taken inwardly, so soon reduces the Blood to a true Crasis, that as Dampier tells us, Men that have been carried alhoar in Hammocks, have been able to walk in a Weeks time. Here are three Rivers which rising in the high Midland, fall into the Sea. These Streams afford good watering to our Ships, who seldom fail to call here in their return from India. Dampier speaks only of Potato's, Yams, Plantains and Bonana's, together with Grapes, which they were in hopes to rear, as the Fruits of the place, but Mandefo and Nieuhoff, who were both there the first in 1639. the latter in 1658. talks of Figs, Pomgranates, Citrons and Oranges. And all agree, there are plenty of Hogs, Goats, Bullocks, Dung'il Fowl, Geese, Turkeys and other Fowl. The Portuguese only stocked the Island with these conveniences, and left it free to be used by all Nations. The Dutch liking the Situation, settled on it, but when their Plantation at the Cape was fixed, they Deserted this, and then our English East-India Company settled Servants there, and began to Fortify it, which the Dutch it seems would not suffer, for coming upon them in 1672. they expelled them. But our Company soon revenged it, in the recovery of the place, and Capture of two rich Dutch East-India Ships. Ever since the Island hath been in the hands of the English, and is so well strengthened, as to be in no danger from an Enemy.

MAURITIUS Island, or the MAURUSHES, as the Seamen call it, lyes on the East side of Madagascar, at above 100 Leagues distance from it, in the 20th Deg. of South Lat. Longit. 75. about 30 or 40 Leagues in Circumference. It was first discovered by the Portuguese, and by them named Cerne, but the Dutch making themselves Masters of it in 1598. gave it the present Name in honour of Prince Maurice of Nassau. The Land is Mountainous, and may be seen very far at Sea, and yields the best Ebony wood in the World; the Valleys produce Fruit and plenty of Fowl, and the Sea abounds in Fish; there are also good Streams of fresh Water, and the Air is very healthy. There are two good Havens, one in the North West in 20 Deg. South Lat. the other North East in 20 Deg. 15 Min. all which have made the Dutch build a Fort upon it, and the Ships of England, as well as Holland, frequently call there for Water and Refreshments.

To proceed now to the Indian Islands; Wherein we will begin from the West, and therefore view Ceylon and the Maldives; Before we proceed to Sumatra, Java, Borneo, Celebes, the Spice Islands, the Molucca's, the Phillipine Islands, and the Ladrones.

CEYLON, supposed to be the Taprobana of Ptolemy, is a large Island lying from the 6th to the 10th Deg. of North Latit. 240 Miles from North to South, and in breadth, in the South parts 140 Miles, but in the North part not 100; being in form like a Pear, divided from the Main Land of the Peninsula intia Gangem, by the Straight Manar, which parts it from the Coromandel Coast. It's Long. from the 97th to the 99th Deg. It abounds with Rice, and yields Pepper, Ginger, Cardamum, Sugar and Tobacco. Fruits of all sorts are seen here, but not Cultivated, and grow wild. The Areck and Betele Tree, and the Talipot Tree, the former for the Nut, and the latter for its Leaf, which is two or three yards long, are much Cultivated. The Betele is generally used by all Degrees of People here, as elsewhere in India. And the Talipot Leaf serves for covering from Rain, for Bed and Tent in Travelling, and various other uses: altho' it be very long, it folds up like a Fan in so little Room, that they carry it easily in Journeying. They have all the necessary kinds of Cattle, Fowl and Fish, with many kinds of wild Beasts, among which the Elephants of this Island are reckoned the best and most Docile of all India. The Rivers and Sea Coast afford Pearl, and the Land several sorts of precious Stones, especially Rubies. But the more valuable Produce of this Land, and for which the Dutch have been so careful to exclude all other Europeans is CINNAMON, which grows very plentifully in this Island, and no where else.

The natural Inhabitants are called Chingulays, supposed to have come Originally from China, with whom are mixed Malabars and Moors. Of the Chingulays, there are a Race who live wild in the Woods without Government, but the civilized part of them are a proper well favoured People, who are Active, Ingenious, Crafty and Treacherous, Grave and Courteous in their behaviour, temperate in Food, and frugal and neat in their Families. They are Pagans in Religion, and have as ridiculous Stories of their Gods as their Neighbours.

Their Houses are poor low thatch'd Cottages, built with Sticks, and dawbed over with Clay, never above one Story high; the better sort have them in the better manner, but none sumptuous. Their chief Food is Rice, for Flesh and Fish being scanty, they rather choose to sell than eat it.

The King is as Absolute here as in the other parts of India, engrosses to himself all the Wealth of the Country, and keeps his People Poor, so that none but the Governours of Provinces and Officers under the King have any Wealth.

The Dutch possess the Coast, at least all the Havens on it, quite round the Island. The Portuguese were the first European Inhabitants here, but the Dutch have after long Wars, quite beaten them out and have possessed it solely for these 40 or 50 years past.

The Places they possess are

Jaffnapatam, a strong Town or Castle seated on a Bay, or Arm of the Sea, in the North part of the Island, of quadrangular form, surrounded with strong Walls and a large Ditch, and well furnished with Cannon. The adjacent Country (which is a Peninsula between the Straight of Manar, and the Arm of Sea which passing by Jaffnapatam, runs 15 Leagues within Land) is all Subject to the Dutch, it bore the Name of the Kingdom of Jaffnapatam, and is divided into four Provinces, wherein are a great number of Villages, and many Christian Churches erected, mostly by the Portuguese, now exercised by the Dutch, who teach great Numbers of Children, and and instruct them in the Christian Faith. Baldern, the Dutch Minister who lived here, has given us the Pictures of 21 of those Churches, which appear handsome Structures. Jaffnapatam was taken An. 1658.

MANAER, a small Island a few Leagues S. from Jaffnapatam, famous on account of its Pearl Fishery, has a strong Castle for its Defence. This Island was reduced by the Dutch, Anno 1658.

CALPENTINE, an Island of larger extent, lyes on the Western Coast, near 20 Leagues more to the South.

Negumbo, a strong Fortrefs seated on the Western Coast of Ceylon, in the 7 D. 20 M. Lat. was taken by the Dutch in 1644.

Columbo, seated also on the West Coast not many Leagues South from Negumbo, is another Fortrefs taken by them, in 1656.

Gale, called Punta Galla by the Portuguese, lyes on the South end of the Island in the 6th Deg. Lat. It is very strong in its Situation as well as Fortification, and is a City well built of Stone being the Capital of the Portuguese first, and now of the Dutch in Ceylon, and the seat of the Governour.

Batocales, another Fortrefs seated on the East side of the Island, in 8 D. Lat. was taken by the Dutch in 1638.

Lastly, Trinquemale, on the North East side of the Island, is another Fort which they took in 1639.

These are all the Notable Places on the Coasts.

The Inland parts of Ceylon are almost unknown to Europeans, nay, even to the Hollanders themselves, who inhabit the Coasts: Neither is it any Wonder, in regard that the whole Island is every where beset with very steep, barren and dreadful Mountains, that cannot be passed but where the Paths are beaten, which indeed are many in number, but so narrow, that only one Person at a time can go on them; and certain Officers, appointed by publick Authority, always keep Watch on the Borders of these Passages, who suffer none to enter, or go forth, without leave: However, there is extant a large Historical Description of this Country, written by Robert Knox, an English Sea-Captain, sometime in the Service of the East-India Company, who lived there a Captive for twenty one Years and a half; yet so as during the last Years, he had an Opportunity of viewing all the Provinces, and of taking a particular Account of every thing remarkable in those parts; till at last, he found means to make his Escape, after a wonderful manner on the 18th of October, 1679. According to his Information, the Inland Country abounds with Hills, Springs and Rivers full of Fish; but such as are rocky and unfit for Navigation: The most eminent of these is Mavelagonga, which taking its Rise from Adam's Mountain, flows towards the North, and having watered a very large Tract of Ceylon, discharges it self into the Ocean, near the Town of Trinquemale: There are also vast Woods, which serve both for the Boundaries and Ramparts of the several Provinces: The Valleys are for the most part Fenny, and enriched with abundance of Springs of an admirable Clearness.

The innermost Tracts of this Island are very populous, and those that lie near the Sea-Coasts are much less inhabited: In the former, to the East of the Town of Columbo, stand the highest Mountain of Ceylon, and even (as some affirm) of the whole Continent of India, called Hamallal by the Inhabitants, and Pico de Adam, or Adams Mountain by the Portuguese, and other Europeans: It is extremely steep and of a Conick Figure, having on the top, a plain smooth Stone, on which is imprinted a large Mark of an Humane Foot; The Natives believe this to be the Footstep of the first Parent, who was taken up from thence into Heaven, and upon that account they adore it, with a wonderful Superstition; and to that purpose, in the beginning of the Year, the Men, Women, Boys and Girls, notwithstanding so difficult a passage, climb up to the top of it, out of a Principle of Religion. The Air of the inner Tracts is different, so that the Northern Part, by reason of the Corruption and Scarcity of the Waters, is less healthful and fertile; but the rest are otherwise disposed by their natural Temperature: When the West-winds blow, it rains in the Western Part of the Island, and the Seeds are committed to the Ground; whilst at the same time the other Part, towards the East, enjoys most serene and hot Weather, and the Inhabitants are employed in looking after their Harvest: It happens contrariwise in both Quarters, when the East-winds blow. This Island was sometime divided into four Kingdoms, but the best Part of it is now under the Dominion of Conde Uda, a Prince whose Government is Arbitrary, and to whom his Subjects generally give Divine Honours.

The inner Countrey of Ceylon is divided into the greater and lesser Parts, the former of which Capt. Knox calls Provinces, and the other Counties; because they resemble the Counties or Shires of England, but are not like them with respect to the largeness of their Extent: He informs us, That the Province of Noure Calava is situated towards the N. and includes five Counties; as also the Province of Hotcourly, comprehending seven Counties: On the East, he places the Province of Mantah, subdivided into three Counties: Towards the same Quarter, appear Tammenquod, Bintana, Vellas and Paumao, all distinct Counties, with the Province of Onvah, to which he attributes three Counties. In the middle, are the Counties of Wallaponahy, Pencipet, Goddaponahoy, Hevoibattay, Coremul, Hoisepot and Timponahoy; as also, Oudanour and Tattanonr, the chief of all the Counties of the Inland Country of Ceylon: On the West lye Oudipollat, Doluslaug and Hotteracourly, in which four Counties are comprised; with Portaloorn and Tuncourly, that comprehends three Counties, and part of which is subject to the Jurisdiction of the Hollanders: All these Provinces and Counties, (except these six, viz. Noure Calava, Hotcourly, Tammenquod, Vellas, Paumao and Hottercauly) lye upon fruitful and well watered Hills, and are expressed by the common Name of Conde Uda, i. e. On the tops of the Mountains; which is also the Royal Title.

The same Author reckons up five Capital Towns, besides a great number that are ruined, and several Villages within the Boundaries of the inner Ceylon, viz. Cande or Candy, the Metropolis of the whole Island, built in the Heart of it, on the River Mavelagonga; formerly the Royal Seat of the King of Candea, after whose departure it fell much to decay. Nellemby-neur, a Town situated more towards the South, to which that Prince translated the Royal Court from Cande. Allout-neur, seated a great way below Cande, and divided into two Parts, by the River

River Mavelagonga : Badoula, seated at the farthest distance from Cande to the East, and at a much less from Englitz-neur, a Town not very remote from the said River, which was chosen for the Royal Seat after Nellemby-neur.

The MALDIVE ISLANDS, are a ridge of small Islands lying North-West to South-East 140 Leagues in length, from the 8 Deg. North Latit. to the 1 Deg. South Latit. the Northern of them are about 85 Leagues distant from the Coast of Malabar on the West. They are reckoned to be at least 1000 in Number, but very small ones. The principal of them are,

On the North of the Equator.	{	Calloumadeux.	Nillendoux.
		Malyqua.	Quelba.
		Puraqua.	Camdycal.
		Gauvir.	Maldiva, &c.

Under the Equator.	{	Sedu.
		Adoumatia.

On the South of the Equator.	{	Addou.	Pove.
		Molucquesouadone.

The general Character of them is, that they produce Coco's and some Fruits, but little else ; that the Inhabitants are ingenious in making Garments of Silk and Cotton, and are Subject to a King, whose place of Residence called Male or Maldiva, is a good Town built upon four small Islands. The whole is divided into 13 or 14 Provinces called Atolons, all Subject to this one King. They lye very low, and are divided from each by so shallow a Sea, and withal so near one another, that they can wade thro' from one to i'other.

The SUNDA Islands, so denominated from the Strait of Sunda, which lyes between Sumatra and Java. Are these that follow.

SUMATRA, lying North West to South East, on the West side of the Peninsula of Malacca, from the 5th Deg. of North Latit. to the 6th Deg. of South Latit. and from the 114th Deg. to the 124th Deg. of Longit. So that the Aequator passes over the middle of it ; 'tis therefore hot as the Neighbouring Countries are, but so refreshed with the Sea Breezes, as to be less sultry than the Main Land.

The Soil is in the Midland Mountainous and Craggy, but in the Valleys 'tis a good deep Mould, and would produce Rice more plentifully than it does, if the Inhabitants were more industrious. Here are good Fruits of various sorts, as Plantains, Bonani's, Oranges, Limes, Coco's, Pomgranates, Mangc's, Mangestans a delicious Fruit according to Dampier, as is also the Pimple-nose, Citrons, Melons, Pine-apples, &c. Pot-herbs, excellent Medicinal Herbs, Camphire and other Drugs. Poultry, Cattle, and wild Beasts plenty enough, and tame Elephants. There are many small Rivers, which afford plenty of Fish, and in general the necessaries for Life are plenty enough, except that their Crops of Rice not being large enough, they are beholden to their Neighbours, who bring whole Shiploads, and find good Market here. (Dampier.)

But the most considerable Commodities of this Island are Gold and Pepper ; of the former there is found good store in the midland Mountains, and plenty of Pepper in the Valleys.

The People are of the Malayan Race, and Mahometan's in Religion, of a brown Copper colour in Complexion, and in Temper like the other Indians.

The whole Island is 900 Miles long, but not proportionally broad, being in the broadest part, which is the Southern, but 180, and in the other part not above 100 Miles. It is divided into several Kingdoms, some reckon seven, others five.

ACHIN Kingdom, which is the Northern part seems to be the most considerable, and extends from the North West point towards the Straights of Malacca, 30 or 60 Leagues in length. The Capital City which gives Name to the Kingdom, is seated on the Banks of a River near the North West end of the Island, it consists of 7 or 8000 Houses, says Dampier, and may be reckoned the chief of the whole Island, the buiklings are mean, but better both built and furnished than the neighbouring Nations. The Houses are raised upon Posts from the Ground, two or three Steps, because in the rainy Monsoons, the River overflows, and drowns a great part of the City. This Kingdom is always governed by a Woman, assisted by 12 Lords called Oronkeys ; she is always an elderly Maid of the Royal Family, elected by the Oronkeys, and bears the Title of Queen, but the Power of Government rests more in the Lords. The Power of this Queen extends beyond the Limits of the Island, as reaching over a good part of Malacca ; where Queda, Patana and Jhor are Subject to her. The Gold which is so plenty here, brings Merchants from Europe, China, Siam, Tingwin and other parts, so that the Haven is seldom without a good number of Shipping. The English have a Factory here, and this was the place they first came to in the first Indian Voyages.

The Kingdoms of MENANCABO and CAMPER, take up the middle of the Island, and JAMBE and PALIMBAN the South part. But according to Nieuhoff, these Kingdoms are subject to Strangers, and the Royalty pulled down. The Places of chiefest Note here are,

Benconli, an English Fort seated on the West Coast of the Island, in the fourth Deg. South Lat. a small Island lyes before it, which with the Land point of Sillebar makes the Haven, and beyond it within Land is a high slender Hill. The Fort faces the Sea, and makes a good appearance, and a River from the Land runs on the North West side of it. The place is unhealthy, by reason of the swampy Ground at some distance on the Land side, which brings an unwholsome Air, but the Land near the Fort is good Champion. The Pepper Trade is the Business of the Factory here, for at Achin they have none, its growth being chiefly in these Southern parts ; and whereas they formerly bought it at Bansam, when the Dutch got the Mastery there, the Company were in danger of losing this Trade, and therefore besetted themselves, and made a Settlement here about the year 1685.

Indragore, an English Factory, stands also on the West Coast, about 30 Leagues North East from Bencaul.

Palimban, was a considerable City, and the Seat of a King before the Dutch burnt and totally destroyed it in the Year 1659. upon injuries offered by the King of it; it stands on the East Coast, in the 4 Deg. South Lat.

Jambe, the Capital of another Kingdom, stands more to the North, on a River that falls into the Sea, on the East Coast, in 2 Deg. South Lat.

Bencaul, on the same Coast more Northward, being in the first Deg. of North Lat. is the chief Town of those parts, and is frequented by the Dutch for Pepper: the Inhabitants are Malayans, and a civil People.

The Island of JAVA, lies six Deg. South of the Equator, directly opposite to the South East point of Sumatra, from which it is separated by the Strait of Sunda, which is not above five or six Leagues over. To the North lies the Island Borneo, to the East it has the Ile of Balay, called the lesser Java, from which it is divided by the Channel of Palembuan, and to the South the main Ocean. Its length (from the Straights of Sunda, to the Channel of Palembuan East to West, inclining however a little to the South) is about 130 or 140 Leagues. Its breadth is very different in different parts, but the whole Circumference is reckoned 300 Leagues. The North Coast of Java has abundance of very commodious Creeks, Bays, Harbours and good Towns. The Island had formerly as many petty Kings as there were Cities, but 'tis now divided into two Kingdoms under the Jurisdiction of the King or Emperor of Mataram, and the King of Bantam, the former possessing the Eastern and greatest part of the Island, and is therefore stiled the Emperor of Java, the latter the Western and lesser part.

The Climate is of the same temperature and healthiness as the other parts of India. One half of the Year, that is, from May to October is clear Weather, and refreshed with Breezes from the East. In December the Rains begin, and the Winds blow, and render the Weather unpleasant till March, when they begin to sow Rice, which they reap in September, and in October the Fruits are ripe.

The Island has many Mountains and impassable Forrefts on it, but in other parts the Soil is good and very Fertile, producing Rice in great plenty, Fruits, Cattle, Fowl and Fish, and Tygers, Rhinoceros's and other wild Beasts in the Forests. Pepper grows here too, but not so plentiful or so good as at Sumatra; and the Dutch have good Plantations of Sugar. Sausen in Transcribing other Geographers, reckons up Gold, Silver, Diamonds, Emeralds, Rubies and such rarities among the Commodities of this Island, but as Nieuhoff, who lived there, and is very particular in his account of the Products, speaks not of them, we shall choose to be silent.

The People are a barbarous, proud and fierce Nation, of a brown Colour, with flat Noses, broad Faces, small Eyes, strong Limbed, and of good proportion. Their Cloathing is a piece of Calico wrapt about their Body, and their Religion is Mahometan on the Coasts, but Pagan in the Midland. (Thus far I have taken from Nieuhoff.)

The Towns of chiefest Note are, on the West end, Bantam, Batavia, Karauwan, Monucaon, Daramayo, Charabon, all on the North Coast. Or the more East part or Kingdom of Mataram, Japara, Sadaya, Tuban and Jortan, also on the North Coast, Palembuan at the East end, and Mataram on the South Coast.

Bantam, the Metropolis of the Kingdom of the same Name is seated at the West end of the Island on the Strait of Sunda, at the Foot of a Mountain out of which three Rivers arise, two whereof surround the City, and the third passes through it; the Houses are miserably built, and the Walls very wretched, as well as the Gates, but provided with many Cannon. The Houses stand upon Piles, and are built of Reeds and Canes, and the City consists of three principal Streets, which have Channels running through them, but the Water is foul and stinking. The Foreigners live in Suburbs, but meet daily at the Bazar or Exchange, besides which are two other Market places, where goods of divers sorts are sold. And in effect this City is populous much resorted to by Chinese, Bengalians and other Indian Strangers as well as Europeans for Traffick. (Mandelst.)

BATAVIA, formerly named Jacatra and still so called by the Natives, is seated on a Bay of the Sea in the North Coast 18 Leagues South East from Bantam. The Dutch took Jacatra in the Year 1619. and having demolished it, built a new City which they named Batavia, and made it the Seat of their Government in India. It is not only surrounded with Walls and a Moat, but also guarded with divers Forts at a distance all round the Town, and a strong Citadel on the Haven, wherein their Governour general of the East-Indies lives in great State. Two small Rivers that rise in the Country, water the City, and fill divers Channels that run through the eight Streets the City consists of, which are all built in a strait Line 30 Foot broad, and paved with Brick. The Houses are neat, and the publick Buildings very Magnificent: 'twould be tedious to enumerate them. Nieuhoff has given very particular accounts of each, to which we must refer our Reader, and content our selves with saying 'tis a rich and flourishing Mart-Town, resorted to by the Chinese and other Eastern Nations.

Charabon, is a strong City seated on a River.

Tuban, on the same Coast, more to the South, is by Travellers represented as a strong, large and populous place; next Bantam the chief Town on the Island, and even better built than that; notable for a spacious Palace, wherein are large Apartments for wild Beasts, and well frequented for Traffick in Pepper and other Goods.

Mataram, the Seat of the Emperor of Java, is seated near the middle of the South-Coast, but the Trade lying more the other way, our People have seldom been there, and so we have no particular account of it.

The Island of BORNEO lies in the middle, between that of Celebes on the East; Java on the South; Sumatra and Malacca on the West; and Paragoia one of the Phillipines on the North; reaching from 7 and half Deg. of Northern Lat. to the fourth of Southern. Its Figure is almost round, and its Compass very wide; although the Opinions of Authors thors are different as to the latter: However the least Compass that is attributed to it consists of 250 Leagues, and it is generally reputed the largest of all the Islands of Asia: It produces most admirable Diamonds, Bezoar Stones, the best Camphire of all that is found throughout the whole Continent of India. Rice, and Pepper with other sorts of Spice, Cotton, Honey and Wax; and is beset with Woods; and fine Rivers, more especially towards the West and South, the chief of which is Succadano, abounding with Diamonds: So that it may well be reckon'd among the most fruitful Islands of the Indian Ocean; but the Air is not very healthful, by reason of the marshy Grounds. The Sea-Coasts are possessed by the Hollanders, and the Metropolis bears the same Name of Borneo, seated in the Fens and on the shore of a little Bay, towards the Northern Part of the Island, being a large, neat and famous Mart-Town and a Royal Seat, with an excellent Harbour: The other considerable Towns which stand on the Western and Southern Coasts (for the Eastern, and more especially the inland Tracts of this Island are almost unknown to Europeans) are Malano, Puchavaraon, Sambas, Harmeta, Landa, near which are Diamonds of the highest value; Succadano, Lave and Bendarmassin, not far from the Mouth of the River Succadano.

F. Anthony Ventimiglia, a Portuguese Missionary in the Year 1689. gives this account of Borneo: that it is 1650 Italian Miles in Circumference, the Coast inhabited by Malayans, who are Mahometans, and the inland Country by Pagans called Beajuses. That these former are governed by several Kings, who reside at Borneo, Bandermassin, Succadan, &c. but the latter have only Captains and chief Men over them. That the Country is Fertile, abounding in Rice of an excellent sort, Cassia, Wax, Camphire the best in the World, Pepper, Gum, excellent Diamonds found in the Rivers, also Gold-dust among the Sands, and the richest Bezoar Stones, found in the Stomach of a wild Ape. Here are Herbs, Roots, Fruits, and the Edible Birds Nest, mentioned in our account of Cochinchina. He represents the Malayan Moors, as a faithless Covetous Thieving Generation, and on the contrary, the Beajuse Pagans, as a Moral virtuous People; but whether Affection and Prejudice had not some influence, I cannot say, for he was intent on converting the Beajuses, and was interrupted in it by the Moors. There are several Ports on the Island, but that of Bandermassin is most frequented, for the Spice there sold.

CELEBES, lyes on the East of Borneo, between that Island and the Molucca Islands, the North part 2 Deg. above the Line, and the South part 6 Deg. below it, in Long. from 138 to 142 Deg. The exact Lat. according to Dampier is from 1 Deg. 30 Min. N. to 5 Deg. 30 Min. S. At the North East end there is a long narrow Cape which stretches out 30 Leagues North East, and in the South part there is a Bay or Gulph 7 or 8 Leagues wide, which runs up 40 or 50 Leagues into the Country. There is a high Hill on the North end, but the Land is generally low on the East side, the Mould is black and deep, and extraordinary fat and rich, and so full of Trees as to seem one continued Grove. (Dampier.) The North West Wind blows from November to March, and makes the Shore unsafe, the Rains at the same time overflow the low Lands, for which reason their Houses are built upon Piles 9 or 10 Foot above the Ground. The Island yields much Spice, great plenty of Rice, with the Fruits and Plants usual in these parts. The Inhabitants resemble the Siamese in Form and Complexion, and are Industrious in cultivating their Land. (Mandellso.) The whole is divided into six Kingdoms, but Europeans have Cognizance of but two, viz. Celebes whose Capital stands on the West Coast under the Line. And Macassar which is the South part. The Capital of the same Name stands on the West Coast, in the 5 Deg. of South Lat. and is a Town of great Strength and Trade, but is possessed by the Dutch as Dampier says. Nauvette speaks also of the Dutch Conquering it before the Year 1670. whereas it was under its own King when he was there in 1658.

A great many small Islands lye upon the Coasts of these large ones we have been treating of, too many to be each described, and the meer naming them will be of little use to the Reader. Those that are mentioned by our Voyagers, and are of the larger extent are as follows.

BALY, or the lesser Java, situate at the West end of Java, in the same Latit. a populous and fruitful Island, where the Ships for the Molucca's touch for fresh Water and Provisions. It is a small Island not above 12 Leagues over.

LOMBOC and CUMBAVA lye on the same Line Eastward, but I find no account of them Extant.

FLORES lyes more to the East, lying East to West, 60 Leagues in length. The chief Town is named Lusatia, and lyes on the North-West side.

TIMOR, lyes on the South-East of Flores at the distance of about 30 Leagues. The Land is high and Mountainous, 70 Leagues long, and 15 or 16 wide, the middle of the Island is in the 9th Deg. South Latit. It produces white Saunders, Wood and Wax.

Of the SPICE-ISLANDS.

It may be matter of Admiration, that those two delicious Fruits, Nutmegs and Cloves, should be found only in so small a part of the habitable Earth. For no where else but in this Eastern part in a few small Islands do these fragrant Spices grow. 'Tis true, Dampier says Mindanao Island may be made to produce them, but however, none appears any where but in these Islands, which lye just under or near the Aequator. The Banda Islands alone produce Nutmegs. Ternate and Tidore, with Amboyna, Ceram and a few other small Islands furnish the whole World with Cloves, as Ceylon on the Coast of India already Treated of does with Cinnamon. But the Wisdom of Providence is as visible in this as in the other parts of its Dispensations, for if but a small part of the Earth produce these Spices, there grows however more than enough to suffice the whole World; for the Earth is so Prolifick of them, that great quantities of Cloves drop ungathered, and are permitted to perish on the Earth. Of Nutmegs vast quantities are often destroyed on the Spot, to prevent filling the Markets too full. An instance whereof Sir William Temple gives us in his Observations on the Netherlands, where he says an East India Seamen told him, he saw at one time three heaps of Nutmegs burnt, each of which was more than a small Church would hold. And indeed, if we consider the Hot Nature of these Spices, and how little of them Suffices for all necessary uses, and how Injurious the too great use of them might be to our Health, we may have Reason to bless Providence, that they come so scantily to us. And content our selves that Pepper, which is of more general use is not so restrained.

These Spices were brought either through Persia and Turkey, or by the Red Sea and through Aegypt, to the Mediterranean Sea, and thence sold to Europeans, before the Portuguese in the year 1511. discovered these Islands. The Emperor Charles V. claimed the property of them, supposing them to lye within his part of the Division which Pope Alexander VI. had made between the Castilians and Portuguese, but the Portuguese would not so part with them, contending still and interrupting the Castilian Trade, till in the Year 1529. in consideration of 350000 Ducats, these Islands were Mortgaged to the Portuguese and never redeemed. These therefore possessed them, till the Dutch in frequent Wars totally expelled them, and all other Europeans, and have now the Monopoly of this Trade.

The Nutmeg-Tree is like our Peach-Tree, the Leaves somewhat less and more round. The Fruit is enclosed within a Husk, as thick as that of our Walnuts, within which lyes a Leaf which encloses the Shell; This Leaf is the Mace, and within the Shell lies the Nutmeg, which comes out green, and is boiled in Lime (as we are told) to prevent the Worm getting into it; and lyes sometime to Dry before it is fit for use. Of this Tree the Earth is almost quite covered in the Banda Islands, the Fruit whereof is gathered three times a Year, viz. in April, August and December, but the April Crop is the best.

The Clove-Tree resembles the Lawrel, but has somewhat a narrower Leaf. The Fruit grows in Clusters, the Blossom white and green turns red, the Fruit is of a brown Colour when ripe, but being dried in the Sun turns black; it is gathered once a Year, from September to February, according to Nicuboff, although others say, they crop the Buds one Year to make the Crop the better next, and so gather but every second Year. The Clove is called Chamque by the Natives, and obtained the Name we know it by, from the Spanish word Clavos a nail, from its Similitude to one: and is of so drying and attractive a quality, that if a Tub of Water be set near a bag of Cloves, a great deal of it shall be sucked in, and the Weight of the Cloves thereby much increased, wherefore the Knavish dealers play that trick to cheat the Buyers.

BANDA, the principal and largest of the Nutmeg-Islands, lyes in the 4 Deg. 30 Min. South Lat. It is a small Island not above 20 Miles long, and half so much broad, but is exceeding Fertile, yielding Oranges and other Fruits, besides whole Forests of Nutmeg-Trees. Our English Merchants in their first Navigations sent Ships hither; Captain Keeling's Voyage, in 1607. extant in Hackluit, shews them well acquainted with this Trade at that time; but the Dutch even so early as that, were busie in ingrossing it, and in effect soon after, they built a Fort here, and would permit no body else to buy the Nutmegs. The shape of the Island is like a Horse-shoe: in the middle whereof is a fair Bay, whereon stands the chief Town surrounded with Groves of Nutmeg-Trees; beyond that there rises a little Mountain, whence flow some Brooks that water the Country, and beyond the Mountain another Plain covered with the same Trees. The People are strong, but ill favoured and live to a great Age. Mahometans in Religion and Melancholy in Temper. The Women have the care of the Tillage, and the Men addict themselves to Trade. They are very Zealous and Strict in their way; and in Government a Commonwealth under their Lords or Orankeys. (Gimelli.)

There are five or six other very small Islands, which produce Nutmegs, and lye all round about Banda, at a few Leagues distance, these are named PULOWAY, PULORIN, NERA, GUMANAPI, GULIGIEN, all which the Dutch have in Subjection.

The MOLUCCA ISLANDS, are so called from the Malayan word Moluc which signifies the Head of a great thing: These Islands being always esteemed the chief of all the Archipelago. They are properly but five in number, viz. Ternate, Tidore, Motir, Machiam and Bachian. And are as notable for the Clove Trade as the Banda-Islands are for the Nutmeg. They lye near to one another, under or near the Equinoctial Line.

TERNATE, the chiefest and biggest of them lyes in the 1st Deg. of North Latit. it is not above 8 Leagues in extent and affords but little Provisions except Goats and some Poultry, they have excellent Almonds and some Fruits, but the Scorching heat of the Sun, so dries the Earth that no Rice or other Grain grows in this, or the rest of these Islands, but their Bread is made of a Pith of a Tree which they beat into Meal and Bake in Cakes called Sagu, an excellent nourishing Food, as we experience, in the Medicinal use of it here in England. But the chief Product of the Island is the Clove-Tree which grows Spontaneous, and bears Fruit the 8th Year, which making too great an encrease, the Dutch have cut down whole Woods of them.

The chief Town is Gamma-Lamma, which consists of one Street 2500 Paces long, built by the Sea side, the Houses built of Cane or Timber (Mandeflo.) There is (says Gimelli) in this Island, a burning Mountain which at three Mouths casts out fire and Sulphur, and in the Year 1648. its irruption was so violent, as to do a great deal of Mischief. The Country is Mountainous, and has no Rivers or Springs, but the frequent Rains supply the want, and water the Earth very plentifully. The People seem to be of the Malayan Race; wear a slight Cloathing, and are tolerably civil; they are healthy, and live to an hundred Years of Age. This Island was Subject to its own King in former Days, who had also Dominion over Motir, and divers other Islands. Sir Francis Drake was very kindly received by him, and afterwards Sir Henry Middleton brought a kind Letter from that King; and another from the King of Tidore, to King James I. in the Year 1606. But the Hollanders have such an Absolute Power over all these Islands, that I suppose those Royalties are destroyed.

TIDOR,

TIDOR, is near as large as Ternate, and but a little distant from it, the Prince of this Island was equal to and often at Wars with him of Ternate, when our Ships first Navigated these parts. The Clove is better cultivated here by the Inhabitants than elsewhere, and so is fairer and larger. The Bird of Paradise which we see in the Museum of the curious, are Natives of this and the Neighbouring Islands.

MOTIR, lyes a little more to the South, and very near the Line.

BACHIAN and MACHIAN, lye a little to the Southward of the Line. These are all small Islands, producing Cloves, and all possessed by the Dutch, and well guarded by Forts.

Although these only be the Real or Proper Molucca Islands; yet Geographers reckon divers others, no less than 70 near Adjacent into that Class. 'Tis needless to name so large a Number, whereof nothing more can be said, and which the Map will more lively inform you. We shall therefore only speak of two or three of the largest or most notable of them.

AMBOYNA, lyes in 3 Deg. 40 Min. South Latit. 25 Leagues West and by North from Banda, is 10 Leagues long, and 24 Leagues in Circumference, producing Cloves, Oranges, Limons, Citrons, Sugar-Canes, Coco, Potato's, Miller, Tobacco and Fruits. The Inhabitants are a poor ignorant sort of People, who dealt fairly with our Traders in the first Voyages, but when the Dutch got footing, they treated us with the same insolence as elsewhere. The chief Town has to the West of it a very fair Bay, where is safe Anchorage, and good Shelter for Ships. This Bay enters deep into the Country, so as almost to divide the Island into two. The Inhabitants (says Gimelli) are more Docile than those of the Molucca's and Banda, they are also hardy, and valued as better Soldiers than their Neighbours. There are several very good Villages in this Island, whereof particular accounts are given by Nieuhoff too long to Transcribe. The Castle or Fort of Victory, built by the Dutch, and made the Staple of the Company, stands about two Leagues up in the Bay, and is defended by four Bulwarks, a good Ditch, and a considerable Garrison. In that Castle was acted that barbarous Tragedy of Tormenting the English that were settled in Trade here in the Year 1622. upon a false Accusation of their, intending to destroy the Dutch. The particulars whereof see in Wilson's History of King James's Reign. This Castle suffered damage not many Years ago, by an inundation of the Sea.

Amboyna, was Subject to the King of Ternate, before the Portuguese made themselves Masters of it in 1546. these were driven out by the Dutch in 1603. who soon after expelled the English as abovesaid, and have ever since possessed it.

CERAM, an Island of much larger extent, lyes near adjoining to Amboyna on the North. It abounds with Spice, and for Peace sake is in Alliance with the Dutch. The chief Town of it is named Cumbello.

GILOLO, exceedingly larger than any of these, but less considerable, as producing no Spice, the Equinoctial passes over it, it's North part lyes in 2 Deg. North Lat. and the South Coast in 1 Deg. South Lat. The Island is full of large and commodious Bays, and the Land produces Fruit, Rice, &c. as usual in this Climate, but hardly Gold, as the first Discoverers told us; else the Trade thither would be more considerable. The chief Town of the same namelyes in the Northern part, over against Ternate Island.

The TERRA do's PAPOUS or NOVA GUI-NEA, a Main Land, which extends farther Eastward than has yet been discovered, is found to Commence in a few Degrees Eastward of Gilolo. The Coasts of it, are shewn in the Maps, but the Country is but very little known.

NOVA HOLLANDIA, another Main Land, if not a continuation of the same, lyes more to the South, from the 10th Deg. South Lat. This we are as little acquainted with, as only knowing that the Coast continues for very many Deg. in Longit.

Many Islands lye on the South Coast of Nova Guinea, as Aru, of pretty large extent, about 120 Miles long from North to South.

Kae, of much smaller extent lying more to the West, and several others, whereof we find nothing material.

OF THE PHILLIPINE ISLANDS

ON the North of the Molucca Islands, the North East of Borneo, 200 Leagues East from the Coast of Cochinchina, and about 120 South from the Coast of China lyes an Archipelago, or a numerous Cluster of Islands between the 5th and 20th Deg. of North Latit. and between the 134 and 147 Deg. of Long. named by Ferdinand Magellanes, who discovered it, the Archipelago of Lazarus, because he arrived there upon Saturday before Easter (which is called in Spain St. Lazarus-Day) in the Year 1521. The name of Phillippines was given to these Islands in honour of Phillip II. King of Spain, by whom they were conquered, since which they have been always subject to that Crown. The Number of these Islands is too large to be told, some pretend there are no less than 1000, others by passing by the very small ones, would reckon 40 of the larger kind; but even that account exceeds the truth, if only such as are considerable be reckoned.

Luçon, Lucnia or Manilba, is the most Northern the largest and most considerable.

Mindanao, is the Southern, and next in bulk and value.

Paragua, is the most Western, and reckoned next to the two former in extent.

Phillipina or Tandaya, is the most Eastern. Within and about all these lye many others, whereof we shall speak as particularly as is necessary.

The Air in the Phillipine Islands is hot and moist, however the heat is not more violent than in the Dog-Days in Italy, but causes more sweat and weakness. The Dampness is great, because the Land abounds with Rivers and Lakes, and withall there falls great Rains the most part of the Year, so that tho' the Sun be in their Zenith twice a Year (in May and August) yet the Heat is not so great as to render the place uninhabitable. During the Months of June, July, August, and part of September, the West and South Winds Blow, and bring such Rains that the Fields are Flo'ed. From October till December the North Wind prevails, and from that time till May, the East and East South-East affords 'em pleasant Breezes.

The Soil Produces Rice, Fruits of various kinds, Herbs Cacao, Cattle, Fowl, Fish, Wild Beasts, Civet, Cats, Honey, Wax, Gums, Medicinal Herbs, Bezoar, &c. But that which renders 'em considerable are the Rich Commodities for Traffick, viz. Rich Pearls, excellent Amber-greece, Cotton, Civet, Bezoar, and Gold, of which alone the value of 200000 Pieces of Eight per Annum is gather'd, without the help of Fire or Quick-Silver. Thus much in general, to proceed to Particulars.

The Island LUZON or LUCONIA, lyes between 13 Deg. 30 M. and 19 Deg. Latit. in shape like a beaded Arm. In Length 160 Spanish Leagues, in Breadth in some parts from 30 to 40 Leagues, in other not above 20. At the Elbow in the S. W. Coast there is a large River, which issues from the great Lake Babi within Land, and falling into the Sea makes a fair Commodious Haven. On this River the Chief City Manilba stands; and at the Mouth of it Cavite, which is the Port for the New Spain Ships that Annually arrive here. The whole Island is divided into these Provinces, 1. Balayan, wherein Manilla stands, it abounds in Cotton, Rice and Palm-Trees. 2. Calilaya, larger and more Populous than, 3. Camarines, in which are the Towns of Bondo, Passacao, Ibalon, Bulan, Sorsocon, where large Ships are Built, and Albai, near which is a Burning Mountain. 4. Paracale, wherein are Rich Mines of Gold. The Soil is good and produces Cacao and Palm-Trees. 5. Cagayan, the largest Province in the Island: The Capital named New Segovia is a Bishop's See, Founded with the City, Anno 1598. This Province is Fruitful and produces Wax, Brazil and Ebony Wood, and Wild Beasts, whose Skins are Merchandize. 6. Ilocos, the Richest and best Peopled Province in the Island: The Capital Fernandina was Built on the Bank of the River Bigan in 1574. Its Mountains in this Province, beyond Woods inhabited by Wild People, are Gold Mines. 7. Pangasman running along the Coast is good Land for Eight or Nine Leagues, above which it is Woody and Mountainous, and possess'd like Ilocos by Wild Indians. 8. Pampanga, a large Province, and Fruitful Soil producing much Rice, and inhabited by more tractable Indians, who assist the Spaniards in the Wars. 9. Babi, on the East of Manilla, about the Lake above mention'd, Fruitful in Areca and Betele, and yielding much Timber for Shipping. 10. Bulacan, a small Province abounds in Rice, and Palm-Wine. Lastly, 11. Catanduanes, and two or three other Islands Subject to a Metropolis on the main Land, compose a Province, it lyes on the East Coast, and affords Rice, Palm-Wine, Coco's, Honey and Wax.

All the Island of Manilba produce Gold, Civet, Wax, Cotton, Sulphur, Rice, good Horses, Cows, Buffalo's, Deer and Wild Boars. But it is much Subject to Earthquakes. A word or two of the Chief City and then we will pass on.

Manilba, the Capital of this Island, and the Seat of the Government of the Phillipine Islands, stands in the 14 Deg. 40 M. South Latit. at a point of Land on the River, which issues from the Lake Babi and falls into the Sea, making a good Haven at Cavite, which is a very good well built Town on the West Coast. It is two Miles in Circumference, well guarded with good Walls, wherein are six Gates, a strong Castle and divers Out-works: The Streets are broad, the Houses of Timber, and the Palaces very beautiful; but by reason of Earthquakes, which often overthrow Houses, the Buildings are not regular. The City itself contains about 3000 Souls consisting of Spaniards, or a mix'd Race proceeding from them and Indians: But the Suburbs are more Copious. The Chinese Quarter on one side of the City, consists of divers Streets of Shops of all Trades, 3000 Chinese inhabit here, and are the chief Trades-men, the Spaniards and Indians being too lazy: They are called Sanglays, have an Alcade to govern them, and are much kept under by the Spaniards: There are 15 other Suburbs inhabited by Indians, and other Strangers. The Cathedral is large, and several other Churches in the City Rich. The Arch-bishop has a Revenue of 6000 pieces of Eight, and the Canons 500 a piece. The Governor lives in great State, and has a very large Revenue, which would make it a desirable Post, if a Sting in the Tail did not Marr the Sweet, for when a Governor after Eight Years is recalled, he undergoes a Tryal, wherein so much Encouragement is given to Accusations, and the Judges are so severe in their Verdict, that if he be not able to expend 100000 pieces of Eight in Bribes, he is seldom found virtuous enough to escape Imprisonment or other Punishment.

This Island has the Liberty of sending two Ships every Year to New Spain, but because the number is restrain'd they Build those two vastly large. These carry to Acazulco a Port in the South Sea, in the Kingdom of Mexico or New Spain, the Spices and Rich Commodities of India, and bring back the valuable Commodities of America and Europe. These are the Ships which Dampier lately attempted to take.

The most remarkable of the other Islands are, CALUL, at the Mouth of the Straights of Manilla on the East, 'tis small being but three Leagues in Compass, but Fruitful and pleasant.

PHILLIPINA or Tandaya, which Gimelli calls Samar, on the South side of the same Straight, is large, viz. 130 Leagues in Circumference, and reputed one of the most Fruitful of these Islands. The Chief Town where the Alcade resides, is named Catbalogan, and the North East Point of the Island is called the Cabo de Spirito Sancto.

A Fruit or sort of Nut found near Catbalogan, is reported to be of most surprizing virtue, as not only expelling Poison, but even hindering its Effects, and retorting it on him that intends the Mischiefe. With many other Excellencies enumerated by Gimelli.

MASBATE, situate West of Tandaya, is 30 Leagues in Compass, yields Wax, Salt, Civer and Gold, whereof here are rich Mines, where the Ore rises 22 Carats fine; but they are not wrought.

MINDORO, on the South West Coast of Manilla, which gives name to the Straight between that Island and it, is 70 Leagues in compass, and yields Coco, and Wax.

LUBAN, a small Island 5 Leagues in compass only remarkable for a high Mountain in it, which casts out Flames.

PARAGUA, stretching out North East and South West, 100 Leagues in length, and about 12 or 14 in breadth. The middle of it lies in the 9th Deg. of Lat. and it's South Cape Tagusau is 50 Leagues North from Borneo. The South part of this Island is subject to the King of Borneo; in the Midland are wild Indians; and the Northern part is Subject to the Spaniards, who keep a Garrison of 200 Men in the Fort Taytay. The Island is Mountainous, and abounds with Forests and wild Beasts, and yields Wax, but little Rice.

The three Islands Calamianes, lying on the North of Paraga, are small in compass, and yield Wax and the Edible Birds Nest.

PANAY, an Island of good Extent, being 100 Leagues in Compass, lying 30 Leagues South East from Mindoro, Lat. 10 D. It is reckoned the best Peopled, and most fruitful of all the Archipelago. The chief River of the same Name falls into the Sea, over against the small Island LUTAY, and makes a convenient Haven. Many other Rivers water this Island, and render its Soil fertile. The South point jutting out over against the Island IMAVAS, which yields Sarsaparilla, forms another Harbour, which is guarded by a Fort built in 1681. This Island produces for Exportation, 100000 Bushels of Rice, per Annum.

LEYTE, seated to the Southward, hardly 20 Leagues from the Coast of Mindanao, is between 90 and 100 Leagues in Compass. Vast Mountains run along the middle, and make such an Alteration in the Air, that when it is Winter on the North side, 'tis Summer on the South, but the Plains are very fruitful, and yield plentiful Crops of Rice, to which the Rivers that run down from the Mountains, do not a little contribute. The Mountains abound in Deer, wild Boars and Fowl, and the Land yields Roots, which is the Food of the Inhabitants, Grain, Coco-Trees and good Timber for Shipping. The Commodities for Trade here are Rice, Wax and Quilts. The inhabitants are a civil People.

BOHOL, lying near Leyte, towards Mindanao, is smaller, being in compass but 40 Leagues. The Soil whereof produces no Rice, but yields Coco's and divers Roots, much Cattle and Fish, and is rich in Gold Mines.

SIBU, Zebu or Sogbu, lyes on the North West of Leyte, about 15 or 20 Leagues long, and 8 broad. The chief City is named, Nombre de Dios, i. e. the Name of God, and is seated on a point in the middle of the Island, in the 10th Deg. Lat. Here the famous Ferd. Magellans, the first Circumnavigator of the Earth was killed by the Treacherous Indians, after the King and his chief Attendants had been Baptized, and pretended to be his good Friends. This being the Island where that great Man first Planted his Catholic Majesty's Standard in 1521. and where afterwards the Conquest of the whole was begun. This City was founded by the Spaniards, and made a Bishop's See, and the seat of a civil Magistracy, in the Year 1598. It has a good Haven, which is defended by a strong Fort, and a Garrison of two Companies of Soldiers. Here is a Cathedral Church, and divers Monasteries. The Liberty of sending Ships to New-Spain, was first granted to this Island of Zebu, which made it a place of great Trade, but the rise of Manilla has been the sinking of this, and so it is now less resorted to, but still has Hamlets of Chinese and Indian Merchants and Artificers. This Island wants Rice, but produces Borona, Onions, Garlick and other Roots, Cotton of which they make fine Quilts, the Plant Abaca, of which Cordage for Shipping is made, Tobacco, and much Civer and Wax.

NEGROS,

NEGROS, on the North West of Zebu is 100 Leagues in compass, and is fruitful in Rice. The Mountains are inhabited by Blacks of the Negri-kind, which gave Name to the Island. These bring Wax out of the Mountains, to exchange for Rice. Much Cacao transplanted from New-Spain grows here.

In all these Islands, 'tis reckoned there are 100000 People, that pay Tribute to the King of Spain, however, his Revenue does not amount to above 40000 pieces of Eight, which does not answer the charge of Government and Garrisons (here being 4000 Soldiers maintained) by 250000 pieces of Eight, so much being Annually sent from New-Spain.

Thus far I have taken from Seignior Gimelli, who resided some time at Manilla, in the Year 1696. and seems to be a Man of Judgment and Integrity, and a Person who conversed with People of the best Condition, and therefore we may believe his accounts are right. A great many particulars we are forced to omit for brevity, which yet would appear agreeable to a curious Man, such a one may please to consult the Author himself, a Translation whereof is extant in the late Collection of Voyages, Printed by Mr. Churchill.

As for Mindanao, another of the Philippines, altho' not Subject to the Spaniards. We shall consult Dampier, who Coasted it all round, and was ashore in it long and often.

MINDANAO, the biggest of all the Philippine Islands, except Luzon, is 60 Leagues long, and 40 or 50 broad, situate between the 5th and the 8th Deg. of North Lat. and between the 141 and the 145 Deg. of Long. It is a very Mountainous Land, full of Hills and Valleys. The Mould in general is deep and black, and extraordinary fat and fruitful. The sides of the Hills are Stony, yet productive enough of tall Trees. In the heart of the Country, there are some Mountains that yield Gold. The Valleys are well moistened with pleasant Brooks and small Rivers of delicate Water; and have on their Banks Trees of divers sorts flourishing, and green all the year.

The Trees in general are very large, and most of them are of kinds unknown to us. Of these the Sago or Libby-Tree, is worth notice, as affording Food to the Inhabitants, 'tis frequent in these Eastern Islands, and supplies in a great measure the want of Rice, for the Pith being pounded, and with Water strained through a Cloath, to keep back the Husky part, settles at the bottom, and the Water being drawn off, and the Settlem^tent dried, it becomes a Flour, which makes good nourishing Bread; and is also a Medicine against the Flux.

In some parts of Mindanao, there is plenty of Rice, but in the Hilly part, they Plant Yams, Potatoes and Pumpkins, which thrive well, the other Fruits of this Island are Melons, Plantains, Bonano's, Guava's, Betel-Nuts, Coco-Nuts, Oranges, &c. And some Nutmegs and Cloves, but neither many nor cultivated, for fear of the Dutch, who they apprehend would enslave them as they have done the other Islanders where those Fruits grow. And the Durian and Jack, which are praised by Dampier as Delicious Fruits.

Here are many sort of Beasts both wild and tame, as Horses, Kine, Buffalo's, Goats, wild Hogs, Deer, Monkeys, Guano's, an Amphibious oviparous Animal which is good Food, Lizards, Snakes, Scorpions, and other venomous Creatures; but no Beast of Prey.

Of Fowls they have Ducks and Hens, Pidgeons, Turtle Doves, Parrots, Parakites, and many other smaller Birds.

There are a great many Harbours, Creeks, and good Bays for Ships to ride in, and Rivers Navigable for Canoes, and well stored with Fish of divers kind, as also Tortoizes.

The Weather in Mindanao is temperate enough for Heat, especially near the Sea, having Breezes by Day and land Winds at Night, to cool the Air. The Easterly Winds blow in October and November, and bring good Weather, but the Westerly Wind brings Rain and Thunder, it begins in May, and in July and August is very violent, so as to overflow the Land. In September it begins to hold up, and from October to April 'tis settled fair Weather.

The Island is not all Subject to one Prince, but consists of four Nations, viz. The Mindanayans who are Subjects of the Sultan residing at the chief City Mindanao. The Hilanoones who live in the Mountains in the Midland, and bring down Bees-Wax to exchange for other Commodities. The Solagues, who live in the North West part, and have no Commerce with the Mindanays, but Trade to Manilla. And the Alserres, who are of the same extract as the Mindanays, but have for some time been governed by a Sultan of their own. They are all Mahometans in Religion, of tawny Complexion, but of brighter yellow than some other Indians, mean Statures, small Limbs, straight Bodies and little Heads, oval Faces, flat Foreheads, small Eyes, wide Mouth and thin Lips. They are ingenious, nimble and active when disposed to it, but much inclined to Lazyness, civil to Strangers, but revengeful on Enemies. They wear a small Turban on their Heads, Frocks and Breeches on their Bodies, but no Stockings or Shooes. The Garments of the common People are made of the Cloath made of the Plantain-Tree, called Saggen. The Prince is very Arbitrary, and takes from his Subjects what he pleases, which makes them neglect to get riches, and very few possess more than serves for present convenience. Their Food is Rice, or Sagu and Fish, the better sort eat Buffalo's Flesh and Fowl, with Rice which they dress ill, and eat very slovenly. Besides the proper Mindanao Tongue, they speak the Malayan Language, in the more civilized part of the Island, and have Schools to instruct their Children to Read and Write; and teach them the Principles of the Mahometan Religion.

The chief City on the Island is Mindanao, seated on the South West Coast, in the 7 Deg. 20 Min. North Latit. on the Banks of a small River, about 2 Miles from the Sea. The Houses are only one Story raised upon Posts 14 or 15 Foot high, with a Ladder or Stairs to go up, Partitions made of split Bamboes, divide it into many Rooms, the Floor is made of the same Canes, and the Roof covered with Palmeto Leaves. The Sultan's House is large, and stands upon 180 great Posts, raised higher than the rest: it is guarded with 20 pieces of iron Cannon. He is a very poor Prince, for tho' he takes what he pleases from his Subjects, and never fails to borrow Money of any one that he understands has any, yet the Island holding very little Commerce, the People are all poor. The Spaniards formerly settled here, and built several Forts, endeavouring to bring the People under their Subjection, but being called off for the defence of Manilla, the Natives destroyed all their Forts, and will never since suffer them to Land, but carry their Commodities which are Gold and Bees-Wax to Manilla, in their own own Ships, whereof they build good serviceable ones. The Dutch in Canoes from Ternate and Tidore come hither sometimes, to buy Rice, Bees-Wax and Tobacco; but the Mindayans do not Affect them, being always in fear of being Subjected as the other Islands have been by them, and therefore invite the English to settle here. Thus much of Mindanao, he that desires more, may read it in Dampier's 12th Chapter of his first Volume.

On the North West of Mindanao, lies the Island of St. JOHN, at about 3 or 4 Leagues distant from its Coast, in the 7th or 8th Deg. North Latit. This Island is in length about 38 Leagues, and in breadth

24. It is a high land, and full of small Hills, which are covered with Trees. The Soil seems to be a good fat Mould, and may produce Corn and Fruits, but has been very little visited.

XOLLO, a small Island on the South West of Mindanao, in the Midway between it and Borneo, is reckoned one of the Phillipines, and represented by Gimelli as a famous place, yielding Pearls and Amber in its Seas, and plenty of Rice, Fruits, Pepper, Cattle and Elephants on its Land. The Air is wholesome, and refreshed with frequent Rains. The Ships from Borneo and the neighbouring Islands resort hither, and make it a kind of Mart.

THE LADRONES ISLANDS.

THESE Islands were first discovered and taken possession of in the Name of King Philip II. A. D. 1565. They called them at first Isas das Velas, afterwards de las Ladrones, because when they touched at them in their Voyages from Mexico to the Phillipines, the inhabitants used to steal their Goods, and then run up into the Mountains, so they called them the Islands of Thieves. Of late, the Island Guam, having obtained the Name of Maria, these Islands are thence Denominated the Marian Islands. They are many in Number, lying North and South at various distances, from the 13 Deg. to the 28 Deg. North Latit. The Spaniards having taken Possession of as many as they thought convenient, and built Forts on them, where a Governour and Garrison reside. Altho' the Soil of these Islands be in general pretty good, and produces necessaries for Life, yet they afford so little commodity for Profit, that the Government costs the King of Spain 34000 pieces of Eight, as Gimelli tells us. But they lying in the Road of the Acapulco Ships, the Possession of them by an Enemy would be as inconvenient as the liberty of touching there for Refreshments, is convenient to that Trade. They lye 700 Leagues East from the Coast of Luzonia, and 7302 Miles West from the Coast of America, as by Dampier's observations is made appear.

Guaben or Guam, as Dampier calls it, which I suppose to be the same which Gimelli names Iguana, is the principal of them, as being that where the Acapulco Ships touch, it lyes in 13 Deg. 21 Lat. 12 Leagues long, and 4 broad, lying from North to South. The Soil is indifferently fruitful, yielding

Rice, Pine-apples, Melons, Oranges, Limes, Coco's, and a particular sort of Fruit which Dampier calls the Bread-Fruit; this is a kind of very large Apple which being baked eats like Bread, and is very good Food, this Fruit lasts eight Months in the Year, and supplies the Natives with Food; for tho' some Rice be produced, the Soil is too dry to yield very much. The Natives are strong Bodied, large Limbed, and well shaped, they have no manner of Religion in them, says Gimelli, from the Reports of the Missionaries, and were very rude to those Fathers, whereof Ten have suffered Martyrdom in these Islands. The wet Season, which begins at June, and lasts to October, is not so violent here as elsewhere in the Indies. Upon Guam the Spaniards have a Fort, and a Garrison, supposed to be 80 or 90 Men, but Dampier says, the Fort had but 6 Guns, a Governour and 20 or 30 Men when he was there.

The other of these Islands of most note are, Sarpanta, in 14 Deg. Lat. Buen vista, in 15 Deg. Saespara, in 15 Deg. 40 Min. Anatan, in 17 Deg. 20 Min. Sarigan, in 17 Deg. 25 Min. Guagam, in 18 Deg. Alamaguan, in 18 Deg. 18 Min. Pagon, in 18 Deg. 4 Min. The burning Mountain of Griga, in 19 Deg. 33 Min. Tinay and Manga, in 20 Deg. 45 Min. Urrac, in 20 Deg. 55 Min. Three other burning Mountains. Isle de Patas, in 25 Deg. 30 Min. la Disconocida, in 25 Deg. 50 Min. Malabrigo, in 27 Deg. 40 Min. &c. This I take from Gimelli, who sailed by them in his Voyage to New Spain.

And here we finish our Account of the Islands in the Indian Sea. As looking upon the Japonesse not to belong to this Class.

CHINA

CHINA.

Altho' the Extent and opulency of the Country, and the politeness of its Inhabitants be sufficient to have made China Renown'd throughout the Earth, a thousand Years ago, yet whether the unpassable Mountains, and barren Sands, which are said to bound it towards India; or the Custom of the People, of whom 'tis reported, that they either never admitted Strangers among them, or else never permitted them to return; or whether the extream distance only may be the cause that the rest of the World were wholly unacquainted with it; but so it is, that till within 200 Years past, that the improvement of Navigation carry'd European Ships round the Globe, the rest of Mankind knew little or nothing of China. 'Tis true, Paulus Venetus's account of

Cam-

Embalu (which as we have elsewhere said, was in all probability Pekin) and his mighty Character of the Cham and his Subjects, may be now applied to China; but since at that time, it was understood of Tartary only, we may still say that till the Portuguese discovered and Traded to this Country by Sea, the other Nations of the World were quite ignorant of it. But as the sudden appearance of a great Light even blinds our Eyes with it's Lustre, so the unexpected discovery of so polite a Nation, which had received no instruction from its Neighbours, so dazzled the understandings of the first Visitants, that the Stories they brought us were more like Romances than Truths: And till the Zeal of the Remish Church stirred up its Missionaries to Preach the Faith there, we were still ignorant of the true State of that Empire.

Since the Year 1580. there have continually been a number of Remish Priests in China; these finding that the Chinese had an imperfect Speculation in the Mathematical Sciences, and perceiving it to be no difficult Matter to shew themselves better Masters in that Knowledge, laid hold of the Vain, the Gentry and Nobility of China had that way, and by acquainting themselves well in those Arts, before they went hence, gained great Esteem amongst them. Thus by being pretty good Mathematicians and Astronomers, they have obtained so much Favour, especially of late, with Persons of the highest Rank, the Emperor not excepted, that they have been able to live there very comfortably, and propagate their Doctrines as they pleased. 'Tis to these Gentlemen that we owe the discovery of the true State of China, at least they all agree to assure us, that 'tis the true State, which otherwise I must confess might be doubted, since in many Cases it seems Hyperbolic. Of these Navarette, Magaillans, and le Compte, being the latest, we have chosen to make most use of. The first of them was a Spanish Dominican Fryar, who came from Manilla and resided in China many Years, between 1650 and 1670. The second a Portuguese, who lived there 37 Years from 1640 to 1677, and the third a French Jesuit, who came home but lately. Together with these, besides Fathers Martini and Kircher, we made use of a Treatise brought from China by the Muscovite Ambassador, in the Year 1694. which being said to be written by a Native of China, and a Christian (his Name Dionysius Kac) and recommended by the Ambassador as faithful; we have been willing to have some regard to.

CHINA, has at several times born several Names, for when a Prince of a New Family ascends the Throne, he alters the Name of the Country; and there having been 22 Families of these Princes, 'tis probable so often it has changed its Name: Those Names were all Characteristick, being the word Kingdom with some pompous adjunct; as for Example, under the late Family 'twas called Tai mim que, i. e. a Kingdom of Great Brightness; and under this Family Tai cim que, i. e. a Kingdom of Purity; or otherwise Xamque, High and Sovereign Kingdom; and again Clum que, Kingdom of the Centre, for they believe it seated in the middle of the Earth. The Indians call it Chin from a Family that once governed; (or as Navarette says, from the great produce of Silk there, which he says that word signifies) from whom the Portuguese received that Name, and adding an a conveyed it to the rest of Europe.

This Empire is seated in the Eastern Part of Asia, having Tartary on the North and North West; The Mogul's Empire and India extra Ganges on the West; Tonquin and the Indian Sea which flows between it and the Phillipine Islands on the South: And the Chinese Sea that runs between it and Japan on the East. It is a very large Country, extending from the 21 Deg. of Northern Latit. to the 41 Deg. But if the Island Hainan, which lyes on the South of the Province of Quentum be included, 3 Deg. more must be added, and so according to Magaillans it must be reckoned from the 18th to the 41 Deg. and as he tells us from the Chinese Books, the length is 5750 Chinese Furlongs, which makes 1380 Miles. Le Compte reckons it but 450 French Leagues, excluding Hainan, but agrees with the Maps in the Situation of Canton and Pekin, from which he takes his Calculation, and so the difference is not much: But in its Breadth he is mistaken, for he supposes the Kingdom to be of a circular Form, and so gives it near the same extent that way; whereas it is rather oval, and according to Magaillans but 1020 Miles broad, from Nimpo in the East, to the utmost Frontier of Suchuen in the West.

The old Maps were guilty of a gross mistake in the Situation of China; for Father le Compte assures us, that by exact Observation 'tis found to be 500 Leagues nearer to Europe than they placed it: Another Correction he gives which is considerable, viz. that the Province of Leaotum is without the Wall, and not included, as the former Maps used to make it.

The Climate of China, by reason of its extent, must needs be different in several Parts, but in general it is Temperate; for though the Southern Part lye under the Tropick, yet the cold Winds that blow over the large Continent of Tartary render the Winters very cold; and le Compte tells us in the Account of his Journey from Nimpo to Pekin, that the Frost was very severe in January and February, so as to oblige him to lie by till the Ice could be broken for his Passage: And Martini says, the Winters are severely cold for three or four Months.

The SOIL produces plenty of Rice, Wheat, Oats, and other Grain, Pasture, Cotton, Wax of a peculiar sort proceeding from a Tree, whercof Father Magaillans gives a particular account, p. 140. and Tallow of the same kind, which le Compte, Navarette and Kao describe, and say the Kernel, or rather the Pulp of a Fruit has all the properties of Tallow: Here are also Mines of Gold and Silver, but never wrought: Plenty of Cattle, Fish, Fowl, Fruit; of most of the kinds seen in Europe, besides many others not found here. Of Fruits the Lechia, the Longane and the Oranges are singularly Delicious; and they have Figs, Grapes, Areka-Nut, Anana's, and the rest of the most delicious of India. For Game they have Bears, wild Boars, Deer, and many others, whose Fur is a good Commodity: They have Silk also in vast quantity, so as to afford a great Exportation, besides Cloathing of all kinds to the Natives: And the Earth whereof Porcelane or China-Ware is made affords them a notable Manufacture. To these productions we must add from Navarette, Sugar, Tobacco, Linnen, Cloth, Oil extracted from Seeds, Wine extracted from Rice, and another sort from Quinces, Camphir, Ebony, Sandal Wood, Oaks and and Pine-Trees, Pir-Coal, Canes, Ginger, China Root, Rhubarb, the Root Jinſeu, and the Herb Tea ſo much eſteemed in Europe grows here in moſt plentiful Degree. And of Animals, Elephants, whereof many are bred in Tunnan, Tygers which are very numerous and fierce, and go about in great Droveſ, Leopards, Ounces, the Beaſt that yields Muſk, which hangs in a Bag at its Navel, Horſes and Swine, beſides ſeveral ſtrange Beaſts which we have never ſeen. There are Eagles, Cranes, Birds of Paradise, Pea-cocks, Pheasants, Geefe and Ducks innumerable, and ſeveral other Fowl.

The Land is ſo admirably Cultivated, that not only the Valleys are made as Level as a Bowling-Green, but even the Mountains are cut into large Steps, and artificial Plains cut out of the ſides of Hills; which are like Terraces one above another, and made as Fertile as the Valleys: In other Parts as Xenſi, Honan, Quantum and Fokien, where the Moſt is not ſo deep, the Mountains bear large Foreſts of tall ſtrait Trees, which by means of the Rivers they convey in vaſt Floats all over the Empire: Some of their Mountains appear in odd ſhapes, as one repreſents they ſay their Idol Fibi, another a Dragon, another a Cock, &c. and to ſome of theſe Mountains they make Religious Pilgrimages.

The RIVERS and artificial Canals of China are very many, and very commodious, both for watering the Land and carriage of Goods: the moſt conſiderable whereof are the Kiam or the Blew-River, and the Hoambo or Yellow-River; the Kiam riſes in the Province of Tunnan near the Frontiers of the Mogul, and runs quite croſs the Empire from Weſt to Eaſt, paſſing through Suebuen, Huquem and Namkim, and falls into the Sea 30 Leagues below Kiamnin, over againſt the Iſland Cummin, having made a Courſe of 1000 Miles. This River is very deep, even ſo as not to be Fathomed, and very broad; but its paſſage ſomewhat dangerous, and its courſe very Rapid. The Hoambo, Hoango or Yellow River hath its Riſe on the Mountains, on the Weſt ſide of the Province of Suebuen, runs along the Frontiers of Tartary, Northward, beyond the great Wall flows Eaſtward and then enters China, and runs Southward between the Provinces of Xenſi and Xenſi; then turns Eaſtward, and paſſes through Honan, part of Xantum, and through Nenkim; and after a Courſe of 600 Leagues falls into Sea about 30 Leagues North from the Mouth of Kiam, the Water of the Kiang is always of a Yellow or red Colour, and not fit to Drink till 'tis purified. The Grand Canal may deſerve the Name of a conſiderable River, for le Compte tells us it runs quite the length of the Empire, from Pekin to Canton. And Magailans ſays, 'tis 3500 Chineſe Furlongs (which answers to 840 Miles of 60 to a Degree) in length, and furniſhed with 72 Locks or Sluces to retain the Water: This was a Work of vaſt Expence, Art and Labour, and performed by one of the Emperors about 400 Years ago. A multitude of other Rivers and Canals are found here, with Cauſeys and Bridges ſuited to the utmoſt convenience and facility of Travelling. Alſo a number of Lakes and Hot Fountains, whoſe Waters have many peculiar Virtues, ſet down by le Compte, but too long for us to repeat.

The INHABITANTS are Ingenious and Induſtrious, as appears by the curious wrought Silks, Cabinets, Porcelain and other Manufactures, daily brought to Europe; by the admirable Cultivation of their Land; and by the many publick Works of vaſt Labour; as the Grand Canal above mentioned, the Great Wall (whereof more hereafter) the ſtately Bridges, vaſt Sluces in the Canal, the convenient Cauſeys on its Banks, the many publick Inns, &c. And although they had no converſe with Europe or other parts of the World, yet they have for many Ages had the uſe of the Mariner's Compaſs, Gunpowder and Printing; are Maſters of all Sciences (though not to the Perfection that we are) and profeſs the moſt exact Morality; which was taught by the Philoſopher Confucius, above 300 Years before Chriſt, and his Precepts are ſtill in the higheſt Eſteem.

The LANGUAGE of China is peculiar to that Nation, as being different from all others in every reſpect: The Radical Words are but 333 in Number, every one of which is diverſified in its Signification five ſeveral Ways by Accent, and as theſe are all Monosyllables, they are not only variously joined and made Compounds innumerable, which by the Pronunciation alſo are varied ſo largely, that this is reputed the moſt copious Language in the World: In their Writing they begin at the top of the Paper, and make not uſe of an Alphabet of 24 Letters as we do, but uſe a vaſt number of Hieroglyphical Characters, even 54409, ſays Magailans, which makes the writing their Language extream difficult to learn; and the nicety of Pronunciation makes it as difficult to Strangers to ſpeak, for with a wrong Accent a Word ſignifies directly contrary to what you intend. But though Reading and Writing be difficult, it is univerſally learnt, and the meaneſt People among them teach it to their Children.

The RELIGION of China is Groſs Idolatry; their God Fobe, and a multitude of other Idols, are daily Sacrificed and Prayed to, and abundance of fooliſh Legends are part of their Religion: Chriſtiani-ty begins of late to have ſome Footing, but the Jeſuits have been ſo complaiſant to the Chineſe that it is made too much like their own Religion.

The GOVERNMENT is the moſt regular in the World; for though the Emperor be abſolute; Tribunals and Magiſtrates are eſtabliſhed in moſt exact and regular manner for performance of all the Offices of Government. At Pekin the King with his Grand Council of State, compoſe the Supream Tribunal of the Empire: Under that are ſix other Superiour Tribunals for Civil, and five for Military Affairs held in the ſame City. The particular Buſineſs of each Tribunal is thus. The firſt has the Care of furniſhing the Empire with Perſons of Merit and Capacity fit for Government, to which purpoſe they examine thoſe that are to be made Mandarins, informs the King of the Virtues and Defects of every one before he be preferred to any Poſt in the Government; take Cognizance of the Conduct and Behaviour of the Mandarins that are employed; enquire into the Merits of the Petty-Kings, Dukes, Princes of the Blood and other Great Lords. This Tribunal alſo Seals all judicial Acts. The ſecond Superiour Tribunal has the Care of the Finance, ſuperviſing the Treſure, Receipts, Revenues and Tributes of the King, and pay the Annual Penſions to the Petty-Kings, &c. This Tribunal alſo keeps the Roll which is made every Year, of all the Families, Men, Meaſure of Land, and Duties ues payable to the King. The third Superior Tribunal has the oversight of Rites and Ceremonies, Arts and Sciences. The fourth has the ordering of War and Military Affairs, gives out Commissions in the Army and Fleet, orders the Levys, replenishes the Magazines, and keeps the Garrisons in repair. The fifth Superiour Tribunal is the Court for trying all Criminal Causes brought hither by Appeals from subordinate Courts. And the sixth has the Care of the publick Works, such as building and repairing the Kings Palaces, the Temples, Sepulchres, the Palaces of the Inferior Tribunals all over the Empire, the Towers, Bridges, Sluices, Dams, Highways, &c. Every one of these Tribunals is composed of a large Number of Mandarins, and divided into several Chambers or Committees, for the better dispatch of Business. The five Military Tribunals govern the Army. The first the Rere-Guard, the second the Left Wing, the third the Right Wing, the fourth the main Battle, and the fifth the Vanguard.

Subordinate to these Tribunals, there are Vice-Roys in Provinces, Governours and Judges in Cities, and smaller Officers in Towns; for dispensing Justice to the People, and maintaining the publick Peace: And so very well contrived is the Government of China, that if the Mandarins and Courtiers were not the most covetous in the World, whereby Offices and Justice are constantly bought and sold; the People of this Country would be the happiest on the Earth.

The Emperor appears in the greatest Magnificence that can be imagined, his Palace at Peking is six Miles in Circumference; 'tis true, it comprehends the Courts for the Tribunals, but the Royal Apartment alone, is not less than a Mile and half long, and three quarters of a Mile broad; wherein are many noble Halls and Chambers magnificently adorned; and Gardens, Canals, Parks, &c. And at the times that the King makes his appearance, which is four times a Month, he is attended by four or five thousand Noblemen and Mandarins to make their Court, together with many Petty Kings who are his Vassals, and attend in their turns at Court. And when he goes abroad, his Attendants are so numerous, that they would compose a good Army; Magallans sets down the Order of the Emperor's Procession when he goes out of the Palace to offer Sacrifice, or perform any publick Duty, wherein the Attendants amount to at least 8000 Men, 4 Elephants, and several Hundreds of Horse; when he goes abroad, which is usually to the Province of Leatunum or Tartary, a Hunting, a vast Army always attends him.

The HISTORY of China is very Ancient, the Fabulous Legends make it many thousand Years before the Creation; but those Histories that may be credited, begin within two or three Hundred Years after the Flood, and shew a Succession of Monarchs to this time; but the Families of the Kings have been often changed, viz. 22 times; and when a Prince of a New Family ascends the Throne (which has happened either through Conquest, Misgovernment, or the like) he cuts off all the Nobility and Creatures of his Predecessor, by which means there is no very ancient Family in China, except that of Confucius, whose Merits have made his Posterity be revered for above 2000 Years. In our Age has happened such a Change, for in the Year 1645. the Eastern Tartars under Ximchi seized the Government, of which we shall speak more by and by. This must necessarily have caused some alteration in the Government; but the methods of it were so regular and well established, that the Tartar permitted it to remain, and made so little change, that except that Peking is possessed by Tartars, and that Nation guards the Fortresses, China is just as it was under the former Princes.

For the better shewing the Strength and Populousness of this Kingdom, we will set down the number of Cities, Fortresses, &c. as we find them in Father Magallan's History of China, which he took out of a Book composed by a Learned Mandarin for the use of the Government. But first of the Great Wall, which is indeed a most stupendious Work. It is many Yards thick, and exceeding high; built of Brick cemented by so good Mortar, that though it be 1800 Years old, it is not at all decayed. It was built by the Emperor Chihobanti, and as Tradition reports, was finished in five Years, against the Incursions of the Tartars; it begins at Canchu in Xenji in the West, and is carried on over Mountains as well as Valleys, to the Cang-Sea, between the two Provinces Peking and Leatunum in the East; 405 Portuguese Leagues in length, without accounting for Turnings, says Magallans; or 500 Leagues, allowing for the Windings, says le Compte; it is all along fortified with strong Towers at reasonable distance, to the number of 3000, and in the time of the Chinese Monarchs, a Million of Soldiers were maintained for its Guard. The number of Walled Towns in China are 4402, divided into the Orders of Civil and Military. The Civil are 2045. whereof of the first Rank 175, of the second Rank 270, of the third Rank 1600. The Military Cities are 2350, whereof Fortresses of the first Rank 629, of the second 560, of the third 311, of the fourth 300, of the fifth 150, of the sixth 100, and of the seventh Degree 300. these last are small Forts in the Fields near the Frontiers of Tartary, and on the Mountains, against Thieves and Robbers, in Xanji and Xenji especially where the very Soldiers are apt to Pillage. The number of Cities in the whole Empire are seventeen hundred, says Dionys. Kao. The number of Cities and Towns according to Naverette are thus, 148 Cities of the first Rank called Fu, 239 of the second Rank called Gheu, 1149 of the third Rank named Hieu; 11 Cities of Soldiers where those Military Men live, who have Lands Assigned for their Maintainance, 493 Castles on the Sea Coast, whereof some are extream large and populous, 2910 Boroughs on the Coast, equivalent to Towns, as the Castles are to Cities. And the Boroughs and Villages all round the Country are innumerable, and exceeding Populous. Le Compte says, there are 1000 Fortresses of the first Rank, but that the rest are not considerable; the Fortified Towns (except on the Frontiers of Tartary) being stronger than others only in Situation and Garrison. Note, in this Account many Cities are included that pay no Tribute to the Emperor, but are Governed by their own Lords or Petty Kings, whereof here are 32 that are independent of the Court, except in Homage, &c. The number of Families in the Kingdom (excluding Soldiers, Women, Children, and all that don't pay Taxes) is reckoned 11502872, and including the Army and others, the Number of Males is 59788364. The Army consists of 902054 to guard the Frontiers, with 989167 Horses always ready for Auxiliary Forces; and 767970 Men in Garrisons, but the greater part of these have other Occupations, and though listed as Soldiers, exercise their respective Trades. Other Horses maintained by the King for his Troops, or for Posts and Messengers on publick Occasions, 564900. Publick Inns or Places of Entertainment for the Mandarins and others that Travel on the King's account, conveniently seated all over the Empire, 1145. Large Barks constantly employed in bringing Provisions, Silks and Necessaries from the Southern Provinces to the Court at Peking, 9999. they will not add another, because this makes a greater sound than ten thousand would. There are 331 famous Bridges over the Rivers, not much inferior to that I have spoken of, says my Author, and that he tells us is built of White Marble 300 Geometrical Paces long and 8 broad, supported by 13 Arches, exceeding well wrought with 140 Marble Pillars upon it, whose interstices are filled with Tables of Marble and serve as a Rail; several other Ornaments to it of Marble Carvings he describes, too long here to mention. Not far from this Bridge there is another of 25 Arches, of admirable Structure also. Both these are in the Province of Peking, and the former of them which had stood 2000 Years, was broke down in the Year 1688. by an Inundation. The same Author tells us there are 272 publick Libraries, a vast number of Doctors and Men of Learning; 350000 Bonzi's or Priests; and 3036 Men and 208 Women remember'd in their Calendar as Heroes and Saints.

Having thus given you the general view of China from Megaillans and le Compte, we will now for more particular information enlarge a little out of Navarrete, Dicryste, Kao and others.

China, is so exceeding Populous says Kao, that they are not to be reckoned by Thousands but Millions, for not only the Cities, but even the Towns and Villages are crowded with Inhabitants, and the Roads as well as Streets are continually full of Passengers. 'Tis confidently averred by the Inhabitants, and even believed by the Jesuits, that there are not less than eight Millions of Souls in Kiamin, the Capital of Nankin; and although that be reckoned the largest City, yet there are many others that might be thought the biggest in the World. The buildings in the Cities (as far as I can learn from Travellers) are of Brick neat and well adorned, but the Houses are not high, being of one or but two Stories at most, and yet one House ordinarily entertains three or four; nay, sometimes five or six Families. The Streets are usually fair and straight, and the publick Buildings stately enough: in every principal City there is a Palace, for the Vice-Roy, Governour or Mandarin, a publick Inn for those that Travel on the Kings account, and as Navarrete says, there is in every Metropolis one Tower of nine Story high, and another of seven; which seems to be only for Ornament, or at most to afford a view from it of the adjacent Country: that at Nankin which is Crusted with Porcelain, is very beautiful and spoken of by all Travellers.

The People in their Temper are addicted to Study, Trade, Mechanick Arts and Industry in general, wherein Cheating may be included. But are no ways to be applauded for Courage; the Armies have always been large, no less than a Million being employed in guarding the great Wall, and perhaps double that Number elsewhere were kept in Pay, but yet in all the quartels with the Tartars, they were never able to do more than defend their own Countrey. They are excessive vain, and esteem themselves the only wise People in the Universe. They are wonderfully ceremonious in their Visits and Complements, the form of a Visit is set down by Navarrete, Kao and others, but is too tedious to repeat here. And as those Authors tell us, the civility is so universal, that even Villages and Boors are Masters of it. The Great Men are fond of Learning, and value themselves much upon Knowledge, which is so far imitated by the lower Degrees, that even the Tradesmen have ever a Book before them at leisure Hours. The Merchants are a civil sort of People, and are ready to Deal upon the least Profit, rather than loose a Customer. Formerly they were forbid to Trade to Foreign Parts, but Covetousness has overcome that Law, and the desire of Wealth, which reigns with the Chinese to the last Degree, makes them purchase License to go to Japan, the Phillipine Islands, Siam, Bacovia and other Neighbouring Countries. The Mechanicks are ingenious and perform curious Works, besides all the common Arts for making Utensils; they have thousands of pretty Toys, more curiously wrought than we can imagine. The wrought Silks, Cabinets and Porcelain, are sufficient Proofs to us at this great distance, that they are no bunglers, except in Painting. The Husbandmen are mightily extolled by Navarrete for their Care, Industry and Neatness, their Lands are fully cultivated, and their Grounds kept clean from Weeds. The Soil is so good, that in most parts they have two Crops of Rice, one in June, and the other in December, besides a Crop of Vetches, Beans, Wheat or other Grain between; the Humane as well as all other Dung is daily collected in Tubs in all the Cities, by Persons who make a livelihood of selling it to the Peasants.

I find Lands are enjoyed in Property here, not at the disposal of the Prince as in India, for Navarrete tells us, the Husbandmen are generally but poor People, who Farm the Land of the Lord, at the rate of half the Crop, out of which the Landlord pays the Taxes, as the Tenant out of his half, pays the Tillage and Manure.

As to the Learning and Virtue of the Chinese, I do not find reason to extol them, so much as Sir William Temple and some of the Jesuits would have us; their Science is certainly very Superficial, for all the deep parts of Learning, and so thorough a Knowledge of things, as is necessary to ascertain Truth they are utter Strangers to. And as to their Virtue, I do not find by those very Jesuits, but that it consists more in Speculation than Practice. The Morals of Confucius they brag much off, and their Histories are full of instances of the great Virtue of their Princes, Mandarins, &c. whereof Navarrete has made a large Collection, but many of them are Hyperbolic, and give reason enough to suspect, that Posterity made those fine Stories of their Ancestors. 'Tis true, there is a Face of much Virtue and exact Justice in the Administration of their Government, and in the disposing of Offices, and yet for all that, le Compte tells us, the great ones are the most covetous Men in the World, and do nothing without Bribery. And that the lesser Ranks are so much addicted to Cheating, that they deceive your very sight, and deliver painted Blocks to the buyers for Hams of Bacons, and Chests filled with Brick-bracks instead of Porcelain. That their invention tion and Genius is not over penetrating, appears plainly from the one notable instance of the multitude of Characters they use in Writing, which as we have said are 54409 in Number, whereby the Knowledge of them is made the Study of a Life almost. Now to say nothing of the inconvenience, how much less ingenious is that than the manner of Europeans, who by 24 or rather 26 Characters only, are able to express all manner of Words that can be pronounced.

The Chinese differ from the other Asiatics in this, that they use Chairs and sit not on the Ground; and have fine Beds and Couches. They are excessively guilty of Gaming, wherein they spend whole Days, and loose immense Sums.

At Feasts the Tables are plentifully spread with Multitudes of Dishes, wherein Dogs Flesh among others is a common Food. They use no Knives, Forks or Napkins, but the Meat being served up in small Morfels, a pair of small Sticks of Wood or Ivory is given to every one, with which he Feed himself, without touching the Meat with his Fingers, and they do this with great Dexterity. They Affect a serious gravity at Table, and are seldom intoxicated, although the Cup goes briskly round, for there is but little filled at a time, and withal the Wine is small. At Feasts 'tis ordinary to entertain the Guests with Tumblers and Sports, and the better sort give a Play, which is Acted before them, by Setts of Players, who are ready at call, and present a Collection of Comedies and Farces, out of which the principal Guest chooses that he likes, but 'tis customary for the Guest to make a present to the Players.

In Marriage the Ceremonies and Pomp are great; the young couple are joined without previous Acquaintance, the bargain being made by the Parents, wherein Presents are made on both sides but the Bride brings no Dower, the Husband rather purchasing his Wife. The Wives are secluded from the sight of all Men, but their own Husbands, and are Divorced upon Misdeameanour. The Men commonly keep Concubines, but the Wife is Mistress of the Family, and these must serve her. The Women in general never appear in the Streets, and in passing from place to place, are always conveyed in covered Coaches or Sedans.

Funeral Solemnities are also Pompous, and the Mournings very long and severe. Children at the Death of a Parent are not permitted the use of a Bed for an hundred Days, during all which time, they lye on the Earth with Tears, lamenting their loss: They are forbid Matrimonial enjoyment for three Years, and shut up themselves from all Conversation for at least one whole Year. A Wife keeps a rigid Mourning three Years for her Husband, and a Husband one Year for his Wife, which is also the usual Term of Mourning for other Relations. The Piety of Children of this kind is very great, and even the Emperor himself exercised it in the most Rigid manner at the Death of his Grandmother, whose Funeral is particularly described by Father Bouvet.

Many Festivals are observed in China, that of the New Year, and the other called the Lantern Feast, at the Full Moon after it, are the chief. At those times there is the utmost jollity for three Days together; and in the latter all the Houses are illuminated with Candles in wonderful fine Lanterns, wherein every one endeavouring to exceed his Neighbour, they make a very fine show.

Altho' the Chinese, according to the Doctrine of the Venerable Confucius, believe in one God the Creator of the World, and acknowledge a Future State, yet the Idolatry of India has been long since introduced among them, and they pay as much Worship to the hideous Images they set up, and believe as ridiculous Legends as the Indians do. 'Tis true, this is reckoned but a Sect of them, but then that Sect is so numerous, that their Temples appear in all parts of the Empire, insomuch that a Stranger can judge no less, than that it is the National Religion. Mahometism is also spread among them, and 'tis judged there are not less than 500 thousand of that Opinion in China. And the number of Christians is very considerable, for as le Compte assures us, there are above 200 Churches and Chappels Consecrated, and there are Annually baptized above 4000 Children. And Kao computes, that the number of Christians is at least 200 thousand. The present (if he be still living) Emperor Chiang, has been very indulgent to them, and published an Edict in 1692. whereby free Liberty was given to any one of his Subjects to embrace the Faith, and be Baptized.

Fo-Hi and not Yitay, as some relate, was the Name of the first King of China, whose Reign their Chronology reckons to be above 4500 Years ago. During all which time, there has been a Succession of the Government under 22 Families, who produced 238 Emperors.

The present Prince is of a Tartar Family, Descended from Xunchi, who obtained the Crown of China, in the Year 1645. in the following manner.

Xungchi, the Reigning Emperor at that time, had lived a Supine and Lazy Life in the Palace, surrounded by Eunuchs and Women; and left the Government to the sole Management of others. Whereby a general Defection was bred in the minds of his Subjects, and a Rebel or Robber as Navarette calls him, who set himself up, grew formidable enough to overthrow the Government. This Rebels Name was Lichuang; he began his Rebellion in Xensi which Province he soon made himself Master of, and thereby encreasing his Forces, overpowred other Provinces, and was advanced almost to the Walls of Peking, before the Emperor ever heard of him. The Pusillanimous Emperor was so frightened at the Danger, that he never attempted to oppose it, but having first killed his Wife and Children, retired into the innermost part of the Palace, and hanged himself on a Tree. Whereby the Conqueror had free Access, and immediately seized all the Wealth of the Palace; which was so very great, that although he employed Horses, Carts, Camels and all means of Carriage, he was five Days, some say eight, in carrying off the Gold, Silver, Jewels, and most valuable Goods, and yet left a great Wealth in the Treasury, which the Tartar afterwards seized. Lichuang had thereby Possession of the Government. But giddy with Power, he used it Unskilfully, as well as Tyrannically; for he put divers of the Nobility to Tormenting Deaths: and among the rest, the Father of Oufangeii, the Crown General, because the Son, who at that time commanded at the Great Wall, would not come into his Party. This so enraged the General, that he resolved to Revenge it, and at any rate to pull down this Tyrant.

Oufangeii.

Ousengei, Usengei or Vij-Sanguet, for by all these Names I find him written, in pursuing his Revenge and in endeavouring to release his Country from Slavery, committed the greatest piece of false Policy that could be, for to assure himself of Force enough, he invited the Tartars from Leatun to Assist him; these were the old Enemies of China, and therefore should never have been introduced, but Revenge overcome Policy, and the General brought in 7 or 8000 Tartars to Reinforce his Army: and with them attacking the Usurper, obtained so Signal a Victory, that Licbuang who fled to Pekin, had only time to carry off his best Effects and set Fire to the Palace, and then fled to the remoter Provinces. The General unwisely left the Tartars at Pekin, and himself pursued the Enemy, but returning Victorious, was surprized to find the Tartar on the Throne.

Xunchi, the Commander of the Tartar Army, was in his first Estate Prince of a Nation of Eastern Tartars called Manticheans. This Prince finding China in so distracted a State, and himself in Possession of the Capital City and Palace, and having as we suppose Reinforced his Army by supplies from Tartary, was tempted to set up for Emperor, and accordingly so declared himself. And to make the General easy, gave him the Province of Yunnan, with the Title of King. He was fain to Temporize, and accept of it for the present, but after a few Years time, he set up against the Tartar, and took upon himself the Title of Emperor, by the Name of Vij Sangqueti. He maintained long and vigorous War, and conquered half the Empire; but after his Death the Stream turned the other way, and the Tartar in some Years reduced all the Kingdom to his Obedience, and put all the Children and Relations of Usanguet to Death.

Xunchi, the first Emperor of the present Tartar Race, enjoyed not many Years the Throne of China, but Dying, left his Son of six Years old to the Protection of his Brother Amevan; that Prince courageously reduced the Provinces, while his Nephew was still a Minor, and then honourably delivered him the Empire as soon as he came to Age. Chuntchi, or Xunchi II. as others write it, as that Emperor was named, enjoyed the Crown not many Years after, for he Dyed in 1662. leaving his Son Chang a Minor, of but eight Years of Age. The former part of this Princes Reign was troublesome in Wars and Civil Commotions, but he had the good Fortune to surmount them all, and Reigned Peaceably when our last Advices came from thence. His Son and Heir is named Hwangtsi, and was a hopeful Gentleman at 28 Years of Age. He may perhaps be now on the Throne, for our last Accounts are at least 10 Years old.

Of the Splendor this Monarch appears in, and of the form of his Government we have already spoken, and need only add out of Nazarette that the Petty Kings who attend him, so often mentioned by le Comte, are mostly Titular only, and have no Dominion. And that the Emperor keeps 6000 Horses in his Stables and 24 Elephants. But that the Guard of the Palace is not so large as 10000 Men as commonly reported.

And having now we think given our Reader as large a view of China in general as he can expect, we shall proceed to the particular Description of its Provinces.

CHINA is divided into 15 Provinces, which from North to South appear thus.

Chief Cities according to Dionys. Kao.

PEKIM or Peking, the chief Province of the Empire at present, as being the seat of the Monarch, is the most N. Part of China within the great Wall, bounded on the North by that Wall, which divides it from Tartary, on the South by the Province of Honan, on the East by the Gulph or Bay called the Cang-Sea, on the South East by the Province of Xantum, on the West by the Province of Xansi. In which situation it extends from the 36th to the 41 Deg. of Lat. The

The Land is Champaign and Arable, but somewhat Barren, by Reason of much gravelly Soil and some Sandy Plains. The Air is Healthy but very cold in the Winter, for it is so effectually chilled by the Dry North Wind, coming over the vast Land of Tartary, that the Sun has not force enough at that time to Heat it. This Province is subdivided into nine smaller Provinces, or great Cities with the Districts Dependant on them; these large Cities bear the adjunct of Fu, a second Rank subordinate to them have the Title of Cheu, and a third Rank of smaller Cities bear the Surname of Hien. Which Appellations are observed in all the Provinces of the Empire. The first which is also the principal City of the Kingdom, is

Pekin, or Xuntien-Fu which is the ancient and true Name of the City, and signifies Obedient to Heaven, the former being made use of only since the King has resided here, and signifies the Northern Court, in distinction from Nanking the Southern Court, from whence the Royal Seat was removed hither, about 300 Years ago. Pekin consists of two large Cities, besides Suburbs, that is to say, the Old City, which may be now called the Tartar City, because it is wholly inhabited by that Nation, who ever since the Tartar Race of Kings have possessed the Throne, have filled it and driven out the Chinese: and the new City adjoining on the South side to the old built for the Chinese. The whole makes a Place of that Extent and Populoufness, that the French Missionaries acknowledge it exceeds Paris, and is the most regularly built that can be imagined, being an exact Square; and the Streets in Parallel Lines from North to South, and so cross ways; the Emperor's Court stands in the middle, and is an oblong Square of two Miles long, and above a Mile broad: The old City besides the Suburbs and the Chinese City, is about a League Square or 14 Miles about, surrounded with very thick and high Walls, beset with Towers at small distances, and entrenched with a very broad and deep dry Ditch: The Gates are nine in number, three on the South, and two on each of the other sides; and are very large, high and magnificent Structures, appearing like Castles: At each Gate there is a Suburb, and on the South side the Chinese City, which is another very large Town of a Mile and half Square: The Chinese City joins in a manner, on the North side to the Tartar City, and on the other sides, especially on the West, it has large Suburbs. It is surrounded with Walls and has seven Gates. The Streets here also lie in Parallel Lines quite cross the City both ways: So that upon the whole, considering the two Cities and the many Suburbs, Pekin may be reckoned at least 25 Miles in Compass: The Houses in both Cities are low, but well built of Brick, and covered with glazed Tiles, which glitter with the Sun: and though the Furniture be ordinary, they are generally neat enough. The Streets are filled with Shops, and all Necessaries are every where to be bought; the only Inconvenience is, that they are not paved, which makes them very dirty in the Winter, and dusty in the Summer. The Croud of People continually passing to and fro is so great, that the Mandarins and Great Men have ordinarily a Servant riding before to make way: Father le Compte judges the number of Inhabitants are two Millions. This is not at all incredible, if we consider that this being the Seat of the Court and Supreme Tribunals which Govern this vast Empire, it must needs be continually filled with Officers and other Attendants on Affairs of State, Law or other Business. But that which is more surprising is, that Hamcheu and many other Cities are near as large and populous as this, and Nanking much more large. And that, as Father le Compte expresses it, one is hardly out of a City which one would think the largest in the Kingdom, but you are in another as large; so opulent and numerous are the Cities of China. This City is seated in a Plain, near the Foot of the Mountains, in the 40th Deg. of Lat. at the distance of 100 Miles to the South from the so much celebrated Wall of China, and 70 from the Gulph of Nanking. The Walls are of so great a Breadth, that twelve Horses may run a-breast, on the top of them; built of Brick, upon a Foundation of huge Stones, and are said to exceed in height those of the most considerable Places in Europe; a vast Garrison is constantly maintained for their Defence; and the Guards strictly kept in time of Peace as War. All manner of Rarities, Merchandizes and Treasures of the Indies are transported hither; so that every thing is cheap, notwithstanding the vast Multitude of the Inhabitants. Several thousands of Royal Ships, besides those of private Persons are continually employed in furnishing this Court with all sorts of Provisions necessary for the support of Human Life, or for Pleasure: And the whole Work is performed with a great deal of ease, by the means of the Rivers and Channels which the Chinese have every where made Navigable. Insomuch, that although this City stands in a Barren and Desert Country, yet it may well be styled The Cornucopia of China; which undoubtedly gave rise to a Proverb among them, That as nothing grows in Pekin, so neither is anything wanting.

The other chief Cities of this Province are Junging-Fu, which hath 6 other Cities under her Command. Chinding-Fu, which presides over 26 Cities. Quoaming-Fu, whose Jurisdiction reaches over 6 Cities. Thicmming-Fu, is chief of 11 Cities. Funning-Fu, which governs 6 Cities. Hokien-Fu 7. Paoding-Fu 10. and Xunte-Fu hath 9 inferior Cities. All these eight are large and populous Cities, and 16 of the others are of the second Rank called Chek, which according to the common accounts are at least equal to the best of our Towns.

XANTUM or Xantung, is the next Province to Pekin on the South East, having the Sea Coast on the North and East, Pekin on the West, and Nankin on the South, its Extent is about 200 Miles from East to West, and 150 from North to South. The Latit. between 36 and 39. The Soil is so fertil in Corn and Fruits, that one Years Crop is sufficient for several Years Food. Pulse, Fish and Cattle are also plenty, and Silk is found here in great quantity. This Province is much infested with Robbers, who herd together in great Bodies. Six great Cities divide it into so many parts, under whom are 15 of the Cities called Cheu, and 89 of the lesser Rank called Hien. The six principal ones are as follows.

Zinen-Fu, which hath under its Jurisdiction 4 lesser called Cheu, and 16 of those named Hien, and those have yet 20 more under their Direction. Juncheu-Fu, which hath 24 of Cheu, and 23 of Hien under his Jurisdiction. Tungchang-Fu, which presides over three Cities of Cheu and 15 of Hien. Cincheu-Fu hath 14 Cities Cheu and 14 Hien subordinate to it. Tengcheu-Fu, has the Government of one City denominated Cheu, and 7 of those called Hien. And Laicheu-Fu, which hath Dominion over two Cities Cheu, and seven of Hien. There are many small Islands Islands on the Coast that are reckoned part of this Province, the principal whereof are named Fenxu, Namuen and Tenkeng. The River Luen which they pretend has miraculous Virtues runs thro' this Province.

The Province of XANSI lyes on the West of Pekin, extending from the great Wall on the North to the Frontiers of Honan on the South, having the River Heang or Yellow River on the West, which divides it from Xensi. According to Dionys. Kao, this River Heang runs through the middle of this Province, and not Coast its Bounds, as the Maps represent it. The Country here is very Mountainous, and yet the Soil is Fertile, producing especially plenty of delicious Grapes. The Air is healthy, and the Inhabitants numerous. Six large Cities of the sort Denominated Fu, may be said to divide it into so many parts, these are Taven-Fu, Pante-Fu, Pingiang-Fu, Zugang-Fu, Funchai-Fu and Tsiring-Fu. Subordinate to which are eleven Cities surnamed Chou and 95 Hien.

On the West of Xansi lyes XENSI, the largest Province of China, and had formerly three Viceroy, although now but one. It extends from the 33 Deg. of Latit. to the great Wall, having Tartary on the West and North, and Suckuen on the South; and according to Kao is 400 Miles long, and 350 broad. The Soil here is very Fertile, the Pastures especially produce vast Herds of Kine, and large Flocks of Sheep; the Creature also that yields Musk is found in this Country. But here is frequent want of Rain and Locusts much infest the Land. This Province adjoining to Tibet which extends to the Mogul's Empire, there is an intercourse and commerce with the Merchants of those Countries at its City Zuning, which makes that a place of great Trade. And by this Commerce it seems the Mahometan Religion has crept into China, and spread about in all its parts. In this Province are eight large Cities, which have 116 smaller under their Jurisdiction. The Names of the six principal ones are Sigan-Fu, a very large and fine City, even three Leagues in Circumference as some Authors report, surrounded with Walls, Ditches and Bulwarks and guarded by a large Garrison of Tartar-Soldiers. (Near this City there is abundance of Salt Earth, which being boiled yields a very good white Salt: and at a Town not far from it, the Land after Rain Spews forth a Froth, which is an excellent Soap: the same Ground yields also Salt and Salt-petre.) Hanchung-Fu, Fungiang-Fu, Pingiang-Fu, Linxiu-Fu, Vachang-Fu, Hingang-Fu, and Singan-Fu. In the Year 1625, there was dug up near Sigan-Fu a Monumental Marble Table, 10 Foot long and 5 Foot broad, on the top whereof was engraven a Cross, and below it an Inscription, partly in Chinese Characters, and partly in Syriack, wherein the Messias is mentioned, importing that an Angel brought the tidings of his coming, and that Olopoen came from Judea, and preached in China, where he was favoured by the then Emperor, &c. the Copy of this Inscription is extant in Kireber's China illustrata, and the Story told at large by le Compté. 'Tis said, this Monument is preserved in a Pagode made by the Emperors Command, and is made use of by some, as an Argument to prove that St. Thomas preached here.

The Province of HONAN lyes between Xansi and Pekin on the North, Xensi on the West, and Namkin on the East, between the Lat. of 33 and 37. This is reckoned the middle of China; the Soil is a flat Land well watered with Rivers, and is very fruitful in Rice and other Corn, the Air temperate, and the whole Country so abounding with delightful plenty of all things, as to be esteemed a Paradise. And was therefore some time honoured with the Royal presence at Schaisung-Fu which is the Capital of the Province: the old City was destroyed by an Inundation, occasioned by cutting the Banks of the Heang to remove the Rebel Libuang; and the new one is built opposite to it, besides this, there are seven other Cities, which have Jurisdiction over 108 smaller Cities and great Towns; those seven are Quinte-Fu, Hinde-Fu, Jecse-Fu, Vaking-Fu, Honang-Fu, Nining-Fu, and Hojang-Fu.

NANGING or Namkin, which lyes on the South East of the Provinces we have passed through, was formerly the first, and is still the second in Rank, of all the Provinces of the Kingdom. It is a large Country, extending from the 30 to the 36 Deg. of Latit. On the East the whole Coast is washed by the Sea, the Northern part whereof is a Bay made by this Island Corea, and Denominated from this Province. The Kiam River, which as we have told you, is one of the great Rivers of China, runs thro' the middle of the Province, and having washed the Walls of Kiammin, flows Eastward, and falls into the Sea about 150 Miles below it. And also the Hoang, another of the principal Rivers passes through the North part, and falls into the Bay of Namkin. The South part of this Province is Mountainous, but the rest is fruitful Champaign, abounding with Silk. The convenience of the two Rivers and the Sea-Coast creates a mighty Traffick in this Province, and a general Fecundity and Wealth in all its parts. Its capital City

Nanking or Kiammin, as the Tartars have named it, is the largest and most populous in the whole Empire, being according to Dionys. Kao, 16 or 17 French Leagues in Circumference, and was formerly much larger, as appears by the Ruins of its old Wall, which is 30 Leagues in Circuit, but although by the removal of the Court, Nanking is much lessened, yet as it is, 'tis much larger than Pekin, which as we have told you, is thought to exceed Paris. The number of People inhabiting it, are computed to be eight Millions says Kao, whereby although the Streets are very spacious, they are continually crowded with Passengers, the Streets are clean and neat, and the Shops well furnished with all sorts of useful and valuable Commodities. The River Kiam or Tangku Kiam which signifies Son of the Sea, flows close by the City, and is two French Leagues broad, it is laden with innumerable Ships and Boats, many whereof are richly gilt, and finely furnished with Tables, Couches and Seats for Passengers, besides large Stowage for Lading; so numerous are those Ships that the Jesuits were astonished, and said there are enough almost to make a Bridge to Europe. One remarkable Ornament of this City is the Porcelaine Tower, which is nine Stories high, the outside of the finest Porcelaine of divers colours, and within side the Rooms are finely Painted or Gilt, and the upper one especially is well adorned with Figures of Stone: at the top is a Spire, which renders the whole Structure 200 Foot high. It is an Octogon of 40

Foot

Foot Diameter, it is crusted with Porcelain, but thought to be built of Brick, it diminishes in Magnitude as it rises, by settings in at every Cornish; a small Stair-case within side leads to the top, where an excellent view is had of the whole City. (Le Compte, and Kao.)

The next great City is Sucheu or Chieucheu, which is so large, rich and populous, that to see it first, a Man would conclude none could exceed it, and whether Nanking does or no I cannot determine, for One Names this as the most Populous as another Names that. 'One who has Patience to stand but a few Minutes by the Water side, and view the Throngs of People that come to buy Commodities and pay the Customs, would imagine it to be a Fair to which the whole Empire was crowding, says le Compte. The Emperors Fleet of 9999 Jonks or Ships pass Annually from hence to Pekin, to carry the Tributes of the Southern Provinces: Out of the Kiam River, they pass into the grand Canal, and are six Months in performing the Voyage.

There are two Viceroys to govern this Province, which is divided into fourteen parts, under the Direction of those two Cities above named, and these twelve; viz. Nieucheu-Fu, Thaiping-Fu, Gankang-Fu, Sunkiang-Fu, Chinkiang-Fu, Geancheu-Fu, Fangjan-Fu, Chingan-Fu, Lucheu-Fu, Quongte-Fu, Chancheu-Fu and Kingcheu-Fu. Subordinate to all which there are in this Province One Hundred and thirteen other considerable Cities.

CHEKIAM or Chekjang, is the next Province to Namkin adjoining to it on the South, having the Sea-Coast on the East, Kiamsi on the West and Fokien on the South-West and South, extending from the 27 to the 31 Deg. Lat. The Country is a delightful Soil of Hills, Valleys and Plains, enriched with many artificial Channels besides Rivers and Brooks, over which there are many artificial Bridges of Stone curiously Arched. The Multitude of Ships and Barks upon these Rivers, and Canals are innumerable, and the Populousness of the whole Country is incredible. The Soil produces all necessaries for Life in abundance, besides an excessive quantity of Silk from the innumerable Silk Worms hanging on the Woods, as we may call them, of Mulberry-Trees. All which render this Province a kind of Paradise. It contains eleven large Cities, which preside over 76 lesser Cities.

The Capital is Hamcheu, a City of 4 Leagues in Circumference, and one of the finest and most populous of the Empire, it is provided within and without with deep and Navigable Canals, which are crowded with Boats, and the Streets are adorned with Triumphant Arches; [I find le Compte speaking of these Triumphant Arches at Nimpo and not here, wherefore I doubt whether my Author (Kao) be not mistaker] It is a place of great Trade, and is seated on a large River, which according to Kao is two French Leagues over (or rather half a League wide as le Compte reports it) named Zhien-Tangkang, it rises within this Province, and falls into the Sea about 28 Leagues below the City. Near the City is a fine Lake of many Miles extent, which is fed by Water that falls from the Neighbouring Hills, and its Water is conveyed into the Canals. Vieicheu-Fu, which stands on the South Limits and near the Sea-Coast, is a very considerable City on account of a great Trade for Silk carryed on there.

Nimpo-Fu or Limpo, stands about 100 Miles South West from Hamcheu, near the Sea-Coast, in Lat. 30 and in Longit. (by observation) 120 Deg. 23 Min. East from London, is also a considerable City where a Trade was endeavoured to be established by our New East-India Company. This City maintains a great Trade with Japon, and both City and Suburbs are well inhabited. The rest of the eleven are Kiaking-Fu, Xankang-Fu, Kiuncheu-Fu, Vencheu-Fu, Niencheu-Fu, Chinchem-Fu, Kingkoa-Fu, Taicheu-Fu and Ninchi-Fu.

Chusan, an Island lying 20 Leagues East from Nimpo, 13 or 14 Leagues long, and about 3 Leagues broad, almost encompassed with a great number of smaller Islands, one whereof called Pouto, situated about a League from the East-end, is much celebrated for the Idolatrous Worship of the Bonzes. On the Island Chusan there is a small City, or rather a walled Town of the same Name to which the New East-India Company traded, being not permitted to go with their Ships to Limpo. (Nimpo.) Their Commerce with this place began in the Year 1700. The Town of Chusan lyes in 30 Deg. 10 Min. Lat. and 121½ D. Long. from London.

KIAMSI or Kiangsi, is an inland Province lying between Chekiam and Fokien on the East, Huquann on the West, Namkin on the North, and Quantum on the South. It extends from the 26 to the 31 Degrees of Latit. and at least 3 Degrees in Longit. The South parts of it are Mountainous, where are found Mines of Gold, Silver, Lead, Iron and Tin; the Valleys are well cultivated, and abound with all necessaries for Life. The Women of this Country are famous for Fruitfulness. And at a Village called Singkesimo, the finest Porcelaine is made, which exceeding all others, the Water of that place is supposed to give the Superiority, since in others, the Earth is as fine, and as well prepared. But by Kao the place noted for the Porcelaine Manufacture is named Vieicheu-Fu, and by Navarette Chao-Hien.

In the North part of this Province, there is a large Lake of 300 Miles Circumference named Phajang, which is Navigated by large Ships, all the Rivers in the Province flow into this Lake, and it discharges it self into the River Kiam, many Towns and small Cities are seated on its Banks, which flourish much by the Traffick they maintain.

Thirteen large Cities are seen in this Province, which preside over 78 smaller ones. The chief of them is Nanchang-Fu, seated on the South West side of the Lake which is large, but having suffered much by the Wars is reduced and at present in low Estate; the rest are Kincheu, Suicheu, Nanhang, Quoangsin, Quienchang, Linkiang, Chungken, Tungcheu and Nangang. All which bear likewise the surname of Fu.

HUQUAM adjoins to Kiamsi on the West, having Honan on the North, and Quantum with Quamsi on the South, it is one of the largest Provinces of the Empire, and is divided into fifteen Parts. The River Kiam runs quite through it from West to East, and several other Rivers water the Land, and render it so Fertile in Rice and other Corn, and afford such plenty of Fish, that it is commonly said this Province is capable of feeding the whole Empire. A very large Lake lies in the middle of it, which is 400 Miles in Circuit, several Rivers fall into it, and the Kiam runs through it. many Ships Navigate this Lake, but its Waves are boisterous, and as furious as the main Sea, whence frequent Shipwrecks happen on it. A notable one is related in the Chinese History, wherein 300 Ships having an Army of 50000 Men on board, all perished in one Night. Among the products of this Country, Cotton is numbered, whereof great quantity grows here.

The Capital is Yüehang-Fu, seated on both sides the great River Kiam below the Lake, it is a very large City, and frequented by multitude of Ships, which drive a very great Traffick. The other Cities which preside over its 15 parts are Hanjiang, Huangeheu, Gangling, Sangiang, Zujiang, Tegan, Fangsing, Jachen, Changxa, Paoking, Xincheu, Changte, Hangcheu and Jangcheu, all denominated Fu, and have under them 125 other Cities and Towns. This Province suffered much in the Wars of the Rebel Lichuang, who was the occasion of calling in the Tartars.

But SUCHUEN which lyes beyond it on the West, and extends to the Mountains of India, was much more punished by those Wars, as being laid waste and almost ruined. This Province is bounded by Xerfi on the North, and Queichu on the South. The Land is Mountainous, where Mines of Quick-silver and Tin are found, but the Valleys being watered with many Rivers, is made Fertile in all necessities for Life, and also produces Rhubarb, China-Root and Silk. But the Rhubarb says Kao is not of the best, and seldom exported. The whole Country which is large, is divided into nine parts under the Government of nine Cities, which bear the Dignity of Fu.

The Capital Chingtu stands in the middle, and was a very great and considerable City before it was reduced by the Wars to a low Estate: the rest are Lungan, Xinking, Huangbing, Paoning, Chuncheu, Lingcheu, Hiencheu, Mabu and Tao: which have 102 lesser under their Jurisdiction.

QUEICHEU, which lyes on the South of Suchuen, between Quangsi on the East, and Nunnan on the West, is a large Country which suffered very much in the Wars. The Land is Mountainous, and affords Quick-silver, Copper and Tin in good quantity; and the Valleys are Fertile and well stocked with Cattle. Although this Country be extensive, and divided into fourteen parts, the Cities are not many, and those not very populous, for the Inhabitants having been driven away by the Wars are not yet returned. The presiding Cities with the Title of Fu are these 14. Queyang the Capital. Genxgun, Tugven, Cinquen, Lazirak, Sachuen, Sunan, Xecang, Tungin, Pinjung, Pinguen, Tsading, Veimeng and Mesi. Under whom are 24 smaller Cities.

The Kingdom of YUNNAN is the only part of China that lyes beyond Queichu, as extending to the Frontiers of India, and bounded on the South by Tenquin. It was formerly a Province of China, and is now commonly so reckoned, but by Kao we are told its Subject to its own Prince, tributary to the Emperor. The Country is large, as extending from the Tropic in 23 and half up to the 29 Deg. of Latit. and has at least 7 Deg. of Longit. It is wealthy in Mines of Gold, Silver, Copper and Tin, and divers precious Stones, especially Rubies are found on its Mountains. The Soil is diversified in Mountains and Valleys, the former yielding the Metals as aforesaid, and the latter producing Corn, Fruits, Silk and Musk.

Here are 20 large Cities and 68 Subordinate lesser ones. The Capital is Tunnan or Junnan-Fu, seated in the East, a charming pleasant City where Fruits are exceeding plenty. The other chief Cities are Quangsi, Kaiboa, Cinsung, Chinkian, Quagnan, Ivenking, Chokium, Vising, Kintung, Juning, Xunning, Xingan, Tungoba and Sinkoa.

Proceeding now to the Eastward, we enter QUAMSI or Quangsi, which has Tunnan on the West, Quencheu on the North, Quantum on the East and Tenquin and Cochinchina on the South. A great part of the Land is Mountainous, however there wants not good Soil where Rice grows in plenty, as also Cinnamon and Sapan-Wood; besides much of that Wood whereof they make their Cabinets. Very good Porcelaine is made here, but both the Earth and Water is brought from other parts: it being found that the Sand of Namkin and the Water of Kamfi, must concur to make the best Porcelaine. This Province remained a separate Kingdom governed by a Prince of the ancient Imperial Blood till the last King dying without Issue, it fell into the Crown, and the Palace which was at Queiling is run to Ruins: that City is pleasantly situated in the Northern confines, besides which are twelve other large Cities of the Dignity of Fu, which preside over 80 lesser ones. Those twelve are Pingco, Zincheu, Taijing, Sunun, Tenchew, Zhincheu, Singuen, Chincheu, Suchin and Chingan.

QUANTUM or Quangtung: adjoins to Quangsi on the East, having the Ocean on the South, Huquang and Kiamfi on the North, and Fekien on the East. This is a very large Province, extending 10 Deg. in Longitude, namely from the 125 to the 135. and in Latitude about 3 Degrees. The Soil is good, affording plenty of all necessities, besides Sugar and Silk which with Tin, Copper-Work, Salt-petre, wrought Silks and other Merchandise are exported hence, to the great enriching of the Country. This Province suffered much by the Wars at the Revolution, its Capital City being Plundered, and very much ruined by the Army that took it by Treachery, after it had held out a whole Year.

The chief City Quancheu-Fu, or Canton as Europeans call it, is seated at the bottom of a small and safe Bay of the Ocean, which runs far within Land in the 24 Deg. of Lat. at the Mouth of the River Langcheng, which empties it self into that Bay, and is Navigable for many Leagues above the City. The convenient Situation of this place for Trade to India, renders it extream populous and wealthy, the Shops being plentifully stocked with all sorts of Indian and European Commodities. And not far from it in a Village named Fuxan, where Goods are Manufactured for this Market, there lives by report no less than 60 thousand Families. The English and Dutch Ships, as well as Portuguese and Indian, coming frequently to this Port. The Province is divided into ten parts under the Jurisdiction of these ten Cities which are Denominated Fu, viz. Quangcheu or Canton, the Capital as aforesaid, Nankiang, Xancheu, Hoycheu, Xanking, Kiaochu, Luchu, Liencheu, Chaucheu, together with Kincheu situate on the Island Ainan or Hainan, which lyes in the Ocean on the South-Coast, being distanced by a Strait of about 10 Leagues wide from the Main Land. The Island is 300 Miles in Circumference.

cuit, and has 13 lesser Cities on it, and is considerable on account of a great Trade driven there with the Kingdoms of Tonquin and Cochinchina, it abounds with Aloes and has a good Pearl Fishery.

In the mouth of the Bay of Canton lyes the Island whereon MACAO is seated in Lat. 23. This Town the Portuguese made themselves Masters of, sometime before the Year 1600. and possessed it under their own Government for many Years: but the Dutch disturbed their Trade so much, that although they have still a Fort and Factory there, they are not at all considerable, and are forced to Submit to the Chinese with great Servility. I find some Authors say the Emperor took Macao in the Year 1668. but since according to the Accounts of both le Compte and Kao; who wrote long since that time, the Portuguese were still in possession of it, we must suppose that a mistake. The Town is small, unwall'd, and built on a narrow uneven Soil on a point of the Island, but the Road is good; Other small Islands that lye to Windward, sheltering the Ships, and securing them from Storms. The Haven is narrow, safe and commodious. (Le Compte.) They pay Customs to the Emperor for all their Goods, or rather as Kao represents it, pay an Annual Tribute of 10000 or as some say 100000 Ducats. They formerly exercised very great Traffick here, in all Indian and European Commodities. It is worth observing, that the Sunday with the Portuguese of this Town, is the Saturday with the Spaniards in the Phillipine Islands, and so forward throughout all the days of the Week, although there is scarce any difference in the Longit. of both places. But the reason is, the Portuguese in coming from Europe pass Eastward, whereas the Spaniards coming from America Westward, between both they have gone round the Globe, in doing which there is necessarily a Day lost, as we have told you in the Introduction.

FOKIEN, lyes on the East of Kiamfi on the North East of Quantum, having Chekiam on its North East, and the Ocean on the East and South-East. The Soil is diversified in Mountains and Valleys, the former well beset with Trees, and the latter well watered with Rivers and Brooks, which render the Land Fertile in Rice and other Corn. The extent of this Province is from the 24 to the 28 Deg. Lat. and of equal Longit. Eight chief Cities with the Title of Fu, divide it into so many parts, these are Fochou or Fockou, seated on a River which falls into a Bay of the Ocean in Lat. 26. and half, it is the Capital of the Province, and is a large City, famous for Commerce with the Japoneses Indians and Europeans whose Ships daily arrive here. Zhiwencheu, Hingho, Chaoheu, Jenping, Quien, Tingczu and Change, to which is added the Island Formosa or Taiouan, which is laid to this Province, and makes a ninth part. These chief Cities preside over 60 others.

The small Island Quemoy, which lyes on the South-East Coast makes a safe and notable Haven, where Ships of the biggest burden lye secure. Near it is

The Island EMOUY (or as we often pronounce it Amoy) on which is a large Town of the same Name, which of late Years has been famous for the Trade the English have had there.

This Province of Fokien was a separate Kingdom, but with what Homage to the Emperor I am not apprised. The Prince that governed it at the time of the Tartar Revolution, was Potent and Courageous, and stood out against that Monarch, when the other Provinces had submitted, which occasioned great Wars and Subjected the Country to much Destruction. At length under the pretence of a Treaty the Prince was Decoyed to Court. But contrary to promise was there Detained. His Son whose bravery afterwards has rendered his Name illustrious in that part of the World, maintained a vigorous War in his Fathers behalf against the Emperor, but born down with the overmatch, was forced to quit his Country and put to Sea. Coxinga or Conesius, as 'tis sometimes written, was the Name of this Prince, who turning his Face to Formosa, became a Potent Enemy to the Dutch there. Which leads me to speak of that Island, wherein I shall be the more Ample, by reason of the great talk about it, occasioned by the fine dressed up Story of Psalmanazer, who pretended to be a Native of it.

When the Dutch had established themselves in India, they made it their chiefest Care to settle a Trade to China, but the Chinese would never agree to the Treaties they offered, till the Dutch by the force of a good Fleet, seized a little Island near the Coast, which they Fortified, and from it Annoyed the Chinese at pleasure. This produced a Treaty, and upon Condition they would quit that place, they were allowed to settle at Tajouang or Teywang in Formosa, whether they accordingly retired, Fortified it and carried on a very profitable Trade there. During the time of their flourishing State in that place, Monfieur Candidius a Clergyman lived there, and has published an Account of the Island, which we shall Abstract.

FORMOSA is a large Island of oblong form, seated in 22 Deg. Lat. 130 Leagues round, says he, but others represent it larger, Nieuboff says 'tis 125 Leagues long, but not proportionably broad, and Kao says 'tis 500 Miles in Circumference. The North part of it which lyes in 25 and half Lat. is distant from the Coast of Fokien not above 20 Leagues. The Country abounds in Cattle, Fish and Deer, whose Furr is one of their chief Commodities for Trade. The Land is Fertile but not much Cultivated, it produces plenty of Rice, as also Ginger, Sugar, and Fruits of many kinds unknown to us. And 'tis thought there are Mines of Gold and Silver in the Mountains. The Country is very populous, full of large Villages, but no City or great Town: nor is there any King or Superiour Person in Government, every Village managing it self as wisely as it can, and is almost constantly at War with its Neighbours. The Inhabitants at least those along the Coast that were known to the Dutch, are tall and strong limbed, of a dark brown Complexion; the Women are of low Stature, and go Clad, whereas the Men are mostly Naked. Some of the Clans of them appear Wild and Barbarous, others are good Natured, Faithful and Industrious. The Women Till the Ground, sow the Rice, and plant Ginger, Sugar and Fruits. And the Men employ themselves in Hunting and Fighting in their frequent Wars. The only shew of Government they have amongst them, is a Council in each Village of twelve Men chosen Annually, who decide Differences and exercise some Authority, but in the Main every Man does himself Justice, without appealing to a Judge. Their Religious Offices are exercised by Women, the Priesthood being held by that Sex. Their Religion, Manners, and Customs are as rude as one can think, our Author has spoken of them large enough already, but they are too mean and too tedious to be related here.

Nieuboff whom we have so often mentioned, in his many Voyages in Service of the Company, was once at Formosa, at the same time that Koxinga was about to Attack it. We shall therefore borrow a little from him both for proof and further information. Formosa is full of Hills intermixed with fertile Valleys, which are watered by many Rivers, and produce much Grass and Corn, here is plenty of Sugar which is exported, and the European kinds planted by the Dutch thrive well, as abundance of Indian Fruits, and Rice in great plenty. Cattle of all sorts and Stags are plenty, and in the Woods are found Tygers, Bears and other wild Beasts. Here is also wild Fowl of various kinds, and 'tis supposed there are Mines of Gold and Silver in the Mountains, 'tis known they are full of Brimstone, and the Subterranean Fire causes many Earthquakes. The Island is destitute of Harbours, and hath only Roads between small Islands for the Ships to Anchor in. As to the People and their Manners, he gives much the same account as Candidius.

This was the State of the Place when Koxinga with a numerous Fleet and large Army came over and Landed there. The Dutch were at that time very Potent, having driven away the Spaniards, who from the Philippine Islands, had during the Troubles of Ctina, planted themselves on the Island. And therefore thought themselves able to resist Koxinga, but he so furiously attacked Tsjouan both by Sea and Land, that although they defended themselves well, he proved too powerful, and drove them out. This happened in the Year 1659. Koxinga afterwards, upon occasion of three Ships freighted with Silver, which were carryed by Treachery to the Emperor, instead of being brought to Tsjouan as he ordered, raised a mighty Army and Fleet, and sailed to Nankin, which Potent City he Besieged and had near taken; but by a Revel on his Birth-day, he gave the Besieged an opportunity of falling upon his Drunken Army, and cut it all off: With the grief hereof he Dyed, and was succeeded by his Son. The Emperor following his Blow, set out a great Fleet to take Tsjouan, but the young Prince had the good Fortune to Defeat them for that time; yet after another Years War, was forced to Submit: and was afterwards for his Virtue and Bravery sake, favoured by the Emperor with a Present of the Island, whereof he remained King under Homage to the Emperor, in the Year 1682.

We have now surveyed all the Provinces of China, except Leatung, which because it lyes beyond the great Wall, our Journey round did not admit us to take in. We shall therefore speak of it now; and thence take a Survey of the Island Corea, and speak a word of the Land of Jesso, and so pass on to Japon.

LEAOTUM or Leatung, is a Province of less extent than those we have passed through, extending hardly 150 Miles either way, it lyes beyond the great Wall, which is its Boundary on the West, as the narrow Arm of the Sea which divides it from Corea on the East, the Mountains of Great Tartary on the North, and the Cang-Sea or Gulph of Pekim on the South. It is seated between the 39 and 42 Deg. of Latit. and is a fine fruitful Land, says Kao, producing, besides all necessaries for Life, the famous Medicinal Root Ginseng or Jinseng, which is reckoned a most Sovereign Remedy for recovering Decayed Strength. Here are but 12 Cities great and small, whereof Xinyam is the Capital, Ningyuen and Kincheu the next of Note. Father Verbiest who travelled over this Province in the Emperors Train, tells us that the Land is uneven, being encumbered with Mountains, and that the Towns which were formerly very Numerous are almost all destroyed, having never recovered the ravage of the War at the Revolution. The Capital Xinyam is a City very fair and pretty intire, but its ancient Palace is in Ruines. This City by his Observation lyes in 41 Deg. 56 Min. Latit. and the Magnetick Needle hath no Declination there.

The Kingdom of COREA called Tiocencouk by the Inhabitants, is a Peninsula, or as the new Maps shew us an Island, having on the West, the Province of Leatung and the Gulph of Nanking; on the East and South, by the Sea of China; and on the North, by Niuche a Kingdom of Tartary: It is a very fruitful Country, where the Mountains produce Gold and Silver, the Marshes Rice, and the Sea Pearls. The Inhabitants are governed by their own Prince, under the Protection of the Emperor, and Trade only with the Chineses and Japoneses. The most remarkable Towns of Corea, are Pingan; Kimki, the Metropolis of the Kingdom; Hienking; Kingzan, on the Eastern Coast; and Givento in the South. The Island of Fumma, called Schufere by the Natives is likewise Subject to the Dominion of the King of Corea, being distant 12 Leagues from thence to the South; its Capital Town is Moggan or Mocze, the Seat of the Governour.

The Land of J E S S O.

THE Land of Jesso, Jeso, Eso or Yesso, is situate over against the Eastern part of Tartary, from which it is separated by a considerable Straight of the same Name.

The Coasts of this Country have been at several times discovered on the West and East, and more especially on the South by the Portuguese and Dutch. But they have not been able to Discover whether it be an Island or Continent. 'Tis known that a Sea flows between it and Tartary on the South-West, but whether more to the Northward, it may not be joined is unknown. In Sailing on its South-Coast to the Westward, they have found no end of the Land, and therefore 'tis conjectured that it extends as far as America: where the Straight of Anian, on the North of California, is supposed to be made by the West Coast of this Land. Again, others contradict this, but say that it is joyned to the North part of Japon. 'Tis true, the extream Northern part of Japon, is very little known by even the Japoneses themselves, but the distance of that part of Jesso that is known (being as Maffeus writes, 300 Leagues from Meaco) is too great to be joined to Japon, and yet never known to be so. The Dutch Maps therefore make a broad Sea of at least two Degrees between the North Coast of Japon, and the Land of Jesso.

Of the Nature of this Country, we are told by Francis Caron (a Dutchman who lived long in Japon) from the Information of the Japoneses, who have often penetrated far into it, but could never find the end.

The Land is much incumbered with Mountains and Craggy Rocks, and the Soil Uncultivated and little Inhabited, and the Country only valuable for the rich Furrs and Skins, whereof very precious ones are brought thence. The Inhabitants are a wild People, their Bodies all over Hairy, and their Beards very long; and in Manners more like Beasts than Men.

Lud. Frojus, a Jesuit who lived in Japon, writes of them thus. On the North of Japon, there lyes a very large Country of Savage Men. Their Bodies are Hairy, their Beards very large, and their Mustacho's so long, that they must hold them aside when they Drink. They Cloath themselves with the Skins of wild Beasts. They pay a Veneration to Heaven, but have no Sacred Rites. They are furious in War, and a Terrour to the Japoneses. Being Wounded in War, they wash the Part in Salt Water, which is all the Remedy they use. They are great Lovers of Wine, and use the Women in common. As to their Food we are not told.

They find means to get over Sea sometimes, to come to Aquita, the most Northern City of Japon, on Account of Trade. And the Inhabitants of Aquita go thither sometimes; this however but very seldom, for fear of their Brutality. Between both, 'tis certain, that a Trade is carryed on, and the rich Furrs of Jesso are used in Japon, and so much valued, that the Emperor forbids all other Nations Trading hither. And he reckons Jesso into the number of the Countries he is Lord of.

BETWEEN the Coast of Tartary and that of Jesso, lyes an Island discovered by the Dutch, called STATEN ISLAND, of about 20 Leagues in length, but not considerable.

On the East between it and Jesso, lyes the Straight called De Vries Straight.

JAPON.

J A P O N.

JAPON is the most Eastern part of Asia, and the Land the most remote from us in all this Hemisphere, and consequently the place where the Rising Sun is first seen; And being near 130 Degrees East from us, they have the Morning and Mid-Day, at least eight hours before us. You are not to imagine this Country to be a Continent or Main-Land, nor even but one Island, for it consists of divers Islands, which bear the general Name of Japon; and lye extended from the 30th to the 38th Deg. of Longitude, and from the 147 Deg. to the 162 Deg. of Latitude. The most Western Coast being 100 Leagues distant from Nimpo on the East Coast of China, and the most Southern 350 Leagues from the North Coast of the Phillipine Islands. Although it be true, that the Empire of Japon consists of divers Islands, yet one called Japon proper, or otherwise Nippon, is by much the largest and most considerable, as extending from South-West to North-East above 600 Miles, and in breadth in some parts 150, in others 100 Miles. Whereas Cicoco, which is the next in bigness, has not a fourth part of that Dimension, and Ximo or Fensa the next, not a Moyer of that.

In Situation, these Islands possess the 5th and 6th Climates, and their longest Day is from 14 to 15 Hours. And therefore might be expected to exceed in Heat, but we are told by Travellers, that the Winters are excessive Cold, through the vast quantity of Snow which there usually falls: together with great Rains and bleak Winds. The Soil was represented to be but Poor, by some of the Jesuits living there, yet it is certain, that it produces Rice of the whitest and cleanest sort, in so great Plenty, that vast quantities are Annually exported thence by the Dutch. And Japon hath often furnished the Phillipine Islands with Bread-Corn. The Dutch in general declare, that the Land is reasonably Fruitful, and that the Country abounds with Men and Cattle. Francis Caron a Dutchman (who lived many Years here, and has Published an Account of this Countrey, whence we chiefly Collect what we shall say of it) tells us, that Japon affords all things that are necessary to sustain Life; and Haguer his Annotator adds, that no Region in India, enjoys a more Temperate and Healthy Air, a better Fertility, nor exceeds it in production of Silver. Here are many Mountains, whereon there is plenty of tall Grass, and many Herbs and Flowers. Two of the Mountains are especially notable for their height, whereof one casts forth Flames.

There is a large Lake abounding with Fish, at about 13 Miles distance from Meaco, which extends 90 Miles in length, and 21 in breadth; it is composed of the Confluence of many small Rivers, and has an out-let in the South-West, which in a good large River, passes by the City Meaco, and after a winding Course of about 20 Leagues, falls into a Bay of the Ocean. There are several Rivers in Nippon, and some few in the other Islands, but none of them are of any long course, nor at all remarkable.

Their Trees either for Beauty or Fruit are not unlike ours; but the Cedars are the most plenty, and those grow exceeding high.

Of Animals, there are all the kinds that are seen in Europe, as Oxen, Hogs, Hares, Conies, Deer, wild Boars, Bears, Dogs, Cats, and of Horses an incredible plenty. For Birds, they have Cranes, Swans, Geese, Ducks, Pheasants, Pidgeons, Hens, Hawks, Falcons, &c. They have some Silk Worms, but know not how to gather the Silk.

But the principal Products of Japon, are Metals, as Gold, Silver, Copper, Iron, Tin and Lead, which are found here in great abundance. Of Silver especially, a quantity exceeding all the rest, of Gold not a little, which the many gilded Roofs of the Emperour and Noblemens Palaces, as well without side as within, is a sufficient Demonstration of. The Land also yields some precious Stones, and the Seas much red Coral, and some Pearls.

Of the Inhabitants.

According to Tradition, Japon was first Peopled from China, which is most probable, by reason of the Neighbourhood of that Continent. But whether it be true, that the first Inhabitants were such only as were Banished from China, for a Conspiracy against the King, as common Tradition tells, is uncertain. The Japoneses are opposite to the Chinese in all their common Manners and Customs, which should contradict the Assertion, that they proceed from them; but to that 'tis answered, that in regard they removed their Habitation on a Criminal Account, they studiously avoided their old Manners, and in hatred to that Country which had expelled them, took up new ones directly contrary. The time of this Migration, is supposed to have been about Anno Dom. 1000. ever since which, it has been governed by one Supream Monarch, under whom are divers petty Kings, Princes and Lords, who under him govern the Provinces.

This

This Monarch is an Absolute Prince over all his Subjects, the petty Kings not excepted, whom he can Dethrone and Punish as he pleases. And he is obeyed by his Subjects with the most Absolute Submission, for he is esteemed by them as a sort of God, and therefore obeyed on a Religious, as well as civil Account. And so strict has been their Loyalty, that Travellers tell us, that under the Reigns of the Dayro's; there never happened any Rebellion, but the first Seditions were looked upon with Horrour, and esteemed a Crime against God. He never sets his Foot to the Ground, the Sun is not permitted to shine on him, nor the Wind to blow upon him. From the beginning of this Monarchy to Anno Dom. 1500. the Succession from Father to Son continued in the same Family, named Dayro. But soon after Civil Wars began, which lasted some Years, and brought the whole Country into miserable Confusion. The Petty-Kings and Lords were all engaged against one another in furious Wars, and gave opportunity to one Tackyo, a Man of low Degree and obscure Birth, to raise himself to the highest power. This Man who was but a common Soldier, but of a bold and Courageous Nature, began with 50 Followers only, but Fortune assisting him, his Numbers encreased; and with such Celebrity and Success he went on, that in three Years time, he conquered all the contending Princes, took all the Castles and strong Cities, and raised himself to the Imperial Dignity. Dayro, which was the Family Name of the Emperor, and that which all the preceding Casars bore, was allowed to retain the Name and Dignity of Emperor; but Taycko took upon him the Power, and exercised the Government, from Anno Dom. 1517. for many Years, with great Wisdom and Power; but his Son being left a Minor, under the Ward of a certain Nobleman, was cut off soon after he came to Age. At this time the Government is vested in a new Race of Princes, while the Successor of Dayro retains only the show of Majesty, and lives in Splendor, his Person being esteemed so Sacred, that the Ruling Emperor dares not insult him. The Heir of this Family is High-Priest, and is honoured with a Dignity even equal to the Roman Pontiff. The Emperor is obliged to visit him once in three or four Years at farthest, and offer to him Presents and Reverence.

In the State, there was formerly a great Officer called Cubey, who was Supreme under the Emperor, and in Power such as the Grand Visier in Turkey, but that Office is now suppressed, and four of the Prime Nobility are appointed by the King to Administer the Government under him. As the Number of the Princes and Noblemen are great, there requires the wisest Conduct to keep them in Obedience. The Method the Emperor takes is thus. 1. All the Princes are obliged to be at Court one half of the Year, to which purpose they have Houses at Yedo, which is the Royal Seat: there the Lords from the different Parts reside in turns, and pay their Devoirs to the Emperor. 2. The eldest Sons of all the Prime Nobility are bred up at Court, and reside there till the Emperor dismisses or otherwise employs them. 3. He employs Spies in all the Provinces, who give him accounts of all Transactions. And, 4. He obliges all the Noblemen to take Oaths of Fidelity every Year.

And moreover to keep the common People from Sedition, he employs vast numbers of them, even 100000 at a time in Publick Works, such as building Castles, making Roads, Dikes or the like. Cities and great Towns are divided into small Wards, which are shut up every Night, so that the Inhabitants of one Ward can have no intercourse with those of another, and therefore no Riots can happen, or if any be begun, they easily are suppressed: for each Ward has a Magistrate set over it by the Emperor.

This Prince is Addressed to with utmost Reverence, and Attended by a vast Number of Noblemen and Servants. When he goes Abroad, besides Nobility and their Sons, and the chief Officers of the Court, whereof a great Train always accompany him; his Guard consists of 5 or 6 thousand Soldiers. His Palaces are many and Pompous, especially that at Yedo. His Revenue must needs be vastly great, since the Annual Pensions paid to the Governours of Provinces, and the Emperors other Annual Expences, according to the List set forth by Caron, and reduced to Dutch Guilders, amounts to 283 Millions, which is near 28 Millions of Sterling. These Pensions are paid, some in Gold, some in Silver, others in Copper, Iron, Lead, Tin, Rice, or other products of the respective Provinces. Of these Governours, twenty one bear the Title of Kings. Four are Dukes. Six Princes. Seventeen Barons. And Forty one Lords. The Emperors Council consists of Twenty eight of these, whereof four have the Title of Kings. Besides these Governours, there are a great Number of Noblemen of a lower Rank.

The Army which the Emperor keeps in constant Pay, is 100000 Foot and 20000 Horse. But in War, the Governours of Provinces are obliged to bring into the Field each a certain number of Troops, according to the Pension he receives; which in all Amount to 368000 Foot and 38000 Horse. They carry Fire Arms as well as Bow and Arrows; and are also furnished with Javelins and Scymitars. And moreover the Horse wear Cuirasses, and the Foot Helmets. By reason of the plenty of Mines in Japon, the Refining Metals is practised with Art, whence it comes to pass, that their Steel is excellent, and therefore their Arms, as Scymitars, Daggers, &c. are found to exceed all others, and therefore much Coveted by all the neighbouring Nations, but forbid to be exported.

The TEMPER of the People is thus represented by Travellers. They are careful in the Education of their Children, and instil into their minds a Love of Glory and Virtue. They are Fearless in Dangers, contemn Death, and bear the Inclemencies of Weather, Heat and Cold, Wet and Dry with Patience, and contrary to all other Orientals, sustain Watchings and such like Labours incredibly.

They enjoy themselves in Pleasures as much as any Body, but in want of them are not Discontented. They are not covetous after much Wealth, contenting themselves with a Competency. They are Honourable in Fidelity, and avoid all Detraction.

They

They are in general (says Maffius) Wise, Acute and Ingenious, surpassing not only the Orientals, but even Europeans in Docility, as the Jesuits experienced in their easy learning Latin and the Liberal Sciences. They observe a Decorum in their common Speech, and avoid all loose, light or vain Prating. But on the other side, they are apt to Debauch in Pleasures, and not only indulge themselves in Fornication, but commit Sodomy too without Remorse. Robbery upon the High-way, and Piracy at Sea is frequent. And when in War a Town is taken, they destroy it with Fire and Sword, without any distinction or respect. In other instances, they are also too much addicted to Cruelty; and in Discontent, are apt to lay violent hands on themselves. In Marriage, they take as many Wives as they can keep, but the first is Supreme, and her Children the Heirs. Lands are Hereditary, and the Fathers Estate is possessed by the Son, and not seized by the Emperor as in Indie.

The Wives are very Chast and faithful to their Husbands, and the Children very obedient and respectful to their Parents. But Brothel Houses are Publicly kept for those that have no Wives, and the very Bonzi's themselves will be guilty of Sodomy.

In Punishments the Government is very Severe. Almost every Crime is punished with Death, except the Criminal be a King or Prince. Cheating at Play, or Falsifying to a Magistrate, and such sort of Faults do commonly incur Death. Theft, though but of a Penny, and a stroke with a Sword, even though the Scabbard be on, also forfeits Life. Every Lord and Father of a Family, some lower Ranks excepted, have power over their Subjects and Vassals to Life and Limbs. Prisons are not used here, the Criminal being immediately dispatched. For small Transgressions a pecuniary Mult satisfies. But in atrocious Crimes, such as violating the Emperors Edicts, cheating him in his Finances, Counterfeiting the Coin, ill Administration in Magistracy, setting a House on Fire, Deflowring a married Woman or Maid if violently, &c. Not only the Criminal, but even his Father, Sons, and Brothers are all put to Death. Which is performed upon them all at the same time, although they dwell at 2 or 300 Miles distance, for the time wherein Messengers may arrive at every place being Calculated, the Criminal is Reprieved so long, and then at the same Mid-Day the several Executions are made. Thus, says Caron, I knew an instance, wherein a Nobleman for exacting too much Tribute upon the Countrymen within his Government suffered Death, together with three Brothers, whereof one lived 240 Miles off, an Uncle who dwelt still further off, three Sons, two whereof were also far off, and a Nephew in the same Circumstance. All these innocent Persons, at various distant parts of the Empire, were all executed at once, by ripping up their Bowels, which is the manner of Death in such cases. For Theft, they Crucifie with the Head downwards. In the case of Consanguineous Punishments, the Female Relations are kinder treated, being only sold into slavery for a time. The Kings and Princes are rarely put to Death, but in lieu of it, are banished to some barren Island to spend their Days in Misery.

Their Cloathing is of Silk, Woollen Cloath being unknown to them, and consists of a long Coat, 2 short Vest, and within Doors a Mantle, which (tis odd) they put off when they go abroad. Their Heads are always bare, notwithstanding that the Hair be shorn, for they wear none but a Lock in their Pole: but generally have Umbrello's carried over their Heads. Both gentle and simple wear Swords, or Daggers at least, and have commonly a Fann in their Hands. Their Garments are of various Colours, but contrary to the rest of the World, black is the Colour of Joy, and therefore used at Festivals, and white their Mourning Weed. Their contrariety in Customs to the rest of the World, is a matter of common Observation; besides these above mentioned, 'tis noted of them that they Affect to have black Teeth and Nails; they sit down instead of rising when a Superiour approaches, and put off their shoes in Salutation, and instead of bowing, erect their Bodies the more stiffly when they Salute.

In the Liberal Sciences they exceed all other Orientals, and are not inferiour to the Chineses. The Bonzi's or Doctors study Philosophy, Mathematicks, &c. as well as their own Theology, which they teach in Academies established for the study of the Sciences. Whereof one at Frenajam, about 9 Miles distant from Meaco, and another at Facusangin, are reckoned the principal. Although their Language be different, the Characters they use in writing are the same with the Chinese, and with them too they write, not in Lines but in Columns, beginning at the top go down to the bottom of the Paper.

Their Food is chiefly Rice, whereof as we have said they have the whitest in the World, this they Cook in various manners, but eat very little Flesh. As for Oxen, Sheep, Hogs, Poultry and the like, they never eat, nor kill, although their number abound; nay, 'tis even capital to kill an Ox: what Flesh they do Eat is that of wild Beasts and chiefly Venison. Fish they scruple not, and have sufficient quantities of it. Their other Food is Herbs and Fruits, whereof they eat great quantity. In their Kitching and Dining-Room, they are like the Chinese, extream cleanly, and like them too, feed themselves with two little Sticks, instead of Forks, with which they take up the smallest Grain, and have never occasion to touch the Food, and consequently need no Napkins, which are not in use there.

For Drink; Water is the common use, which it seems they warm a little; they know not the use of Wine or Ale, but make a Decoction of Rice, with Sugar and Honey, which is drank in Debauch and Fuddles them. The Gentry Regale in Tea, which is much esteemed.

The RELIGION of Japon is Etènie, but with no Affinity to that of any other Countrey. They Worship the Sun, the Moon, and many other Deities which themselves have invented, and set up Idols to in Sumptuous Temples. The two principal Gods which they call upon, are named Xaca and Amida, to these they make Prayers on all occasions, and use their Names as we do Gods, as Amida bless us. Amida, send us health. Xaca, Guard us, &c.

They

They have no History of the Creation, nor indeed pretend at all to speak to it, but Date the Ages of their Deities many thousand Years ago. They generally believe the Immortality of the Soul, and though they pretend not to Describe the State of the Blessed, they believe the Wicked will be punished by Devils, and therefore paint the Devil in their Temples in as horrid a Manner as we do, to deter Men from Sin. They generally believe the Indian Doctrine of Transmigration of Souls, which is the Reason they Eat no Creature that has been killed. They have rich Monasteries wherein Bonzi's live in Retirement and Celibacy all their Lives. There are divers Sects of Religions, but they all agree in the Worship of Amida and Naca, and in these five Precepts; viz. 1. Not to kill, or eat any Creature that has been killed. 2. Not to Steal. 3. Not to commit Adultery. 4. Not to Lye. And 5. To abstain from Wine. The several Sectaries Live together Friendly, and never quarrel about Religion, although each is so very obstinate in his Opinion, that on occasion he would Dye for it.

They have many Ceremonies agreeable to those of the Romish Church, which might contribute to the Facility the Jesuits found in introducing Christianity here: That Work the Portuguese commenced about the middle of the XVIth Century, and having made some Converts in the chief Cities, Father Xavier in Anno Domini, 1552. sent from India three Fathers which were soon after followed by others, and the Religion was so far propagated, that in Ningafack alone, there were not less than 40000 Christians, when the Persecution began, and moreover Chappels were erected all over the Countrey at reasonable distances, and innumerable were the Converts which the 70 Years that Christianity flourished here produced. But in the height of their Felicity, when even three Kings and many Noblemen as well as lower Degrees had received Baptism: a sudden order came from the Emperor that then Reigned, (named Combo or Combosamma) in the end of the Year 1622. or beginning of 1623. to extirpate Christianity throughout all the Provinces. Which was immediately executed, and for three Years together so violent a Persecution was carryed on, that many thousands suffered Martyrdom. And in effect Christianity was perfectly Eradicated, insomuch, that although of all the Heathen Countries, Christianity the soonest gained Footing, and spread the fastest here, it is now so much altered, that of all Heathen Countries where Christianity has ever been Preached, this is the most destitute of Christians. And so jealous they are, that no Europeans whatsoever but the Dutch are permitted to Land there. These indeed from the profitable Trade they Negotiate, by furnishing the Japnese with Silk-Stuffs, Calicoes, Raw-Silk, Skins, Hemp, Linnen, Cloaths, Red Wool, Garments, Quick-Silver, Sugar, Spices, Porcelain, Ivory, Crabs-Eyes, Lacca, &c. are permitted to Trade here, but dare not make the least shew of Religion, not even so much as to say Grace to Meat. And in regard that they condemn the Pictures, Crosses, Rosaries and other Superstitions of the Jesuits, and trample on what those knelt to, the Japonese are content to take their Answer; That they are Dutchmen, and believe them not Christians.

Formerly the Inhabitants of Japan and China had great intercourse and TRADE together, and many of each lived in the other Nation: but about the beginning of the last Century, the Japoneses committing some Insolencies in China gave an occasion to that Emperor to Banish them entirely, and forbid his own Subjects to go to Japan. And after that Tajouwan in Formosa was made the Staple of Trade by mutual Agreement of both Nations. The Japoneses also made great Traffick in Siam, Tonquin and other Parts. But latterly, since the expulsion of the Christians, the Emperor forbids his Subjects to go abroad without especial License. Either because he fears they will become Christians by conversing with them in other Countries, or because they are apt to be Rude in foreign Parts, or because they used to carry out Arms which we have told you Japan affords of excellent Temperament, or for all these Reasons as some judge, their Navigation is much restrained, and the Commodities of Siam, Tonquin and the Islands are brought thither by the Natives of those Countries and the Dutch.

The first Europeans that Traded to Japan were the Portuguese, who found the way thither in the Year 1542. Afterwards the Spaniards from the Phillipine Islands made profitable Voyages thither. Soon after the Year 1600. the English had a Trade there; And lastly the Dutch. These have been able to keep their Station, by complying, as we have said so far in making no shew of Religion, as to be esteemed not Christians. But they are obliged to deliver up their Guns, and all sorts of Offensive Arms, and even the Rudders of their Ships to the Emperors Commissaries, as soon as they arrive, which are restored when they return. This Trade has been exceeding profitable to the Dutch, even to the Sum of 150000 Pounds Sterling per Annum, but it is diminished one half, since the Imprudence they were guilty of in the Year 1640. when having obtained leave to build a Magazine for their Wares, they erected so strong and beautiful a Building, that the Emperor made them pull it down again the next Year, alledging it exceeded any of his own Castles. And ever since, the Japoneses have looked upon the Dutch with an evil Eye, abated the prices of their Goods, and raised their own prices at pleasure. And instead of their fine Building, they have been forced to accept of an old Portuguese Church, which was granted to them for their Warehouse in the small Island Kisma near Nangasack, which is their chief Staple of Trade.

The Commodities of Japan for Exportation, are as we have said Silver, some small quantity of Steel, and divers other Metals, Coral, Pearl and some Jewels, together with Rice. What the Dutch vend, there we have mentioned above and need not repeat. It must be noted, that no Custom or Tax is paid on Goods exported or imported.

The BUILDINGS in Japan are generally of Wood and of mean Fabrick, not but that there are some of Stone, and elegantly adorned. The Temples are Magnificent, and the Monasteries of Bonzi's large and well built. There is plenty of Wood both for Building and Fuel, for which Reason, as well as because the Land is subject to Earthquakes, the common People have no other but low wooden Houses. This renders the Towns very

Subject to Fire, which has several times made vast Devastations. They have however always an Apartment of Stone or Earth separate from the rest of the House, and is thereby preserved from the Fire: here they place their richest moveables, and lock up their choicest Wares in Chests. And the Timber building, is their Chamber, Dining-Room, and place of bestowing their Goods of smaller value. The Floor of the Rooms is a Pavement covered with Mats, and always kept very clean: upon these Mats they sit with their Legs under them as other Orientals, and with some improvement make them their Beds too. The Noblemens Houses are divided into two distinct Parts, whereof one is occupied by the Women, wherein they live Recluse, and the other possessed by the Men, and never looked into by the Women. Before the Houses of the Great Men, there is a Court, out of which they descend a few steps into the Garden, which is well provided with green Trees and Flowers, Terrasses and Mounts; and makes a goodly shew from the very Porch, to which there is always a full Visto through the House. The Walls of the Chambers are hung with Pictures or painted Paper, which is very nearly put together; and the Partitions are made to open, or even to be removed, in such manner, that out of three or four small Rooms a large Hall may be occasionally made. The Furniture is not very costly, nor their Cabinets beset with Jewels or Plate. Porcelain Vessels, whereof they have some of great Magnitude and Fineness, Pictures and fine Swords are the chief Ornaments of their Apartments: except the Furniture for Tea-Drinking which they choose to have of the richest Materials they can afford. The Stairs to the upper Apartments are made of Cedar, with curious Art and neatness; and kept so clean, that no Body will tread on them with their Shoes on.

The Island NIPHON or JAPON is the Main part of this Empire, being in Extent as we have said, vastly larger than the other Islands, and reckoned to be 1500 Miles in Compass. It is divided into five great Parts, which are subdivided into 55 distinct Governments or Provinces. The chief Cities in it are,

Meaco, which is the Metropolis of the whole Empire, seated near the middle of the South Coast, on a River which issuing from the great Lake, falls into a Bay of the Ocean. It consists of two Parts, the Upper and the Lower Town, and hath been formerly more considerable than at present, for since the Sceptre hath been wrested from the hands of the Deyo's, the Court is no longer kept here; and withal, in the Civil Wars of Nabunanga, the last Cubey, in the Year 1571. he set this City on Fire, and burnt 9000 Houses, which though rebuilt, are not so beautiful as before. The Jesuits write that it contains an hundred thousand Houses, and that it had formerly no less than 180 thousand. The Walls are of vast extent, and the City and Suburbs have been reckoned 20 Miles long and 9 broad. The Heir of the Deyo Family resides here, and keeps a noble Court, being as we have said Sovereign Pontiff, very much honoured by the People, and visited by the Emperor himself, every three or four Years.

Saccsi, seated also on the South Coast on the Bay of Meaco, is a most Wealthy and Populous City: on the West its Walls are washed by the Sea, and on all the other sides by a deep Ditch always full of Water, which renders it strong and free from external Assaults, and the method of shutting up the Wards or Streets in all the Cities as we have said, renders it safe from intestine Feuds, and therefore is resorted to by Foreigners on account of Trade.

Jedo or Tedo, seated above 300 Miles more to the Eastward, on a Bay of the Ocean to which it gives Name, may be now reckoned the chief City, because it is the place where the Emperor resides. The Castle or Palace is Magnificent and Stately: it is surrounded with three several Ditches and Walls beyond one another, with large Plains between. The Water is conveyed out of one Ditch into the other, by so many Pipes under ground, that they are all equally full. There are eight or nine Gates, which are not over against one another, but in Angular form, so that they turn often to the right and left, before they arrive at the inner Court. Between every two Gates, there is first a large Plain, then an Ascent by Stone steps into Works with high Walls, then other void places, where thousands of Soldiers may be ranged in Battalia on occasion. All which render it sufficiently strong. The inner Court which is the Royal Apartment, consists of many large spacious Lodgings, Halls and Offices for the Emperor and his Wives, furnished with Groves, Canals, Fish-ponds and other conveniences, in the most exquisite manner. The Lodgings and Halls are adorned with the most precious Furniture and Tapestries of Silks mixed with Gold and Silver very splendidly. In the Plain before this Palace, there is a Theatre, wherein Comedies and Plays are Acted.

In the Circuit next without, the Emperors kindred and chief Councillors have their Palaces. In the third Circuit which is the first in entering, the Kings and Princes live in noble and splendid Houses covered with Gold. Beyond this third Circuit are seen the Houses of the Peers, and Noblemen of lower Degree which are also richly adorned, and make the Castle at a distance appear like a Mountain of Gold. The Noblemen of the lower as well as higher order strive to outdo one another in the Splendor of their Houses, and thereby are esteemed to shew the greater respect to the Emperor.

In these Houses the Heirs of the Noblemen, whom as we have told you are kept at Court, and the Princes who in their turns as we have said, are to wait at Court reside. These with their Attendants make a great Concourse of People, and render the City extream populous.

The Circuit of the Castle is about five English Miles, and the whole City may swell to double that. This Palace is not talked of in the Jesuits Letters, because it was not then built, being Founded by the Emperor Taikon who Reigned about Anno Dom. 1600.

The Emperor has many other Castles conveniently seated all over the Country, whereof that of Nicko is remarkable, on account of the many thousand Artificers, as Goldsmiths, Jewellers, Painters, Braziers, Smiths, &c. which are kept at Work on curious pieces at the Emperors expence.

Surunga the place where the Emperors eldest Son resides. Osacca an Imperial City. Sajoja, extolled by the Dutch Embassy as a most delightful place. And

Many

Many other considerable Cities, and innumerable Towns are seen here, the whole Island being exceeding Populous, but we have no particular accounts of them, and merely to Name them will signify little.

The second Island in Magnitude is SAYCOCK, otherwise called BONGO, CIKOKO or XIMO, which lyes at the South-West end of Nippon, divided on its North side by a very narrow Strait. It is reckoned 160 Leagues in compass, and is divided into nine Provinces. The chief Cities are Bongo the Capital. Nangasac built by the Portuguese, and afterwards possessed by the Dutch. Congoxuma, the place where the Portuguese first Landed.

XICOCO or CIKOKA, otherwise called TONSA or TOKOESY is the third Island in Magnitude: being 110 Leagues in Compass, and divided into four Provinces. It lyes on the East of Saycock, and on the South of Nippon, at a small distance from either, being divided by a narrow Channel. Its chief Cities are Nava, a City and Castle of beautiful Structure, the Houses whereof are Magnificent, and built in our manner with Glass Windows, which is a rarity in this Country. The Furniture of them is extream neat, and the Wainscoting of sweet smelling Cedar. In the Walls are engraved the Annals of ancient times, with Figures in void spaces, curiously adorned with Gold. Of the other chief Cities, which are Tonsa, Sumichi, Ivo, &c. I find nothing particular.

THERE are abundance of small Islands which lye dispersed round about the Coasts of these large ones. But nothing being mentioned by Travellers that deserves Transcribing; We shall here Close our account of Japon.

And thereby conclude the Description of ASIA, having we hope given our Reader a sufficient View of every part of it.

HAVING now passed through ASIA, and taken an exact view of the Countries of it, in as ample a manner as could be done with certainty and truth. We should now proceed to AFRICA, but the distance of that part of Africa we shall begin with, being so great, 'twill be unnatural to our Reader to turn his mind to it at once, and therefore to comply with our Travelling method, shall return back over Land, and by a short Recapitulation and mention of a few things which have not been spoke enough to; we will lead him to the MEDITERRANEAN-SEA, of which it will be also necessary to speak a little before we Land in Africa.

First therefore, to consider this Tract of Land in general, we may truly say, that Nature has been sufficiently Bountiful to it, and the Earth will abundantly repay the labour of the ingenious Planter. The Grains and Fruits here produced, being far more Delicious than those of Europe. But the Tyranny of the Governments so far discourages Industry, that it may be much more wonder'd there is so much work done, and so many Manufactures produced, than that a great part of the Land lies uncultivated. In Persia, China and Japon where Lands are Hereditary, we see exact Culture and admirable Plenty, which shews that it is not the natural Lazyness of the Orientals, but rather the precarious Property that makes their Grounds lye untill'd. The Reader cannot but have observed, that Persia, India, China, and all beyond Turkey, is very full of Inhabitants, and that among those Inhabitants, there is much a larger number of Ingenious and Industrious Men than there is of Rude and Lazy ones. That manual Arts are practis'd with much Perfection; and that Politeness of Manners is not wanting among them.

Different Customs, Food and way of living may very well be expected in Countries so far distant from us. We have been careful to note the Manners of every Nation, and the variety is thereby made familiar to our Reader. But that which ought especially to be spoken to, as most affecting Strangers has been omitted. I mean their ways of Travelling, and therefore shall speak a word of it here.

In China, the Voiture in general is good, the Stages regular, and the passage safe. All over India that convenience is wanting, and even in the Mogul's Country (which is the most regular part of it) the Travellers are obliged to furnish themselves with Provisions and Guards; for there are no Inns upon the Roads; and the Country is much infested with Rasbootes, who Prey upon Passengers. Neither are even the great Cities furnished with Caravanferays or great Inns, as in Persia and Turkey. In Persia, the Government secures the Roads; but in Turkey they are always infested with Robbers; these Herd in great Bodies, and are not to be aw'd but by a large Company. Wherefore no Man ventures to Travel but in a Caravan, that is to say, a large Troop of Men, oftentimes 5 or 600 who are all Armed, and an innumerable Train of Camels and other Cattle: These encamp a-Nights in the open Air, and keep Centinels on all sides. But perhaps it may please our Reader better to have it from the Travellers themselves who have been there, we shall therefore Transcribe a Paragraph from Tavernier.

'A Man (says he) cannot Travel in Asia as they do in Europe, nor at the same Hours or with the same Ease. There are no weekly Coaches or Waggon's from Town to Town, and besides, the Soil of the Countries is of several Natures, for you frequently meet with Lands untill'd, and Countries unpeopled, either through the badness of the Soil, or the sloth of the Inhabitants. There are vast Desarts to cross, which are very dangerous, both for want of Water, and by reason of the Roberies the Arabs daily commit in those places. The best Inns are the Tents which you carry with you, and your Hosts are your Servants, who get ready the Victuals you furnish your self with at the Towns you pass through, for there are no certain Stages or Inns upon the Road, at least in Turkey. In Persia, the Caravanferays or Inns are more frequent, here you may be furnished with Provisions for Money. In Turkey, the Country is full of Thieves who keep in Troops together, and way-lay the Merchants upon the Roads, and if they be not very well guarded, will not only Rob but Murder them. But in Persia, Passengers pay a certain Duty to the Governours of the Provinces, and the King obliges the Governours to secure the Roads, and repay the loss a Traveller sustains, wherefore it is not necessary to Travel with the Caravans there. In Travelling with the Caravan, says Father Avril, you must be on Horseback by break of Day, and Travel till Noon, or till you come to a convenient ent place for Water or Forage. There you tarry perhaps 2 Hours, and refresh your self with Food, Fruit, Coffee or what you have got. Then you mount again and Travel till Night, when they encamp in a kind of Enclosure or Entrenchment surrounded with Ropes, to which they tye the Horses. The Baggage being placed in the middle, every Body gets as near it as he can, and having taken his Supper lays himself to Rest under the Tent which he must bring with him. And by reason the Caravans are exposed to Robbers, there are always certain Persons appointed to Patrol continually in the Night time, and by Hallowing, give notice both to the Caravan and to the Enemy, that they are upon their Guard.

All the Baggage is carryed on the back of Camels, whereof there are ordinarily 5 or 600 in a Caravan. This Creature is extremely fitted by Nature to Travel in these Countries, for besides his Strength which enables him to carry a Load of 600 pound Weight, he lives with much less Food or Water than other Creatures. When the Caravan rests and the Camels are unloaded, the Drivers turn them loose into the Common to eat Furze, Thistles, and such sorry Food as the Ground affords, and when they come in at Night, as they regularly do, they give them small Balls of Dough made of Barley-Meal. They will ordinarily live without Drink eight or nine Days together. The Female goes eleven Months with young, and as soon as the Foal is come forth, the keepers lap the Legs under it, and keep it in a kneeling posture for 15 or 20 Days, whereby they habituate them from infancy to kneel, which they very obediently perform at any time, and thereby facilitate the laying on and taking off his Load. There are two sorts of them, namely one sort fit only for hot and dry Soils, and cannot Travel in wet dirty Countries; and another which is larger and capable of carrying a Burden of 1500 pound Weight, but cannot endure Heat. Mr. Tavernier says, they are so affected with Musick, as by it to be provoked to Travel on when weary, or to mend their pace at other times.

There runs a great Ridge of MOUNTAINS both ways quite cross Asia, that is to say, from West to East Mount TAURUS, which commences in Anatolia and runs forward to the Eastern Ocean, and is computed to contain in length, all its windings and turnings considered near upon 6000 Miles. Of one part of it, namely, Mount Caucasus we have spoken, when we treated of Mexgrelic, p. 59. to which we refer our Reader for a knowledge of the height and quality of this Mountain. The other Ridge is Mount IMAUS, which beginneth near the Shore of the Northern Ocean, and dividing Sythia into intra and extra Imaum, passes forward directly South between Persia and India, cutting Taurus in right Angles, and continues to Cape Cornet.

We shall trouble the Reader with no more remarks concerning Asia, what he can else desire to know is told him in the general Description of the several Regions, and having there also spoken of the Black-Sea, the Caspian-Sea and the Persian-Golfe. We have nothing to hinder us from proceeding to the Mediterranean-Sea, which parts Europe from Africa, whither we are next to pass.

The MEDITERRANEAN-SEA so called as being surrounded with Land on all sides except at the two Straights, that of Gibraltar on the West, which lets the Atlantick Ocean into this great Bay, and the Bosphorus on the East, which lets the Black or Euxine-Sea into it. It was named by the Ancients Hesperium Mare, Mare Magnum and Mare Inferum. And by the Spaniards at this Day 'tis called Mar de Levante.

The Situation of the Mediterranean-Sea, is between the 30 and 43 Deg. of Latit. having Europe on the North, and Africa on the South. In length it contains 709 Leagues. The Dutch Maps indeed represent it much longer, but if the Correction of Longit. be observed, this will be found the exact length. For the Straights Mouth is well known to lye 6 Deg. West from London. And by an Observation made there, Aleppo is known to lye 38 Deg. 45 Min. East from London, and Scanderon which is the Port to Aleppo is known to stand 60 Miles West from Aleppo: which leaves therefore 37 Deg. 45 Min. East, and 6 Deg. West that is 43 Deg. 45 Min. of Longit. for the full length of the Mediterranean-Sea. Degrees of Longit. in 35 D. Latit. are of the breadth of 49 Miles: which being computed, will appear to amount to 2127 Miles or 709 Leagues.

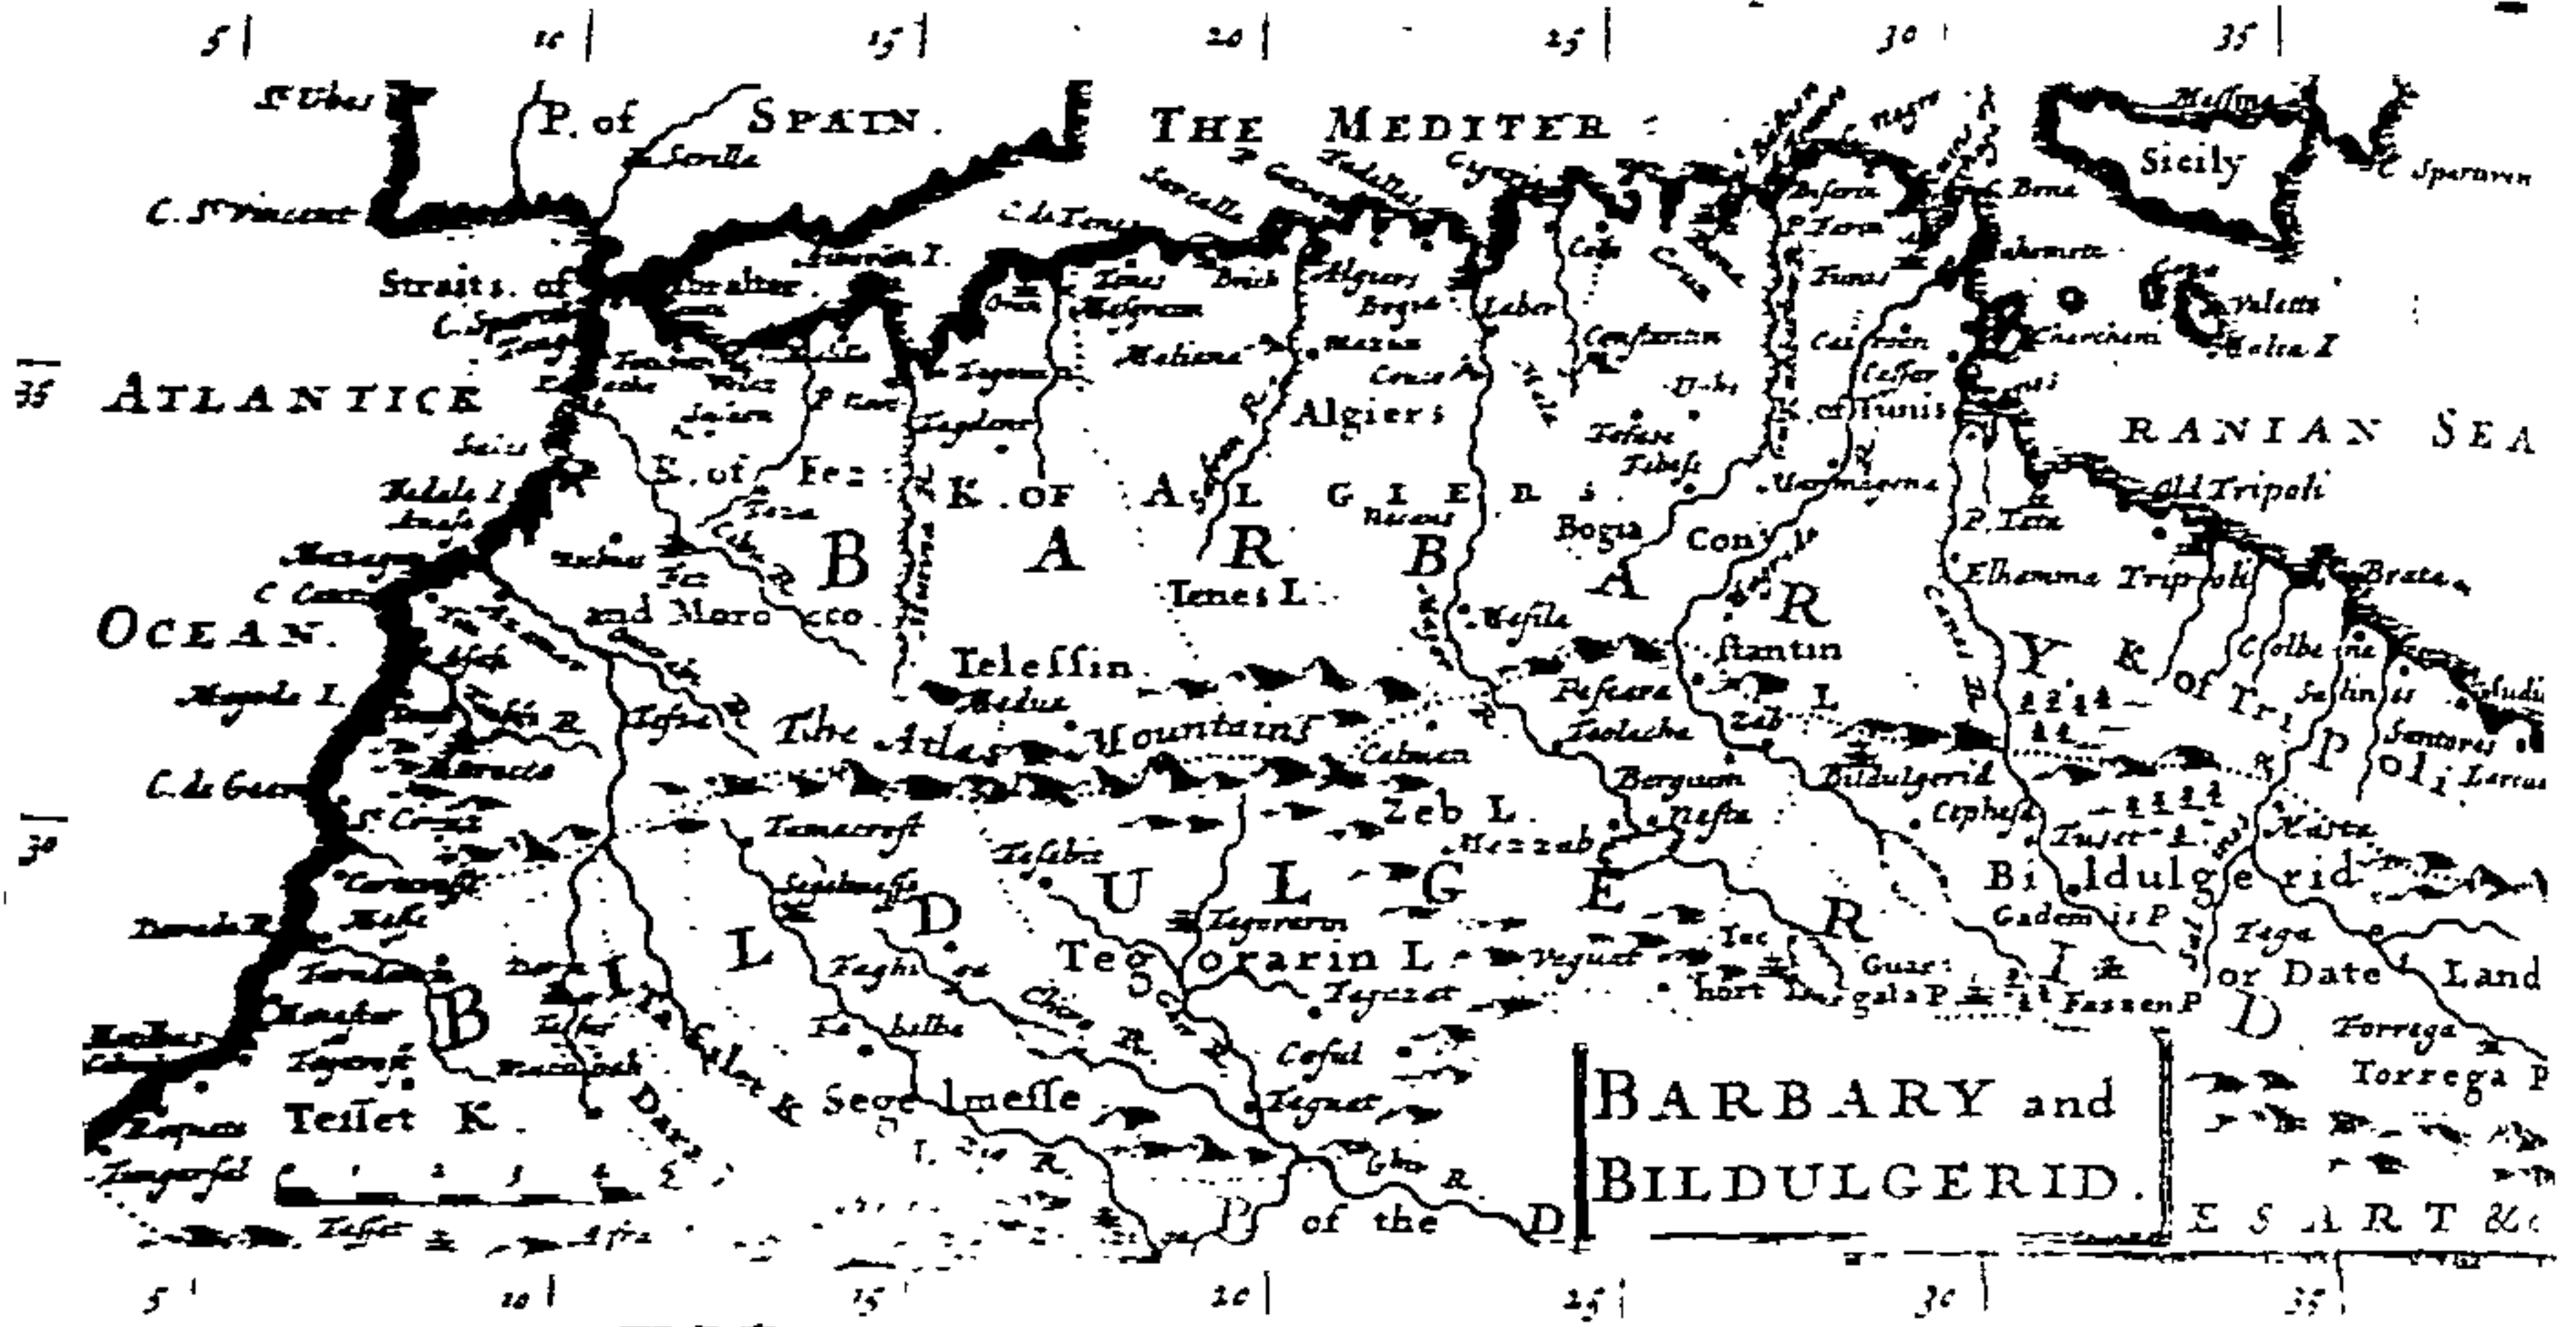

It is observable, that the Water always flows into the Mediterranean at the Strait of Gibraltar, out of the Atlantick Ocean, and also as constantly flows in at the Bosphorus from the Black-Sea. Captain Bolland, who made observation there tells us, that in 9 Years time that he lived at Tangier, he never saw it fail, that Ships in the middle of the Strait, not hindered by contrary Wind, are carryed into the Mediterranean by the Stream. And it is well known, that at Constantinople a strong Stream sets always in from the Black-Sea. What becomes of all this Water which is thus thrown into the Mediterranean, is a Question that is often asked, but not easily answered. Whether at the bottom the Stream runs out; or whether the Sun exhales Vapour enough to answer the influx, as Mr. Halley seems inclined to believe, is not easy to determine. It is also observable, that although in the middle of the Strait, there is a broad Stream that always sets in, yet on each side there is a Stream of a third part of that breadth, that Flows six Hours and Ebbs six Hours every Day. And that a narrower Stream along the shore on each side, Flows and Ebbs also in 12 Hours, but at directly contrary times than the other. So that on the 1st Day of the Moon, it is Flood at one a Clock and Ebb at seven, in the two Streams lying next to the middle Stream. And the same Day it is Flood at ten a Clock, and Ebb at four in the two narrow Streams next the shoar. Or rather it Flows at ten and Ebbs at four on the African shoar, and Flows at eleven a Clock, and Ebbs at five on the European shoar. As we are assured by the said Captain Bolland.

A

a Map of ZAARA.NEGROE-LAND.GUINEA &c. H. Mol

CHAP. I.

OF AFRICA in general.

AFRICK was the last of the three Parts into which the World was anciently divided, and still holds the third Place, by reason of its being known before America, though much inferior to it, either for Extent, or Wealth, and consequently to all the others in every respect, except only that it is larger than Europe. The greatest Part of it has ever continu'd in Obscurity, as being wholly unknown, and even believ'd not habitable in former Ages, and the present being little better acquainted with it, any farther than the Coasts. As much of it as lies along the Mediterranean Sea is fruitful in Corn, tho' subject to violent Heats, and has at all times been resorted to by Europeans and Asiatics. The Midland, once believ'd to be entirely desert and inaccessible on account of the scorching Sun lying over it, as being in the Torrid Zone, has been yet little visited by Travellers, for the same Reason, and no less for the Barbarity of its Inhabitants. The most Southern Parts, which extend to a more temperate Climate, are generally the Dwellings of a People so Savage that they may be said to have little more of Man besides the Shape and an uncouth sort of Language. Learning seems to be there altogether extinct, nor can that great Continent boast of any in former times, but that they call'd, The Wisdom of the Egyptians, confin'd to that single Kingdom, and some Literature convey'd into the Northern Coasts by the Romans, which all perish'd when that Country was over-run by the barbarous Vandals, and afterwards by the Arabs. Nor has that mighty Tract of Land been more fortunate in Warriors, only the Egyptian Kings and the Carthaginians having ever made such a Figure in the World; for the Moors, who conquer'd Spain and other Parts, were not native Africans, but Arabs. Thus we see that only Egypt and Barbary have given what Reputation this Quarter of the World can claim; and of these the former was also honour'd with the Presence of the Saviour of the World, when in his Infancy he fled thither to shun the bloody Hands of Herod.

The Name of Africk, or Africa, is that which is us'd by all Europeans; but the Indians call it Bazecah, according to Baudrand; the Arabs Iphrichia, or rather Afrikiab, as Herbelot, that great Master of the Oriental Languages, informs us; and this general Name they have borrow'd from the Europeans; for among them it signifies only the Province of Africa, properly so call'd, and the Name this vast piece of Continent is peculiarly known by among them, the same Author tells us, is Magreb, signifying the West, in regard of its Position, in respect to their Country; lastly the Ethiopians stile it Alkebulan, as may be seen in Heylin. The Etymologies of ancient Names are always uncertain, and for the most part we rather guess at, than positively determine them. So this of Africa is variously represented, answerable to the sundry Conceptions of Authors; however there is no doubt, but it was at first peculiar to that Province, which lies along the Mediterranean, and extended from the ancient Mauritania on the West, to Cyrenaica on the East, where is now the Kingdom of Tunis. By degrees it became universal to all that Quarter of the World; but whence at first deriv'd is the difficulty. Some, and among them Emanuel de Faria y Sousa, in his Africa Portuguesa derives it from Melec Ifiriqui, a King of Arabia Felix, who being overthrown on the Banks of the Nile, by the Ethiopians, sorded the River with the remainder of his Forces, and settled in the Eastern Parts of Barbary, leaving his own Name to that Country. Josephus will have it so call'd from Epher, or Afer the Grand-son of Abraham. Festus, the Grammarian supposes it to be Greek, from A Privativum and Phrice, Cold; importing a Country free from Cold. John Leo brings it from the Arabick Faraca to divide, in regard it is separated from Europe by the Mediterranean, and from Asia by the Red Sea. Others derive it from the Hebrew Aphar, Dust, with respect to the sandiness of its Soil. To conclude, Bochart seems to have as much Reason as any of them, in making it a corruption of the Phœnician word Pheric, or Pheruc, signifying an Ear of Corn, whereof there was great Plenty in the Province properly so call'd, which that trading Nation convey'd to several Parts; but enough of this, let us proceed to its Position.

AFRICK in that respect lies South of Europe, and West of Asia, extending in Longitude 83 Degrees from East to West, being near 5000 Miles. Its Latitude is from about 36 North to about 35 South, in all 71 Degrees, or near 4300 Miles, including the whole Torrid Zone, and part of the two Temperate ones, for which reason it is all subject to excessive Heats, without any Cold, unless some little in the most Southern Part. It is bounded on the North by the Mediterranean, which divides it from Europe; on the East by the Red Sea, separating it from Asia, to which it only joyns by a small Isthmus, or neck of Land that cuts off the Communication of the Mediterranean and Red Sea, and on the South and West by the Main Ocean.

The Soil varies according to its Situation and other Circumstances, the Northern Parts being most fruitful, and yielding abundance of Wheat, whence many other Countries were formerly supply'd. The Midland is mostly scorch'd up by the Sun, which occasions vast Deserts of Sand, where nothing can be produc'd, but where there are Rivers and other Waters the Inhabitants live upon such things as the Land will afford; which shall be mention'd when we come to treat of those Places. As much as is within the Southern Temperate Zone abounds in vast numbers of Cattel, large and fair, and will produce any sorts of Fruit or Grain carry'd thither from Europe, or other Countries, yet lies most waste; through the Ignorance and Barbarity of the Natives.

Those People in general are the most unpolish'd of the three ancient Parts of the World. Along the Coasts of the Mediterranean, where the Arabs formerly extended their Conquests, they are most civiliz'd, that Nation, renown'd in those Days, having still retain'd something of their former Government and more human way of living. The inner Regions, less known to us, as scarce ever frequented by other Nations, continue in greater Ignorance, and entire privation of all Politeness; and the most Southern are altogether brutal, or savage.

The State of Religion is here, for the greatest part, very deplorable, all the Northern Coast being subject to Mahometans, who keep what few Christians there are among them in miserable Subjection, or Slavery, the Jews being in no better Condition. Towards the East there are some remains of Christianity among the Ethiopi-ans, tho' almost buried in Ignorance. On the West great Numbers have been converted by the Portugueses and others, so that almost all the Kingdoms of Congo and Angola have receiv'd the Light of the Gospel. All the rest of that mighty Land continues in Idolatry, or rather supine Stupidity, there being scarce any Track of Divine Worship among many of those Savage Nations.

The shape of this Peninsula, for such it is, as being surrounded by the Sea on all sides, except on the East, where it joyns to Asia by a small Isthmus or neck of Land some compare to a Pyramid, others to a Heart, and others to a Triangle; but all these must be much supply'd by Fancy. The principal Wealth of it consists in Gold Mines and Elephants Teeth, both which carry most Nations in Europe to Trade on several parts of its Coasts. As it has not much variety of Commodities, so it overabounds in ravenous Beasts and Birds, and other noxious Creatures Europe is more free from, as Lions, Tygers, Elephants, Rhinocerots, Ostriches, Eagles, Serpents, of sundry Kinds, infinite Numbers of mischievous Insects, and offensive Animals. The Lions of Numidia are reckon'd the fiercest in the World; the Elephants of Negroland have the whitest Teeth; and the Barbary Horses are the best shap'd. The principal Rivers of Africk are the Nile and the Niger, other wise call'd Gambes; and the most noted Mountains that the Ancients call'd Atlas, by the Spaniards nam'd Montes Claros, and Mountains of the Moon, by the Natives call'd Bedt, of all which we shall speak in their Places, and therefore add no more here.

The ancient Division of Africk under the Romans was into six Parts, viz. Africa, properly so call'd, Mauritania Casariensis, Mauritania Tingitana, Numidia, Tripolitana, and Bizacena, all which amounted to little more than the present Barbary, but was all they possessed, or were acquainted with; except the Kingdom of Egypt they did not reckon as part of Africk. Strabo condemns those who reckon'd Africk as a third part of the World, looking upon it as inconsiderable; but Ptolemy, who knew much more of it went farther than any other, and divided it into twelve Regions, viz. 1. Mauritania Tingitana now Fez and Morocco. 2. Mauritania Casariensis containing the Kingdoms of Argier and Tremezen. 3. Numidia, or Biledulgerid. 4. Africa properly so call'd, or the Kingdom of Tunis. 5. Cyrenaica, or the Kingdom of Berea. 6. Marmarica, another part of the Kingdom of Berea. 7. Libya propria, another part of the same Kingdom. 8. Libya interior, or Belced Geneva. 9. Aegyptus superior, the Upper Egypt. 10. Aegyptus inferior, the Lower Egypt. 11. Ethiopia superior, the upper Ethiopia. 12. Ethiopia inferior, the lower Ethiopia. By this we see, that famous Geographer knew not the one half of Africk. John Leo, who liv'd about the Year 1526, with all his Industry was not much more successful, for he divides it into only four Parts, which are Barbary, Numidia, Libya and Nigritia. To the twelve Regions of Ptolemy may be added Agisymba, being the present Kingdoms of Monomotapa, Monoemugi, and Gates; Byzacena, part of the Kingdom of Tunis, Getulia and Garamantia, being Biledulgerid and Zazra; Nigritarum Regio, which is Guinea and Negroland; and Troglodytes, or the Coast of the Cafres.

Having given these former Divisions of Africk for the Information of those who read ancient Authors, we now come to the present, as it stands at this time, and is best known to us, which can be taken from none better than Samson, with some small improvement from the latest Discoveries. This is best done by way of one general Geographical Table of all the principal Regions subdivided into their particular Provinces, reserving the Situation, Limits and Extent of them till we come to speak of each in its proper Place, where shall be added other Tables of their Provinces, and the Towns of Note in every one of them.

CH A P. II.

Of B A R B A R Y.

WE will begin with B A R B A R Y, as commencing in the West, and running along the most Northern Part, as far as Egypt. The best Account we have of its Name is from Marin, who derives it from Bar, signifying Desert, in the Arabick, because those Conquerors found it very ill Peopled, when they first overran it, and the Natives are still call'd Berberes. Yet there are some that will suppose it to have been nam'd Barbary by the Romans, from the Barbarity of the Natives, but without any Ground, this Name being never us'd by ancient Authors; besides that the Carthaginians, who were Masters of all that Tract, when the Romans came first acquainted with it, were a more polite People than the Romans themselves.

Its Situation is in the Temperate Northern Zone, under the third and fourth Climates. On the East it borders on Egypt, on the South it is divided from Biledgerid by Mount Atlas, the North of it is wash'd by the Mediterranean Sea, and the East by the Atlantick Ocean. The whole Extent from East to West is about 34 Degrees, amounting to 2000 Miles, the greatest Breadth from North to South about Six Degrees or 360 Miles. The Climate is hot, as lying betwixt 37 and 30 Degrees of North Latitude; so that it is scarce sensible of any Cold, the Winter consisting most of Rain. In March there are very Stormy Winds, and in April a perfect Spring, so forward, that towards the End of it they have ripe Cherries, Figs in May, and in July Apples, Pears, Plums, and Grapes, all the Harvest being in by the beginning of September. This is the best Part of all Africa, excepting only Egypt, as producing great Plenty of Corn, and Abundance of all Sorts of Fruit. Nor does it only exceed the Rest in Fertility, but far surpasses in Civility and the Art of Government.

As for the People, they are generally of a tawny Complexion, well shap'd, and strong of Body. They are of two Sorts, the Ancient Natives, more rude and ignorant, and the Arabs, who subdu'd them, and still keep the Government in their Hands, being more polite and civiliz'd, tho' much fallen off from what they were in former Times, when Learning flourish'd among them in an extraordinary Degree. Leo Africanus gives a mighty

Character of them for Sincerity, Modesty, Integrity, &c. which no doubt proceeded from Affection, as being himself a Native of that Country, for all others since him, who have liv'd many Years among them, say they are Faithless, Lustful, Cruel, Implacable and great Dissemblers.

The Language most in Use, especially in the Maritime Towns, is the Arabick, the ancient African, or a corruption of the Carthaginian Tongue, still continuing in the open Country and on the Mountains among the common Sort, and this Tongue they call Chilba. The Latin notwithstanding the Romans were so long Masters of all those Countries is utterly extinct, so that no Memory of it remains.

No Religion can well be reckon'd on, throughout all this mighty Tract, but the Mahometan, which has the Power of Government, and oppresses all others. Christianity flourish'd here in the 4th Century to such a Degree, that there were 214 Bishops, but has been so entirely extirpated by the Malice of the Infidels, that there are now no Christian Inhabitants left, except the Slaves they keep in miserable Bondage. Nor do the Jews fare much better, tho' there be considerable Numbers scatter'd about in all trading Places, yet so contemn'd and oppress'd, that they may be reckon'd little better than Captives.

The Diseases most frequent in these Parts are the Head-Ach, proceeding from the violent Heats; Pains in the Stomach and Gripping in the Bowels, thought to be caus'd by much drinking of cold Water in hot Weather; the French Pox, first said to be brought over by the Jews; the Falling Sickness; and above all the Plague, which destroys Multitudes, and seldom misses to rage there once in Ten or Twenty Years.

To come to the Division, Barbary contains the Kingdoms of Morocco.

Fez.
Argier.
Tunis.
Tripoli, and Barca. This last a Dependence on Tripoli.

It remains to give the particular Description of each of them.

CHAP. III.

Description of MOROCCO.

THE Kingdom of MOROCCO is a Part of the ancient Mauritania Tingitana, the Kingdom of Fez composing the rest of it. This Name was given it from Tingis, since call'd Tangier, then its Capital. As to Situation, it is the most Western Part of Africk, bounded on the West by the Ocean, along which it extends from the Town of Messa, or the Mouth of the River

Sus, to the Town of Azamor, at the Mouth of the River Umarabea. On the North the same River separates it from the Kingdom of Fez. On the East and South Mount Atlas divides it from Biledulgerid.

To descend to Particulars, it is divided into 7 Provinces, which with their Principal Towns see in the following Table.

MOROCCO. { Morocco.
Agmec.
Emegiagen.
Tazarat, or Tefrat.
Delgamaha.

HEA. { Tedoeft.

Guzula, or Gezula, has no wall'd Towns, but many large open Villages.

This Country is very hot, as lying between 30 and 33 Degrees of North Latitude. However it is fruitful, producing Plenty of Corn, and all Sorts of Fruit, besides Abundance of Cattel, the Land for the most part not being Sandy, like other Parts of Africk. Besides, it is nothing Mountainous, but Plain, as the Sieur Monette informs us, who liv'd there several Years, and whom therefore we think fit to follow in many Things. Here are abundance of Castles, which serve for a Retreat to the Arabs, as they do in other Parts for the Barbarians.

The Natives are generally strong, well shap'd, lively and of sharp Wits; applying themselves to Trade, Tillage, War and some Sort of Learning, but their greatest Study is Art Magick. The Women, who ever keep close at home, divert themselves with Spinning, Sewing and all sorts of Curious Works. The common Sort Eat on a Mat spread upon the Ground, without any Knives or Napkins; but those of better Rank, are somewhat Neater. Their Bread is made in Cakes bak'd in a Pot; their Drink Water, or Metheglin, or an Infusion of Raisins. The Men wear Shirts, and Drawers, with fine Scarlet or Silk Coats, Scarlet Caps on their Heads, and Sandals, or Slippers on their Feet. The Women have wide Smocks to their Knees, and Linnen Drawers, in Summer Silk and in Winter Cloth Caps; over the rest they wear long Robes or Gowns, wrought or embroider'd and clos'd before with a rich Buckle; besides other Ornaments of Gold and Silver set with Stones and Pearls.

There are four several Languages spoken here. The Afforish, being the ancient Language of the Africans, with some mixture of Arabick; the Arabick somewhat also corrupted; the Gemick, or Lingua Franca, being a Corruption of Spanish and Portuguese; and the Tamacette, which is a perfect Jargon, scarce to be express'd in Writing. There is a white People on the North-side of Mount Atlas, who speak this Language, and boast that they are descended from Christians.

The Principal River in this Kingdom is that of Sus, which gives its Name to the Province, and is by some suppos'd to be the Una of Ptolemy. Its Springs are on Mount Atlas, whence it runs Westward by three small Towns, and falls into the Ocean. The Tensifs rises in another Part of Mount Atlas, and crossing the Provinces of Morocco and Dukella, is lost in the Ocean. Marmol supposes it to be the Futh of Ptolemy. Into it fall, the Ecifemel, the Nistis, and the Asifnual. The Tecubins are Two Rivers rising on Mount Goguamede, about 1000 Paces asunder, running through the Plains of Hascota, and losing themselves in the River Hued al Abid, which springs a Mile from Bzo and discharges itself into the Ommirabih, or Uma Rabea. This River comes out of Mount Magran, near the Confines of Fez, and meets the Ocean, near the Town of Azamor. The other Rivers are too small to deserve any particular mention.

The King's Revenues are very great, a Ducat and a Quarter being paid by way of Poll-Tax for every Head, the 12th of all Grain, and the 10th of all Cattel and Goods, besides many other Duties. The Christians pay dear for Liberty of trading in this Country, and that which makes the Sovereign most formidable is, that none of his Subjects have any Property, so that when any of his Governours or other Officers die, he seizes their Estates, and provides for the Children.

This

This Monarch's Titles are, Emperor of Africa, King of Morocco, Fez, Sus, and Gaza, Lord of Barz and Guinea, and Grand Sherif or Vicegerent to Mahomet.

The Province of MOROCCO, properly so call'd.

The Province of Morocco, properly so call'd, from the Name of its Capital City, stretches East and West, from Mount Hinnimet to Mount Nefus; and is bounded on the North by the Province of Duquel; on the West by that of Hea and Part of Sus; on the South by another Part of Sus, Dara, and Gezula; and on the East by that of Hafora. This Province abounds in Grain, Flax, Hemp, Cattel, and all sorts of Fruit.

The City of Morocco, Capital of this Kingdom, is suppos'd to have been Built by Joseph Aben Texifen and his Son Ali, on the Ruins of the Ancient Bocanum, mention'd by Ptolemy. It is seated between the Rivers Nefris and Agmet, in 31 Degrees of North Latitude, and in a Plain about 50 Miles over, 6 Miles North from Mount Atlas. Formerly here were reck'ned 100000 Houses, at present the third Part of it is waste, but encompass'd with a high Stone Wall, fortify'd with Towers and Bastions, and a large Ditch without. Many of the ancient Mosques, Colleges and Baths have been destroy'd by the Civil Wars; but there are still three Magnificent Mosques standing. The Royal Palace, call'd by the Natives Alcazava, or Alchouart, is like a little Town, enclos'd with high Walls, and in the midst of the Court, is a curious Mosque with a high Tower, and on the Top of it an Iron Rod, which runs through four Golden Apples, reported to weigh 700 Pounds, being the Portion of a Daughter of the King of Gaza, marry'd by a King of Morocco, in whose Right he inherited that Kingdom. All the King's Apartment is cover'd with Leaf Gold, being about 30 Rooms of State, besides several Galleries, with Fish-Ponds in some of them. About half a League from this Palace is a Royal Bower call'd Monferat, in which there are 15000 Limon Trees, as many Orange and Palm-Trees, and 36000 Olive Trees; and near this a Park in which Abundance of Elephants, Lions, Stags and other Creatures are kept. About 4000 Jews live at Morocco, in a Quarter by themselves, and wall'd in, like another Town. The Common Houses have none but Mud Walls plaister'd over, but those of Persons of Quality are of Stone, the Tops of them all flat. Most of the Mosques are of Marble, leaded, and in the midst of the City there is a Bridge over the River Tessif. This Account is from Mouette, who liv'd there a considerable Time.

The other Towns have nothing that deserves Describing. The greatest Hills in this Province are Nefulus, or Neftus, otherwise call'd Derendree, Aden, or Afen, on the Western Borders, the Tops of it cover'd with Snow, and the Inhabitants extremely rude; Mount Semedo, separated from the other by the River Xauxave, running East and West 7 Miles. Xauxave, whence the River takes Name, South from the former; Temet excessive high; Temet, on which is a Town of the same Name; Guidimire or Gedemeve, on the West of Semedo; and Antete West of Guidimire.

The Women here are handsome, some very white others more brown. Here is a Noble Breed of Horses, and the People are generally Wealthy.

The Province of HEA.

This is the most Western Province of the Kingdom of Morocco, bounded on the West and North by the Ocean, on the South by that Part of Mount Atlas, which joyns to Sus, and on the East by the River of Eciffemel, which separates it from Morocco.

Tedoeft once the Capital of this Country, and of great Antiquity, built in a Morass, was utterly destroy'd in the Year 1514; since which time the Jews have there built above 500 Houses. The other Towns are all of them inconsiderable, yet several wall'd, as Agobel, which has not above 330 Houses; Alguet, on a Hill water'd by two small Rivers; Temlet, a pleasant Place 18 Miles West of Tedoeft; Hadequis before the Portugueses destroy'd it in 1511 contain'd near 20000 Houses, now inhabited only by a few Jews; Tesegdel the greatest of the Mountain Towns has about 1000 Houses; Eitdevet 700; Tesethne, or Tesane, is a Garrison Town upon the Ocean, near to Mount Atlas, which has a considerable Port.

Five Miles up from the Sea, is the Island and Castle of Mogador, suppos'd by some to be the Island Erythrea of the Ancients, kept by a Garrison of 200 Men, to secure the Gold Mines in the Neighbouring Countries. Goz, or Gözen is a good Harbour, believ'd to be the Suriga of Ptolemy.

Mountains here, are Aidvacal, which parts Hea from Sus, is three Days Journey over, and has several rich Villages on it. Demensere or Tensere is another part of Mount Atlas, betwixt Hea and Sus. Gebel el Hadith, or the Mountain of Iron, believ'd by Ortelius to be the Focrus of Ptolemy, is quite different from Atlas, and parts Hea, Morocco and Duquel.

All this Province is Mountainous, full of Rivulets, and produces little Wheat, but much Barley. The Natives are very brutal. In the Winter they feed much upon Bread and Honey; and in Summer upon Milk and Butter. They also eat boil'd Flesh, Onions, Beans, and Couscous, which is made of Meal. Most of them wrap a large piece of thin woollen Stuff about them, like a Sheet, few of them wear Shirts, and some have round Caps on their Heads. They sit upon Mats, and have no other Beds. The Women generally have their Faces veil'd.

The Province of SUS.

The Province of Sus, or Suez, formerly a Kingdom inhabited by the Tangresians and Vacauves, takes its Name from the River Sus, and is bounded on the West by the Ocean, on the North by Mount Atlas, which divides it from Hea; on the South by the Deserts of Biledulgerid, and on the East by the River Sus, parting it from Gezula.

The principal Towns here, are Messa, formerly call'd Temest, seated near the Ocean, at the foot of Mount Atlas, divided into three several Parts, each of them inclos'd with Walls, and water'd by the River Sus. Without this Place towards the Sea stands a Temple, or Mosque, all the Beams and Girders whereof are made of the Bone-

Bones of Whales, whence the People imagine, that the Whale which follow'd Jonas cast him up in that place; and there are still many Whales cast ashore there. Tecent, an ancient Town, a Mile from Messa, contains 4000 Families, and in it is a curious Mosque. A Mile from the last is Garee, built by the Sheriff Abdalla, in the Year 1520, where they dress the choice Morocco Leather, whereof so much is yearly transported into Europe, that the Duty of it amounts to 24000 Ducats. Tarudante is the Capital of this Province, by the Moors call'd Taurant, 12 Miles East of Tecent, and 2 South of Mount Atlas; seated in a pleasant Valley, 18 or 20 Miles in length, and 8 in breadth. The River Agus wallies its Walls, and in it was once the Residence of the Kings, and now of the Governours of Sus. Tagoast is now the greatest City, standing 20 Miles from the Ocean, 18 from Mount Atlas, and 3 from the River Sus. Volatteran supposes St. Augustin to have been born in this Place.

On the West side of the River of Suez, is Cape d'Aguer, believ'd to be the Usagium of Ptolemy, where the Portugueses once built a Town call'd Santa Cruz, but were expell'd by the Sheriffs in 1536. To the Southward of it in 17 Degrees of Latitude is the famous Cape Nam, so call'd by the Portugueses, signifying not, because they once believ'd there was no sailing beyond it.

Several Branches of the Atlas spread themselves into this Country by the Names of Henquifa, Ilalem, or Laalem-Gezule and Idle. The River Sus overflows like the Nile, and fertilizes the Land; which there produces plenty of Corn, and the Harvest is in May. It also yields all sorts of Fruit, Sagar, and good Pasture; has good Horses, and a Silver Mine, but no Oyl. On the Coast Amber-greece is often found. The Inhabitants differ but little from those of the Neighbouring Provinces.

The Province of DUCALA or Duquella

Has for its Boundary on the East the River of Umaralea; on the West, that of Tenfis; on the North the Ocean; and on the South the River Habit. Its greatest extent from East to West is 30 Miles, according to Marmol, and 24 from North to South.

Azanor, seated on the River Umarabea, 3 Miles above Mazagam, is one of the principal Towns, it was taken by King Emanuel of Portugal, in 1513, but since recover'd by the Infidels, and is still large and populous, the Inhabitants having a great Filhery on the River Umarabea. Alazagan, once containing 5000 Houses, at present has not above 500, and those but poor ones, being a Garrison kept on that Coast by the Portugueses. Saffi, by the Portugueses, who took it in 1507, but lost it again, call'd Sahn, is wall'd, and about it 27 Towers. Ten Miles from it, in a fertile Plain is Almedina, an ancient City, and once the Capital of the Province. There are several other Towns not worth taking notice of, except Miathir, or as the Italians call it, Cento Pozzi, or an hundred Wells, a Name given it from abundance of deep Cellars or Caves there are in the Suburbs, which serve for Granaries, where they say Corn will keep an hundred Years. The Town is all built with Marble, and stands on a Rock.

The Mountain Benimeguer, or Benimager, is by Marmol suppos'd to be the Mountain of the Sun of Ptolemy. Inkel-hadva, or the green Mountain, rises on the East of the River Ommirabih, and runs Westward; several Hermits retire to this Mountain, and live upon the Fruits of the Earth; at the foot of it is a large Lake. The Natives are perverse, cowardly, and brutal.

The Province of HASCORA, or ESCURA

Is the most Northern part of the Kingdom of Morocco; the River Tenfis shuts it in on the East, as does the Elquadilhabid on the West, the Umarabea on the North, and the green Mountain on the South.

Alendin, or Elmedin, seated in a Valley, enclos'd by four Mountains, is a considerable Town here of about 1000 Houses. Almedina, a Mile from it, and 20 from the other of the same Name, in the Province of Ducala, is less considerable. Tagoast, or Isadogas, is a pleasant place by reason of several cuts of Water running through it. Bzo, or Bizu is by some reckon'd the Capital, and is seated on a Mountain.

The Mountains here being Branches of Mount Atlas, are call'd Tevendez, Tensirez, Guigina, Tesevon, and Tescevin. The Product Olives, Raisins, Nuts, Figs, extraordinary large Apricots, and other Fruit; Oil and Honey; Corn and Cattel, as also Woad for Dying. The Natives are more polite than in other Parts, applying themselves to Trade and Handicrafts, civil to Strangers, and feed after the manner of the Europeans. The Women are handsome and well drest.

The Province of TEDLA

Lying East of Morocco is small, enclosed on the East by the River Ommirabih, on the West by that of Quadel-habid, on the North it reaches to the conflux of those two Rivers, and on the South to Mount Atlas.

The Capital here is Tefza, built by the Arabs, on the side of Mount Atlas, two Miles from the Plain, enclos'd with a Wall of Marble, which the Arabs call Tefza, whence it takes the Name. It is populous, and has several good Mosques. Fixtele is an open Town, a Mile from Tefza, containing 700 Houses. Cithibeb stands on a Hill 3 Miles East of Tefza. Eitiat, or Aitiat, is 4 Miles from Cithibeb, consisting of 300 Houses, wall'd next the Mountain, and defended next the Plain by steep craggy Rocks. In it there is a stately Mosque, with a curious Water running round it.

In the South part is the Mountain Semege, or Seggheme; more to the Westward Mount Magran, and West of that again Mount Dedes. The whole is more Mountain than Plain, but what there is of this sort yields plenty of all Fruit. The Inhabitants of Tefza are well enough Apparell'd; but those of Mount Dedes scarce cover their Nakedness, being rude, addicted to Robbery and Fraud. As for Religion, the Mahometans have the Power, the Jews are allow'd full Liberty, there are some few Christians, but the Mountainiers have neither Worship, Churches, nor Priests. If any Christian here will Apostatize, there is an equal Number of Christians and Mahometans first call'd together, and the former have liberty to use all the Arguments they can to dissuade him, after which he is free to do as he pleases.

The Province of GUZULA or GEZULA

Is no doubt a part of the ancient Getulia, which Name it almost retains at this time, the Getuli being a People of Libya, at the foot of Mount Atlas, as are the Gezulians at present. Its Boundaries are on the West Mount Ilda, which parts it from Suez; on the South Mount Atlas; on the North the Mountain Haba, and on the East the Deserts of Biledulgerid.

Here are no wall'd Towns, but only Villages and some Burroughs of near 1000 Houses, but those mean, and not worth observing. The Natives are very barbarous and stupid. They wear short woollen Shirts without Sleeves, and Hats made of Palm-Tree Leaves: being poor in Money, but rich in Barley and Cattel. The Iron and Copper Mines among them are very beneficial, for they make all sorts of Utensils, which they carry to other Parts, and exchange them for Cloth, Spice, Horses and other things they stand in need of. But that which most enriches them, is a Fair they keep every Year for two Months, during which time they use the Strangers that come among them very well; keep Guards to see no Disorders be committed, and punish Robbers with Death. There is a very great Resort to this Fair from all Parts, and especially from the Country of the Blacks. The Weapons us'd by these People are Scimiters, or broad-pointed Swords and Spears. This Province is said to be able to raise 62000 Men, which makes them not afraid of the Arabs, and they have formerly plunder'd the City of Morocco. It is a free Nation, subject to no King, he of Morocco being only their Ally. They were once Tributary to Portugal, but that lasted not long. In these general Descriptions we chiefly follow la Croix, and Dapper, who have writ best of these Parts from the latest and exactest Accounts.

C H A P. IV.

Of the Kingdom of F E Z.

THIS is the Eastern Part of the ancient Mauritania Tingitana, lying East of the Kingdom of Morocco, which is the other, and call'd by the Moors, El, or Algarve. On the West it is bounded by the Atlantick Ocean, and by the River Omarabea, which parts it from Morocco; on the East by the River Muluya or Mulvia, dividing it from Argier; on the South by Mount Atlas, running betwixt it and Biledulgerid, and on the North by the Mediterranean. From East to West it extends about 200 Miles, and somewhat less from North to South, lying betwixt 31 and 36 Degrees of North Latitude.

It is divided into seven Provinces, which with their Principal Towns, are these;

The Province of FEZ properly so call'd,

On the West is separated from the Province of Temefna by the River Burregreg, or Sala, and extends even to the Ocean betwixt Mamora and Sale; Eastward it reaches to the River Tnovan, Northward to the River Subu or Cebu, and Southward to Mount Atlas.

The Capital of this Province and of the Kingdom, is the City Fez, which some will have to be so call'd from Fez, signifying Gold, because a Quantity of that Metal was found in laying the Foundations; but others derive it from the River Fez which runs by it. The Founder of it, Mouette says, was Muley Drice, the first Arabian King of that Country; la Croix calls him Idris, the Son of Idris Patriarch of the Arabs, in the Year 801. Its Situation is about 200 Miles from the Sea, being divided into two distant Cities, call'd the Old and the New. The Old is seated on the Declivity of two Hills, being neither round, nor quite square, without any Suburbs. The Walls are of Stone, and about 8 Miles in compass, there being many Gardens within them. Without, the Houses, which are all flat-roof'd make no great show, but are very handsome within. The Streets are narrow and have Gates to them, to hinder People going about at Night. Two Castles defend it, the one very ancient and almost ruin'd; the other new, in which is a Garrison of Blacks, neither of these Forts has any Cannon. On the two longest sides of the City there are two sharp Bastions, built upon Hills, with only two Pieces of Iron Cannon on each. A River divides it self into six Branches in the midst of the City, furnishing all the Houses with Water, driving 370 Mills, and serving as many Baths. There are four principal Mosques, and above 500 of less note, all of them well endow'd, besides several Hospitals. The principal Gates of the City are seven. The new City of Fez is above the old, serves for a Citadel to it, and was built by Jacob the second King of the Race of the Benimerines about 500 Years since, having a double Wall about it, well flank'd with Towers, Bastions, and Half-Moons. Muley Archy built here a stately Palace and Seraglio, guarded by 300 Blacks. These Cities are Rich and Populous, the inhabitants driving a great Trade to all parts of the Kingdom.

Salé, by Ptolemy call'd Sala, stands on the Coast of the Atlantick Ocean at the Mouth of the River Gucron, or Burregreg, which divides it into two Towns. That on the South side has two Castles, on a Hill next the Sea, and join'd by a Wall running from the one to the other, with about 30 Pieces of Cannon in them both. There is besides a small Fort with five Guns nearer the Sea, to secure the Pyrates against the Christians. The Walls are of great Compass, and very ancient, but a considerable part is fallen towards the Sea. On the South East of it is a stately high Tower, call'd Hazens, under which they have their Docks, and it serves for a Land-Mark by Day, and a Light-House by Night. Thus much of these two Cities is out of Mouette, who liv'd in them both. All Goods imported or exported pay the tenth part of their Value; but the principal Wealth of the Town consists in Piracy. The King of Fez appoints a Governour, who with some Alcaids chosen from among the inhabitants, has the power of Peace and War.

Two Miles from Salé is the ancient Town of Tafara, or Tefensara, supposed by Marmol to be Ptolemy's Bimassa. At the Mouth of the River is the Town of Mamora, formerly possess'd by the Spaniards and Portugueses, but lost by them both. Mequinez is a strong City, and very considerable; being the Residence of the Heirs to the Crown of Fez, supposed to be the Siddi of Ptolemy. Tifelselt, by Ptolemy call'd Tamfara, is all gone to ruin. Macarmede, the Epis of the same Geographer, is six Miles from Fez. But enough of such inconsiderable Places, the rest are of no better Note.

Zalah Mountain rises on the East side of the River Subu, or Cebu, and runs four Miles Westward. Zarhon, or Zarahannum commences three Miles from Fez, and extends eight Miles to the West, being three Leagues over in some Places; on it are above 40 populous Villages, and here formerly stood the City Titulit then above 10 Miles in compass, since utterly destroy'd by Joseph, King of the Almoravides. Dar el Hamare, believ'd to be Ptolemy's Epitane, is on this same Mountain, still entire and populous, but suffers much from the Lions, who come thither to seek for Prey. Mount Tagar or Tagat is two Miles West of Fez, stretching two Miles Eastward. Mount Guerigure, near the Atlas, is very well inhabited.

The Soil of Fez is exuberant, yielding all sorts of Grain and Fruit in great Plenty, as also Flax and Cotton, and feeds Multitudes of Cattel, Horses, Camels and Deer. The only fault in this Territory, is, that the Country on the West side of Old Fez for ten Miles in length and five in breadth, is of such a Pestilential Air, that the Natives are all of a sickly, yellow Complexion, and very subject to a Pestilential Fever, which destroys great numbers of them.

The People eat after the manner of the other Moors of Barbary, and make three Meals a Day. In the Summer they Breakfast upon Bread and Fruit, or boil'd Milk; but in Winter they thicken Broth with Meal. Their Dinners are of Flesh, Sallads, Cheese and Olives, but their Suppers lighter: They neither use Knives nor Spoons, and never drink till they have done eating. The better sort over their Shirts wear a Coat with short Sleeves, and over that a looser Garment close before. On their Heads they have a Cap; about which they wind a long piece of Linnen, which comes twice under their Chins. The Women in Summer wear nothing but a Smock, and in Winter a loose Robe with wide Sleeves, quite close before. The Arabs here wear a thin white Woollen like our Crape, which they wrap two or three times about their Body, and a red Cap; and others go quite Naked, saving a Clout about their Waist, and hanging down to their Knees. Their Chiefs cloath after the Turkish manner, and use a Turbant, but small and peaked.

Here are three sorts of Nobility, one by Extraction; another by Employment, and a third by Wealth; yet all enjoying the same Privileges, and all oblig'd to serve the King, and follow him to the Wars. There are in Fez 3000 Noble Families.

The Province of TEMESNA

Is the most Western Part of the Province of Fez, extending Eastward to the River Burregreg; Westward to the Ommirabil; Northwards to the Ocean, and Southward to Mount Atlas; not above 17 Miles from East to West, and 17 from North to South. It was once in such a flourishing Condition, that John Leo says it contain'd 40 great Towns, and 3000 Castles; but all this is entirely destroy'd by the Wars, that scarce any Footsteps of it remain.

Anfa, or Anassa was here built by the Romans on the edge of the Sea 20 Miles North of Mount Atlas. Near it is a Fort built by the Arabs, where they keep Garrison. This place was plunder'd and ruin'd by the Portugueses. Almanfora was Founded by Almanfor King of Morocco, two Miles from the Ocean, in a pleasant Plain, near the River Gair, only inhabited by Arabs: Sala, or Silia, a different Town from Sala in Fez, was erected by the Romans on the River Barrageg, two Miles from the Ocean. Here King Almanfor built a stately Mosque, Palace and Chapel of Marble, where he and his Successors the Morines were buried. Robat is a large Town which some will have to be the Opium of Prolemy, and is the Key of Barbary, being seated on a Rock at the Mouth of the River Barrageg, on which is a strong Fortress. Within it there are many Mosques, Palaces, Baths, and considerable Shops, and without, on the South side, a very high Tower to discover the Sea. Hain el Chou is small, but populous, and seated in the Plain. Thag standing near Mount Atlas, tho' not large, has been famous on account of a Saint said to have wrought Miracles there, in restraining the fierceness of Lions.

All the Territory of Tamfna is flat and fertile, especially the Plains of Anfa, Nenchile, and Zafsa, which yield infinite plenty of Corn. The Country in general produces abundance of Fruit, and among the rest a sort call'd Rabib, like Cherries to the Eye, and tastes like Jujubs. The Liberty of Thag produces little Corn, but great store of Honey, feeds large Flocks of Goats, and has many Lions and Leopards.

The Inhabitants of Anfa were once very decently clad, and drove a great Trade abroad, till they ruin'd it by Piracy. This Province was so populous and potent, that it rais'd an Army of 50000 Men against Joseph Aven Tiffriker, the Founder of Morocco; but they fled at the sight of his Forces, and he entering their Province made such a Massacre, that scarce any thing but wild Beasts was to be seen there long after; yet in process of time, the Zenetes and Homes re-peopling the Country, they became so numerous that in the Year 1500 they rais'd 60000 Horse, and had 200 Fortresses under their Jurisdiction.

The Province of Asgar

Has for its Limit on the North, the Ocean; on the West the River Barrageg; on the East the Mountains of Gomer, and Mounts Zachen and Zela, and on the South the River Bumazer; 18 Miles being its greatest length, and three its breadth.

Its Towns are seated along the Coast of the Ocean. Among these is Larache, by Prolemy call'd Lara, by Pliny Lixos, and by the Moors, el Harais. It is six or seven miles from Arzila, in 24 Deg. 30. min. Lat. and at the Mouth of the River Lous. Ortelius is of opinion, that this is the Garden of the Hesperides, and Saint that it is the Palace of Antaeus, where Hercules encounter'd that Giant. It has been long one of the principal Fortresses of Fez, often attempted in vain, both by Spaniards and Portugueses, till in the Year 1610 Muley Zeque, Governour of the Place, deliver'd it up to the Marquis of S. Germain the Spanish General. The Town is adorn'd with beautiful Structures, and enclosed with strong Walls, besides three Castles, to which the Spaniards have given the Names of three Saints. The Towns of Morocco, and Elgimha, are scarce worth taking notice of. Alcazar Quivir, which signifies a great Palace, is near the River Lous, which sometimes overflows to such a degree, as to drown the Town, consisting of about 1500 Houses, several Mosques and other Structures. Many other Places have been ruin'd by the Wars.

The Air of this Province is so pleasant and wholesome, that the Kings of Fez generally spend all the Spring there, and divert themselves with hunting of Deer and Hares. Besides here are abundance of Horses bred, with which it supplies the City of Fez, and the Territory of Larache produces Cotton. The People go decently apparell'd, and are good-natur'd and generous. The Arabs here apply themselves to Tillage.

The Province of Habat

Extends from the River Guarga to the Mediterranean, North and South, being bounded on the West by the Morasses of Asgar, and part of the Ocean on the East by the Mountains of Gomer, on the South by the aforesaid River, and on the North by the Mediterranean, being 20 Miles in length, and 17 in breadth.

The principal Places are on the Coast of the Ocean, Arzila, formerly Zilia, built by the Romans, 14 Miles from the Mouth of the Streights, once subject to the Prince of Centa, who was tributary to the Romans, next the Goths took it, and after them the Mahometans. Alphonso King of Portugal carry'd it by Assault, and sent all the Inhabitants into Portugal, yet after defending it several Years, they at last quitted it to the Infidels, who are still Masters of it.

Cape Spartel, by Pliny call'd Cotes, lies betwixt Arzila and Tangier, butting out into the Ocean. Above it, at the Mouth of the Streights was the ancient City of Tangier, formerly call'd Tage, and from it all the Country Mauritania Tingitana. The African Historians say it was built by one Seddad, the Son of Hud, and Lord of all the World, who resolv'd to build a City which should be no way inferior to the Terrestrial Paradise for Beauty, and therefore he encompass'd it with a Wall of Brass, and cover'd the Houses with Gold and Silver. To leave these Fables, after the Mahometans had long been possess'd of it, King Alphonso of Portugal took it, in the Year 1464, and the Portugueses defended it till it was deliver'd to the English in 1662, upon the Marriage of King Charles the Second to Queen Catherine, and he after some Years growing weary of the Charge, caus'd it to be blown up and destroy'd, since when it has been only a small Fishing Town of the Moors.

Eastward of Tangier, on the other Promontory, which forms the Mouth of the Streights, stands the City of Centa, formerly Septa, and by Ortelius thought to be the Esilisa of Prolemy. The Streights which parts it from Spain is very narrow. The Goths took it from the Romans, and the Mahometans from them. King John of Portugal wrested it from those Infidels in 1415, under which Crown it continued till its Union to that of Spain, and upon its revolt this was the only Place that remain'd in the Hands of the Spaniards, who still keep it, tho' it has been now about 12 Years besieg'd by the Moors. The Town is still considerable and well built, has a good Palace, several Churches and Monasteries, and a Strong Castle.

Seven Miles from Centa, is the Town of Tetegen, or Tetegin, which last Name is said to signify an Eye. It is encompass'd with a good Wall and deep Ditch; and at present contains about 800 Houses.

There are 7 remarkable Mountains in the Province of Habat, which are Rabone, or Arabone, 10 Leagues in Length and 4 over; Beni Aros, or Beni Auros, 7 Leagues in Length and 3 over; Cebib, or Beni Teilit, Beni Hassan, Angera, Quarles, or Huat Adris and Guedaseth. The Plains here being water'd by several Rivers are extraordinary fruitful, and besides Corn yield Flax; the Mountains Wax and Honey, and feed much Cattle. Here are an Abundance of Lions, but so fearful, that they fly even from Children; whence comes a Proverb among them, when they would upbraid a Man with Cowardice, they say, He is like the Lions of Agle, who let the Cows eat their Tails.

The Province of ERRIF.

The River Nocor closes it on the East, the Province of Habat on the West, the Mediterranean on the North, and the Mountains that reach the River Ganga on the South. Its Length from East to West 14 Miles, and the Breadth from North to South 8.

Gomeris, is a Town on the Coast of the Mediterranean, near three small Islands, one of them called Pemon, and the other two, being rather great Rocks, Tarfonella and Nesegallit. Terga or Turga, some say was Built by the Goths, is about 20 Miles from the Mouth of the Streights, and contains 500 Houses. Velez de la Gomeris, which some will have to be Ptolemy's Acra, seated betwixt two high Mountains, has about 600 Houses, one great Square, a weak Castle and a small Arsenal on the Shore, where they build Gallies and other small Vessels. About a Mile from it, is Pennon de Velez, standing on a Rock in an Island, and not accessible but up a Way cut in the said Rock; Besides this, there is another Fort in the Mid-way, and some small ones which render it impregnable. Mesemma, Tegassit and the other Towns are too inconsiderable to have more said of them.

The Mountains here are many, among which that of Scucasen, or Xexuen, is reck'ned the Delightfullest in all Africk. Many of them are High, Steep, Uncouth and Cold, cover'd for the most part with Trees, and yielding no Grain but Oats and Barley, yet produce Grapes, Figs, Olives and Almonds, and have scarce any Wild Beasts, but great Numbers of Goats, Asses and Monkeys. All the Rivers here are very full of Fish.

Most of the Inhabitants of these Mountains have Swellings under their Chins, like the People of the Alps, and are very deformed, ignorant and rude, but make good Soldiers; excepting those of Mount A'cai, who are more civiliz'd, but so fierce and jealous, that they rather bear with any Criminals than Adulterers. The Food is coarse, as living much upon Barley, red Herrings, Onions, Garlick, Goat's Milk, and some Goat's Flesh.

The Province of GARET.

The River Muluya washes it on the East, the Nocor on the West; the Mediterranean on the North, and the Mountains of the Desarts of Nimidia run along it on the South. This Province is divided into three Parts; The one containing the Towns and Villages; the second the good Lands, and the third the Desarts, beginning in the North about the Mediterranean, and running Southward to those of Chams. That Part which contains the Villages is 16 Miles long, and 14 over.

On the Coast of the Mediterranean is the Town of Melilla, formerly Ryffadium, which has an indifferent Port, and was once the Capital of the Province, containing about 2000 Houses. In the Year 1497, the Duke of Medina Sidonia took and burnt it down; but afterwards peopled it again, so that it became one of the best Garrisons the Spaniards had in Africk; for the better Security whereof they built a good Cittadel. Six Miles from it is the Town of Casasa, and near it so convenient a Harbour, that the Venetians for some Time drove there a considerable Trade with the People of Fez. King Ferdinand of Spain afterwards took and annex'd it to his Crown. Up the Inland is Tefote, on a high Rock, the Way to it being winding about. Meggeo is two Miles from the Sea, on a Mountain.

Mequch Huan, or Equebdenon, is a Mountain running Eastward from Casasa to the River Muluya, and Southward from the Sea to the Desarts of Garet. There were on it 72 Villages before the Spaniards took Casasa, but since it is not so well peopled. Benihafid extends 8 Miles Eastward from Casasa to the River Nocor, and has on it 118 Villages.

This Province wants several Things necessary for the Support of Human Life, especially Water; which renders it for the most part Barren. Yet that Part they call the Desart, feeds abundance of Cattel, which in Summer the Arabs and other Inhabitants call'd Batalises, are forc'd to drive to the River Muluya. On some of the Mountains there is good Pasture, and they yield Barley and Honey. They have also Iron Mines, which Metal the Natives exchange for Honey. Besides, here are considerable Breeds of good Horses. The People are generally Brave, Generous and Kind to Strangers.

The Province of CHAUS

Has on the East the River Zha, or Ezaba; on the West the Guraigura; on the North Mount Lucato, and on the South the Atlas, being 46 Miles in Length, from East to West, and 40 in Breadth from North to South.

Tewert is one of the most considerable Towns of this Province, very Ancient, seated on a Hill, near the River Zha, its Liberties extending Northward to the Desarts of Garet. Hidagia stands at the Conflux of the Rivers Mullula and Muluya, which almost enclose it. The Arabs of Dara Plunder'd it, and it was quite forsaken during the Wars of Tewert; but the Turks have restor'd it entirely, sending thither a Colony of the Arabs of Motigia. Garsis, built on a Rock, 5 Miles from Tewert; once the Granary of the Kings of the Race of the Amerines, is all of black Stone, Houses and Walls. Mesa or Tezar, a Strong and Ancient Town, two Miles from Mount Atlas, was once reckoned the 3d in the Kingdom of Fez, and had a Mosque in it Larger than that in the City of Fez; at present it contains 500 Houses, besides Palaces, Colleges and Mosques of a good Structure;

ature, and its Liberties without are of a great Extent. Benikulad, formerly Bent, is on the Descent of Mount Atlas, and near it a Road which leads into Numidia. Hambisum, or Air el Gimm, that is, the Spring of the Idols, so call'd from an ancient Temple, where Men and Women met and committed all Sorts of Leudness.

Here are two delightful Plains, that of Sab el Marza, signifying, the Plain of the Valiant Men, 14 Miles Long and 10 in Breadth. The other is call'd Azagari, Commaren. Mount Angara, 2 Miles from Teza, is very difficult of Ascent by Reason of the Narrowness of the Ways. Civata is 5 Miles from Teza, running East and West, 3 Miles in Length, and contains 50 Villages, besides two Springs, which make two considerable Rivers. On Mount Megeza there are 40 Villages, and 35 on Baronis. On that call'd Miabir, or the Mountain of 100 Wells, there is said to be a dry one, so Deep that they cannot find the Bottom of it. Cunigelgherben, or Condigerherben, is not inhabited, by Reason of its Coldness, being all wooded and full of Leopards and Crows, from which last it is suppos'd to have taken the Name, for Cunigelgherben, signifies, the Way of the Crows. The North Wind sometimes drives such Mountains of Snow on it, that Travellers are often Bury'd alive. Benijassa and Silego are two Mountains, on each Side the River Subu, to each of which is made fast a mighty Beam, with a strong Pulley, through which a Rope passes both Ways, and on it hangs a great Basket that will hold ten Men; the use whereof is, when any will pass over the River, they get into it and are drawn across with much Ease, so that it serves instead of a Bridge.

For the most part this Province is stony, dry, and barren; yet there are some Valleys and Plains which produce Grain and Fruit, being water'd by several small Rivers, as also some Flax, and feed much Cattle and Horses. On some of the Mountains there are abundance of Snakes, and some that go into the Houses and eat what is given them, without doing any Harm.

As for the Natives, those on Mount Megeza are white, able of Body, swift, and good Horsemen; those of Tezerga, are ill looked; the Women of Mount Baronis fair, beautiful and well dress'd; the Men on Mount Benijechseten very brutal, but those of Beni-yalga courteous and modest, and so they vary according to the several Places they inhabit.

C H A P. V.

Of the Kingdom of ARGIER.

THIS Name is given it from the Capital City, for under the Romans it was call'd Mauritania Casariensis, as John Leo, Marmol, Droity, Heylin, and all others agree, only Cluverius will have the Province Casariensis to be that of Dara, in Numidia; but that it was this Kingdom appears by the City Casarea built there by King Juba, in Honour of Cesar Augustus. After their Days, when conquer'd by the Arabs, it was long call'd, the Kingdom of Tremecen, but at present Tremecen is a Dependence on Argier.

On the West it borders on the Kingdom of Fez, from which it is divided by the Rivers of Malvia and Zba, or Zis; on the South are the Desarts of Numidia; on the East the great River Guadiborbar, separating it from Tunis; and on the North the Mediterranean. Leo, and from him Heylin, make the whole Length from East to West 380 Miles, La Croix extends it to 450, and Pierre Dan to near 500. The Breadth from North to South where Largest is 150 Miles, in other Places not above 60. The Climate, Seasons, and Temperature of the Air, are much the same as has been said of Fez and Morocco, they all differing little in Latitude.

The Inhabitants are of several Nations, as Turks and Janisaries, who come from the Levant to make their Fortunes; Native Moors, Tributary to the Turks, and call'd Cabeg-Lesten; Azuzges, who come from the Mountains of Casco and Liber; abundance of Jews and Morisicos expell'd Spain: Targemas being those that came from Arragon and Catalonia, besides great Numbers of Christian Slaves taken at Sea.

The Larbasses are Arabs, who live in the open Country, along the Banks of the Rivers for the Convenience of Water. Others wander in the Desarts, in such Numbers, that they value not the Viceroy of Argier, any more than they did the Kings of Tremecen, and if the Argierines make War on them, they retire to the Desarts of Biledulgerid, where they cannot be pursu'd. At present they pay an Acknowledgment to the Commanding Bassa.

Many Parts of this Kingdom are dry and barren, yet others abound in all Things necessary, not only for the Support of Life, but for Delight and Pleasure. The Northern Parts of Tremecen, next the Mediterranean abound in Pasture; the Mountains West of Tenez, Argier and Bugia are fruitful in Corn and Meadow Land. Along the Coasts of Bona, Constantina and Tremecen, there are Plains full of all sorts of Fruit. The Desarts are the Habitation of Lions, Ostriches, Porcupines, Wild Boars, Hedghogs, Stags, Camæleons, Monkeys and all sorts of Wild-Fowl. The Towns in this Kingdom are thin, and those not populous, excepting the City of Algier. Those up the Inland are inhabited by People haughty and bold, who Trade into Biledulgerid, Guinea, and other Countries of the Blacks.

The most remarkable Rivers here are, the Zba, or Zis, which runs across the Desarts of Angued, along the Frontiers of Fez, and falls into the Mediterranean, its Water clear and full of Fish. Hud-Habra falls into the Zis, near the Plains of Cirat, and along it live many desperate Arabs, who are ill Neighbours to Oran. Tesne, by Ptolemy call'd Siga, and now Huet-Gol, comes from Mount Atlas, across the Desarts of Angued, and loses it self in the Mediterranean, 5 Leagues from Oran. Mina, is a large River, by Ptolemy call'd Chylema, running through the Plains of Bathala Northward, and joyning the Mediterranean near the Town of Arzco. Zilif, formerly Cartena descends from Mount Guanecxis, and crossing the Desarts

Desarts enters the Sea on the Frontiers of Tremecen and Tenez. Ceef, suppos'd to be the Chineta of Ptolemy empties it self 3 Miles from Argier. Heed el Quibir, by the Christians call'd Zinganor, and thought to be the Nazabats of Ptolemy, after rowling down from the high Tops of Mount Atlas, ends its Course near Bugia. Sufgemar, which some believe to be Ptolemy's Ampysogus, has its Rise in Mount Auras, traverses the barren Plains, and passing by Constantina, meets the Mediterranean Yadoch, or Ladoch, has its Origin on Mount Atlas, and is swallow'd by the Sea near Bona. Gua-diborbar, takes its Course along the Frontiers of Tripoli, and joyns the Sea West of Biserta.

This Kingdom was formerly divided into four Parts, which are Tremecen, Tenez, Argier and Bugia; at present the Turks reckon 18 Provinces in it, which with their chief Towns stand thus,

The Province of Tremecen

Was formerly a Kingdom of a large Extent, now reduced to a small Part of the Kingdom of Argier, lying along the Mediterranean from the Confines of Fez, to the Province of Angad, and stretching Southward to the Desarts under Mount Atlas.

Tremecen its Capital, thought to be the Timisi of Ptolemy, stands 5 Miles South from the Mediterranean. The Walls of it Built in the Year 1520. are of Square Stone, 40 Cubits high, and fortify'd with many Towers, and in them 5 Gates with Draw-bridges. It has a strong Castle of Modern Structure, with large Apartments for the Fanizaries, 5 Square Colleges, 8 Principal Mosques, the remainder of 150, 4 Stately Baths out of 160; 12 Hospitals, one for the Venetians, one for the Genoese, four for the Moors, and six for all Strangers; 10 Handsom Market-Places. The Houses Larger and more Beautiful than those at Argier, with curious Gardens of all Sorts of Fruit. Formerly here were reckoned 6000 Houses, but now most of the Inhabitants are fled from the Cruelty of the Turks. Huber is a small Town, half a League South of Tremecen, built by the Romans, and call'd Minara. Tefezare is still considerable, standing in the Plain, 4 Miles East of Tremecen and wall'd, believ'd to be the Astacilis of Ptolemy.

The Country abounds in Water, and produces Plenty of Corn, and great Variety of Fruit. The Inhabitants are divided into four Sorts, Handicrafts, Merchants, Gun-men and Swordsmen. The Merchants Trade into the Country of the Blacks. The Inhabitants of the Towns are Polite and Courteous; those of the Plains wander about from Place to Place. The Kings of Tremecen were once Powerful; they long paid Tribute to the Kings of Spain, and now the Country is Subject to the Turks, govern'd by an Alcaide sent thither by the Bassa of Argier.

The Province of Angad

Is no other than the Western Fenny Part of the Province of Tremecen, 17 Miles in Length from East to West and 12 in Breadth, the River Mulu-ya running through the midst of it, on whose Banks live several considerable Hords of Arabs, as those of Uled Talha, Uled Arrax, and Uled Manzar.

The Towns here are, Guagida, being Ptolemy's Lanigara, seated in a Plain, 9 Miles from the Mediterranean, and containing 3000 Families. Tensegzet, Strong, as standing on a Rock, in the Way to Fez, where the Turks have rais'd Fortifications, made an Arsenal, and keep a good Garrison. Isli, or Zeril, by some call'd Giglina, and taken for the Giva of Ptolemy, is in a Plain, defended by a Fort.

Beni-Zenete is a Mountain in this Province, with several Villages on it, and a Castle in which the Lord of the Mountain lives. It is most barren and unwholesom, but the plain Country yields Corn and all Sorts of Fruit; and in the Desarts there are Abundance of Red and fallow Deer, Wild Boars, Ostriches, Lions, &c. The Desert Part of this Province is full of Arabs, who rob the Passengers betwixt Fez and Tremecen. The Governour resides at Guagida.

The Province of Beni-Araxid

Or Beni-Razid, is a Dependance of Argier, 11 Miles in Length and 5 in Breadth, the Southern Part of it Plain, the Northern Hilly. Its Capital is Beni-Arax, tho' not wall'd, containing 2000 Houses. The next Place is Calaa, formerly Atoa, enclos'd by a strong Wall between two Mountains. The third Almohascor open, but has a Fort to defend it where the Governour resides with a good Garrison. The Soil is every where Fertile in Corn, feeds great Flocks of Cattel, and has store store of Honey. Most of the Natives are Husbandmen or Graziers.

The Province of Miliana.

Lies up the Inland of the Kingdom of Argier, taking the Name of its Capital, and joining on the West to the Province of Beni-Aravid, and on the East to that of Argier. The City, formerly Magnant, or Manliant, is large, and built by the Romans, on a high Hill, 9 Miles from Argier; encompass'd with high Walls, reaching on the one Side to a Deep Valley, and ascending on the other to the Top of the Hill. Mezuna was also built by the Romans, 12 Miles from the Mediterranean, between Mostagan and Tenez, wall'd, and in it a Citadel, a Palace and a large Temple built by the Romans. Tessara, by the Africans call'd Tequideat, that is, the ancient City, is famous in Roman History, by the Name of Cesarea, and now contains 1300 Houses. All the People of this Province are mean and inconsiderable.

The Province, or Kingdom of Couco.

It was formerly call'd Cinnaba, and tho' a Separate Kingdom, yet being Tributary to Argier, the Turks reckon it, as a Dependence thereof. The Mountain Couco, which has its Name from the Capital, seated near it, is properly call'd Equitu Andalous, and lies between Argier and Bugia. The City Couco contains 1600 Houses, is naturally very Strong, as being secur'd by steep Rocks, and where those fail, has a good Wall. Tamazus is a Sea-Port belonging to the King of Couco, but taken from him by the Argierines. Here is great Plenty of Fruit, Flax, Honey, Wax, Corn and Cattle, and on the Mountains there are Iron Mines, and Salt-Peter is found. The Inhabitants are all Mahometans, except some Jews, and a few Christian Merchants. The King's Revenue is valu'd at 700000 Ducats, and he maintains himself against the Turks by the inaccessibleness of his Mountains, standing always upon his Guard, and rather favouring the Spaniards than the Argierines. In the Days of the Emperor Charles the 5th, the Prince then reigning assisted him with 2000 Men against that City, and when he was gone made Peace with Argier, which was not lasting; but tho' the Spaniards endeavour'd at other Times to maintain their Intelligence there, it still prov'd of no Effect.

The Province, or Kingdom of Labez,

Like the last above, is Tributary to Argier, being Mountainous, 3 Miles from Couco and 10 or 11 from Bugia. On the Top of the Hill is a Fort call'd Calaa, and at the Foot of it a Town nam'd Tefsi, with a Citadel, to oppose the Turks. Very little Corn, or Fruit grows here, or scarce any thing but Sword Grass. The Natives are much like those of Couco: This King is able to bring into the Field 30000 Horse and Foot, but is oblig'd Yearly to send the Bassa of Argier 400 Horses, and 1000 Goats, in Return for which he has a Turkish Cymitar set with Stones.

The Province of Tenez

Lies to the Northward of Couco and Labez, a Maritime Part of the Kingdom of Argier, bordering West on Tremecen, East on Argier, properly so call'd, and reaching on the South Mount Atlas. Tenez, the Capital City of it, Marmel thought to be the Loquatum, and by San the Tiposa of Ptolemy, is seated on the flat Top a Hill, 17 Miles East of Oran, and the same Distance West from Argier. It has a Castle, formerly the Palace of the Kings, and now of the Governours. Medina, or Mara, is on the Frontiers of Gerulia and Biledulgerid. The Soil is general Fruitful; the Product of the Country Corn, Cattel, Wax and Honey. The Natives are rude and unpolish'd; but the Arabs have something of Bravery and Generosity, and tho' ignorant of Honour of Parts; for if any such happens to come among them, they stop him to decide all Differences among them.

The Province of Tebessa

Is an Inland Country, bearing the Name of its Capital, formerly call'd Thabuma, and seated on the Frontiers next Biledulgerid, 32 Miles from the Mediterranean. The Walls of it are of Large Square Stones, which gives Occasion to believe was built by the Romans; besides, that there are found in it abundance of Antiquities, and particularly, Latin Inscriptions on Pillars and other Pieces of Marble. On the Mountain near the Town, there are large Dens; which the People fancy were the Dwellings of Giants, tho' it appears they are only Quarries, whence the Stone was dug to Build the Place. This is reckoned one of the beautifullest Towns in Africk, and said to surpass them all in three Things; the Goodness of its Walls, its excellent Trees, and the Multitude of Walnut Trees, which make it look like a Forest on all Sides. However the Air is unwholsom, and the Territory not over fruitful.

The Province of Humanbar

Being the most Western Maritime Province of this Kingdom, bearing the Name of its Capital bordering on the Province of Fez. The City Humanbar, or Humain, which Russel believes to be the Urbara, and Gramaye the Siga of Ptolemy, has a little Harbour, and good Walls; its Houses handsome, built of Stone of several Colours, with each a Well of fresh Water. Tebirit, formerly Thudica, is at the Foot of a Craggy Mountain, on the Coast of the Mediterranean. Ned-Roma, that is New-Rome, stands in a Plain, three Miles from the Sea, thought to be the Celama of Ptolemy. Its Walls, Houses, Ruins, and mighty Stones and Pillars of Alabaster found there with Latin Inscriptions, plainly show it was the Work of the Romans. Here are two Mountains, the one call'd Tarare, or Gualhasu, very High and Steep; the other Tabara. All the Country, both Hills and Plains yield much Cotton, Flax, Fruit and Corn.

The Province of Harefjol

Is another Maritime Province, so call'd from its Capital, where the Governour resides, standing West from Humanbar, and East from Oran, at the Mouth of the River Tefene, or Siga, which walhes it round, except on the South, where is a narrow Passage among the Rocks, was Taken and Plunder'd by Count Peter of Navarre in 1570, but rebuilt by the Arabs, who now possess it, by the Consent of the Turks, by whom the Citadel is garrison'd.

The Province of Oran

Lies still upon the Mediterranean, bounded on the West by that of Huesga, and on the East by Tenez. The City Oran, some say, is the same which Pliny calls Quiza and Ptolemy Buiza, or Uiza, or according to others, his Icosium. Its Situation is opposite to Carthage in Spain, partly in the Plain, and partly on the ascent of a Hill, with the Sea on one side, and Brooks on the other. It was become a mighty Harbour of Pyrats, who infested the Coasts of Spain, which mov'd Cardinal Ximenez to undertake the Conquest of it, wherein he Succeeded and releas'd 20000 Christian Captives. Since then it ever continu'd in the Possession of the Spaniards, till now about the latter end of the Year 1707, or beginning of 1708, it was after a long Siege retaken by the Infidels.

The Province of Mostagan

Has been made by the Turks of two Sea-Ports, which are Mazagan, and Mostagan, the first of them suppos'd by Marmol to be Ptolemy's Portus Deorum, near the Mouth of the River Chiles, two small Leagues from Oran. It is wall'd and has a good Castle. Mostagan, believ'd to be Cartena in Ptolemy, is on the Mediterranean, 9 Miles from Oran, and but two from the River Chiles and Mazagan, containing 1500 Houses, and a stately Mosque, is a good Port, and has a Citadel in the highest Part of it. A League West from Oran, over a small Bay, stands Mazalquivir, signifying a great Port, likely to be the Portus Magnus of Ptolemy, for it is reck'ned one of the largest and safest in the World. The Spaniards took this Place in the Year 1505. and have maintain'd it till this Day, when it is besieg'd by the Infidels. In this Country is the Mountain Magarava running 9 Leagues along the Mediterranean, the People on it, tho' Natives, wander about in Tents like the Arabs, and pay 12000 Crowns a Year to the Bassa of Algier.

The Province of Sargel

Is another of the Maritime Governments, and Disinember'd from that of Tenez. Its Capital of the same Name, is thought to be the ancient Cannica, built by the Romans, on the Mediterranean, 9 Miles East of Tenez. The Walls are of Square Stone, and there are still to be seen the Remains of a Magnificent Temple erected by the Romans. Bresior, or Bisfac, is another Roman Town, near the Mediterranean, the Walls of it a Mile and half in Compass. Four Miles East of Sargel is a Mountain call'd by the Turks Crapula, by the Moors Gir-gir-mor, and by the Christians Batilio, so high that, from the Top of it, a Ship may be seen 12 Leagues off at Sea. The Country affords Corn, Fruit and Flax. The Inhabitants are ingenious; those of Sargel apply themselves to the Silk Manufacture, and those of Bresior have a Crois painted on their Hand and Thigh, an ancient Custom remaining among them since the Time of the Goths.

The Province of Algier.

This was one of the four Provinces of the former Kingdom of Tremecen, bordering Westward on the Province of Tenez, Eastward on that of Bogata, Southward it reaches to Mount Atlas, and on the North has the Mediterranean. The Plains here are inhabited by rich Arabs, call'd Aben Tetia, and the Mountains by Bereberes and Ar-snares.

The City of Algier was the Capital of Mauritania, in the Days of King Juba, and its Antiquity is the Cause we cannot decide who was its Founder. Some will have it to be the ancient Salde; Mercator, and others Julia Casarea. The Mahometan Arabs, who abolish'd all Roman Names, gave it that of Algezir, that is, the Island, on Account of a small one there is opposite to the Mole. Its Figure is Square, and its Situation is on the Side of a Hill, so that the Houses rise one above another, and by that means every one has a full Prospect of the Sea. The Walls are partly Brick and partly Stone, 12 Foot in Thickness and 30 Foot High, in the Upper-part of the Town, but 40 next the Sea, strengthened with Towers and Bastions, and a large Ditch. The Streets, which ascend, as the Town does, are most of them narrow, to keep out the Sun; except one that runs from East to West, which is wider, and full of Shops of all Sorts of Commodities, and there the Corn, Bread, Fish and Flesh-markets are kept. The Gates that open are Six, some others being wall'd up. The Houses are about 15000, all of Brick and Stone, whitened within and without, but small and only one Story high, the Rooms of them brick'd of several Colours. There are above 100 Fountains to serve the City with Water. Five or six Families live in every House, which has four Galleries above and as many below, and a Court in the Middle. The Rooms next the Street have Windows, but those inwards none, nor are there any Gardens behind the Houses. The Bassa's Palace is the noblest Structure in the City. There are Nine other Buildings they call Casseries, which are Cazerns, being the Habitations of 600 Janisaries. Six Prisons, which they call Baths, serve to keep the Captives they take at Sea. The real Baths amount to 62, and the Mosques to 107. Inns and Lodging Houses there are none, but abundance of Taverns and Cooks Shops, kept by Christian Slaves. The Mole makes all the Harbour there is, defended by a Fort, erected on the Point of the Island opposite to it. Besides this, there are several Forts both within and without the City.

The other Towns are Teddelez, formerly Ad-dima; Sofa, which is the ancient Tipassus, and Col de Mudejares, built and inhabited by the Moors that fled out of Spain. The Land here is generally Fruitful, excepting some Barren Mountains, near the Sea. In the Deserts there are Lions, Leopards, Tigers, Wild Boars, Hedgehogs, Buffaloes with long straight Horns, Multitudes of Partridges, and all other Sorts of Wild Fowl. Gramaye tells us of a particular Sort of Beast here call'd, a Gapard, which they tame, as he says he did some himself, and it serves for Hunting, like a Dog. The Head is like a Cats, the Tail mottled and the hind Legs longer than the fore. Here is another Creature between a Dog and a Fox, whose Breath in a Morning fasting is said to cure Numbness in the Limbs.

The Inhabitants of Algier are almost white, strong of Body, and well shap'd, but here are People of all Nations, Janisaries, Turks, Moors, Andaluzians, Jews, Tawny Moors of Couco and Labez, and Azuagues, besides Merchants and Christian Slaves. Without the Towns there are none none but *Moor*s and Arabs living in Tents near the Rivers for the sake of the Water. The Viceroy and great Men let their Beards grow, the common sort wear Whiskers. Their Household-Goods are Pots and Dishes, great wooden Spoons and Trunks, a Mat, a Carpet, a Quilt, and two or three Blankets; yet most of them lie at Night on a Mat, which is their Table-Cloth in the Day. Their Food is Rice, fine Flour made into small grains like Shot, which they call Cuzzuz, boild Meat, and Fruit. The Christians that are free wear their own Country Habit, the Slaves a grey Suit and Seaman's Cap. The common sort of *Moor*s over their Shirt have Linen Drawers, and a loose Garment of white Woollen, with a Hood to it; or else a Mantle down to their Knees, which they wrap about them, and is generally black. In Summer they wear two white Shirts. The Turkish Men of Quality are more decently clad in Silk, or fine Cloth, their Turbants are curious, and Boots on their Legs. The Womens Apparel differs not much in Make from the Mens, but their Garments are more gay and light, their Smocks reaching down to their Heels; their Hair ty'd behind; and they wear Collars, Bracelets, Rings, Pendants, and Caps on their Heads; and when they go abroad they have a Linen Cloth over their Faces, which they make fast under their Chins, and wrap an upper Robe about them, so that they are not to be known otherwise than by the Slaves that attend them.

The ancient Algerines spoke the Phœnician and Latin under the Romans, but the Arabs introduc'd their Language, and since the Turks theirs. The Native *Moor*s speak the old Language of the Country; but the Christians here and throughout the Levant talk Lingua Franca, which is a corruption of Spanish, Italian and French.

The Coin here us'd is most foreign, as *Turkish Sultan*s of Gold, worth a Ducat; Moticals of Fez, worth two Shillings, Spanish Ryals, French Crowns, and Hungarian Ducats. The Money coin'd here, is Barbas, worth half an Après; Après, a small square piece of Silver, 15 of them making a Spanish Ryal; a Doblas, worth above a Crown. At Tremeten they coin pieces of Gold call'd Rubios, worth 55 Après; Medians, worth 50; and Zians worth 100.

Some reckon the Revenues of Algier at 400000, others at 450000, others at 600000 Ducats, all which goes into the Bassi's Pocket, the Grand Signior receiving nothing thence but some young Boys, and other Presents of small Value.

The Province of Bugia

Lies upon the Coast of the Mediterranean, bearing the Name of its Capital, and is East of Algier, having been formerly a Kingdom, stretching 50 Miles Southward over the Mountains to Numidia, being the Eastern Part of the ancient Mauritania Caesariensis, bordering Westward on Algier, Eastward on Gigeri, Southward on Biledulgerid, and wash'd on the North by the Mediterranean.

The Town of Bugia, about whose former Name Authors vary, is seated near the Mediterranean, on the side of a Hill, 17 Miles East of Algier. The Romans were the Founders of it. The Walls are strong, the Streets handsome, and there are in it many Mosques, Colleges, Monasteries, publick Inns, Hospitals, a good Market-place, a noble Citadel, the Walls whereof are all full of Letters made in the Plaster, or cut in Wood curiously, that this Ornament is thought to have cost as much as the Fort. Micile or Mesile is a Town on the Frontiers next Numidia. Stefal, the Marmol call'd Tetzteza, and by Ptolemy, Apfa is 15 Miles South of Bugia, in a pleasant Valley the Walls of it of Stones of a wonderful largeness. Necanz, formerly Vaga, is one of the pleasantest Towns in Barbary, towards the Frontiers of Numidia wall'd, the Houses but one Story high, with Gardens to them all.

The Soil is poor and bears but little Wheat but good Fruit. The Mountain People are bold, courteous, and much given to Railery, and they have a Cross painted on their Hands and Cheek ever since the Goths were Masters of that Country. Their Wealth consists in Fruit, Cattle, Hempen and Flaxen Cloth. The Money they use is made of pieces of Iron weighing half a Pound and bits of Silver of four Grains.

The Province of Gigeri

Takes its Name from an open Town and a Castle that commands all the Country. The Town is near the Sea between Algier and Bugia, and contains 200 Houses. Near it on the top of a Hill stands an old Castle, almost inaccessible. This Province reaches to the Frontiers of Numidia, and has within its compass Mount Auraz which runs 16 Miles from North to South. Procopius mentions this Mountain by the Name of Aurazia, and places it ten Miles from Carthage. The Land here is poor, bearing only Barly, Flax and Hemp.

The Province of Constantina,

So call'd from its Capital, lies upon the Mediterranean, bordering upon Tunis. The City of this Name, formerly call'd Circa Numidia, or Circa Julia, was built by Micipsa, King of Numidia. It is seated on the South side of a high Mountain encompassed on all sides with steep Rocks, and fortified on the North with high Walls of black square Stones, which makes the access very difficult. The Houses in it are about 1000, the Streets handsome, and every Trade has its separate Quarter. On the North side is a Citadel and without the City many ancient Ruins, among which a Roman Triumphal Arch. The descent to the River is by Steps cut in the Rocks and opposite to the said River a Vault going down in the same manner, the Roof, Columns and Floor being all of a Piece. Three Stones throw from the City is a hot Spring, and a little further Eastward a cold one, with a Marble Structure, adorn'd with Statues. The People fancy this Structure was a College, and that the Master and Scholars being wicked Men, were converted into Statues.

The Territory of Constantina yields thirty for one, and the Mountains want for nothing. The hot Spring above-mention'd breeds abundance of Snails, which the silly Women take for Devils, and believe they give them Fevers, and do other Mischiefs; for prevention whereof they kill a white Pullet, and putting it into a Dish, with a Wax-candle, where some Marabout, or pretended Religious Man makes his Advantage of it.

The

The People on the Mountains are warlike, but civiliz'd; yet often fighting for their Wives, who run from one Hill to another when they grow weary of their Husbands. They are able to bring 40000 Men into the Field.

The Province of Bona

Is also Maritime, and so call'd from Bona, the Capital, formerly Hippo, famous for its Bishop S. Augustin, built by the Romans on steep Rocks, near the Mediterranean. The Town is very small, and the Streets narrow. A quarter of a League from it are the Ruins of a Monastery built by S. Augustin, and by it a curious Spring which the Moors still call by his Name. On the East side is a Fort, built by the King of Tunis, where the Governour resides with 200 Janisaries. The Country is fruitful in Corn, shaded with Jujub Trees, the Fruit whereof the Natives dry in Summer to feed on in Winter. There is also great plenty of Cattel, and of all sorts of Fruit. Only a small part of the Mountains is inhabited, by reason of the continual Incurfions and Rapine of the Arabs. Six Miles East of Bona is a Fort call'd, the Bastion of France, kept by the French, who have there Magazines of Corn and other Commodities, Apartments for those concern'd, a Chapel, a Burial-place, a Garden, and an Hospital, all kept by a strong Garrison.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Kingdom of Tunis.

THIS Kingdom formerly contain'd the Provinces of Constantina, Tunis, Tripoli, and Essab, and extended 120 Leagues along the Mediterranean, but has now lost them all, and is bounded on the West by the River Guadilborbar, separating it from Constantina; on the East by the River Capes, which parts it from Tripoli; on the South it joins to Numidia, and on the North is water'd by the Mediterranean.

The principal Rivers are Guadilborbar, formerly call'd Tusca, which rises a little above the Town of Urbs, and in its course to the Sea has so many Windings, that those who Travel from Tunis to Bona are oblig'd to Ford it 25 several times, there being neither Bridge nor Boat on it. The Mouth of it is under Tabarca, 7 Miles from Bagia. Magrida, anciently Catadus, seems to be an Arm of Guadilborbar, which after watering the Country of Choros falls into the Sea near Marfa. Megerada, or Magiurdecz, formerly Bagrada, where Atilius Regulus during the first Carthaginian War found a Serpent 120 Foot long, has its Source in the Country of Zeb, runs by Tebessa, and winds with the Sea near Garelmeleh, 10 Miles from Tunis. It sometimes overflows to such a degree, that Travellers are oblig'd to wait three or four Days to Ford it. The Caps or Capes, thought to be the Triton of the Ancients, proceeds from a sandy Desert near Mount Vasalat, towards the South, and meets the Sea at a Town of the same Name; from which the Bay is so call'd; and by the Ancients Syrtes. Near the Town of Elhamma, this River makes a Lake call'd, The Lepers Lake, because the Water of it drank, cures such as are troubled with that Disease.

This Kingdom has many fruitful Mountains and Valleys on the South, among which are Zagaon, Gueslet, Benitesfren, and Nefusus; the two last seven Miles from Zerbi and Asfacus. Zagaon is six Miles South from Tunis; on the top and sides, and at the bottom of it are the Ruins of many Castles built by the Romans, with Latin Inscriptions cut on Marble Stones. Water was brought from the same Mountain in Aqueducts to Carthage. There are also Roman Remains on Mount Gueslet, which is three Leagues from Caruan.

The division of this Kingdom is into eight Provinces, five of them Maritime, and three Inland, which with their Principal Towns, are as follows:

Tunis.	{ Tunis.	Urbs and Beggia.	{ Urbs. Beggia. Hain. Zammin. Casba.
Goletta.	{ Goletta. Marfa. Nebel. Cammart. Ariana.	Susa.	{ Susa. Mahometa. Heraclea. Monasterio.
Byferta.	{ Byferta. Porto Farina.	Africa.	{ Africa, or Mehedia.
		Cairoan.	{ Cairoan. Tobulba.

The Province and City of Tunis:

This City was known to the Greeks and Romans by the same Name; and Livy places it three Miles from Carthage, which shews they are much deceiv'd who make Tunis and Carthage the same. It is seated near the point of the Gulph of Goletta, two Miles from the Mediterranean, is a League in compass, and enclos'd with a Wall 40 Cubits high. All the Outworks about it were destroy'd by the Turks. The Gates were five, the great Streets 18, besides abundance of small cross ones; the Markets or Squares 16; 315 Mosques, 12 Christian Chapels in the Suburbs, 8 Synagogues;

Synagogues, 24 Hermitages, 150 Baths, 86 Schools, 9 Colleges, 64 Hospitals, and 300 Woollen and Linen-Drapers; but most of these Structures have been destroy'd. There are now 9 Persons to shut up the Slaves; the Bassa's Palace is a noble Structure, the Citadel is strong, and by it a Mosque, on which there was a Tower, reckon'd the next in all Africk to that of Fez. The other Structures still remaining, are a Court with Cazernes about it for the Janizaries, an Exchange for the Merchants, a Custom-House, the Agas's and Cid Mahomet's Palace; and for the number of Houses it is inferior to few Cities in Europe, but they are small, and only one Story high. There were formerly three Suburbs, at present but two. The Tombs of the Turks are about the City, adorn'd with Marble and curious Beds of Flowers about them. Within the City there are neither Wells nor Springs, but only great Cisterns, in which they save the Rain Water, and of late Years an Aqueduct was made by a Bassa to bring some Water.

The Soil of the Kingdom of Tunis is generally fruitful towards the West, which is water'd by several Rivers; but very poor Eastward, for want of Water; towards the South it is all Hills and Valleys, yielding good Fruit. About the City the Land is so dry, that it must be water'd, which, with the Incursions of the Arabs, makes Corn very dear; yet there are many good Gardens near the Walls, and such Woods of Olive-Trees for a League about, that they have Oil to send abroad, and they make Charcoal of Olive-Wood, having no other. On the Mountains there are great numbers of wild Beasts.

The City is inhabited by Moors, Turks, Jews, and Christian Slaves of all Nations, taken by the Pirates. There is also a sort of Scoundrels, look'd upon as Saints, who go bare-headed, and without Shoes or Stockings, and are maintain'd by the publick. The Scholars, Handicrafts and Traders are decently clad, wearing Turkish Turbants, which the Courtiers and Soldiers do not. The Women are neat according to their Quality, and go abroad Veil'd, spending much Money on sweet Scents. The common People feed much on a sort of Composition they call Besit, made of Water, Barley Meal, Oil, and Juice of Limons, which they eat raw. They also eat Meat, especially Lamb. They have another Mixture they call Lafis, an Ounce whereof makes them extraordinary merry, and creates an Appetite; besides other Inventions to provoke Lust. The People in Mount Zagaon live in Tents upon the Front of their Honey; those towards the South have the same Habitations, removing from Place to Place to graze their Cattel.

The Bassa's Revenue is reckon'd worth 200000 Ducats a Year. The greatest Trade here is Oil, Olives, Soap, Ostrich Feathers, and Horses. The Moorish Kings of Tunis coin'd Siddanins of 24 Caracts Weight; there are also square pieces of Silver which they call Nosras, as also Aspers, Doubles, and Barbas, of the same Value as at Algier. As to Government, the Dey, who is supreme, is chosen by the Divan. The Divan is a Council compos'd of the Agas of the Janizaries, one Chaviz, 12 Odabachis, 24 Boulombachis, two Secretaries, and 4 Chians, who decide all Affairs with the consent of the Dey. The Cadis are Judges in matters of small Consequence.

After the Mahometans had made themselves

Masters of Barbary, one Ibrahim erected the Kingdom of Tunis, whose Successors held it till Abdal Mutmen King of Morocco dispossest'd them, and plac'd a Governour over the Kingdom. Thus it continued for some Generations, till one Abraham, or Abu-Ferez, who was Governour, revolted, and subduing the Kingdom of Tiencen, stul'd himself Emperour of Africk about the Year 1210. From that time the Kingdom descended in the same Line, tho' with many Revolutions, till Muley Affez destroy'd all the Royal Family, except his Brother Arazar, who fled, and imploring the Assistance of the famous Pirate Barbarossa, that false Infidel, instead of restoring him, enthron'd himself under the Protection of the Grand Signior. Muley Affez had recourse to the Emperour Charles the 5th, who restor'd him; yet he held it not long, being defeated, and his Eyes put out by his own Son; and not long after Aluch Hali, or Ochiali, another famous Pirate, conquer'd the Kingdom again for the Turks, who kept it till Don John of Austria drove them thence in 1570, but in 1574 it fell again into the Hands of the Infidels, and has so continued ever since.

The Province of Goletta

Adjoins to the Lake of the same Name; it is supposed to be the Island Galatha, or Galitha of Ptolemy, or the Goulon of Pliny; but others say the Fort was so call'd from the Italian Goletta, or little Neck, because it is seated on a rising Ground at the Mouth of the Bay, or Lake. The Mahometans laid the Foundations, the Emperour Charles the 5th finish'd it, and the Turks since they were Masters of it have added some Outworks, and many other Structures, so that it is now more like a Town than a Fort.

The other Towns here are Nebel or Nabis, a small Place built by the Romans, which Ptolemy calls Neapolis, and the Italians to this Day Napoli de Barbaria, seated on the Ocean, 3 Leagues East of Tunis. Cannart, near the Rivers of old Carthage, wall'd, and populous. Arima, not far from Tunis, built by the Goths, and so call'd from their Heretick Patriarch Arius. Arralez, formerly a Roman Colony, rebuilt by the Kings of Tunis. Marsa in Arabick signifying a Port, stands where the ancient Port of Carthage was, where there is a curious Palace, and several Houses of Pleasure to which the Bassa's go to divert themselves; 800 Houses, one Mosque and a College. Near this small Town stood the ancient renown'd City of Carthage, which contended with Rome for the Empire of the World, and after three bloody Wars, fell under the Fortune of that rising City, and was reduc'd to Ashes. Here is still to be seen an Aqueduct which carry'd Water to all parts of the City; this is standing, all the rest are a heap of Ruins.

The Air of this Country is reckon'd wholesome, being cool'd by the Sea, and the Land for the most part producing excellent Fruit, Corn, and Sugar.

The Province of Byferta

Byferta at present is but a small Village, near the Mediterranean, which some will have to be Utica; but Marmol and others rather suppose Utica stood where now is Porto Farina, or el Mellis.

Mella, as the Bereberes call it, and the Turks Basinet, signifying the Son of the Lake, because the Sea coming in there, forms a Bay. This Town contains 6000 Houses, 2 large Prisons, a Magazine, and two Towers that defend the Harbour, and has eight Villages about it. Tho' this whole Province lies along the Coast, it has no want of fresh Water, and abundance of excellent Fish taken in the Lake or Bay; yet the Land yields little, not that it is barren, but because it is destroy'd by the Arabs. The Men here are ill Apparell'd, as only wrapping themselves up in a piece of coarse Woollen, with a bit of Linen about their Necks, Turbants on their Heads, and without Shooes or Stockings. Their daintiest Fare is Cakes bak'd with Eggs in them, which they keep the Year about. The common sort lie upon Sheep-skins; the better sort have Beds made fast along the Wall, about the height of a Man, to which they go up with ladders. When they go to War, they wear superstitious Charms about their Necks, which they fanſie will secure them against Danger.

The Provinces of Urbs and Beggia.

These two small Governments contain the Towns of Urbs, Beggia, Hain Zammin, and Casba, with some large Plains. Urbs was a Roman Colony, call'd Turridis, about 20 Leagues South of Tunis, where there are still Remains of Antiquity, as Marble Statues, and Latin Inſcriptions. Beggia is another Roman Foundation, ten Leagues from Tunis, and but three from the Sea, most of the Walls yet standing. Casba, a Roman Colony also, is now Desert. Hain Zammin was built by the Kings of Tunis, seven Miles from Beggia. All the Plains about them abound in Corn. The Inhabitants of Urbs are rude, being all Peasants; those of Beggia are more polite.

The Province of Sufa, or Soufa.

The Towns here are, first Sufa, formerly considerable and thought to be Adrumetum, now much decay'd, but has a Port, where the Pirates of Tunis ride at Anchor. 2. Hammameth, or Mahometia, built by the Mahometans, on the Coast, 17 Miles from Tunis. 3. Monasterio, a Roman Colony, so called from a Monastery of Augustinians which was near it, has high and strong Walls. The Country produces Barley, Figs and Olives, and has good Pasture Land. The Inhabitants of the Towns are a civil, trading People.

The Province of Mehedia, or Africa.

The Town the Europeans call Africa, suppos'd to be the Aphrodisium of Ptolemy, is by the Natives nam'd Mehedia, seated on a Neck of Land, wash'd on both sides by the Mediterranean; fortify'd with good Walls, Ditches and Towers next the Land, and by banks of Sand to the Sea. The Port is spacious, but the entrance to it extremely narrow. The Gate on the Land-side is very strong, and without it an arch'd Way 70 Foot long, so dark, that it is a Terror to all Strangers.

The Province of Cairoan

Contains the Town of the same Name, and those of Tobulba and Asfachus, The first of them is 7 Miles from the Sea and 20 from Tunis, built by Ocuba, General to Othman, Mahomet's Successor, in the Year 652, and defended with Brick Walls. He there built a stately Mosque, supported by Marble Statues, among which, two are of an inestimable Value, being of a bright sparkling Red, full of curious white Spots, like Porphyry. All the Country about it is a sandy barren Desert, without any Water, so that all the Provisions are brought by Sea, from other Maritime Towns. Tobulba and Asfachus have nothing remarkable. In the Territory of these two last, there are abundance of Olive and other Trees. That which makes Cairoan famous is, its being the Seat of Mahomet's Vicar; for which Reason all Arabs think it so Holy, that those who are bury'd in it can not be Damn'd, as partaking of the Prayers of that Vicar and his Priests; and Great Men, to shew their Respect, take off their Stockings when they enter the Place. They also Build several Chapels there and appoint them Revenues, for which they expect to go straight to Heaven.

Six Miles from Mascarez, in this Kingdom, is the Island of Tabarca, about 500 Paces from the Continent, possess'd by French Merchants, who have built a Fort on it, and keep a Garrison of 200 Men to secure their Trade and the Coral Fishery. Opposite to Tabarca is another Island, call'd Galata, in which there is nothing remarkable.

C H A P. VII.

Of the Kingdom of TRIPOLI, whereof BARCA is a Dependance.

THIS Kingdom, so nam'd from its Capital, is now govern'd by a Bassa, and comprehends the Provinces of Tripoli, properly so call'd, Fessab, Mecellata, Mefrata, or Cyrenaica and Barca, besides some small Islands. Its Extent East and West is from the Island Zerbi to Egypt, and from the Mediterranean on the North, to the Country of the Blacks on the South. Leaving all other Particulars to be spoken of under the Provinces, the Towns of Note in each of them are these.

Tripoli properly so call'd.	{	Old and New Tripoli.	{	Alcudia.

The Province of TRIPOLI, properly so call'd,

On the West is parted from the Kingdom of Tunis, by the River Capes; Eastward it borders on Mecellata; on the North it has the Mediterranean, and on the South Mount Garian.

The City Tripoli, which gives its Name to the Kingdom, is so call'd from those great Rocks, lying at the Mouth of its Harbour, level with the Water, and was first Subject to the Romans, then to the Kings of Morocco, of Fez, and of Tunis; then the Genoese made themselves Masters of it, and were expell'd by the Spaniards. Barbarezzi took it next, and after him the Emperor Charles the 5th, who gave it to the Knights of Malta, who kept it till 1551, when Sinan and Dragut, the Turkish Admirals, gain'd it from them; since which Time it has been a sort of Commonwealth like Tunis and Algier, under the Protection of the Turks. The old City was destroy'd by Omar the Second Mahometza Caliph, and is now little inhabited. The New one call'd Tripoli in Barbary, to distinguish it from the other in Syria, is seated not far from the Old, on a Sandy Ground, is not large, but very populous, enclos'd with good Walls, Towers and Ramparts, without a Ditch, and only two Gates; one on the South towards the Land, and the other towards the North, next the Sea. It has no Citadel, but only two Forts on the North and South sides before the Port, which is spacious and good. The Christian Slaves being but few, here is only one Prison to keep them in.

Cabez, Caps, or Cipes, the Tacape of the Ancients, stands on a Bay of the same Name, is wall'd and defended by a Fort. Machres or Mahara is an open Town at the Mouth of Capes Bay, but has a Citadel. Elhamma was built by the Romans, 3 Miles from Cabez, wall'd and has still Latin Inscriptions on the Gates. Ziora, thought to be the Port of Pisidon, is very ancient. There is another Place on the same Coast, call'd Casarnacur, thought to be the former Gichris.

Two noted Sands render the Access to Tripoli difficult, the one opposite to the Province of Eflab, the other about the Island Querqanes. The Rivers Casarnacur, Rasaminabes, and Magro, once call'd Cenises, descending from Mount Atlas, run through this Province to the Sea. Near Elhamma is an excessive hot Spring, convey'd to the Town by an Aqueduct. Some of the Inhabitants drink of it, when it has stood a Day, but it is very Sulphureous. Near the Spring is a Pool, call'd, the Leper's Lake, because it Cures that Distemper.

Corn is always dear at Tripoli, by reason of the Barrenness of the Soil, which yields nothing but Dates. The Inhabitants of that City are Merchants and Weavers; those of Cabez poor Fishermen and Husbandmen; those of Elhamma live upon Rapine. The Bassa's Revenue amounts to 18000 Ducats a Year. The Pirates here do much harm.

Geographers contest whether the Island Gerbi or Zerbi, once call'd by the Arabs Gezira, now Algibens, and by the Spaniards Gelves, be the Gibba, or the Egimurus, or the Zeta, or the Glaucus of the Ancients. It lies at the Mouth of Capes, is 4 Miles about, and has only some small Villages on it, and is so barren that all the Natives Industry will scarce make it bear any Corn. On the Coast next to it grow abundance of Lotus Trees, the Fruit whereof is so pleasant when ripe that the Greeks said, it made Strangers that eat it forget their Countries; whence the Inhabitants of this Island were call'd Lotophagites.

The Province of Eflab

Commences on the West beyond the Mountain Garian and Benignarid, and is terminated by a River that parts it from Mezrata. We have nothing remarkable to add concerning the Towns it contains, mention'd in the foregoing Table. Mount Garian, reckon'd in this Country is extraordinary high and Cold, standing North from Mount Atlas 4 Miles South of Tripoli, and parted from those of Benitfren and Nefusus by sundry Defarts, yet contains 130 Villages. Benignarid is a Branch of Mount Atlas, 4 Miles from Tripoli, and has 150 Villages. All this Country produces very little Corn, but plenty of Dates, Olives and Saffron which is Sold at Grand Cairo, a third dearer than any other sort. The Berberes inhabiting Mount Garian are Cowards, and suffer the Arabs to trample on them; but those of Benignarid defend themselves manfully against those Robbers.

The Province of Mecellata.

Was by the Ancients call'd Syrtes, and by the present Arabs, Ceirat el Quivir, lying along the Mediterranean, 8 Miles from Tripoli Eastward. The Capital of the same Name, was by Ptolemy nam'd Macomaca or Calamacula. The other Places are inconsiderable. The Land produces plenty of Dates and Olives, and the Inhabitants who can raise 6000 Men, are under the Conduct of a Commander, to defend themselves from the Arabs, but Subject to the Turks.

The Province of Mezrata, or Cyrenaica.

Marmol supposes this to be the ancient Cyrenaica, or Pentapolis, which was a Part of Libya. It borders Westward on Mecellata, Eastward on Barca, Northward on the Mediterranean, and Southward on Libya. Pentapolis was but a part of that Province, so call'd from the five Towns, Cyrene, Berenice, or Hesperia, Apollonia, Ptolemais and Arjinoe, or Tenchira; now Coreno, Berbie, or Bernic, Bon-Andrea, Tolometa and Trocara. Neither these, nor the other Towns are worth the Readers Information. The Pirates here ravage the Coasts, and the Arabs the Inland; yet the People of Mezrata are Brave and indifferent wealthy, by their trading with European Commodities into the Country of the Blacks, whence, in Exchange, they bring Slaves, Civet and Musk, which yield them good Profit in Turky.

The Province, or Defart of Barca or Marmorica.

This Name of Barca, seems to be of great Antiquity, for Virgil here places the Barceans, and Ptolemy the Barcites; and old Authors placing the City Barca in Cyrenaica, does not contradict this Notion, because that Province extended into Egypt, and consequently included Marmorica. Generally all that Country is call'd Barca, and the Arabs name it Sohart, or Ceyrat Barca, the Defart, or the Stormy Way; for in short, it is scarce any thing else but a vast Defart, reaching from the Province of Mezrata and Cape Raxaltin to the Confines of Alexandria, 164 Miles in Length from East to West, and 30 in Breadth from North to South. For Towns here they are inconsiderable and deserve no Description. Almost all the Land is sandy, poor and waste, with very little Water, so that only some small Spots near to Villages yield a little Corn and some Dates, of which little they Exchange some with their Neighbours for Sheep and Camels, having no Forage to breed them. This extreme Poverty obliges the Parents often to send their Children into Sicily to get their living. The Men are generally lean and ill look'd, and Want makes them rob on the High-Ways, which obliges the Caravans to take a great Compass to avoid them. When they take any Traveller, they make him drink warm Milk, then shake him, with his Head down, to see if he has swallow'd any Gold.

C H A P. VIII.

The Historical Account of BARBARY.

THE History of the several Kingdoms mention'd is so interwoven, that we have thought fit rather to give a short Abstract of it entire, than dismember'd under every Part. The most receiv'd Opinion is, That Cham, the Son of Noah first peopled Egypt, and his Race the rest of Africk, but particularly his Son Phut first began to inhabit the Eastern Parts of Barbary, as is testify'd by Josephus and S. Jerome, who both tell us the Country was from him call'd Phut, and Ptolemy also names the River Phut, or Phthuth in the same Region. Hence they spread themselves farther, and at length all over that Part of the World. However there is no doubt, but that they afterwards receiv'd fresh Colonies by Sea out of Phœnicia, of the Race of Canaan, for even in S. Augustin's Days, as he informs us, the Country People there call'd themselves Canaanites. Besides Procopius affirms, That there were Marble Pillars near Tangier, with this Inscription; We fly from the Face of the Robber Joshua, the son of Nun. This, being of the same Extraction, might move Dido to fly to this Coast from her Brother Pygmalion, and there build the Fortrefs of Byrsa, afterwards the mighty City of Carthage. Some will have this Place to have been founded long before, and only the Castle added by her; however it was, for we have not room to enter upon that Controversy, these Canaanites being a more Politick and Warlike People than the rude Africans, and hiring the Numidian and Mauritanian Soldiers subdu'd their Neighbours first, and by degrees extended their Conquests from the Frontiers of Egypt, to the Mouth of the Streights along the Shore. Ambition knowing no Bounds, the Carthaginians pass'd over into Spain and Sicily, making themselves Masters of the greatest part of both, till the Romans, vying with them for Empire, engag'd in the Quarrel, and after three bloody Wars, the second of which had almost brought Rome to Destruction, took Carthage and burnt it down to the Ground.

The Romans having thus subverted Carthage, and brought all its Dominions under their Subjection, rested not there, but extended their Command on all Sides, reducing Numidia and its King Jugurtha, whose Progenitors had long reign'd there, and afterwards Juba, King of Mauritania, who had espous'd Pompey's Party against Cesar. Thus all this Coast of Africk, even to the Atlantick Ocean, and all up the Inland as far as the Defarts, became a Part of that mighty Empire, and was divided into the Provinces already mention'd in the proper place. So it continu'd under several Emperors, till Christianity flourishing, this Country became as illustrious as any other for Learning and Piety, as appears by the many Ornaments the Church then receiv'd from it, as particularly the great S. Augustin, Tertullian, S. Cyprian, Julius Africanus, Arnobius, Lactantius, Victorinus Afer, Optatus Milevitanus, Victor Uticensis, Fulgentius, Primasius, and many others.

This was the flourishing Condition of Africk, or Barbary, when the Vandals, a barbarous Northern Nation, having forc'd their Way through France, enter'd Spain, with the Suevians and Alans, and being after 18 Years Possession of the Southern Coast of Spain, call'd Andaluzia, hard press'd by the Goths, upon the Invitation of Bonifacius the Emperour's Lieutenant in Africk, they pass'd over thither about the Year of Christ 427, under their King Genfericus, and subdu'd the greater Part of what the Romans had there possess'd. These Vandals were then Arians, and spread their Heresy as wide as their Command, driving thence all the Orthodox Christians, and holding the So-

verignty of all that Tract of Land, under seven Kings successively, till the Year 534, when the renowned Belisarius, the Emperour Justinian's General, overthrew Gilimer the last King, and again brought all that Region under the Roman Empire. Justinian then made it a Prefecture of it self, whereas before it had been subject to the Præfatus Prætoris of Italy, and this form of Government lasted, till

In the Year 647, Othman the 3d Caliph of the Saracens, sent Huch, his General, with a mighty Army, who wrested all that mighty Dominion from the Roman Empire, and from that Time it remain'd a Province of the Mahometan Arabs. The Caliphs, or Miramamolin's held the Sovereignty here till the Year 800, when Haroun Raschid, sent thither Aglab Ibrahim, as Governour, but he erected himself a Monarchy, in the Province properly call'd Africk, and Parts adjacent, which he left to his Posterity and they held it, by the name of Aglabites till 900, their Rule extending from Egypt to Tunis.

About the same Time with Aglab, abovemention'd, the Edrissites, descended from Edris, of the Race of Ali, Mahomet's Son-in-Law, erected themselves another Monarchy, in the Western parts of Barbary, containing all Mauritania and Numidia, where that Family rul'd for the space of 100 Years, keeping their Court at Fez, Tangier, and Ceuta.

When the aforesaid two Races had thus divided Barbary among them, for above an hundred Years, One Abou Mohammed Obeidallah, look'd upon as a Prophet, and pretending to descend from Fatimah, Mahomet's Daughter, having thus drawn the Multitude to his Side; first expell'd the Aglabites the Province of Africa, and soon after the Edrissites out of all their Dominions, taking the Title of Mehedi, signifying Director of the Faithful, and left all those Countries to his Successors, who conquer'd Egypt, and being thus possess'd of all that lies between the Red Sea and Atlantick Ocean, stil'd themselves Caliphs. Of these there were 14 who reign'd till the Year 1163, and were call'd Fatimites.

Adhed, the last of these, being hard press'd by the Christians, crav'd Aid of Noureddin, Sultan of Bagdat, who sent Saladin with a mighty Army, and he having deliver'd the Country from the Franks, took Possession of it for his own Prince, after whose Death he assum'd the Sovereignty, and became one of the most formidable of those Mahometan Sovereigns.

However Saladin extended not his Kingdom far into Africk, for before his Rise the Almoravides, who at first only pretended to Religion, being by their Hypocrisy grown formidable, had began to acquire Dominion, and about the Year 1076, when Joseph Ben Tassefi, one of that Race extended his Conquests to the Ocean and Mediterranean, and built the City of Morocco; after which passing over into Spain, he subdu'd all the Moors there. Yet the Succession continu'd in his Posterity only till the Year 1136, when Mahomet Abdalmonem another canting Prophet, having deluded the Multitude, overthrew and expell'd the Race of the Almoravides, and rais'd his own Family to the Throne, which possess'd it till the Year 1290.

Then Bucar Aben Merin finding that reigning Family much weakned, by the Loss of a mighty Battel in Spain, revolted, and bearing down all that oppos'd him, settled the Seat of his Empire at Fez, appointing a Viceroy to govern at Morocco. His Successors enjoy'd the Sovereignty of the greater Part of Africk, by the Name of Merinies. Alboacen the 8th of them, being routed with a great Slaughter in Spain, in the Year 1340, was, at his return into Africk, depos'd by his own Son Alboacen, who enjoy'd not long a Crown so undutifully wrested from his Father, the Eastern Parts of Barbary revolting from him, and the Portugueses taking many places in the West. Thus the Monarchy being weakned on all Sides went on in a declining Condition, till about the Year 1508, one Mahomet Ben Hamet, a fresh Hypocrite, pretending to be descended from Mahomet, sent his Sons in Pilgrimage to Mecca, which gain'd them such mighty Reputation, that Mahomet, then King of Fez, made Hamet the Elder, Governour of the College at Amadorach, and Mahomet the Younger, Tutor to his Children. Not long after, these two obtain'd the Command of an Army against the Portugueses, whom they routed and took many Places from them. Next they subdu'd the Provinces of Ducala, Suez and Hea, then took Morocco, and Hamet assum'd the Title of King of it, as Mahomet did of Suez. The King of Fez now dying, Hamet refus'd to Acknowledge his Successor, and was himself soon after vanquish'd and expell'd his Kingdom by his own younger Brother Mahomet. He after this Success overthrew the King of Fez, and left all those Dominions to his Posterity, who still reign there. But it must be observ'd that those Realms, tho' great in themselves, are only a small Part of what the Caliphs there possess'd.

We have already seen how Algier separated it self from the Dominion of those mighty Princes, and of an inconsiderable Lamb of their Empire, is become a Potent State, subsisting principally upon Piracy; yet subject to the Turk, on whom it has an absolute Dependance, saving that, it has the Power of Peace and War, the Form of Government being Republican; but the Turkish Bassa residing there, raises a very great Revenue, and has no small Share in the Government. Tunis and Tripoli have follow'd the same Example, being both a Sort of Commonwealths, with the same Subordination to the Grand Seignior. So that it appears, all this vast Tract of Land call'd Barbary, is now divided between that Sultan and the Emperour of Fez and Morocco, excepting only those few Towns the Spaniards and the Portugueses still keep along the Coast. The latter have now nothing left but Mazagan upon the Atlantick Ocean; the former still hold Mazalquivir, Melilla and Pennon within the Mediterranean, and Ceuta upon the Mouth of the Streights, and thus much may suffice for Barbary.

CHAP. IX.

OF EGYPT.

THIS is the Fruitfullest, the Richest, the most populous and noblest Kingdom in Africk. If we may give any Credit to ancient Historians, here were reckon'd in the days of Amasis, who reign'd about the Time of Nebuchadnezzar 20000 Towns, but the excessive Number gives us Reason to believe, that the greater Part must have been small Villages; however of later Times here are said to have been 2000 wall'd Towns. The Ancients call'd this Country, the Granary of the World, and it is certain that the Plenty or Scarcity of the Roman Empire depended on the good or bad Harvest of Egypt; and being thus considerable in all Respects it will deserve a more ample Description than any other Part of Africk.

As to the Name of Egypt, Strabo and Diodorus Siculus will have it to be so call'd from Aegyptus, the Brother of Danaus, who reign'd there 68 Years; yet others derive it from Aiguphtus, signifying the Land of Coptus, which was once its Capital City. This is the last Name, which has prevail'd, for it had several others before. Berosus calls it Oecania; Xenophon, Ogygia; Herodotus, Potamites; Lucian Melambolos; Homier Hefestia; the Holy Scripture Misraim, from Cham's Grandson of that Name; the Arabs Mezra; the Chaldeans Mesray; the Syrians Misri; the Ethiopians Gabaz; the Turks Elkebits; and the ancient Egyptians themselves Chamia, from Cham the Son of Noah, who first Peopled it; and the Christians of this Country still retain the Name of Copti's, which may very well be a corruption of Egopthes, instead of Egyptians, the Christians being the true ancient Natives; whereas all the Mahometans, now the prevailing Party, are a Mixture of Arabs, Turks, Tartars, and several other Eastern Nations.

Not to enter upon the various Bounds assign'd to it by ancient Authors, which is only perplexing the Reader, those assign'd to it by Modern Geographers, and the most to be rely'd on are, on the East the Red Sea and Isthmus of Suez; on the North the Mediterranean, on the West Barbary, or the Kingdom of Tripoli and the Desert of Barca, and on the South Nubia and Aethiopia Superior, or Abyssinia; the whole lying between 48 and 55 Degrees of Longitude; and from 23 to 31 of Latitude, being about 600 Miles from North to South, and 400 from East to West, taken both ways in its greatest Extent. It is every where encompass'd with sandy Deserts, except on the North Side next the Mediterranean; for on the West and South it has those of Barca, Nubia and Ethiopia, and on the East those of Thebaida, formerly so famous for the Multitude of Anchorites, who retir'd to live an Angelical Life, devoting themselves entirely to Contemplation.

Ptolemy divides Egypt into 40 Districts or Governments, Herodotus into 28; and some Authors increase that Number to 44; but the most probable is, that there were 30, because in the famous Labyrinth, or Mysterious Temple of that Kingdom, which was an Emblem of it, there were 30 large Rooms, or Apartments; so the Upper, Middle and Lower Egypt had each of them ten, which Division was made by the ancient King Sesostris; but afterwards alter'd by other Sovereigns, and therefore it will not need to have more said of it.

The Modern is divided generally into three Parts, as set down with their Principal Towns in the following Table.

The Lower Egypt.	{	Busiris.

The Lower Egypt,

Or Egypt properly so call'd, sometimes nam'd Delta, because the best Part of it form'd that Greek Letter, being shut in by two Branches of the Nile and the Mediterranean, which the Turks at present call Errif. This Province to the Westward Borders on the Deserts of Barca, on the North the Mediterranean washes it, on the East it has the Isthmus of Suez, and on the South, the Middle Egypt.

This Province is again Subdivided into 5 petty Governments, call'd Beyhis, or Cassilis, which are Mansoura, Garbia, Achenfia, Callionbiech and Bouhera, which last, some will not allow to be within the true Bounds of Egypt, but in the Kingdom of Barca, yet is here joyn'd with the Rest, as being under the same Chief Bassa. The first of them lies East of Delta and the Nile, next the Isthmus of Suez, containing 197 Villages, and produces abundance of Sugar, Flax and other Growth. Garbia is on the East side of the Nile, being the Island of Damietta, a flat Country, without any Hills, all improv'd, rich in Pasture, Sugar, Rice, Corn and Wine. Menoufia is the next to the Westward of Garbia, within the Delta, and contains but 103 Villages, tho' larger in Extent than the last. Callionbiech lies West again of Mansoura, comprehending 196 Villages. Bouhera still to the Westward, reaches from the Nile to Cape Bon Andrea, being very large and comprizing 360 Villages. One half of it is so high that the the Nile cannot overflow it, which is a great disadvantage to the Soil, yet it has good Grazing and abundance of Sheep. Here is the Desert of S. Macarius, in which were 363 Hermitages or Monasteries. Several Geographers have divided Egypt otherwise, according to their Fancies, but we here follow the present Partition, according to the Turks, who are Masters of it, having spoken of the Ancient in its Place.

On the West stands the ancient Town of Plinthis, now call'd, the Arabs Tower, and not far from it, on the Sea-Coast is Bochiri, formerly Bufris, now almost ruin'd, and suppos'd to be so call'd from Ofris, who was the Egyptian Hercules, tho' others derive it from the Tyrant Bufris; but in the Scripture it is nam'd Phatmes. Leaving these Places of little Note, the first remarkable City is Alexandria, so call'd from Alexander the Great, who built it 300 Years before CHRIST. It was once call'd Noy, and by the Hebrews Neamen; by the Romans Pharos, Sebaste, Augusta, Julia, Claudia, Domitia and Alexandria; by the Natives formerly Racotis, and by the Turks at present Scanderick, or Scanderia, for they change Alexander into Scander. It is seated at the Mouth of the Nile, call'd the Canopus, which there forms a Harbour, tho' none of the Safest, yet much frequented. It is divided into, the Old and the New, both of them being of a very great Compass. The Walls are said to be the same that Alexander built, adorn'd with many Towers and Beautiful without; yet within it is rather a Heap of Ruins than a City, there being scarce any entire Street. The Gates are Four, the Houses all flat at top, and built upon Arch'd Vaults, which are fill'd with Water, when the Nile Overflows, and serves them all the Year, there being no other in the City. There are three Hills rais'd of the ancient Ruins, where Medals and other Rarities are often found. On the Sea-shore are the Remains of Cleopatra's Palace. 200 Paces from the Town, on a Hill stands Pompey's Pillar, all of one Stone, and 125 Foot high, all entire to this Day, with its Capital. This City was once equal to the best in the World, for noble Structures, for Learning, for Religion, and for every Thing that could make it commendable; of all which Perfections, scarce the Shadow remains at this Time.

Opposite to Alexandria is the famous Island of Pharos, by the Natives call'd Magras, and by the Arabs, Magar Alexandri, or Alexander's Light-House. On it stood the renowned Tower of Pharos, so Magnificent, that it was reckon'd one of the Seven Wonders of the World, which serv'd for a Light-house to direct Ships in the Night. There is one on the Island at this Time, but nothing Magnificent. There are no Gardens about Alexandria, by reason of the Sandiness of the Soil, except some few along the Nile, whose Fruit is not reckon'd wholesome. In this City it was that Ptolemy Philadelphus erected his Library, being the greatest in the World, as containing in his days 400000 Volumes, and increas'd by his Successors to 700000, all burnt in the Roman Civil Wars.

Rosetta is about 30 Miles to the Eastward of Alexandria, on another Mouth of the Nile, the Turks and Arabs call it Rasabit, and the Egyptians Rasit; by some taken to be the Sciedia of Strabo, and by others the Metolis of Ptolemy. The Extent of it is not large, but the Inhabitants numerous, and the Buildings Stately, tho' it is not wall'd. On the Banks of Nile, are very Magnificent Palaces, and a sumptuous Mosque.

Eastward still on a Bay, which forms a Haven stands the City Damietta, or the Pelusion of the Ancients, seated in a Plain, two Leagues from the Sea, and between two Branches of the Nile, which make it an Island, and all the Land so fertile, that it is full of Cassia, Limon-Trees, Vines, &c. This City fell under the Thralldom of the Saracens with the Rest of Egypt, and continu'd in their Hands till the Year 1218, when it was wrested from them by the Christians; who lost it again in 1221, the Infidels having let out the Waters about them, by which they were reduc'd to Extremity. Lewis the 9th, King of France, regain'd it, after being taken Prisoner by the Sultan, was oblig'd again to restore it for his Ransom; when it was destroy'd by the Saracens. It is now the Seat of an Archbishop, under the Patriarch of Alexandria, and a populous City resorted to by all Nations trading into those Parts.

Higher up the Country, but still within the Delta, is Fuoa, formerly Nile, very populous, but the Streets narrow. Its Suburb is the Place of Diversion for the handsome Women, who are allow'd to spend the Day there and go home when they think fit at Night, without being blam'd by their Husbands. A League from Fuoa in the Nile is the Island Gezirat Addebeb, formerly Machos, or the Golden Island, full of Villages and stately Palaces, scarce to be seen from without, by reason of the Thickness of the Trees. Nearer towards Grand Cairo, is the Town of Masralla, ill Fortify'd; but very Populous. Masralla is the Capital of the Government of the same Name, lying on the East Side of Nile, but has nothing remarkable, nor any other in it, and therefore we will proceed to

The Middle Egypt.

Which on the West Borders on the Deserts of Barca, Northward, on the Lower Egypt, Southward on the Upper, and Eastward on the Red Sea. This Province was formerly call'd Heptanomos, from the Seven Nomis, or small Prefecture it contain'd, and at present Bechria and Denesor.

Grand Cairo, generally supposed to be the ancient Memphis, and by some taken for Babylon in Egypt, is the Capital of this Kingdom, divided into the New and the Old. The Name of Cairo, Marmol says, comes from the Arabick, el Cair, the Assembly or Monastery; and not only he, but Leo Africanus and others agree, that it was built by Gegoar el Quereb under the Caliph, whence it will follow that Memphis stood not in the same place. The Name of Memphis is deriv'd from the Egyptian Word Monphsa, signifying the Water of the Lord, because of the Nile; it was built according to Herodotus by Menes, the first King of Egypt. Its situation is most convenient, as being near the Place where the Nile divides it self into several Branches. On the one side it is fortify'd by high and strong Banks to defend it against the River as well as Enemies, and on the other by a mighty Lake, fill'd with the overflowing of the Nile. The old Town is on the East side of the River, being now no better than a poor Village, inhabited by a few Copti Christians, and Armenians. There are still several Churches, and among them, those of S. Barbara, of S. Joris, and another rais'd on the Ruins of a little House, where they say our Saviour liv'd when he fled into into Egypt. Besides this, there are three large Suburbs to the City, in each of which are reckon'd 2 or 3000 Houses, and abundance of Mosques and Palaces. About the Circumference of Cairo there is much Difference among Travelers, some allowing it 22 Miles, others extending it to 30. To verify this great Extent, they lay here are 24000 Quarters, or Wards, and the whole number of the Inhabitants amounts to 700000, whereof 160000 are Jews. In the Year 1683, 700000 Persons died here of the Plague, and when that scourge sweeps away but 2 or 300000, they are never miss'd. The number of Mosques is 24000, but some of them not above 10 Foot square. The Hospitals are also very numerous, one of which has a Revenue of 100000 Crowns, in which all sorts of Persons whatsoever are receiv'd, and carefully look'd to. The great Streets are 18000, all of them shut up with Gates every Night, to prevent Disorders. They are all narrow, and People ride about them on Asses. The Citadel, which commands the Place, is built on a Rock, round, and so large that it looks like a Town, with abundance of Towns about the Walls. The beautiful Rooms and Apartments are tokens of the Magnificence of the Mumaluck Sultans, who reign'd in Egypt before the Turks conquer'd it. The Doors and Windows are inlaid with Mother of Pearl, Ebony, Chrysal, and Coral, and the Intervals between them curiously painted. The Water from the Nile is convey'd to it by an Aqueduct on 35 Arches. From this City there set out every Year between 15 and 20000 Pilgrims for Mecca; they are defended against the Arabs by a Guard of 300 Men, and live with them from 6 to 9000 Camels. The Grand Signior allows every Year 600000 Ducats towards their support, which is near the fourth part of the Revenue of Egypt. Some make a distinct Town of Bulak, but they are join'd by a long Street, and it is the reckoning of this and other such outlets as all one City, which make Cairo so large as has been here describ'd.

Scarce any Country is more fertile than the Territory of Cairo for all sorts of Fruits and Plants. Betwixt a Canal and a little Lake at a good distance from Cairo, is the Village of Mutina, thought to be the ancient Hermopolis, and by the consent of all Authors, the Place where our Saviour, the Blessed Virgin, and S. Joseph resided in Egypt. There is still an old Wall, with a small Window in it, where the Christians have an Altar, and say Mass. Near this Village and the Ruins of the ancient Heliopolis stands an Obelisk in the midst of a large Basin, with many Hieroglyphicks cut on it, but by whom erected does not appear. About 250 Paces from Mutina are the aforesaid Ruins of Heliopolis, so call'd from a Looking-Glass so plac'd in the Temple of the Sun, that it receiv'd and reflected its beams all the Day. This Place is now entirely smother'd, so that there are now only some remains of Antiquity.

The so much admir'd Pyramids of Egypt standing but 4 Miles West from Cairo, this will be no proper Place to speak of them, and what we may shall be out of Graves, who has writ them Learnedly, and with greater exactness than any other. The greatest and most remarkable of them are three standing near to one another on the same Plain. The first and largest of these, he agrees with Herodotus and Diodorus to have been built by Cheops, or Chemmis, who began his Reign about 1266 Years before CHRIST; the second by Cephren, or Chabryis, Successor to Cheops; and the third by Mycerinus, who reign'd next to Cephren. And the end of building them he suppos'd to be for Sepulchres. The first of them, he says as an Eye-Witness, is seated on the top of a rocky Hill, which rises an hundred Foot above the plain level of Egypt. Each side is 693 Feet in length, and the perpendicular Height 499 Feet. Then computing the Area of the Basis by our Measure he finds it to contain 480249 square Feet, or eleven English Acres of Ground, and 1089 of 43560 parts of an Acre. The ascent to the top of it, is by Degrees each four Foot in height, and retiring inward near three Feet, and thus running about the Pyramid, the top ends not in a Point, but a flat Square 13 Feet and 280 of 1000 parts of a Foot over. On the North side of it, 38 Feet from the Ground, is a square and narrow Passage leading into the Body of the Pyramid, and goes down Hill, the breadth of it little more than 3 Feet, the length 92 Feet and a half. At the end hereof is a larger Place, but not regular, varying in Breadth and Height. On the Left-hand, climbing up a steep and massy Stone 8 or 9 Foot high, is the entrance into the first Gallery; the breadth of it almost 5 Feet, the height the same, and the length 110. At the end of it begins the second Gallery, a piece of exquisite Workmanship. By this Gallery is a Well, now 20 Feet in depth, but suppos'd to be near fill'd up. Going forward from the Well, there is another square Passage 110 Feet in length, which leads into a little Chamber, less than 20 Foot long and 17 broad. Within the second Gallery, there are several small Rooms and a large one, extraordinary beautiful, in which is the Tomb or Monument of Cheops, of one piece of Marble within, hollow and uncover'd. Having thus far describ'd this Pyramid, the Reader who desires farther Satisfaction, is referr'd to Greaves, and having said so much of it, we shall add no more of the others, but that they are like it in all respects, only much inferior in Magnitude.

Not far from these Pyramids is a monstrous Figure, of a wonderful bulk, commonly call'd, the Sphinx, the Head of it like a Man, and the Body of a Lion, but now buried in the Sand up to the Shoulders, Pliny says, the Head is 43 Foot long. The work of it is curious, but how that mighty Mass was brought thither, or to what end, does not appear.

All about Cairo there are abundance of subterraneous Caves, made to preserve dead Bodies from Corruption and all other Accidents, these reach'd every way for a vast extent, and were like a Labyrinth, having Communication from one to another. The way into these Caves is down a narrow Well 17 or 18 Foot deep. These lead into those Caves or Rooms, where there are Marble Tables, on which the Coffins were laid. The Bodies found here are those we call Mummies, being human Carcasses buried many Ages, yet entire, and only dried up, the word Mummy in the Persian Tongue signifying a Body dried up, and incorruptible; and these Mummies are not Bodies dried up by the heat of the Sun in the Sand, but embalm'd and preserv'd by Art.

Having said thus much of Cairo, and the Curiousities about it, let us next come to Suez, which Iscleray calls, The City of Heroes, seated at the top of the Red Sea, and a considerable Port on it, where the Grand Signior has an Arsenal, and whither many Merchants resort from India with all the Commodities that Country affords. All about it is nothing but a sandy Desert, without any green, or living Creature, so that all Provisions are brought from far, and even the Water from two Leagues distance. It contains not above 200 Houses, and the Port is small and shoal. The Town of Fium lies South of Cairo, on an Eminence, nor far from the Nile.

The Upper Egypt,

Formerly call'd Thebais, or Thebaida, from its once renown'd Capital City Thebes, and now Said, is wash'd all along its East side by the Red Sea, the North joins to the Middle Egypt, the West reaches to the Deserts of Barca, and the South is parted by high Mountains, Nubia, and the Coast of Abex.

This large Province is divided into Said, properly so call'd, which is the Inland, and the Coast of the Red Sea, a ridge of Hills running in length between these two Parts. But the more particular Partition, like the others, is divided into six Beylies, or Cassilys, which are those of Ben, or Ebensuef, the most Northern Inland; then Manjelout; and Girzia on the Left-hand of the Nile; Cherkeff and Misio on the Right; and Ceffir, which is the Sea Coast.

The first Town entring this Province on the West side of the Nile is Benisuaif, or Ebensuef, remarkable for little else but that it gives Name to that small Government. The next is Mimia, seated on a high Ground near the Nile, built by Caliphs. Formerly there were stately Egyptian Churches, whereof only the Ruins are now to be seen. El Fium, different from that in the middle Egypt, and formerly call'd Abydus, stands upon another Hill near the River. Here they say the Body of the Patriarch Joseph was buried before the Israelites departed out of Egypt. Azath, once call'd Rubastes, was beautiful, and adorn'd with sumptuous Buildings, now a heap of Ruins, inhabited by about 100 Christian Families who have three or four Churches, all the remains of what it was. Without it, is a Monastery, the Monks whereof feed on nothing but Herbs, Bread, and Olives, yet they have a considerable Revenue, and entertain all the Poor that come to it for three Days.

Thebes, now Said, was the ancientest and most renown'd of all the Cities in Egypt, seated on the West side of the Nile, but is now nothing of what it has been. Strabo calls it Diopolis, or the City of Jove, because he was worshipp'd there; Homer and Stephanus Hecatompolis, or the City of an hundred Gates, for it is reported to have had so many; Diodorus names it Isiris, the Ethiopians Sirims, the Arabs Ajma, and Saia. It was the Residence of Kings, who remov'd thence to Alexandria, to Memphis, and to Cairo, and gave its Name to this Province of Thebais, so famous for being the Retreat of so many Thousands of holy Anchorites. Strabo informs us, that this City was 80 Furlongs in length before destroy'd by Cumyses King of Persia, and that in his Days the remains of many magnificent Structures were still to be seen, and among them a mighty Colossus all of one Stone entire, besides about 40 Tombs of Kings in subterranean Caves, and many Pyramids and Obelisks.

Ajma, or Sitima, seated in the Southernmost part of Egypt, still on the West side of Nile, has its Name chang'd by the Arabs, because Sient in their Language signifies Deform'd, and therefore they call'd it Ajma, that is, Beautiful. Thoroughly destroy'd by the Romans, it was rebuilt by the Mahometans. The Inhabitants are rich, as having a considerable Trade into Nubia, up the Nile, and by Land. The Ethiopians call it Govera; it has still a great Compass, many stately Buildings, and old Egyptian and Roman Inscriptions. The Nile is Navigable to this Place but a little beyond it, Goods must be carried by Land till past the Cataracts. On the East side of the Nile, near this border of Egypt, stand the Town of Assuan. Next is Almu, a good Town returning to the Northward, on the same side of the River, then Ichnina and Almona, not to mention other Places of less Note. In the Part, which lies next the Sea there are very few Towns, by reason the Soil is most a deep Sand and barren. On the Shore the only Places are Grodol, Azirut, Hebelezeit, Suguan, Dacati, Fate Ceffir, San, and Zibid, all of them poor and inconsiderable, and consequently deserving no particular Description.

To return to Egypt in general, it is most certain that all the boasted Fertility of the Country is owing to the Nile, and the Slime and Mud that River leaves behind when it overflows, which fattens the Ground, and produce all that grows; for the Land of it self is naturally so sandy, that no Watering or Rain would make it fruitful; and therefore the People are forced to draw Trenches from the River to feed all their Gardens, and sometimes the overflowing leaves so much of that Slime in certain Places, that the Peasants are fain to qualify it with Sand. Formerly this Kingdom furnish'd Rome, and several other Parts and now it still supplies Arabia deserta, Palestine, Syria, Constantinople, and some Provinces of Europe with Corn, Sugar, Cassia, Sena, several sorts of Gums, and other Commodities. Delta was always the fruit fullest part of all the Country, as being water'd by several Branches of the Nile; and beyond Cairo towards Nubia, the Ground is generally good for little, except within three or four Miles of the Nile, all the rest being deep Sand, unless some Places which have cuts from the River. Even in the Delta all about Alexandria, and next the Red Sea on the one side, and the Kingdom of Barca on the other, there are vast Deserts. The strange Plants growing here, not common in Europe, are the Datura, Colocasia, Sebeste, Cassia, Elhame, Lablab, Melochia, Seiban, Sofera, Abfasi, Sempfen, Berd, Chate, Abdelavi, Batechia, Nejeni-el Jalib, Tamind, Palm-Tree, Macez, Sant, &c.

There is no less variety of Animals, as Bulls, Camels, Sheep with great Tails as big as one of their Quarters, Gazates, between a Goat and a Deer, a sort of Monkeys, call'd Cynocephales, or Dogs Heads, Chamæleons, Ichnemons, call'd Egyptian Rats; Ibis, Birds like Cranes, &c. and for the Water, Crocodils and Sea-Horses.

The Air is naturally excessive hot, by reason of its nearness to the Torrid Zone, and the farther

Southward of consequence the worse. But in Winter the Weather is very uncertain, sometimes hot and sometimes cold. The Spring there begins in January, and ends with February, which is the most Temperate Season. The Summer begins in March, and ends in August excessively hot. Autumn lasts September and October; and Winter November and December.

The Diseases here are very numerous, as malignant Fevers, Small-Pox, Scurvy, Leprosy, Ruptures, Gout, Weakness in the Nerves, Stone, and the greatest of all, the Plague.

All Degrees use Bathing to excess; and the Women Oil and perfume themselves. Tho' they eat three or four times a Day, yet it is less than the Europeans, and their Diet is light, consisting most of Mutton, Fowls, Rice, Lentiles, Pease, Kidney-Beans, Turnips, Cabbage, Cucumbers, Grapes, Melons, and all sorts of Fruit. The poorer sort are satisfied with Beef, and sometimes Camels Flesh. As for Fish, it is little regarded, unless two or three sorts taken in the Nile. Their Drink is the Water of the same River; only the Christians, Jews, and some Turks drink Wine, which they have from Candia, Rhodes, and Cyprus; they also drink much Coffee and Sherbet.

The Egyptians go decently Apparell'd, they wear very fine Calico Shirts, and over them long Robes of fine Cloth, or Silk, narrow above, and wide below, with strait Sleeves. On their Heads they have a Turbant, the Christians Red or Blue, the Jews Yellow, and the Mahometans White, except Mahomet's Race, who alone may wear Green. On their Feet they have rather Slippers than Shooes. Women of Quality are generally clad in white, and veil'd; their Slippers are high heel'd. The Turks dress their Heads after their own Country Fashion. The Egyptians wear a wreath of Silk half a Foot high, ending in a Point, with some Jewels before it; as also rich Collars, Bracelets, Rings, and such Ornaments on their Legs. Next their Body they have a silk Smock curiously wrought, and over it a Robe of several Colours, button'd down before.

The Turks here have all Employments, Civil and Military; the Native Egyptians follow Husbandry; the Arabs live upon Rapine; the Ethiopians, Blacks and Jews upon Trade, as do the Inhabitants of Cairo, and many Christians settled among them. The Languages here are various, the ancient Coptick or Egyptian being only known to the Clergy and more Learned, the other Egyptians speak Arabick and Ethiopick, the Turks their own Language, the Jews Spanisk, Italian, Greek and Arabick, and most Men Lingua Franca.

Historical Account of Egypt.

Egypt is certainly one of the ancientest Kingdoms in the World, and had not their Histories been corrupted with multitudes of Fables, perhaps none would have outdone them. Not to meddle with the Controversies handled by many Authors and decided by none, it is generally agreed that Cham, the Son of Noah, first inhabited Egypt after the confusion of Languages at Babel. His Son Mizraim is the first upon the List of the Kings, Cham being reckon'd the same as Jupiter Hammon, and Mizraim the same as Osiris, the great God of the Egyptians. From him descended that Race of Monarchs, known by the Title of Pharaohs in general, tho' they had all particular Names of their own. The whole succession of these Princes is too long and uncertain to be inserted by us; but Orus the 12th of them, and 2d of the Name is supposed to be the Busris of the Grecians, and the cruel Tyrant who commanded the Male Children of the Israelites to be destroy'd. Cenchres, the 16th in Order, thought to be the Pharaoh drown'd in the Red Sea. Psummiticus, the 2d of the Name, 63d King in descent, after a Reign of six Months only, was overthrown by Cambyfes, the 2d Persian Monarch, and thus Egypt was annex'd to his Empire, under which it continued till the Reign of Darius, 6th Emperour of the Medes and Persians, in whose 2d Year the Egyptians revolted, and Amyrteus was their first King. Seven others succeeded him, Nectanebus the 2d of the Name, being the last of them, in whose Days Egypt was again subdued by Ochus the 8th Emperour of Persia, to which Empire it remain'd subject, till Alexander the Great vanquishing Darius, made himself also Master of Egypt. Alexander dying, and his Conquests being divided among his Generals, this Kingdom fell to the Lot of Ptolemy, the Son of Lagus, who reign'd 40 Years, and left the Crown to his Posterity, all of them from him call'd Ptolemys, as the first Race had been nam'd Pharaohs. His Son and Successor Ptolemy Philadelphus, erected the wonderful Library at Alexandria, and caused the 72 Interpreters to Translate the Bible. The Ptolemys were in all Ten, and Cleopatra, the Wife and Sister of the last of them reign'd alone after him, having the Crown bestow'd upon her by Julius Caesar. Being Witty, Beautiful, and excessive Lewd, the great Mark Anthony became so desperately in Love with her, that it prov'd the ruin of them both, he being overthrown by Augustus, and she killing herself to avoid being led in Triumph through Rome.

In her ended the Race of the Ptolemys. Egypt was made a Province of the Roman Empire, and so continued till the Days of Heraclius the Emperor of Constantinople, when the Avarice of the Greeks provok'd the Egyptians to shake off the Yoke of the Eastern Emperours, and submit themselves to the Arabs, and thus fell under the Rule of Omar, the 2d Caliph, about the Year of CHRIST 640. His Successors held it till Abou Mahommed Obeidallah, who pretended to be a Prophet, and descended from Fathemah, Mahomet's Daughter, subdued all the Mediterranean Coast of Africk, and his Successor Obeidallah conquering Egypt took upon him the Title of Caliph, which descended in his Posterity to the 13th Generation, when Abhed, the last of them finding himself press'd by the Christians, crav'd Aid of Noureddin Prince of Aleppo, who sent Salaheddin, or as we call him Saladin, with a potent Army to his Assistance. He, instead of supporting, oppress'd Abhed, after whose Death he kept possession of Egypt, for his Master; and he also dying, set himself up absolute Sovereign about the Year of CHRIST 1174. His Son succeeding him, and thus the Crown descended in that Race to Elmutan the 7th, who, as his Father had been, was also murder'd by the Mamlucks of his Guards, who erected a Kingdom for themselves.

Mameluck, in the Arabick signifies a Slave, and these People so call'd were Circassian Slaves, bought up by the Egyptian Kings, and train'd up in all martial Discipline for their Guards, by reason the Egyptians were an effeminate People, wholly unfit for War. No Jew or Mahometan could be admitted into these Troops, nor any but the Sons of Christians, of which the Kings had purchas'd so great a Number, that the Garrisons throughout the Kingdom were in their Hands, and there were no other Forces to draw into the Field. These Men having thus got all the Force of the Kingdom into their own Hands, first murder'd Muek al Saleh, and then Touman-Bah his Son, the two last of Saladin's Race. This done, they made choice of Ibeck, a Turk, whom they plac'd on the Throne, and thus he became the first King of the Mameluck Race. These Princes call'd themselves Sultans, and held the Sovereignty of Egypt for the space of 275 Years, that is, from 1250 till 1525. Touman Bah, commonly call'd Tomombeius by Europeans, the 2d of this Name, was the last of the Mameluck Sultans, and reign'd but three Years, at the end whereof Selim the first, Emperor of the Turks, attack'd and routed him, and he flying, was betray'd into his Enemies Hands by a Prince of the Arabs. Selim after ten Days hang'd him at one of the Gates of Cairo, and so ended the Race of the Mamelucks, rais'd from Slaves to be the Terror of all the East, and now again at once sunk to their primitive Nothing.

Ever since Selim conquer'd Egypt, as has been said, it has been govern'd by Bajl's, who have also the Title of Beglerbegs, that is, Lord of Lords, as being chief over many other inferior Governours. The time of their Rule is generally three Years, unless upon any Complaint or Offence taken they be remov'd sooner, which happens very often. The Officers under the Bajla are many, as the Tibnia, who is as it were a Deputy, the Cadileghir, President of the Council, several Sargiacks and others. The Divan is the Council, which has the direction of all things, but generally so subordinate to the Bajla, that it is nothing but a Name. The Christians residing among them as Merchants are generally try'd by their own Consuls in all private Differences.

After this succinct Account of the Temporal

State, it will not be ungrateful to the Reader add a Word concerning the Ecclesiastical. The ancient Egyptians were the most superstitious Nation in the Universe. They gave divine Honour to several of their ancient Princes, as to Ham, or Cham, to Osiris, or Mizraim, to Isis, Orus, to Tiphon, and to many more; besides they worshipp'd the Sun, Moon, and Stars. Not satisfied, they ador'd Dogs, Cats, Snakes, Calves, Crocodils, and a thousand filthy Creatures which did not yet terminate their Folly, for they extended the same Worship to things inanimate as Leeks, Onions, Garlick, &c. One of the principal Deities was a black Bull, which they offer'd Sacrifice to, under the Name of Apis, and no doubt from them the Israelites learnt to be fond of Calves. When Christianity began to spread it self abroad, the Egyptians embrac'd as soon, and cultivated it as much as any other Nation, and there it flourish'd in great Splendour for some Ages, and this not only in Town and the cultivated Country, but even in the wildest Deserts, which were the Habitations of many thousand Anchorites, and there are said to have been not only Monasteries, but whole Towns of Religious Persons. This lasted as long as they continued subject to the Roman Empire, and till as has been said, they call'd in the Saracens, who by degrees almost extirpated the Christian Religion to introduce the Mahometan, which prevails to this Day. There are now several sorts of Christians, which, not to mention the Europians, who only reside there for Trade, may be reckon'd under these Heads of Copties, Nestorian, Maronites, Georgians, Jacobites, Armenians, and Syrians, who all live dispers'd about the Country in several Towns, Villages, and Monasteries using several Ceremonies. They all acknowledge the Patriarch of Alexandria, whom they call Papa. The Copties, who are the most numerous and native Egyptians, in their Divine Service use the Liturgies of S. Peter, and S. Mark, S. Basil, S. Gregory, and S. Cyril, written in their ancient Tongue, and the Epistles and Gospels are still read in Coptick and Arabick. These People are generally very ignorant, but firm in their Religion, and if they know enough to Salvation they need no greater Wisdom.

C H A P. X.

Of Biledulgerid, or Numidia in general.

THIS was formerly one of the seven principal Provinces into which Africk was divided, at present it makes one of 12. The Name of Biledulgerid is a corruption from Beled el Gered, signifying the Country of Dates, because it produced more than any other. It extends from Egypt in the East to the Ocean on the West, and is divided from Barbary by Mount Atlas on the North, and by other Mountains and Deserts from Libya, or Szara, or the Desert on the South. The length of it about 2500 Miles from East to West, the greatest breadth not 200 in the widest Place, and much less in others.

The principal Rivers here are the Darba, which rising in Mount Atlas, and giving its Name to the Province it runs through, loses it self in a Lake, coming like the other from Mount Atlas, and after watering a great Tract of Segel-messa, falls into another Lake. The Ghir has likewise its Source on the same Mountain, runs across thick Woods and Forests, and ends in a Lake in the midst of one of them. Rio Blanco or the White River, comes from a Mountain in the Province of Tesser, and spreading it self in to several Branches, runs into the Ocean at many Mouths. Buzzedor lies Northward of the last, and runs the same Western Course into the Ocean. Rio Seco, or the Dry River, so call'd because it dries up in Winter, is still Northward ward and runs West to the Ocean, betwixt Cape Rnador, and the Town of Nun. Lebich rises also Eastward on the Mountains, and meets the Ocean near Albena, after taking in the Teccutin. Himissin descends from the Mountains of Sus, and is lost near Anfulim. Farcala flows from the Mountains on the North, and running through the Province of the same Name, glides into a Lake in the Kingdom of Tafilet. The Hot River, so call'd from the Nature of its Water, has its Origin in Mount Atlas, and after crossing the Plains of Biledulgerid, forms a Lake in the midst of a Desert.

The Soil of Biledulgerid is hot, dry and sandy, and therefore bears little Corn, which Want is in some Measure made up by the abundance of Dates it yields; the Country People being better satisfy'd with a plentiful Crop of Dates, than the best Harvest of Wheat, in regard; that tho' the Year be never so kind, this can never maintain them Six Months, besides that their Neighbours bring them Corn enough, in Exchange for their Dates. They sow in October, and reap in April.

Ostriches, Camels and Goats are here plentiful enough, and some Horses there are; but a prodigious number of Snakes and Scorpions, which are very Mischievous. Besides this Mischief, the East Wind is here so violent, that it often buries Travellers in Sand, and the Natives Eyes are much offended by it. Another Inconveniency is, that they are apt to have their Teeth drop out even in their Youth, in all other Respects they are healthful, and often live to a great Age, the Plague being never heard of here in many Ages, and the Children always free from the Small Pox. They are a wicked People, Lewd, Treacherous, Robbers, &c. Their common Food is the Flesh of Ostriches, or Camels, and their Drink Camels Milk and Broth, for they seldom drink Water. Some of them are so nasty, that they never wash themselves. The Arabs of Numidia are lean and shrivell'd, brown of Complexion and a hideous Aspect, and great Lovers of Ostrich hunting. The better Sort are attended by Blacks, and the rest by their Wives, who look to their Horses. Some of them send their Children to School, and the greatest Proficients become Cadis or Marabouts, that is, Judges, or Priests. Others addict themselves to Trade, and others to Poetry, for which they have no ill Genius. The Arabs have possess'd themselves of all those Parts, which produce the greatest Plenty of Dates, and the Africans are withdrawn nearer towards the Country of the Blacks. Some of them are free and wander about the Country, with their Cattel, without owning any Superior; others have their particular Xeques or Lords, others are subject to the Kings of Fez and Morocco; for Instance, as those of the Kingdom of Tafilet and Ifata, and others are under the Turk, who is possess'd of some Places in Numidia. They are all Mahometans.

This Region is divided into 8 Parts or Provinces, which, taking them from Egypt where we left off, and returning Westward, lie thus, with the Towns in each:

The Desert of Barca

Lies East of the Kingdom of Egypt, South of the Kingdom of Barca, North of Zahara, and East of the Province of Biledulgerid. It is really a Desert, being all deep Sand, scarce any where habitable, for the most part destitute of Water, and consequently producing little for the Support of Human Life. A Lake on the North-east Part of it, has given occasion to some People to settle there, where they have two little Towns, or rather Villages, Sim on the West, and Gorham on the East of it. Sarta stands on another smaller Pool more to the Eastward. Berdoa is a Castle, with some Houses about it. Ebaida and Sabia, two other inconsiderable Places, none of them worth mentioning, but that there are none better, and this all in a Country of several Hundred Miles in Compass.

Biledulgerid, properly so call'd,

Is the Province which extends it self in Length along the South-side of Tripoli and Tunis, which are its Northern Boundaries, as is the Desert of Barca the Eastern, the Province of Zeb the Western;

stern, and Zaara or the Desert the Southern, about 500 Miles in Length from East to West, and 100 in Breadth from North to South. The Ground bears no Corn, but there are vast Woods of Palm-Trees, producing infinite Quantities of Dates, which supply all the Coast of Tunis. The Principal Towns in it are, Tenax built by the Romans in the Desert, on a small River, now divided into two Parts; the one inhabited by the Native Africans, and the other by Arabs. Cafsa, or Cafesa, is another Roman Town, with high Stone Walls of a great Thickness. The Air here is unwholesome and the Water hot, and both these Places are Subject to the Bassa of Tunis.

The other Parts of this Country are the Territory of Tesregeu, lying between Tripoli and the Desert of Barez, has three small Towns and 26 Villages; the Inhabitants of them all Poor, as lying in the Desert, and remote from Trade. Jastiten is higher towards Tripoli, has abundance of Dates, and is Subject to the Bassa of Tripoli. Gademez contains 16 wall'd Places, and 60 open Villages, the Capital of the same Name, suppos'd to be the Oasis of Ptolemy, and its Inhabitants wealthy by their Trade in Dates, and a free People. In Fezzen there are 26 small Towns and 100 Villages. The Inhabitants rich by their Trade with the Blacks, have a Lord of their own.

Zeb.

The next Province to the Westward, bounded on the West by the Desert of Mazila; on the North by the Mountains of Bugia; on the East by the Province of Biledulgerid, and on the South by the Deserts, where is the great Road from Techort to Guargala. It has 5 Towns and many Villages, Biscara built by the Romans, ruin'd and rebuilt by the Arabs, well enough Inhabited by a civil People, who are oblig'd in the Heat of Summer to retire to the Villages to avoid the Biting of the Scorpions, which is Mortal, and return in November. Borgi is 5 Leagues South of the last, and more populous. Nesta is divided by Walls into three Parts, with a Fort in one of them, which appears to be a Roman Structure; the Natives are insolent towards Strangers. Theolacha is a Foundation of the Africans, on a small River, with a poor Wall. Deusen is a Roman Structure, near it are the Ruins of ancient Monuments, and sometimes after great Rains, there are Gold, Silver, and Copper Medals found in the Fields, with a Head, Inscriptions and Trophies on them. Mezzab is a Territory depending on this Province, in which there are several Villages, and the Natives are rich by Trading with the Blacks. The last lies West of Zeb, and Techort, by some call'd a Kingdom, is South. The Capital of the same Name, is the Tiropylum of Ptolemy, founded by the Numidians on a Mountain, at the Foot whereof is a small River, with a Draw-Bridge. The Town has Stone Walls within which are 2500 Houses of Stone and Brick, and a beautiful Mosque. There are 40 Castles and 150 Villages in the Country, which all contribute to the Lord of the Town. The Inhabitants are extraordinary courteous to Strangers and entertain them in their Houses, without taking any Reward. Guargala is another separate Territory of this Province, to the Eastward of the last, its Capital of the same Name, thought to be Ptolemy's Tamarca, built by the Africans. Most of the Inhabitants are black, as having most to do with Black Women, yet generous and courteous to Strangers. They have a Lord of their own, whom they honour as a King, and his Revenue reckon'd worth 150000 Ducats a Year.

Tegorarin

Goes on still to the Westward, encompass'd by Algier, Segelmessa, Zeb and Zaara. It includes about 50 Castles and 100 Villages. The Land chiefly produces Dates, and some Corn with much watering, but feeds no Cattel except a few Goats. The People trade much, get Gold from the Blacks and carry it into Barbary, carrying back other Necessaries thence to the Blacks; being very loving to Strangers, and industrious in improving their Land. Flesh is very scarce among them, for want of Grass, and therefore they commonly eat Horses or Camels, they buy of the Arabs. Tesebit is a small Territory depending on this Province, in the North-west Part of it, consisting of four Castles, or small Towns and 28 Villages, the Men Black, the Women Brown and Handsome, but all Poor.

Segelmessa.

This Province is very large, including several small Territories, and extending over a mighty Tract of Land, from the Kingdoms of Fez and Algier on the North, to the Deserts of Libya on the South; and the Province of Tegorarin in the East, to Morocco and Tafilet on the West, being near 500 Miles in Length and 300 in Breadth. It is water'd by three Principal Rivers, the Ghir, the Zis and the Togda, and takes Name from its Capital City, seated on the River Zis. It was once great and populous, but much abandon'd of late Years. Along the River there are abundance of small Towns and Villages, the three chiefest whereof are Teneguent, containing about 1000 Houses, Tebuhazant and Mamua, a very populous Place.

Queneg is a small Territory on the North-west of this Province, next Mount Atlas, and upon the River Zis; yet has in it only three old Castles, and a parcel of scattering Villages or lone Houses. Matgara is another District on the same River, in which there are several Villages, the Chief of them call'd Hilela, the Arabian Lord whereof has a Revenue of 30000 Ducats a Year rais'd by Duties on Goods. The Liberty of Retel South of the last, on the same River, is shut in Eastward by an uninhabited Mountain, and Westward by a sandy barren Plain. The Natives are a base Cowardly People, and treated like Slaves by the Arabs. Tebelbelt is a very poor Town and Country about it; for tho' it has excellent Dates, it affords scarce any Flesh, and they eat little but Ostriches and Stags, which they Hunt. Todga is not only the Name of a River, but of the Country on both sides of it, in which there are only four Towns, such as they are, and 10 Villages. Fercala, Tezzerin, Benigain, Beni-Besseri, Guaheda and Figbig, are all small Districts that have nothing remarkable.

Tafilet.

This Kingdom, bearing the Name of its Capital, is a long slip of Land, running North-west and South-east, and including the Province of It- the greatest Length of both together being about 300 Miles, and the Breadth not 60, where largest, but much less in many Parts. The Kingdom of Morocco touches it on the North-west, Segelmessa lies along its North and North-east, Darha on the South-west, and Part of Tesset and Zahara on the South.

The Capital of the same Name is Wall'd, and contains 2000 Houses, inhabited by Bereberes. Between this Place and the Desert is a great Road, which runs across Mount Atlas. The Soil is hilly and bears Corn, has good Pasture and abundance of Dates, and some Indigo. The Natives breed much Cattel, and particularly Camels and Horses, which last are extraordinary swift, and fed with Oats, Barley and Dates. They drive a great Trade of Indigo, and Leather, besides some strip'd Silks, and most of the Dates brought into Europe, come from thence.

The Province of Itata, lying on the Frontiers of Libya and a Dependence of Taflet, is by the Natives call'd Garib; they being a mix'd Race, who speak neither good African nor Arabick, but are brave and keep abundance of Horses, whom they feed with Dates, for want of Barley. They live among the Palm-Trees, which are their Principal Wealth. This Province, and the Kingdom of Taflet, are both Subject to the Kings of Fez and Morecco, who conquer'd it from the Native Princes.

Darha

Is one of the best Parts of Numidia, so call'd from the River of the same Name, which runs through it; being separated on the North by Mount Atlas from the Kingdom of Morocco; on the West it borders on the Provinces of Gezula, Sus, and part of Tesset; on the South it has another part of Tesset, and on the East Taflet. The Length of it near 300 Miles. There are many Cattles and wall'd Places in it along the River Darha. It has a Town of the same Name not very considerable, no more than those of Benisabih, Tezerin, Tinzeda and Yinzulin, which last is the best of them, commanded by a Citadel; but Tinesquet exceeds them all as containing 2000 Houses within its Walls, besides 200 in the Suburbs. Nothing remains, but the Ruins of Tesut, where the Kings once kept their Court.

Some of the Land bears Corn, especially when the River Darha over-flows, but never enough to maintain the People, which obliges them to carry their Dates to Fez, to exchange for Corn. Abundance of Indigo grows here, and Palm-Trees for four Leagues about, and they feed their Camels and Horses with the worst of the Dates. The Men are generally tawny, as being mix'd with the Blacks; but the Women are handsom and good natur'd, attended by Black Slaves. Their common Food is Milk boil'd with Barley-meal and Dates, as also Camels, Horses and Ostriches Flesh; but they never eat Bread, unless at great Feasts. They are for the most part Subject to the King of Morocco, except in some Places, where they have Lords of their own.

Tesset, or the farther Sus,

Lies along the Atlantick Ocean on the West, on the North extends along Morecco, Darha, and Part of Segelmessa, and on the East and South

joins to Zahara, or the Desert. It is generally divided into 7 Territories, or Districts, inhabited by as many Tribes of Bereberes or Native Africans, three on the Coast, and four up the Inland. The Maritime are, Idausquerit, the most Northerly, which is pretty well fill'd with Dwellings of the Bereberes, who enclose them, and have a Sort of Forts. They are able to raise 5000 Horse and 30000 Foot, but this is because in Time of Need, all the Men go to the Wars, and keep much Cattle and Horses, because the Land is proper for them, and produces Wheat and Barley, in some Places, as also Oranges, Limons and other European Fruits. Estuca is the next towards the South, whose Principal Town is Tarquez, where the Xequé or Lord resides. It is all a Rocky Soil, yet bears Barley, and feeds Flocks of Goats, which are the Principal Wealth of the Inhabitants. The most remarkable Thing here is Cape Nam, so call'd by the Portugueses, as looking upon it as the Ne plus ultra in Navigation, because for many Years their Voyages terminated there, and they believ'd it impossible to go any farther. To the Southward still is Nun, a miserable poor Country next the Desert, and here is the famous Cape Bojadar, so nam'd from its running out far into the Sea, for Bojar, in the Portuguese Sea Phrase, is to extend. The only Places here worth naming are the Towns of Nun, Albena and Ansulima. The Arabs here wander up and down the Plains, and the Bereberes reside in Valleys or the Hills. Tesset is up the Inland, next the Frontiers of Zahara, the Capital of the same Name, wall'd and containing 400 Houses, with about 12000 scattering Habitations round about in the Country, which is all Sand, except a few Spots close to the Town where there are Date Trees, and they sow some Barley and Millet; so that the People are all Poor, and employ themselves in Tillage. Guaden lies a little to the North-west, a small District, in all Respects like the last. Ifran, or Ufran, consists of Four little Towns, built by the Numidians, a League from one another, near a small River, which runs only in Winter. About them are several Villages, and great Store of Palm-Trees. These Places are under a more regular Government, than the rest, because resorted to by Christian Merchants trading to Gualata and Tombut; whither they carry Linen and Woollen Cloth, and bring back Leather, Wax, Rice, and Sugar. They have a Judge among them, who decides all Controversies, and Punishes Criminals, but none beyond Banishment, be their Crime never so Enormous, for they put no Man to Death, tho' they are all Mahometans. Aca or Archa, is the most Inland Part, next to Zahara, where are three wall'd Towns, near one another, once almost depopulated by civil Wars, till a Marabout, or religious Man reconcil'd them, and became their Lord.

The Religion of all this Region of Biledulgerid is Mahometan throughout, and as for their History we have nothing of it, whatever has been known of it being included under the Kingdoms of Barbary, which have extended their Dominions into these Parts, which of themselves have not afforded any Learned Men to record their Actions, or perhaps that obscure People never perform'd any thing worth committing to Posterity. For want whereof, we will here say something of Mount Atlas, which is one of the greatest in the World, both for Height and Extent. It commences at Cape Nam or Nao, on the Atlantick Ocean,

Ocean, which takes that Name from it. Then turning and winding sometimes to the North, and sometimes to the South, and sending out several Branches it runs to the Eastward the whole Extent of Africk, in its Way dividing all Barbary from Biledulgerid. Coming to Egypt it turns away again to the Southward, and parts that Kingdom from Nubia, and then continuing its Course Eastward, ends at last in the Red Sea. The Height of it is generally Excessive and much above the Clouds, and tho' in so hot a Country, a great Part is continually cover'd with Snow. This Name was given it from Atlas, King of Mauritania, who liv'd at the Foot of it, and addicted himself much to the Study of Astrology, who, the Poets feign, was turn'd into this Mountain by Perseus with Medusa's Head. The great Height of it gave Occasion to the Fable of Atlas, supporting the Heavens. The Arabs call it Aidnuc, and the Spaniards Montes Claros. Where the Snow lies not always, there are vast Woods, the Habitation of all Sorts of Wild Beasts. The lower Parts afford good Pasture, and many considerable Rivers descend from it.

CHAP. XI.

Of ZAHARA, or the Desert.

DEscending still Southward and returning from the West to the East, we meet with the Region of Zahara, so call'd by the Arabs, and signifying, a Desert, because in Effect it is no better. The Ancients knew it by the Name of Libya Interior, or Deserta, because remotest from them and desert. Whether it had this Denomination, from Libya, the Daughter of Egyptus and Grandchild of Jove, or from the Arabick Lehb, signifying excessive Heat, is not worth Disputing, there being some to defend both Opinions.

As to its Bounds, it reaches to the Atlantick Ocean; on the East to the Desert of Baria and Nubia; on the North it joins to Biledulgerid, and on the South to Negroland, or the Country of the Blacks. The Soil in general is Dry, Sandy and Barren; the Uncouth Mountains producing nothing but Briers and Brambles, and the most fruitful Parts only some little Barley and Dates. The chief Sustainance of the Natives depends on their Camels, their Sheep and Ostriches. To add to their Misery, they are infested with Snakes and Locusts, which flying in Clouds, destroy all the little Green there is.

The People are either Shepherds, whose chief Business is Robbing, Murdering and Hunting, as they wander from Place to Place; or Bereberes, who have certain Places of Abode and are affable, friendly, just in the Way of Trade, and Lovers of Strangers. The Men are spare of Body, and generally healthy to 60 Years of Age, the Air being so wholsom, that Sick Persons are brought thither from other Parts to be Cur'd by it. The Women are well-shap'd, and both Sexes Tawny. The Arabian Shepherds go stark naked, except the Modest Sort, who wrap a Clout about their Middle, and a kind of Turbant on their Heads made of black Cloth. The richest of them wear a loose Garment of blue Callico, brought them from the Country of the Blacks. They Travel on Camels, lie upon Mats, and cover their Tents with a coarse Cloth of Camels Hair. The Will of their Chiefs, is the only Law among them; their Religion a Corruption of Mahometism, and their Language a Barbarous African.

The Arabs divide this Country into three sorts, by these Names, Cebel, which is all small Sand; Zabara, stony; and Agar, Marthy. The most receiv'd Division among us is into 7 Deserts, under which all other smaller are comprehended, in which there being no Towns of any Note, it will be needless to give a Table, as in other Countries, but barely the Names of those Deserts; which are, Zanhaga, Zuenziga, Targa, or Hayr, Lempta, Bardoa, Gazza, and Borno.

Zanhaga

Extends to the Ocean on the West, has the Province of Tesset on the North, the Desert of Zuenziga on the East, and the Kingdoms of Guala and Tombut on the South. In this Compass are included the small Deserts of Azoad and Tegazza, the last of which produces a vast Quantity of Rock Salt, convey'd thence all over the Country of the Blacks, and us'd by the People to hold in their Mouths to moisten them and preserve their Gums. This is a very dangerous Place to travel through, if the Summer prove dry, for then there is neither Water, nor any thing to give the Cattel; and in the Territory of Azoad are to be seen the Tombs of a Rich Merchant and a Carrier, the first of which bought a Draught of Water of the latter for 10000 Ducats, and yet both of them dy'd of Thirst, before they got out of the Desert. Cities and Towns of Note we must look for none in these Deserts.

Zuenziga

Has Zanhaga on the West, Segelmessa and Tegorarin on the North, Targa on the East, and the Kingdoms of Tombut and Agades on the South, and includes the lesser Desert of Gogden. This Country, tho' more dry and barren than the last, has many Inhabitants; and is the Thoroughfare of the Merchants, who go from Tremecen to the Kingdoms of Tombut and Agades with great Danger of their Lives, many Men and Beasts dying by the Way, particularly in the District of Gogden, for want of Meat and Drink, there being no Water for Nine Days Journey, unless it Ram and make some Pools, and those too soon dry up. The Inhabitants are mix'd Africans and Arabs, the latter dreaded by the Blacks, whom they take by Force and sell them to Fez, but if those Blacks ever light on them, the biggest Piece they leave of their whole Body is an Ear.

Targa, or Hayr,

Is the next Desert Eastwards to Zuenziga, so call'd from a Race of Africans bearing the Name of Targa, and Hayr, from the Principal Habitation in it. This Country is not so Dry and Barren as the two last, but has many good Wells of Water, tho' generally deep; the Air is more temperate and the Land produces Grass. Much Manna is here found towards the Frontiers of Agadez, which is carried thither to Sell, fresh gather'd, in Calabashes, and sold very Cheap. The Blacks drink it dissolv'd in their Water and dress their Meat with it, alledging that it is Cooling and Wholesome, and therefore Strangers are more healthy there than at Tombut, tho' the Air is not so good. Both the Arabs and Berberes deal much in carrying Blacks to Barbary to Sell.

Lempta, or Yguidi,

Comes next in Course, as lying East of Targa, a Miserable Place, and very Dangerous for Merchants who travel through it from Constantina to the Country of the Blacks, being inhabited by fierce and brutal Africans, who rob all they meet with, and kill all that are of Guerghels, because they lay some Claim to that Province, and therefore are always at War with those that Possess it.

Berdoa

Lies East of Lempta, and North of Borno, South of Biledulgerid, properly so call'd, and West of Gaoga. It is as Barren and Dry as any of the Rest, and very unsafe for Travellers, except they be of Gademes in Biledulgerid, with whom they are ally'd. This is perhaps the Desert of the Ancient Angles mention'd by Pomponius Mela. Some Dates grow about such Places as are Inhabited and have any Water, and here are reckon'd to be three little wall'd Towns and some Villages.

Borno

Is South of Berdoa, and not to be reckon'd among the Desarts, being a Kingdom, and water'd by some good Rivers descending from the Mountains, which render it capable of bearing Corn and several sorts of Fruit, especially in the Middle Part, as being remoter from the Desarts. Upon one of these Rivers stands the Capital of the Kingdom of the same Name, a Place not contemptible and resorted to from the neighbouring Countries. The King here is Absolute, as in all Eastern Countries; his People, being some black, some white, are civiliz'd and drive some Trade; but their Women and Children are still in common, for they have scarce any Religion, like the Ancient Garamantes, of whom it is doubtless they are a Part.

Gaoga,

Another Kingdom, North-east of Borno, and parted from it by Desarts, is also indifferently supply'd with Water from some Rivers, and the Land not altogether unfruitful. The King here is said to be descended from a Black Slave, who after securing his Master's Effects, bought Horses and fell to Robbing, till being grown Powerful, he made himself a Sovereign. Some of his Subjects are Christians, but extremely ignorant and much corrupted for want of good Instructions.

All the People of Zahara are generally abstemious and patient of Hunger and Thirst, being us'd to endure Hardships in a Country where sometimes in 8, 10, or 12 days Journey, there is no Water to be found. Sanfon is of Opinion that the People of the three or four first Desarts here mention'd towards the Sea, are the Ancient Getuli; and the three or four last the Garamantes. The Religion of all these Countries is generally the Mahometan, except what little of Christianity is said to remain in Gaoga and Borno. History of these Parts there is none.

CHAP. XII.

The Kingdom of NUBIA,

BY the Africans call'd Neube, from an Ancient People in these Parts formerly known by the Name of Nuba, and mention'd by Ptolemy, Lies West of Gaoga, and Borno, last mention'd, and separated from them by vast Desarts. On the North it Borders on the Desert of Lica and Egypt, from which 'tis separated by high Mountains, Eastward; and to the South, it is parted from Ethiopia by the River Nile, and a Ridge of Mountains, and the Desert of Gorham. The Position is between 10 and 23 Degrees of Latitude, and between 38 and 52 of Longitude, the Form being Oblong, and lying North and East and South-west.

The principal Rivers are the Nile, the Nubia, and the Sira; these two last fall into the first. Of these the Nubia is deeper than the Nile, and fatal to the Crocodiles, that they certainly die a very few Days after they come into it. All that Part of the Country which is any thing near the Nile is overflow'd by it, as well as Egypt, and that Means render'd no less fertile in Grain and Pasture, as is most of the Soil about the other Rivers; but towards the South and West, where they do not reach it is most Barren and Desert. Besides the Corn, here grows much Sugar, yet not of any great Value, as being generally black, and of an unpleasant Savour. Other Commodities it affords are, a considerable Quantity of very fine Gold, Musk, Sanders and Ivory, as having many Elephants. But the most Mischievous of its Product is a Deadly Poison, sold for an Hundred Ducats an Ounce, and so fatal, that the 10th part of a Grain kills a Man in a Quarter of an Hour; and this is a small Seed gather'd from the Top of an Herb, not unlike a Nettle.

There are in Nubia great Numbers of Lions, Tigers, Crocodiles, and Camels. Great Care is taken in breeding up these last, as being of excellent Use. The Female goes Eleven Months with Young, and as soon as they fall, that they may learn to Kneel, to receive their Burden, they bow their fore Legs under their Belly, and lay weight on the Back that it may not rise. Thus they keep it several Days, with very little Milk, that it may learn to drink little. This Practice brings them to Kneel, when they are to be loaded and to live several Days without Water, which is of great Use in the Desarts, where none is to be found. Sometimes they eat Barley and sometimes Grass. The general Burden of a Camel is 500 Weight, but they will carry 1000 for a need. The Camel's Milk is reckon'd an excellent Remedy against the Dropsy. The Dromedaries, are much us'd to Ride on, and so swift that they will Travel above 100 Miles a Day.

The Natives living in Towns are Traders, those in the Country Husbandmen. All of them are very black, small of Stature, and for the most part much deform'd by the Small Pox, which they often have two or three Times. The better Sort wear fine Linen, and the Poorer a coarser Sort; but during the hot Season they are quite Naked, except their Privities. They are brave enough, but generally better a Horseback than a foot, lying very close when they ride to the Horse's Neck. Since they have taken to Poisoning their Arrows, the Turks do not care to Attack them. Their Language is peculiar to the Country. As for Religion they were Christians, soon after the first preaching of the Gospel, and so continu'd a long Time without deviating. Of later Times Mahometanism is crept in among them, especially in the Parts next to Egypt; yet it does not prevail, Christianity still being the most receiv'd, but that through Ignorance, and for want of able Instructors much corrupted; however that they profect to the best of their Knowledge, and acknowledge the Patriarch of Alexandria for the Head of the Church. They have a King of their own whose Power is absolute, and his Will all the Law, independent of any other, and yet the Turk has the Vanity to mention him among his Subjects.

The Capital City is Dancalia, formerly Tempis, seated on the Nile next the Frontiers of Abyssinia, containing 10000 Houses, but the Buildings mean, being most Timber and Mud Walls. The next is Sussa, to the Southward of the last and on the same River, and then Gorham the most Southerly of all, and beyond it is the Desert which takes Name from it. Nubia, which some will have to be the Metropolis of Nubia stands to the North West of Dancalia on a Bow the Nile makes there, and opposite to it is Gualva, a smaller Place. Jalac is still nearer to the Frontiers of Egypt. Tamalma is the Principal Town Westward on the River Sira, and Dancalia and Dora the chiefest in Nubia to the Southward. Near the former of these two begins the Desert of Zin, extending between it and the Sira and the Kingdom of Borno. In this Kingdom are still to be seen the Ruins of above 150 ancient Christian Churches, with the Images of our Blessed Saviour, the Virgin Mary, and many other Saints carv'd on the Stones.

C H A P. XIII.

Of Abyssinia, or the Upper Æthiopia.

WE shall not extend this Country 14 Degrees beyond the Line, as many Geographers do, but give its true Bounds and Provinces, as deliver'd by the Jesuits, who travell'd all over them. On the North it runs along Egypt, the Desert of Barca, and part of Nubia; on the West, the River Maleg, which falls into the Nile is its Boundary, with some Desarts in the South Part where this River fails; the East side is shut in by the Coast of Abex, which was once subject to it, but now lost and makes a Province apart; and the South reaches to that we now call the Empire of Monoemugi, of which we shall speak in its Place. Thus the whole Length from North to South is but 9 Degrees at most, or 540 Miles, and the Breadth from East to West about 400 Miles.

The most receiv'd Division is this which follows, with the Towns to each Kingdom or Province, there being many other smaller Territories mention'd in Authors, which do not deserve any particular mention, some of them being only parts of those set down, and others imaginary, besides some so call'd from Strangers that have come to inhabit them from abroad, and in short, to take notice of all that Authors write touching this Empire, would be endless, what can be deliver'd with any certainty, is as follows.

Barnagasso

Is generally reckon'd a Kingdom, tho' in reality it be but a part of that of Tigre, only it is under a separate Governour call'd Barnagus, that is, Lord of the Sea, because formerly his Rule extended to the Sea-side. It reaches Northward to the Frontiers of Egypt, on the East to the Coast of Abex, on the South the River Marab parts it from Tigre, and on the West the Nile from Nubia.

F. Tehez divides this into three Districts, viz. Carfila, Dafila, and Baroa; Debaroa, to which we may add Barrazana, being the most Northern Part among the Mountains. We shall not find any considerable Cities in all Abyssinia, and shall therefore be the shorter in the Description of them. The chiefest in this Part of it is Baroa, formerly of some Note, when the Æthiopians were Masters of the Port of Arquico on the Red Sea, since ther very inconsiderable. Next is Emacen, to the Northward, and then Carna and Zama, next the Southern Borders. In this Part is suppos'd to have been the Kingdom of the ancient Queen Candace, mention'd Acts 8, and 27.

Tigre, or Tigremahon,

Is the next, or rather the same Kingdom to the Southward, separated from the last, as has been said, on the North by the River Marab; on the West it borders on Dambea and Bagamedri; Southward it joins to Angole, and Eastward to the Coast of Abex. Tigre, or Auzen, is the Capital of this Kingdom, no way remarkable, but on the Northern Borders stands Chaxumo, or Kaxumo, supposed to be the Auxumion of Ptolemy, and the Axumites of Adrian, or Auxuma, formerly famous, now all Ruins, yet the Emperours are Crown'd there, and it is seated in a pleasant Plain, water'd by several Rivulets. Almost in the midst of this Country stands Fremona, on a high Hill, so call'd from S. Fremonatius, the first Bishop in Æthiopia, and the usual residence of the Jesuits when they were admitted to the Mission, and there they built a Church. Ambacant is but a Day's Journey from Fremona, and Manadela lies just upon the Southern Frontiers. To the Northward of Chaxumo, above-mention'd, there are two famous Monasteries, the greatest of them call'd Abchisan, the other Abbagarina, where once the Jesuits resided.

Bagamedri,

A Kingdom extended much in length, lies South West of Tigre, from which and Angole it is parted on the East by Mountains, on the West by the Nile, by Goyame on the North, from Dambea by the Lake of that Name, and Mountains, and on the South it borders on Ambara. On the East side of it are the greatest Mountains and Rocks, where part of the Nation call'd Agumians inhabit.

The Capital, of the same Name, is seated in a delightful Plain, on the Banks of the River Suana, and bears the Name of a Royal Town, because the Viceroy of Tigre receives a second Crown, having one before in the Place where his Employment was conferr'd on him. Alaba is a small Town, near to which there is a Bridge over the Nile; Fogora another no more considerable, is next the Frontiers of Goyame. Azuga is in the Northern Part, on the River Abanc, and Mochada, South from that, on a smaller Stream Angole.

This Kingdom has been wrested from that Empire by the barbarous Galas, who broke in from the Southern Parts, and made themselves Masters of many Æthiopian Provinces. It lies East of Bagamedri, joins Northward with Tigre, Eastward with Dankali, and on the South the Kingdom of Amahara. The Capital here bears the same Name with the Kingdom; Dofarzo, not far from the Frontiers of Tigre is reckon'd to contain 1000 Houses; Korkora is not so considerable. Bugana or Abugana on the West was once famous for a good Church in it, call'd Imbre Christos, besides several others of less Note.

Dambea, or Dembea,

Has the River Tacaze to part it on the East from Tigre; some Mountains on the West; Seit and Ogura are on the North, and Bagamedri on the South. Several Trenches drawn from the Nile run cross it, and in the midst is a great Lake, call'd Bahr-Dembea, that is, The Sea of Dembea. The Capital call'd also Dembea, or Zambea, is generally the Residence of the Emperour from November till Easter, for the rest of the Year he lives in the Field. About this there are several small Towns, as Arfana, Goga, Fogora, Afras, Ganeta, and Gorgona. This Country is for the most part level, and often overflown by the Lakes and Rivers, which is rare in other Parts of Æthiopia. Gorgona above-named, is 3 Miles from the ancient Town of that Name, being the Center of Dambea, and was once the Residence of the Jesuits to be near the Emperour, and here they built a Church and Seminary. About 50 Miles from it is Ganeta de Jesus, that is, the Paradise of JESUS, seated on a low Ground, which is rare in this Empire, plentifully supply'd with Water, and in it a Church, where the Emperours have been buried for some Ages. Here F. Paez built a Church and a Palace for the Emperour after the European manner. Depsan stands on a Hill, 3 Miles from the Lake of Dembea, where the Empress us'd to reside; a pleasant Place, water'd by two Rivers which join there; the Air serene and wholesome.

Mount Dancation is on the utmost Part of Dembea, and on the top of it a Plain, where the Emperour continued a long time with all his Court, and there was built a House after the manner of Europe for the Patriarch, and another for the Jesuits. There was besides, an old Church call'd Gambianet, and 9000 Huts built of Stone, and cover'd with Thatch, for the Soldiers. Opposite to it is another Mountain extraordinary steep, whither the Natives use to fly when attack'd by their Enemies, and on the East Side of it is the Monastery of the Abbot Eustachius.

The Island Alencercca, or Alacoreca is another safe Place of Retreat for the Natives, and in it the famous Monastery of the Abbot Haymon. The Lake of Dambea is very large, and contains several Islands, with Monasteries in some of them. The Nile runs cross a part of it without mixing its Waters. In it there are River Horfes, but no Crocodiles. In the Island Dec on this Lake, the Patriarch Mendez baptiz'd 1400 Children, and 1340 Persons of riper Age.

Goyame.

This Kingdom is South of Dambea, the Figure of it almost Oval, and a Peninsula made by the Nile running almost round it, the middle of it higher than the extreme sides, partly inhabited by a Race of People descended from Hagar, next the Springs of the River Nile; at the Neck or Isthmus is a very steep and almost inaccessible Mountain, and on the top of it an oval Plain 250 Fathom in Length, and 130 in Breadth, to which there are two Paths or Ascents across the Rocks, and an excellent Spring on one side. Towards the Nile there is a Plain separated from the foot of this Mountain by a natural Trench, where the Viceroy lives. Nebeffa is a remarkable Town here, in which the Empress Helena, Governess to the Emperor David, erected a stately Church, afterwards destroy'd by the Galas, and rebuilt by the Jesuits residing there, they having had several places of Abode in this Kingdom. On the North there is nothing but Desert Mountains; but some say 'tis inhabited by Jews. Other Towns here, are Casates, Tavia, and Marauna. This Kingdom Telles will have to be the Meroe of the Ancients.

Amahara

Borders Northward on Bazamedri and Angole, Westward on Goyame, Eastward on the Provinces of Dankali, and Southward on Oleka and Xaoa. The Rocks are here more steep and inaccessible than in other Parts; but the most noted of them, call'd Anbiquexen and not Amahara, as some Authors pretend, is towards the Frontiers of Xaoa, only accessible by two narrow and difficult Paths, and here formerly the Emperor's Sons were kept, to prevent their raising any Commotions, which is now no longer us'd. The Rock Tabac Maria is also remarkable, standing where the River Quea falls into the Nile, has a curious Plain on the top, water'd by two Rivulets, and enclos'd by a Ridge of Mountains, with 12 Passages through it, like so many Gates. On it are seven Churches, the chiefest of the Invocation of S. John, and in it five Tombs of former Emperours buried there. The most remarkable Town in this Kingdom is call'd Adel.

Xaoa,

Divided into the Upper and the Lower, lies South of Amahara, East of Gafata, North of Oxelo and Ganz, and West of Oisue. It is the last Kingdom this way that now owns the Emperour of Abyssinia. Here are several Towns, but scarce any of Note, unless it be Korkora, where there is a Palace of the Emperour's, a good Church, and a rich Monastery, call'd Nizaretto.

Damut

Borders Northwards on Gafata, Southward on Girague, Eastward on Ganz, and Westward on Narta and Bizamo. In it is that they call the Dead Mountain, the highest and coldest in all Abyssinia, to which the Emperour sends those he has a Mind to be rid of, where they are soon starv'd with Hunger and Cold. In this Kingdom the Jesuits had two Residences. Of the Towns here there is very little to be said, except that the Capital is of the same Name of the Kingdom.

Fascolo,

An Inland Western Kingdom, has the River Nile on the East, the Maleg on the West, Nubia on the North, and Bizamo on the South. The Metropolis bears the same Name, the Country is very mountainous and uneven, but about the Nile there are pleasant and fruitful Valleys, which is the most we know of this Country.

Fategar

Is a small Kingdom bordering upon Balli, Oisue, Oxelo, and Gomara, what it may have been formerly does not appear, at present there is nothing in it remarkable, except that they call, The Mountain of the Fever, near a Place the Europeans nam'd the Market, because thither the Merchants of those Neighbouring Kingdoms resort to Trade, there being a very narrow Way to it on each side. There is another, call'd, The Mountain of the Lake, because at the Foot of it is a Lake three Leagues in Compass, and about it many Monasteries and Churches.

Narea, or Nerea,

One of the largest of all the Kingdoms in Abyssinia, and the most Southern, extending to 8 Degrees of North Latitude, has the Kingdom of Gingiro on the South, Girague and Damut on the East, Bizamo on the North, and the Desarts on the West. This Kingdom produces great Plenty of Gold, and has ever been faithful to the Emperour, tho' often attack'd by the Galas. It had once a King of its own, and the Natives are counted the best People in all the Empire, as being sincere and just, which the others are not.

These are the true Parts of the Abyssine Empire, which we may rely on, as being thus describ'd by the Jesuits who travell'd the greatest part of it, whom we rather chose to follow, than Geographers who sit at home and make Maps according to their Fanisie, or Ludolphus, who knew nothing but by hearsay from an Abyssinian he talk'd with, and a Man that had no knowledge of Geography. For this reason we omit many Names of Provinces and Kingdoms, some of them imaginary, others only Parts of those here describ'd, which if inserted, would rather serve to confound than inform the Reader.

Having had occasion sometimes to mention the Galas, it will not be amiss to inform the Reader that they are a People suppos'd to be descended from the Jews, who wandring in their several Dispersions under Salmanassar, Nebuchadnezzar, and Titus, at last settled near the Kingdom of Dankali, on the Western Part of Abyssinia, and are become the most dangerous Enemies that Emperour has, having wrested from him a considerable Part of his Empire. The Agas, another Nation, were not long since Pagans, but many afterwards were converted by the Jesuits. At their first coming into the Country, the Em-perour assign'd one part of them Lands next the source of Nile, and the others among the Mountains of Bagamedri, where they are still become troublesome and apt to stir up others to Rebellion.

Having describ'd every Province in particular, it is time to add what may be requisite of the whole Country in general. Pliny says it was first call'd Æthiopia and Atlantia, and afterwards by the Greeks Æthiopia, from their Verb Aitho to Burn, and Ops a Countenance, alluding to the black scorch'd Countenances of the Natives. The Name of Abyssinia some derive from the Abiseni, or Abysmi, a People of Arabia Felix, who crossing the Red Sea, settled there. F. Mendez from Strabo, says it is so call'd from Abas, signifying Desarts in the Egyptian Tongue, because it is encompassed by them. The Scripture calls it Ludim, from Lud the Son of Mizraim, who first planted it.

The principal Rivers of Abyssinia. 1. The Nile, whose Original so carefully search'd for, and so utterly unknown to the Ancients, is now found by the Jesuits to be two small Springs in the West part of the Kingdom of Goyame, where the People call'd Agams inhabit. These two Springs run separate about a Musket Shot, and then join, then having run about 15 Leagues, it receives the Gema, soon after which it turns to the East; then to the Southward, running across the Lake of Dembea without mixing its Waters, thence the Course is South East along the Kingdoms of Bagameder, Amora, and Oleua, then again it winds to the West, and lastly to the North, so that it makes an Oval Peninsula, not above a Day's Journey over at the Isthmus. After this it continues its Course, tho' with many great windings to the North, till it comes into Egypt, and thence into the Mediterranean. The Cataracts of Nile are mighty full of the Water from high Rocks into the Bottoms, with a dreadful Noise. 2. The Tacaze, suppos'd to be the Atabaris of Ptolemy, rising in Angole, and after great Windings, first East and then North, then West, and then North again, pays Tribute to the Nile. 3. The Marab comes from the Coast of Abex, and runs most North West, through Tigre and other Northern Provinces into Tacaze. 4. The Maleg rises in Damut, and after a Course of some Leagues to the Westward, turns Northward in Hurea, waters Buzano and Fajcalo Westward of the Nile, and lastly loses it self in that River. 5. The Haoaxe comes from Aca, and passes through Eutegar and Balli Eastward to the Red Sea. Others less remarkable, are Baxilo, Quccan, Gamar, and Obe, all falling into the Nile, Machi into the Haoaxe, and Arquet into the Maleg.

The Mountains here as far exceed the Alps and Pyrenees in Europe as these do common Hills. In the Kingdom of Tigre is that call'd Lamallomon, excessive high, and the way over it extraordinary narrow and dangerous. Amahara and Sanen are not inferior to the last, and in short, all the Country is full of them, except the Province of Lenbez, which is for the most part Plain. Many of these Mountains have Plains on the tops, to which the Men mount with Ladders, and draw up the Cattel with Cords.

Most of the Bottoms are hot, but the Hills cool, which is the Reason that they are all inhabited, tho' almost inaccessible. The Thunder and Lightning is most dreadful, and the Rain at those times does not fall in Drops, but in Streams. The Seasons do not answer to ours, tho' on this side the Line their Spring answers to our August; their Summer to our Winter; their second Summer, for it cannot be call'd Autumn, to our Spring, and their Winter to our Summer.

That there is Gold in Abyssinia is most certain, some Provinces paying their Tribute to the Emperour in that they find among the Sands. It is likely there are other Metals, but the Natives know not how to find or work the Veins. In Tigre and Angole there are Rocks of Salt, which they dig, and carry all about the Country. All sorts of Grain yield a prodigious Increase, for they have three Crops in a Year, and besides all those known in Europe, they have a small sort call'd Tef, which makes good Bread. Nor is there less plenty of Grass, or of all odoriferous, useful or Medicinal Plants found in Europe, besides many that are utterly unknown to us.

The Kine grow to a prodigious Bulk, and the Horses extraordinary swift, yet they generally travel on Mules, taught to Pace, Camels being only us'd to cross sandy Plains, because they endure the Heat, but not the stony Ways. The Elephants go in great Drove, making dreadful havock in the Woods. Here is another Beast much taller than an Elephant, tho' not so corpulent, the Legs being so long that a Man may pass under its Belly without stooping, the Neck proportionable to reach down to the Ground to graze. This they call Giratachem, and is likely the Struthio-Camelus mention'd in ancient Authors. Another the Portugueses call a wild Ass, because it has Ears like it, deserves not the Name on any other account, being as big as a Mule, slick and well shap'd, but so curiously and exactly cover'd with black and grey Streaks across the Back, from the Neck to the Tail, that nothing can be done more exact with a Pencil. Besides these, there are Tigers, Lions, Wolves, Leopards, Foxes, Monkeys, Cat a Mounts, Civet-Cats, Hares, Rabbits, and all other sorts of Creatures. The Rivers have River-Horses, thought to be the Behemoth in Job, Crocodiles, Water-Lizards, &c. And the Air all sorts of Birds, great variety of Insects, and infinite Swarms of Bees.

The Natives are generally peaceable among themselves, and if any Quarrels happen, they seldom go beyond Cuffs, and these Controversies are always decided by Umpires they chuse themselves. The People of the Kingdom of Narcia excel all the rest in Wit, Generosity, Courage, and all other Virtues; yet they are generally curious, and love to learn, but the Natives of Tigre are for the most part Inconstant, Perfidious, Cruel and Revengeful. They are all in general handsomer than the other sorts of Blacks, differing in nothing from the Europeans but in Colour, some of them Jeat Black, others Tawny, and others of an Olive-Colour, which they value most. Besides some are of a deepish Red, and others of a disagreeable yellow Hue. They are Active, good at climbing Rocks, Healthy, and Long-Liv'd.

The Women are Vigorous, and frequently Deliver themselves without help, and bear Children, as appears by the great multitude of People. The common sort wear only Breeches, and a piece of Cloth wrapp'd about them, which is all the Bed-Cloaths Cloaths they have at Night, lying on a Hide. Those who are better to pass have a light Garment or Shirt, for it serves for both, button'd down before. Both Men and Women wear long Hair, and that always anointed with Butter.

The prevailing, and as we may say, established Religion of Æthiopia, is the Christian, which was first brought in by the Eunuch of Queen Candace, who was Baptiz'd by Philip, as is declar'd in the Acts of the Apostles, but could not spread much, nor did it long after, till in the 4th Century S. Athanasius, Patriarch of Alexandria, sent S. Frumentius thither, who converted the greatest part of the Nation, and from his time there has always been a vast number of Monks or Religious Men throughout the Empire, as there is at this Day. But as to their particular Opinions, they are Eutychians, confounding the two Natures in JESUS CHRIST, besides several other wild Tenets crept in among them through Ignorance, which was so great, that they had several ways of baptizing their Children, and all of them far from the right. Besides they Circumcise both Males and Females, forbear Swines Flesh, keep the Sabbath, and have many more Jewish Observations, which, tho' they pretend to be only ancient Customs, and not perform'd on any Religious Account, yet savour too much of Infection. Besides the Christians, here are also great Numbers of Jews, Mahometans, and Pagans.

The ancient Language of Abyssinia is that they call Leshan Geez, or the Tongue of the Kingdom of Geez, and this is the Language they generally write in, being very like the Arabick, and seems to flow from it. At Court the common Language spoken is that of Amahara, and most other Provinces have their particular Dialects. The Jews have a peculiar Tongue among themselves.

That this is the Country of the much talk'd of Prefter John, has been very obstinately defended by some, and is positively contradicted by others, with very good Reason, tho' the Controversy in it self is of no great Moment, the ground whereof seems to be thus. There was an ancient Race of Christian Princes in the Kingdom of Tenduc in the Proper Tartary, who as we have already said in our account of Tartary, bore the Appellation of Prefter or Presbyter John, as he was corruptly call'd by the Europeans. A Name deriv'd from the first of them, whose proper Name was Jug-Chan, to which the Epithet of Prefterian, which signified Apostolical or Orthodox, was added, either by his own Command, or by the Compliment of his Subjects, which being handed to us was corrupted, as we have said, to Prefter John, and suppos'd to mean that he was so call'd as being Priest as well as King. The Name of this Prince being great in Europe, Peter Covilham (who, as we have told you in our Account of the Discovery of India was sent over-Land by John the 2d. King of Portugal) made enquiry after him in India, but heard of no such Prince there; however, being inform'd that there was a potent Christian Prince in Africa he took his Court in his way home, and was so kindly treated there, that he concluded this must be the famous Prefter John so much talk'd of, and accordingly brought that Name home, which has ever since remain'd in Europe. These People call a King, Nugue, and their Emperour, Nugua Nagasta, that is King of Kings. As to their ancient History, it is very uncertain, little Learning having ever been among them, yet they pretend the Queen of Sheba was their Sovereign, that Salomon got her with Child, and from that Son their present Emperours are descended. Queen Candace is mention'd in the Roman History on account of the War made upon Egypt in Augustus's Reign, but being repuls'd, and a Roman Garrison planted on the Confines, we hear no more of the Æthiopians till the Portugueses visited their Country. In the Year 1541 Christopher de Gama was sent into Abyssinia by the King of Portugal with 4 or 500 Men to the assistance of the Emperour David, who was much distress'd by the Mahometan King of Zeilan, and the Turks. David was then newly dead, and Claudius had succeeded him, who with this new Reinforcement gain'd two Victories over his Enemies, but the Portugueses being at last most of them cut off in a third Engagement, the Affairs of the Abyssinians declin'd, and in short, the Turks have taken from them all the Sea Coast, and the barbarous Gallas the better half of the Inland Country. When the Portugueses undertook to assist the Abyssinians, they also sent Learned Men to instruct them in the Roman Catholick Religion, whom the Natives cherish'd for some time, but afterwards they put to Death or expell'd the Missioners, chusing rather to adhere to their old Rites than submit to them of that Church.

C H A P. XIV.

The Coast of Zanguebar, including Aiani and Abex.

THE Coast of Abex is a narrow slip of Land running along the Red Sea, from the South Frontiers of Egypt to the Streight of Babel-Mandel. It was all formerly subject to the Emperour of Æthiopia, but at present to the Turk, by whom it has been Conquer'd above 100 Years, by which means the Abyssinians are quite shut up from the Red Sea, the Mahometans being possess'd of all the Coast and Ports in it.

The principal Places here are the Town and Port of Saaghem, in the Province of Danila, in about 18 Degrees 4 Minutes of North Latitude, and opposite to it, at a small distance, is a small Island of the same Name. Southward of it is the Port of Arquico, or Ercoco, the Adula of the Ancients, in about 15 Degrees and half Latitude, and opposite to another little Island call'd Mazua. The other Towns along this Coast, are Degibeldara, Degibelcora, and Kellu.

Mazua Island, above mention'd, is dangerous of access, especially when the Wind blows at South. The Natives of it are reckon'd good Soldiers.

are cloath'd in Cotton, or Silk, and the Women ever kept close till Married. Dalac, or Dalac, about 20 Leagues South of Mazua, another Island larger than either of the others, well water'd, healthy, and therefore well Peopled; yet being very Rocky, yields not much Corn, but abundance of Pasture. The Natives have Barley and Honey from the Continent; for Fish, whereof they take Plenty, as also some Pearls. The People are Black, Courageous, and sworn Enemies to the Turks; ill-look'd, and no better natur'd to Strangers, and all of them Pirates, robbing Mahometans, Jews, and Christians alike. Their Language differs from all others about them; they go naked down to the Waste, and wrap a piece of Calico about the rest. Their Prince is Sovereign over some other Neighbouring Islands, and most of them Abyssine Christians, the rest Mahometans of the Sect of Hali.

The Island of Babel-Mandel lies directly in the Mouth of the Red Sea. The Name signifies, The Gate of Affliction, and was formerly call'd The Island of Diodorus. It lies about 12 Degrees 50 Minutes of North Latitude, and is about 4 or 5 Miles in Compass, bearing neither Grass nor Trees. The Arabs and Abyssinians long contended for it, till the Portugueses utterly destroy'd all that was on it, since which time it has never been Peopled.

All along this Coast of Abex runs a ridge of steep, craggy Mountains, so that there is no passage into Abyssinia but by Arquico and Suaquem, and even there the Road is so bad that there is no Travelling above four or five Miles a Day. The Country is generally dry and barren, yet abounds with Lions, Tigers, Elephants and Deer. The Inhabitants are Blacks, Turks, and Arabs, and drive a Trade with the opposite Coast of Arabia.

The Arabs call the Red Sea Bahaz Queizum, that is, the dry Sea; others the Straights of Mecca, from that famous City in Arabia. It runs up between the Coasts of Africk and Asia, parting these two Quarters of the World. The Mouth of it is form'd by the two famous Capes, Guardafu in Africk, and Fartaque in Arabia, which are 60 Leagues asunder, the Island Babel-Mandel above spoken of lying directly between two others 100 Leagues from those above. The Length of this Sea from the Mouth now describ'd to Suez, where it ends, is 500 Leagues. Much contest has been about the reason of calling this the Red Sea, some pretending it was from the Red Sands, others from Red Coral, and others from King Erythrus, whereas there is nothing more certain than that it was so call'd from Esa, the Son of Isaac, otherwise nam'd Edom, whence the Land of Edom and this Sea of Edom, which Word in Hebrew signifies Red, and this the first Greeks translated Erythros, from them the Latins, Mare Rubrum, and so the Red Sea in all Languages.

The Coast of Aian being the second Part of what we include under the general Name of Zanguebar, begins at the Streight of Babel-Mandel, and running Eastward to Cape Guardafu in 11 Degrees Latitude, there it turns away to South-West till it comes to the Equator, where it is parted by the River Quilmanca from Zanguebar, properly so call'd. Aian is divided into the Kingdoms of Adel, or Zeila, Adea, and Magadoxa, and the Republick of Brava.

The Kingdom of Adel, or Zeila, so call'd from the two most considerable Cities in it has the Mouth of the Red Sea on the North, part of the Coast of Abex and of Abyssinia on the West; the Kingdom of Adea on the South, and the Indian Ocean on the East. The Side from Abex to Cape Guardafu is about 100 Leagues, and the other from that Cape to the Frontiers of Adea, above 70.

Adel, the Capital City, lies up the Inland in about 9 Degrees of Latitude, not much resorted to by our Travellers, and consequently little known, Affum, or Affion is on the Indian Sea, plentifully supply'd with all sorts of Provisions, yet little frequented by Ships, because it wants a Harbour. Cape Guardafu is to the Northward in 12 Degrees and a half Latitude, thought to be the Aromata of Ptolemy. To the Westward of the Cape are Salir, formerly Mosilon, then Barbora, Meth, and lastly, Zeila, one of the best Towns in the Country, seated on a Bay, without the Streight of Babel-Mandel, and forming a good Harbour. It is very populous, the Streets handson, and the Buildings of Lime and Stone.

This Kingdom has scarce any Mountains, and tho' it has little Rain, yet it is very fruitful, as being water'd by several Rivers. One of these call'd Havafsch comes out of Abyssinia, but cannot finish its Course to the Sea, by Reason it is all drein'd away by the many Trenches the Country People draw from it to water their Land, which produces so much Wheat, Barley and Millet, that it supplies other Neighbouring Countries. Here are Sheep, whose Tails weigh 25 Pounds; and Cows with Horns like Deer; and others with only one Horn. Besides Grain and Cattel, this Kingdom affords Gold, Ivory, Frankincense, Pepper and Slaves.

The King and all his Subjects are Mahometans; and he is reckon'd a Saint by the Turks, for making War on the Abyssinians. The Natives are either white or tawny, and wear Calico from their Waste downward, the Rest of the Body naked. They are good Soldiers and Buy all their Arms of the Turks and Arabs.

The Kingdom of Adea has Adel on the North, Oyia a Kingdom of Ethiopia on the West; Magadoxa on the South, and the Indian Sea on the East. The Principal Towns in it are Zachet an Inland Place Westward; Migiale more to the Eastward, and Bendel, the only Sea-Port, all this Kingdom lying up the Land, and towards the Back of Magadoxa. Orgabra lies to the Southward of the others. The King and Natives are Mahometans, but the Lordship of Granze, which lies next Ethiopia, is most inhabited by Idolaters, and hence sally'd a People, who broke into Abyssinia, and made great Conquests there.

Magadoxa is hemm'd in on the North and West by the Kingdom of Adea; to the Eastward it lies along the Indian Ocean, and on the South has the Republick of Brava, being a narrow Dominion along the Sea Coast, much traded to from Cambaya and Aden. The King is a Mahometan, and all his Subjects speak Arabick, tho' there be White, Tawny, and Black. In their Wars they use poison'd Arrows. The Country abounds in Pasture, Barley, and Fruit.

Brava, is a considerable Town, almost under the Equator, betwixt two Branches of the River Quilmanca, Wall'd and Built after the Moorish manner. The Inhabitants are rich Merchants, trading in Gold, Silver, Silks, &c. This is in all likelihood likelihood the only Commonwealth in all Africa, the Government Aristocratical, the Inhabitants choosing 12 Xeques, out of the Ancientest of certain African Families, which are the Offspring of 7 Brothers Arabs, who fled thither from the Tyranny of the Kings of Lycia. Much Ambergreece is found upon this Coast. The City was by the Portuguese call'd Barraboa, that is, the Good Bar, because there is good Access to it from the Sea.

Before we leave the Coast of Africa, we must not omit to say something of the famous Island Zocotorra. Pliny and Ptolemy call it the Island of Diccorides, and it lies in 12 Degrees Latitude, due West from Cape Guardafui, being about 25 Leagues in Length, and 18 over in the widest Place. About it there is good Anchoring in deep Water, besides two sufficient Harbours call'd Corra and Benin. There is but one Town in it, where the Xeque resides, besides several scatter'd Dwellings about. The great Product here is the Aloes, which being the best in the World, has given Occasion to the Name of Aloe Succotrina, corruptly for Zocotrina. Here is also Dragon's Blood, which is the Gum of a Tree the Indians call Ici. The Inhabitants are either Arabs, or Natives, call'd by those others Beduines, that is, brutal, stupid People, or Mongrels, between Beduines and Arabs. As for these last, they are like the Rest of their Nations; the Mongrels are generally deformed, and little regarded. The true Beduines hate the Arabs, are white and Well-shap'd, but Base, Cowardly and Slothful, and think it a Crime to cut their Hair or Beard. They feed on Milk, Butter, Dates and Flesh. Their Habit is a sort of Stuff made of Goats Hair, which they wrap about their Waist, and a long Cloak over their Shoulders hanging down to their Heels. As to Religion, they are Idolaters, and pay their principal Adoration to the Moon; but the greatest part of those who ever conversed with the Arabs, are become Mahometans.

Zanguebar,

Properly so call'd from the Arabick Zangue, Black, is thought to be the same Ptolemy names Agisimba, reaching from the River Quilmanca, above mention'd, which parts it from the Coast of Africa, to the River of Cuama, dividing it from the Coast of the Cafres, in 18 Degrees of South Latitude. The West Side of it running along the Lower Aethiopia, and the East along the Indian Ocean. This great Length of 18 Degrees, or 1080 Miles has no proportionable Breadth, which in the widest Place is not above 300 Miles, and much less in others.

Passing the Line to the Southward, the first Places we meet with are Pase and Lamo, both on the Coast, which are two small Principalities. The first a large City, well built, and has a good Harbour; the latter not so Large, but wall'd, and the Residence of another Mahometan Prince. Sana, Colicic and Ampaza, are three other inconsiderable States, close by the former, and to one another; of all which there is scarce any more to say, but that in the flourishing Times of the Portuguese, they were Tributary to them, and have since cast off their Yoke.

The Kingdom of Melinde is next to the Southward, more considerable than all those above, as extending back behind them up to the Line, and having some small Extent along the Coast. The Capital City bears the same Name, seated in the Plainest of a Rocky Coast, encompass'd with Orchards, Palm-Trees and Woods of Fruit-Trees; the Buildings slightly, the Country well stor'd with Cattel, the Natives Pagans, of Colour swarthy, and strong of Body; the Women agreeable, and cloath'd from the Waist down in Silk or Calico, and Veils with Gold Laces on their Heads. The Guzerat Merchants Trade here, and in return for their Spice, Silks and Calicoes, carry back Gold, Ivory, Ambergreece and Wax. The King is a Mahometan, and is serv'd in great State and Splendor. The Portuguese, at their first coming into India, establish'd a lasting Peace with this Prince, which has been generally well observ'd, and by virtue of it the Christians have free Exercise of their Religion in several Churches.

Next follows Mombaza, another Kingdom, the City standing in an Island, is Beautiful and Strong, and before it a large Bay capable of holding of many Ships. The Portuguese made themselves Masters of this Place and held it many Years, but were at last expell'd by the *Moor*s, who for their greater Security, put themselves under the Protection of the Turks.

Quiloa, is another City and Kingdom, still to the Southward, taking its Name from a little Island near the Continent, at the Mouth of the River Cuavo. The City is in the Island; the Buildings handsom, after the Spanish Fashion, several Stories high, with a Garden to each. There is another City on the Continent, call'd Old Quiloa. The Mahometan Prince, who reign'd there was very Potent, before the Portuguese made themselves Masters of that Coast, for his Dominions extended 250 Leagues; but in the Year 1505, Francis de Almeida took the City, and made all the Kingdom Tributary to Portugal; however of late Years they have lost all their Power in those Parts. The Sea yields great Store of Fish, and the Land abounds in Cattel, and all sorts of Fowl. The People are Clad some after the Arabian, others according to the Turkish Manner, wearing rich Cloth of Gold, Silks and Calicoes, with Turbants of the same. The Women wear Gold Chains about their Arms and Ancles, and rich Pendants. In Mourning for their Kindred, they lay aside all their Costly Ornaments. The Language generally Spoken is Arabick; most of them are Mahometans, the Rest Pagans, or Atheists.

Mozambique City and Kingdom is in about 15 Degrees of South Latitude. The Land bears much Rice, and other Grain, as also Oranges and Limons. Here are vast Numbers of Wild Beasts, but particularly so many Elephants, that they have much Difficulty to keep them out of the Corn Fields, and the People dare hardly go far without Firebrands in their Hands to fright them. The Blacks here have frizly Hair and thick Lips, going naked, only their Privities cover'd with a Clout, or the Bark of a Tree, painting the rest of their Bodies of several Colours, and boring their Lips to hang Ivory Toys on them. They Eat all sorts of Flesh, especially the Elephants, and even Men they take in War, and are false, brutal and fit for Labour. Their Wealth consists in Gold, found in the Rivers, Ebony, Ivory and Slaves. Their Religion is partly Mahometan and partly Pagan, or rather none at all.

The two last Kingdoms in Zanguebar to the South are Mongalo and Angos, both small and inconsiderable, differing very little from the last, and lying along the Banks of the River Cuama.

Opposite to this Coast are several small Islands, inhabited by Blacks and Arabs, but have not any thing particular to deserve describing.

CHAP. XV.

OF NEGROLAND, or the Country of the Blacks.

HAVING pursu'd this Coast so far to the South, it is Time now to return to the Westward of Abyssinia, to the Country of the Blacks, particularly call'd by this Name, tho' other Parts of Africk, might as well deserve it, the Natives being all of the same Colour. This great Tract of Land runs along the Country of Zahara, or the Desert, on the North, from which it is parted by Mountains and Desarts; on the East it has the Kingdom of Borno, and the most Northern Slip of Guinea, on the South a Chain of Mountains parts it from Guinea, and on the West the Atlantick Ocean. From East to West it is above 2000 Miles in Length, and the greatest Breadth from North to South, which is next the Sea, about 900.

The River Niger, the greatest in Africk, by the Natives call'd Hued Niger, cuts all this Land in two from East to West, leaving several Kingdoms on the North and others to the South, as we shall see in their proper Place. All the ancient Geographers were Positive that this River came from the same Source as the Nile; but the late Discovery of the Springs of this last has clear'd that Mistake; and it is now agreed among all Modern Writers, that the Niger flows out of a Lake in the Lower Ethiopia, whence winding to the Northward till it reaches the Kingdom of Borno, already spoke of, it there turns to the West, and traverses all Negroland, as has been said. It swells in June, like the Nile, and overflows all the Low Lands for 24 and 30 Days, fertilizing the Country, and then returning into its Channel, falls into the Sea at several Mouths, the most Northerly, in about 15 Degrees of North Latitude call'd Senega, the next Southward Gambia, the third Santo Domingo, and the fourth Rio Grande, or the Great River.

The Division of Negroland, allowing the Kingdoms of Borno and Gaogao to Zahara, or the Desert, as we describ'd them in speaking of that Country, will be into the following Kingdoms, with the Towns of any Note we can find in them.

Gangara.

This Kingdom, the most Westwardly of Negroland, has Borno on the East, Lempta on the North, Uca on the West, and the River Niger, parting it from Zanfara, on the South. The Capital of the same Name is wall'd, the other Towns very mean, and consisting of Cottages, rather than Houses; but the People are rich, as Trading for Gold; which they fetch over such steep high Mountains, that no Beasts can Climb them, and the Slaves carry the Commodities, and their Provisions in large Calabashes. The King can raise 2000 Archers and 500 Horse upon call, and is an Absolute Prince.

Zanfara

Is South of Gumma, East of Zegzeg, North of Boma and Bama, and West of Borno. The Towns here are not worth mentioning, nor scarce are there, else the Natives are well shaped of Body, and very Black, but their Faces deformed and hideous, and the Soil yields Corn, Rice and Cotton.

Zegzeg,

The next Kingdom Westward, borders Eastward on Zanfara, Southward on Benin, Westward on Gazo, and Northward has the River Niger to part it from Cassena. One half of it is Plain, excessive Hot, the other half very cold Mountains, on which the Natives are fain to keep Pans of Fire under their Beds to warm them. All the Country abounds in Water and Corn, the People are rich by Trade, but their Habitations very miserable.

Cassena,

Parted from the last by the Niger on the South, joins to Gumma on the East, to Lompia on the North, and to Cino on the West. All its Towns are open, like great scattering Villages, and the Houses mere Cottages. The Country Mountainous, producing much Barley and Millet. The Natives are very black, have large flat Noses and thick Lips.

Cano

Borders Eastward on Cassena, Northward on Lompia and Targi, Westward on Agades, and Southward is separated by the Niger from Guber. Its Metropolis, bearing the same Name, stands near the Middle of it, enclosed with Walls of Stone and Timber, and the Houses built after the same Manner. The Country is divided by Hills covered with Wild Orange and Limon-Trees, bearing good Fruit, the Land well water'd and feeding great Numbers of Cattel; as also bearing much Wheat, Rice and Cotton. There are many more open Towns, like Villages, the Inhabitants whereof are Shepherds and Husbandmen; those of the Capital follow Trade. The Prince here was formerly Powerful, but now Tributary to the King of Cassena.

Guber

Lies South of Cano, parted from it by the Niger, has Zegzeg on the East, the Gold Coast on the South, and Gazo on the West, from which it is parted by a Desert. The Country is in the midst of high Mountains, and full of open Towns, like Villages, that where the King keeps his Court contains about 6000 Houses. It is well regulated, on account of the many Merchants and Handicrafts, many of these being Cotton Weavers, and others Shoe-makers, which they carry to sell at Gazo and Tombut.

Gazo

Is West of Guber, North of the Gold Coast, East of Mandinga, and South of Tombut and Agades. The Chief Town of it, bearing the same

Name, is in about 12 Degrees of North Latitude, without Wells, or any Defence, but has some tolerable Houses. The Country abounds in Corn, Rice, Cattel and Grass, has little Fruit, but bounds with Gold; for which Caravans of Merchants come from Morocco, with great Danger of their Lives crossing the Unhabitable Deserts. Only the Capital deserves the Name of a Town, the rest being poor Villages, inhabited by Savage Country People. In Winter they wear Skins and in Summer go naked, with only a Clout before them.

Agades

Has the Niger on the South which parts it from Gazo, Cino on the East Zuenziga and Targi on the North, and Tombut on the West. The Town it takes Name from, is towards the Frontiers next Zabara, wall'd, built after the Moorish Fashion, and the King's Palace in the midst of it. The Inhabitants are many of them Merchants and Strangers, the rest Handicrafts and Soldiers. Those of the Southern Parts of the Kingdom, are generally Shepherds and Herdsmen, living in Huts made of Boughs and Mats, and wandring from Place to Place. The Prince is Tributary to the King of Tombut. There is great Plenty of Cattel, Grass and Water in the Country, and in the Deserts they gather Manna, which they keep in Calabashes to sell to the Merchants.

Tombut,

The Largest and most Powerful of all these Kingdoms, is bounded on the East by Agades, on the North by Zuenziga and Zimbaga, on the West by Gualata and Geneboa, and on the South by the River Niger, dividing it from Jalofes, Mandinga and Gazo. Its chief Town was built in the Year 1221 by King Mense Soliman, four Leagues from the Branch of the Niger, call'd Seneza, the Houses of Timber cover'd with Mud and Straw; but there is a Mosque and Palace made of Stone. Four Leagues from it on the Niger, is another large Town, call'd Babra, without Walls or other Defence, the Houses like those of Tombut. There the Vessels that bring Goods along the River either way, Unload, to transport them by Land to Guinea.

The Country abounds in Wheat, Barley, and Millet, and feeds so much Cattel, that Milk and Butter are very cheap; but Salt dear, being brought 170 Leagues, and all their good Horses are brought from Barbary. The Natives are Mahometans, but Courteous, Affable, and Pleasant, using to Dance to a flat sort of Tabers, they hold with one Hand and beat with the other, having Bells hanging to them, and they keep many Slaves. The King maintains learned Men, and they have many Arabick Books, which they Purchase at any Rate. The Townsfolk trade much in Cotton. They feed on Milk, Butter, Flesh and Fish. The Women, who are not Slaves, cover their Faces abroad. Their Money has but one Letter on it, and the most Valuable is only small Bits of Gold.

The King styles himself Emperour of Melli, and is very rich in Ingots of Gold. The Kingdoms Gualata, Cino, Cassena, Zegzeg, Guber, Melli and Agades are Tributary to him. The Merchants of Fez and Morocco bring many Commodities hither to exchange for Mandinga Gold.

Mandinga,

Mandinga

Lies South of Tombut, parted from it by the Niger, with Gago on the East of it, the Soufos and Gold Coast on the South, and the same Soufos and Melli on the East. It is water'd by several small Rivers, which fall into the Niger. The principal Town, of the same Name with the Kingdom, stands in the Western Part, next to Melli; besides which, there is another call'd Tocror, on the Niger.

The People here are reckon'd the Handsomest in all Negroland, but Barbarous and Perfidious; yet counted the best Horsemen and Soldiers in those Parts. This Country yields much Gold, which the Merchants carry to Tombut, to Trade with those that come from Barbary. The Prince once Lorded it over many of his Neighbours, but at present his Power extends no farther than his own Kingdom. The Religion was formerly Idolatry, but of late Mahometanism has prevail'd.

Soufos, or Bena,

Has Mandinga on the North, the Gold Coast on the East, Atalagueta on the South, and the same and Melli on the West. It is a small Country, all Hilly, well water'd and full of Grass. Here are Snakes, spotted of several Colours, as thick as a Man's Thigh; the King generally has one of them about him, as we keep Dogs, and no Man does hurt it. The King here, and all his Subjects are Idolaters.

Melli

Reaches to the Ocean on the West, to Matalagueta on the South, to Soufos and Mandinga on the East, and to Tombut on the North. The Town of the same Name is open, scattering and consists of about 6000 Inhabitants, where the Prince keeps his Court. The Country affords Corn, Cattel and Cotton, and the Inhabitants are enrich'd by Trade. They have Mosques, and Doctors to instruct them in Religion and Arabick, being most Mahometans, and Tributary to the King of Tombut.

Genehoa

Lies beyond the River Senega, which is its Boundary on the South as the Ocean is on the West; the River Arguin, which parts it from Gualata on the North, and the Kingdom of Tombut on the East. The Capital of it is no better than a great Village, where the King lives, with the Doctors of the Law and his Chief Men, the Houses being all Thatch'd Cottages, with Mud Walls. The Overflowing of the Niger makes this Town an Island, whilst it lasts. Barley, Rice, Cattel and Fish is here in Plenty, but little Fruit. They have much Cotton, and exchange the Cloth made of it for that of Europe, Copper, Brass and other Necessaries, brought them from Barbary. The Natives wear Black or Blue Cotton Cloth, with Caps of the same.

Gualata

Follows next, divided on the South from Genehoa by the River Arguin, on the West it has the Ocean, on the North a Ridge of Mountains parts it from Zanhaga, and on the West it borders on Tombut. It bears the Name of its Capital, which, as all the rest of the Towns, is no better than a great Village. The principal Product here is Rice, small Millet, Barley and Dates, and Fleth is very Dear. The People are tractable enough, tho' very disorderly in their way of Living, and are some Mahometans and some Pagans.

Jalofes, or Senega.

We come now to the Nations lying between the Branches of the Niger, whereof the most Northerly is that of the Jalofes, or Senega; the last of these Names given it from the great River which bounds it on the North, as does the Gambia on the South, the Ocean on the West, and the Conflux of those two Branches on the East. The greatest Prince here styles himself the Great Jalofe, being Sovereign over 13 or 14 petty Kings or Lords. In all this Dominion there is no wall'd Town. The famous Cape Verd, that is, the Green Cape, because the Portuguese, who first discover'd it found it very Green, is in his Dominions, in 15 Degrees of North Latitude, being the same Ptolemy calls Arfmarium. It is low, runs far out into the Sea, and has several Villages on it. The Soil of it self is good, but the Sloath of the Inhabitants is the Cause it produces little; only about Cape Verd there grows much Rice, Barley, and Cardamom; the common Grain is Indian Wheat, but here is store of Grass, Trees and Herbs, and abundance of Cattel; as also, Camels, Mules, Horses, Asses, Hares, Dogs, Cats and Monkeys. As for Birds, there are infinite Numbers of Parrots, and no want of Hens, Geese, Pigeons, Partridges, Woodcocks, Ducks and many more, peculiar to the Country. Salt hardens of it self in the Senega, whence it is taken out and dry'd upon the Land, in such Quantity that there is no End of it. The People are very Black, and strong of Body, Ignorant, and much addicted to Superstition and Sorcery. Their Houses are poor thatch'd Cottages and their Beds made of 5 or 6 Pieces of Wood rais'd from the Ground, on which they lay a Mat, and that serves for Quilt and Blankets. All the Household-stuff consists in a few Earthen Pots, their Arms, Axes to cleave Wood, and Shovels to throw up the Earth. All their Cloathing is only a Piece of Cotton Cloth lapp'd about them; but the Women have two, one about their Body and the other on their Head. They use little or no Ceremony in Marriages, but every Man may take as many Wives as he pleases; but they Bury their Dead with great Lamentation, and attend the Corps to the Grave. Their usual Weapons are Bows, Arrows and Darts, besides Cutlances, or Broad Swords. The generality of them are Pagans, tho' Mahometanism has long since crept in among them.

Casungas, Bijagas, or Biafara,

Is the next Nation of Note lying between the Gambia, the River Santo Domingo, and the Ocean. Next follow the Bijagas, betwixt the same Rivers, and Biafara beyond Santo Domingo to the Southward, in which there is nothing remarkable more than has been said of the others above, they being all Blacks, and little Differing from one another. Some Geographers name many Kingdoms, as they call them, besides what are here here mention'd, but they are only Villages and small Territories, which have Petty Lords, like the Cangues in the West-Indies, and not worth a Particular Account. All these Nations are too Ignorant to have any thing of History; and even that Knowledge we have of them is very imperfect, except only along the Sea-Coast.

C H A P. XVI.

OF GUINEA.

DEscending Southward from Negroland, in Order to return Eastward, the next great Region we meet with is Guinea, extending about 1500 Miles in Length, from East to West, and 400 in the broadest Place from North to South, the Latitude between 5 and 11 Degrees North. On that Side it runs all along joyning to Negroland; on the East to the Upper or Northern Part of Congo, and on the South and West it has the Great Ocean.

The most general Division is into three Parts, Malagueta, Guinea properly so call'd, and Benin.

The first of them is that Vulgarly known by the Name of the Grain Coast, from the Grains of Paradise or Cardamom growing there, which in Spanish they call Malagueta; The second contains the Ivory and Gold Coasts; and the third may all be taken in under the Denomination of the Slave Coast. Each of these is again Sub-divided into several smaller Kingdoms and Dominions; of each whereof we will endeavour to give a Brief Account. The Names affix'd here to each Division are not of Towns, there being none worth naming, but of Kingdoms, Districts, or Provinces.

The most Western of these three large Provinces, has Melli and Sorsos on the North, Guinea properly so call'd, on the East, and the Ocean on the South and West, extending, according to the most receiv'd Limitation, to Cape Palmas; tho' Bosman carries it no farther than S. John's River, the Extent along the Coast North-west and South-east being short of 400 Miles, reckoning from Sierra Leona to the aforesaid Cape Palmas. Sierra Leona is the Name of a Mountain, a River, and a Kingdom; the Mountain so call'd by the Portugueses, because the beating of the Sea against it makes a Noise, like the roaring of a Lion. This is the first Kingdom to the Westward, and in it the Village of Tombi, where the English Ships often Anchor. Up the Inland is the Kingdom of Mitombo, which Name the River of Sierra Leona also bears, where is a Town or Village the Portugueses call As Alagat, because there are Lakes and Marshes about it, and this that Nation have possess'd themselves of to keep other Aethiopians thence.

Next follows Quoja, reaching from the River Maguiba to that of S. Paul, on both Sides Cape Monte, and has many Villages along the Rivers. Above them, up the Land, are the Galweys, about the Springs of the River Mavah. Folgja and Manoe tend still to the South-east, near two Rivers the Portugueses call dos Juncos, or of Rushes, and do Arvoredo, of the Trees. Beyond that River dos Juncos, is that which in a stricter Sense is call'd, the Grain Coast, as producing the greatest Quantity, and most resorted to for it. However the Trade here is inconsiderable, and more especially of late Years. The Lords or Petty Kings in all this Tract of Land are almost as many as the Villages, under no fewer Barbarous Names, but most of them pay some Homage to the King of the Quoja; and therefore we shall not trouble the Reader with more of their insignificant significant Dominions, but only add something in General of them all.

On this Coast, the Winter or rainy Season is from May till October, the latter part of it very subject to Storms. The whole Country is fruitful, and produces abundance of Plants wholly unknown to us. The Rivers of Maguibah and Mavah breed Crocodiles and River Horses. The Land has variety of Reptiles and Fowl, and most of our Animals, and many more never seen in Europe; among which are a sort of Satyrs in the Woods, thought to be Savage Men, altho' void of Reason, who Ravish Women, if they find an Opportunity. Of which Animal Dr. Tyson in his Orange Outan published on Occasion of one brought to London, has given a very Learned Account.

Most of these People live upon Tillage, the Land being free to every Body, Rice being the principal Grain, which they can gather thrice in a Year. The Women work at it as much as the Men, besides which, the latter employ themselves in Fishing and Hunting. The King has one out of every two Elephants, or Buffaloes they take, and the third of other Creatures; but if it be a River-Horse, or other Monstrous Creature, it all belongs to him. Besides, they give him about a tenth Part of all their Harvest, and the first Fruits they offer to their Idol Belly. Their Houses are round, as are their Villages, Palisadoed about, instead of a Wall, with four Bulwarks, covering as many Gates, so narrow that only one can go in or out at a time.

These Blacks are much addicted to Venery, and Drunkenness, otherwise they are good natur'd one to another; but make no scruple of robbing any Europeans. Sorcery is much practis'd among them, by which they pretend to do extraordinary Matters. The most common Diseases among them are the Flux, the Small Pox, Meagrim, and in old Age a Swelling in the Testicles. There are several Languages spoken among them, at no great Distance from one another, but that they call Folgis is the most Universal. In Point of Religion, they all Acknowledge one only God, Creator of Heaven and Earth, and Adore no Creature whatsoever, nor admit of any Representation of the Deity; yet they have a sort of Invocation of the Souls of their Ancestors, and generally use Circumcision.

Guinea, properly so call'd,

Contains the Ivory and Gold Coasts, reaching from Cape Palmas, to the River Volta, about 600 Miles in Length along the Sea Coast, and bordering Eastward on Benin, Northward on Zegzeg, Guber, Gogo and Mandinga, Westward on Sonjos and Malaguetta, and to the Southward lying along the Ocean.

This, according to our common Acceptation, is subdivided into the Ivory and Gold Coasts; the first extending from Cape Palmas to the River Suero da Costa, and the other from thence to the River Volta.

The Ivory Coast is so call'd from the great Plenty of Elephants Teeth found there. About 5 Leagues to the Eastward of Cape Palmas, is the Village of Tabe; before which Ships often come to an Anchor to Trade, in 14 Fathom Water; farther on are the Villages of Petiero and Tahoe, and then the River of S. Andrew. Next follows Cape Lahoe, where the Ivory Coast, properly so call'd Ends, and that of Quagua commences. Two Leagues from Cape Lahoe, is the Village of Catron, and Six Leagues farther that of Jaques la Hou; Six Leagues from that is Jaques Jaqui; where within Musket-shot of the Shore there is 50 Fathom Water. The last Village on this Coast, is that of Corbie Lahoe.

The Natives here are reckon'd as Polite as any of their Neighbours; they hate Drunkenness, and pretend to be averse to all Fraud in Trade. Their Principal Commodities are Elephants Teeth, as has been said, and Cotton Cloth; thence call'd Quagua, which signifies - - - for indeed the Distinction of the Ivory Coast and that of Quagua is imaginary, the one being the English and the other the Country Name. All this Coast, tho' there be abundance of petty Princes, is Subject to one Sovereign whom they call Sucoo, who is much dreaded of all his Neighbours, not so much for his Power, as for the Opinion they have that he can perform wonderful Things by Sorcery. One fundamental Law of this Government is, that every Man must remain in the Condition he was born, so that the Son of a Fisherman must follow that Trade, the Son of a Merchant must be of that Profession and so of all others. Their Worship is Idolatrous and full of Superstition, and they sometimes offer Men in Sacrifice.

The Gold Coast, so nam'd from the great Quantity of that Metal brought thence, is divided into eleven Districts, with each of them 1, 2, or 3 Villages. Azem the first of those Provinces, was once a considerable Kingdom, now divided between the Dutch and the Brandenburgers, the former of whom have a Fort there call'd S. Antonies, and the latter another 3 Miles East of them, which serve as a Check upon the Blacks. 2. Ante, or Hante, where by a Village call'd Infuma, the English built a small Fort in 1691, and the Dutch have another less than two Miles from it, call'd Bafensteid, and four Miles from that another call'd Orange. 3. Adom. 4. Jabi, in neither of which there is no Fort. 5. Commami, in which is the Dutch Fort call'd Vreden-Burgh, and a Musket shot from it an English one, and within three Miles another of the Dutch, the most famous of them all, built by the Portugueses, and by them call'd S. George de la Mina, or of the Mine, because of the great quantity of Gold they got there. 6. Fetu, and in it the Dutch Fort Comradsburg, and three Miles from it the English of Cape Cors, being the best on all that Coast, except S. George de la Mina, and close by, another on a Hill which over-looks the first. 7. Saboe, whereby the Village Mourree is the Dutch Fort Nassau. 8. Fantyn, in which the Dutch have one Fort, the English two, and three Lodges. 9. Acron, where the Dutch in 1697. built a Fort call'd Leydsuambeyd, or Fort Patience. 10. Agomma, with a wretched English Fort built in 1694. And lastly, Aquamboe, where at the Village Acra, the English, Dutch and Danes have each of them a Fort.

All these here mention'd are along the Coast, those up the Inland are so numerous, so inconsiderable and so little known, that any Account of them would rather tire than inform the Reader, they being all meer Villages and their Territories, with the Names of Kings to them, tho' many of their Kingdoms do not extend 5 Miles.

To come to the Coast in general, our Summer is their Winter, and the Contrary, the Summer excessive Hot, as being within 5 or 6 Degrees of the Line. It is generally very unhealthy, but that is rather to Strangers than Natives, the unusual Heat of the Season being fatal to those who are us'd to colder Climates. The whole Coast is almost a continu'd Chain of Mountains, which occasions great Mists to rise from the Valleys amidst them, and these prove very Infectious. The greatest Distempers the Natives are subject to, are the Worms and Small Pox; by which last, many Thousands are swept away.

The Blacks are here generally Crafty and Deceitful, given to Sloath and Idleness, and no less Careless and Stupid. Their Heads they adorn after several Manners, moistening their Hair with Oil, and fastning Trinkets to it of several sorts of Coral, and are so fond of Hats that they think no Price too great for them. Their Arms, Legs, and Wastes are adorn'd with Gold and Coral. Their Cloathing is 3 or 4 Yards of Velvet, Silk, Cloth or Stuff wrapp'd about their Middle and hanging down half way the Legs. The poorer sort wear just as much as will cover their Nakedness, and an old Hat, or a Cap made of Deers Skin, or of Rushes. The Women as in other Countries go finer than the Men, plaiting their Hair, and wearing much Gold and Coral about their Necks, Arms and Legs, and so great a Quantity about their Waste as would hide their Nakedness, if they had no Cloaths, which are like the Mens, distinguish'd only by being longer.

The Children are suckled two or three Years, and then no farther care taken of Education, but only give them something to Eat, and let them do what they please; only that they are all to follow their Parents Profession. The common Food is Millet boild thick, with a little Palm-Oil over it, now and then some Fish, and Flesh but very seldom, or upon Festivals; but what they spare in Meat they make up in Drink, being extremely fond of Brandy and Palm-Wine. All their Handicrafts consist in making of Wooden, or Earthen Cups and Troughs, Marrying, Copper Boxes for Ointment, Bracelets and other Ornaments; but tho' they have sorry Tools they are good Smiths, especially for making all sorts of Arms, except Guns. The Language differs very often, there being 7 or 8 several sorts spoken along the Gold Coast.

The Kingdom of Benin, and Slave Coast,

Both of them comprehended under one Head, as a Third Division of the Coast of Guinea, extend from the Village of Popo, East of Rio Volta to the River Camaroons on the East, being about 600 Miles in Length, and from the Frontiers of Zigzag on the North, to the Ocean on the South, which is about 400 Miles in Breadth.

On the Slave Coast the first Kingdom we find is that of Arder, or Adra, reaching about 18 Leagues along the Coast, on which are the Villages of Foulson and Little Arder. Northward from Arder about a League is the Town of Jackem, encompass'd with a Ditch, fill'd from a River. Three days Journey up the Land, is the Village of Jaja, and half a League from it, that of Ba, where the King's Governour resides. Eighteen Leagues North North-east from the Coast is Great Adra, an open Town, but very Large, the Houses scattering, and the Residence of the King. This Country does not agree with Europeans, and the Port of Popo, often proves fatal to them, and yet they resort thither very much for Slaves. As for the Land it is good, being most plain and fruitful, yielding Millet, Palm Wine, all sorts of Plants and Fruits, which last all the Year; besides here is plenty of Salt, and a considerable breed of Horses. The Houses consist of Mud Walls thatch'd; their Diet all sorts of Fish, Rice, Millet, and Herbs. Their Customs and Manners differ little from their Neighbours. The King is absolute, and accordingly disposes of all things at Pleasure; but as to Religious Matters, tho' they have no publick Temples or Assemblies, these Blacks are more Superstitious than any before spoken of, and have a greater number of Idols.

A little Eastward of Popo begins the Country of Fida, extending that Way as far as Rio Lagos on the Coast, and has a Road and Port, but so very dangerous that abundance of Men are lost there going ashore, yet all European Nations Trade here for Slaves, and the Land makes some amends for the Dangers of the Sea, being full of small, and some considerable Villages, and all the rest of the Land is a most beautiful Prospect, being cover'd with Grass, Corn, and an innumerable number of Fruit-Trees standing so thick, that in many Places there is only a small Path betwixt them, the Blacks planting all that will bear, and sowing as soon as ever they have reap'd, and the Soil so grateful that it fully answers their Expectations. How far it reaches up Northward into the Inland is not known, none having yet hazarded themselves to Travel that way, because of the Danger there is in trusting to those People far from the Sea Coast. These Blacks are more generous than any others on that Coast, and courteous in the highest degree, always kneeling to their Superiors, and even Equals to one another. Industry and Labour are peculiar to them among those People, for they are never Idle, but working at several Handicrafts, and particularly weaving and spinning of Cotton Cloth, Forging, and Husbandry, the Women taking as much Pains as the Men. In return for these good Qualities, they are the greatest Thieves in the World, so that few Ships Trade thither without losing considerable quantities of Goods, and no reparation to be had. They wear several Clothes, the richest they can get, wrapp'd about their Bodies one over another. It is a mistake which many believe, that Parents here sell their Children, Husbands their Wives, &c. for this is never done without some great Crime committed; but all the Slaves here sold, are Prisoners taken in War. These poor Wretches are pack'd 4 or 500 in a Ship, and in that miserable condition transported to America. The King is honour'd as a Demi-God, and the number of their Deities is so great that none of themselves can determine it, but Snakes are of the greatest Veneration among them of all others. For Cattel, they have the same with us, as also tame Fowl, and infinite quantities of wild; and the Ground produces all European Plants that are sow'd on it, besides plenty of very good Indigo, which the Natives use for dying their own Clothes. The Weapons us'd by them are Mallets, Bows, Arrows, Hangers, Darts, and Clubs; but they and their Neighbours of Adra are generally rank Cowards.

runs on the East, which parts it from Congo, having Zegzeg and Bito on the North, and the Ocean on the South.

Betwixt Lagos and the River of Benin, otherwise call'd Rio Formoso, or the Beautiful River, there are no Places worth taking notice of but only one Village call'd Cram. The last of the two Rivers above-mention'd divides it self into several Branches. About a Mile above the Mouth of it At the Town of Amerri, the Portugueses have a Lodge and Church, and this Place has a particular King, who does not look upon himself as a Subject to him of Benin. Near 60 Miles higher is the Town of Archo, the Trading Place of all Europeans, for any Ships may go much higher up the River. Here the Dutch and Portugueses still drive a Trade, but the English have not of late. Lower towards the Mouth is the Village of Boodedoe, and higher, that of Agarim, now almost ruin'd. A Day's Journey higher is the City of great Benin, so call'd because the best in those Parts, and the Residence of the King. The Streets are of a vast Length and Breadth, and in them a continual Market kept of all sorts of Provisions and other Commodities, the Houses large and handsome, tho' the Walls be of Mud and the top of Thatch, and they stand scattering, and at a distance from one another. The Inhabitants are all Natives, and no Foreigners permitted to reside in it. The King's Palace is a good Structure of the sort, and very large, and all the Streets kept very clean. The People are good natur'd and courteous, complying to any thing by fair means, but no way to be prevail'd upon by foul. Their Habit is decent, after the manner of those Parts, but the Children go stark naked.

It is not worth while to speak of the other Villages in this Country, there being nothing remarkable in them but what has already been said in speaking of those before-mention'd. The Coast here turns away to the Southward, and then the next River of Note is that of Forcados, from which holding on the same Course, we come to Cape Formoso, or Beautiful, and then turning again to the Eastward, there is a considerable River, call'd Rio Real de Calabari, next Rio del

Rey, and lastly, Rio de Cameroens, the boundary of this Country. Thus much of the Coast, for the Inland is not known to us any farther than a little up the Rivers. Forty Leagues up the River Forcados is the Town of Ozerra, where the King of that Country holds his Court, and to the Westward lie the Provinces and petty Kingdoms of the Amboise, Calabari, Kribi, Moco, and Bani.

The Country is generally plain, wooded, well water'd, except only in some Places where the Soil is scarce. It abounds in all sorts of tame Cattel and Poultry; besides Elephants, Lions, and Tigers, but of the first of them prodigious Numbers, as also Jackals, Monkeys, and Baboons. The Product of the Earth is no less various, as most sorts of Grain and Fruit; and the Natives make several Dyes, as Green, Blue, Black, Red, and Yellow. The chief Money is a sort of Shells brought from India, which they call Borfias.

Europeans have all the encouragement imaginable to Trade here, the People being as courteous and obliging as any in the World, and the Duties they pay so inconsiderable, that they do not amount to above five or six Pounds sterling for any Ship. The Commodities sent thither are all sorts of Cloth, from the richest to the poorest Linen; fine Earthen Ware, Preserves, Bracelets of Copper, Coral, Pendants, Looking-glasses, Iron in Bars, Crystal, and Shells, which last serve instead of Money. In exchange for these things they receive Cotton Cloth, which they sell along the Coast, Slaves, and Elephants Teeth.

Their Religion teaches them to worship abundance of Idols, and even living Creatures and Vegetables. The Priests are all Sorcerers, or such as impose on the People by juggling Tricks, so that they are all full of intolerable Superstitions, much like what has been already said of the other Parts of Guinea, which it is time we should leave to proceed, having in the description of this Country made particular use of Bosman's description of Guinea, as the latest Account of those Parts, only supplying from others what was deficient in him.

CHAP. XVII.

OF CONGO.

THIS Country taken in the largest Sense, as we here describe it, will be found to extend from about 10 Degrees of North Latitude to 15 South, amounting to 1500 Miles in Length, and 720 in Breadth from East to West in the largest Place. On the North it touches upon the Kingdom of Benin in Guinea; Zanjana and Borno in Negroland, and a small part of Nubia; the East side lies along the Upper and Lower Aethiopia; on the South it has the Coast of the Cafres, and on the West the Southern, or Aethiopick Ocean.

The most certain Division we find of it, not to descend to inconsiderable Districts, some of which will be mention'd under the particular Provinces they belong to, is into these principal Parts with their several Towns, as in the following Table.

Biafara.	{ Biafara.	Cacongo.	{ Cacongo. Malembra.
Medra.	{ Medra.		{ S. Salvador. Pembz. Bamba. Sonbo. Sandc. Pango. Buta. S. Paul de Loande.
Loango, or the Land of Bramas.	{ Loango. Mayumba by Longo. Karol. Seria. Salafy. Mabonde.	Congo, properly so call'd.
Anzico.		Angola.	{ Mapongo. Dongo. Maffingaa. Benguela.

Biafara,

The Northern Dominion of this Tract of Land we are to describe, reaches that Way to the Land of Negros, on the East is parted by Mountains from the Kingdom of Medra, on the South reaches to the 4th Degree of North Latitude, where it joins with the Kingdom of Loango, and on the West partly borders upon Benin, and partly lies upon the Ocean. The Capital bearing the same Name, is in about 6 Degrees of North Latitude, towards the Frontiers of Benin, and a Place much like those already mention'd, that is, an open scattering Village without any Buildings of Note. This Country being most Inland, is little known to us, scarce any Europeans Trading to it. The Natives are so very much addicted to Sorcery, that they imagine they have Power to raise Storms, and do other extraordinary things beyond the Power of Man, and for this reason they serve the Devil so zealously, as even to sacrifice their own Children to him.

Medra,

The next Kingdom on the East, is separated from Biafara on the East by Mountains; on the opposite side joins to Ethiopia, on the North to Negroland, and on the South to Loango. The Metropolis is also call'd Medra, an inconsiderable Place next to Ethiopia, and all the Country little frequented by Strangers, particularly for being remote from the Sea, as also because it lies much buried among Mountains, and produces nothing to attract the Avarice of Men, for which Reason the Inhabitants are rude, and addicted to the Superstitions of their Neighbours.

Loango.

Otherwise call'd the Country of the Bramas, commences Northward at the River call'd S. Benin, and extends its Coast, being the West side, down to the River Loango, Loanze, which is from two Degrees of North Latitude to about six South, where it borders on the Kingdom of Cacongo, as it does Eastward on the Ambes, a People of Ethiopia, and Northward on Biafara and Medra.

Coming down this Coast from the Northward, after passing the River S. Benin, which is the Boundary, the first we meet is that of S. John, and below it Cape S. John, and the Bay of the same Name, into which the River Angra falls, the last the only Place the Dutch ever resort to. The Blacks all along this Coast are large and strong of Body, every Village having its particular King, and they always at War among themselves. At the entrance of the aforesaid Bay is an Island call'd Corisca, on the South side whereof is the Anchoring Place, in about 40 Minutes of North Latitude. Next follows the River Gabam under the Line, which breeds Crocodiles, and River Horses, and at the Mouth of it two small Islands, one of which the Natives call Pongo, and the Dutch the King's Island, because the King resides there; the other is the Island of the Parrots, from the Multitude of those Birds. South of the Line about 44 Minutes is Cape Lope Gonzalez, next the Mouth of the River Olibata, where the greatest Trade is of all those Parts, and the petty King lives 6 or 7 Leagues up the Country. The next after these are the Rivers of S. Catherine, Sette, Mayumba, and lastly, Loango, Loanze.

The Dominions of the King of Loango extend no farther than the Kingdom of S. Catherine, and formerly this Tract of Land was divided into many Provinces, as those of Longiri, Loangongo, Chilongo, Puri, &c. under as many petty Kings, who had bloody Wars among themselves, and were so barbarous as to eat one another, till he of Loango having at length subdued all the rest, all this became one Monarchy.

The Conquerour settled his Residence at Loango, which the Blacks call Boari, or Buri, a Town four or five Miles in Compass, but the Houses are not contiguous, and the Streets wide, kept very clean, with rows of Palm and Banana Trees before the Doors, and sometimes quite about the Houses. Before the King's Palace is a very large Square, Palisado'd in, with abundance of Houses about it for his Women, who have sometimes eight in a House, and are strictly guarded, not being allow'd to go out of the Square without his Leave. The Houses are long, and the Roofs flat in the middle, and shelving off on the sides. Every House has 3, 4, or 5 Rooms. Their Household Goods are Pot Calabashes, Baskets, Mats, &c.

Other Towns are rather Villages, here are Kail, Bohe, Salu, Malonde, Schie, Kate. Besides which we may reckon the Province and Town of Mayumba, seated at the Mouth of the River

River of the same Name, whence upon Floods the Inhabitants are oblig'd to remove their Houses to some other Place. Cylongo, Sete, and Gabbi are also little Territories, once Kingdoms, but now all subject to Loango.

All this Country in general produces Indian Wheat, Millet, and a prodigious variety of Fruits not at all known among us, as also all sorts of Herbs, as well eatable as others; Tobacco, Sugar, scarlet Berries, Cotton, and West-India Pepper; and as for all Cattel and Poultry, it is so plentiful that they sell it for little or nothing.

The Natives are strong, vigorous, well-shap'd, voluptuous, jealous of Strangers, yet courteous and friendly to those they know. Their Apparel is all of Palm Leaves curiously wove together, being only from the Waste downwards, the Body upwards being Naked; but the better sort wear many Ornaments of Gold and Coral on their Arms, Legs, and Necks. For their Diet, they eat all Flesh, much Fish and Millet. The chief Trade of the Country consists in Slaves, which are the greatest Wealth of those Blacks; but they also sell Ivory, Tin, Lead, and Iron, which they bring very far from Aethiopia.

In Religious Matters, these People have but a dark Notion of God, whom they call Sambian Pongo, but are on the contrary extravagantly superstitious, calling upon the Household and Country Spirits or Demons, attributing to them strange Power, according to their Fancies. Accordingly they make all sorts of Idols, some like Men, and others of several Shapes, every one to his own Fancie. These they call Mockies, a Name comprehending all things, which they imagine have a secret Power of hurting, or doing them good. Their Priests are all Sorcerers, or Juglers, that impose on them by their subtle Arts.

Anzico

Is a large Dominion up the Inland, remote from the Sea, and among Mountains, extending Northward to the Desarts leading to Negro-Land, Westward it lies along Loango, Cacongo, and Congo; Southward it reaches to Angola, and Eastward to the Lower Aethiopia. This is reckon'd as potent a Kingdom as most in Africk, the supreme Monarch having 13 petty kings under him, and is call'd Mucoco. The principal Commodities this Country affords, are red and white Sanders, and Copper; but it has more Rhinoceroses than any other, and they are sent thence to Congo.

All the People here are active, handsome, vigorous, and undaunted; but being very brutal, the Europeans have little or no Commerce with them; for they are Man-eaters, and sell that Flesh as publicly in the Markets as we do Beef or Mutton, believing that every Man has the same Right to eat his Prisoner or Slave as his Cattel. Nay, the Children make no scruple of devouring their Parents, or the Parents their Children. They go all Naked from the Waste upward, and every Man has as many Wives as he pleases, never taking care for the Children, which sometimes the Mothers are inhuman enough to devour. Their Language is barbarous, their Money only Shells found on the Coast, and call'd Sambos. Their Weapons are very strong, tho' small Bows cover'd with Snakes Skins. The Arrows of a hard Wood, which they let fly with a wonderful Dexterity. Besides they use Battle-Axes and Daggers, with Bucklers.

The Sun is their principal Deity, whom they represent like a Man, and the Moon like a Woman, besides which they have abundance of Idols. In this Kingdom are a People call'd Jagos, who are the cruellest of all the Man-eaters, and have dispersed themselves throughout several Parts of Africk. The ancient Angolejes say, these Jagos are Strangers who settled in that Kingdom, and they are reported to have come from Sierra Leona, and to have over-run all the Coast, till being weakned by many Engagements, and not able to return home, they went up the Country, and coming to the Frontiers of Monomotapa, were there defeated, whereupon they settled in Anzico, and about Angola.

Cacongo

Has the Ocean for its Boundary on the West, the River Loango Louise on the North, and that of Zaire on the West and South, running up the Inland as far as Anzico. The Capital bearing the same Name, is pleasantly seated on the River several Miles from the Sea, well built for those Countries, and plentifully supplied with Provisions.

The River Cacongo runs quite across the Country from East to West, and falls into the Ocean in about 5 Degrees of South Latitude. Southward of the River is the Village of Malemba, where the Sea makes a Bay, and there is good Anchoring for Ships. All the rest of the Coast to the Mouth of the River Zaire is very dangerous, being full of Rocks and Flats. The Country is very woody and mountainous, and neither fruitful nor well till'd. The Natives are false, changeable, quarrellsome, and yet Cowards. All the Trade is at Malemba, where the Dutch and Portugueses sell some sorts of Cloth, Iron Ware, and other Commodities, which the Cacongejes sell farther up the Country, and return Slaves. The Manners of the People and Religion are the same as at Loango.

The Kingdom of Angoij is the Southern Part of Cacongo next the River Zaire, and independent of it, the Inhabitants being People of more Courage, and who would soon subdue that Country were they not kept under by their Neighbours. The Province of Lemba, so call'd from its Metropolis, is another Limb of Cacongo, and subject to it, and having a Copper Mine, is resorted to by Europeans for that Metal.

Congo, properly so call'd,

Runs along the Ocean on the West from the great River Zaire, which parts it from Angoij and Cacongo on the North, to that of Coanza dividing it from Angola on the South, that is, from 6 to 10 Degrees of South Latitude. On the East a ridge of Mountains separates it from several Eastern Nations little known to us, of which we shall in its place say as much as can be found in the best Accounts.

This Kingdom is generally divided into 6 Provinces, viz. Sonho, Bamba, Sunda, Pemba, Pango, and Buta. Sonho, the first and most Northerly, lies between the Rivers Zaire and Ambizi North and South, and reaches to Pemba East, with the Ocean on the West. It is divided under several petty Lords, who were formerly independent, but now subject to the King of Congo. The Capital call'd also Sembo, is seated 3 Leagues above the Mouth of the River Lalunda. Besides it, here is a Village call'd Tinde, now become considerable by the Trade of the Portugueses, who hold it of the King.

Bamba is next to the Southward call'd a Dukedom, and reaching from the River Ambizi above-mention'd, on the North, to that of Cuanza, parting it from Angola on the South, with Pemba on the East. This Province has a Duke, or chief Lord, subject to the King of Congo, and under him the Country is subdivided into many little States not worth naming, which all pay Obedience to the Duke. Bamba is also the Name of the Metropolis, which is also a very large Town, but built as the others above-mention'd, the Houses at a distance from one another, and all of mud Walls, but some Churches are a little better Plaster'd. Its Situation is amidst Hills, far from the Sea, and water'd by two Rivulets. The Duke of Bamba is the greatest Subject of Congo, and General of the King's Army, having abundance of Sons, or lesser Lords under his Command. The Blacks here being generally Christians, as in the rest of Congo. Here are abundance of Mulattoes, being the Sons of Portugueses, and many white and black Priests. S. Paul de Lenda is a Town on the Southern Coast of this Dukedom, possess'd by the Portugueses ever since they first discover'd this Country, and convert'd it, but many of the Inhabitants are Blacks and Mulattoes, these latter bred between the Whites and the Blacks living there. This is the Capital of all the Portuguese Dominions in those Parts. The Dutch once took it, but were beaten out again. Here resides the Bishop of Congo and Angola, with a Chapter of 8 or 9 Canons. The Religious Houses are three of Jesuits, barefoot Convents, and Franciscans. Of these the first keep Schools, and all of them labour in instructing the Natives. The City is large and beautiful enough; the Houses of the Whites of Lime and Stone til'd, and those of the Blacks mud Walls thatch'd. The first of these are about 3000, the number of the latter much greater, because some Whites have one, two, or three hundred of them, and some 3000 for their Slaves; for he who has most is richest, because they work abroad, and pay their Masters a set Rate a Day. Two of them carry their Master about the Town in a Hammock, and a third holds an Umbrello over him. The generality of the Women here lord it over their Husbands, and scarce ever go to Church, but never fail of appearing at all publick Diversions. The Mulatto Men, got between Whites and Blacks, are a wicked Generation, proud and haughty, and insulting the poor Natives without any Mercy, nor are the Whites less guilty of this Barbarity, making no scruple to sell their own Children they get on those poor People. The Blacks are all slaves to the Whites, and work for them, and all Christians, but by their course of Life they appear to be none of the best. The current Coins here are what they call Mucenas, being pieces of Straw Cloth as big as a large piece of Paper, answerable to our Brass. Instead of Silver they use pieces of Cotton Cloth as big as two Handkerchiefs, and worth about 18 d. each. Another finer sort is worth 3 s. 6 d. The best sort, call'd Birami, and answering our Gold, is made of fine Linnen, and worth 7 s. 6 d. or 8 s. each. No Gold, Silver, or Brass Coins are here made use of.

Sunda is an Inland Northern Province along the River Zaire, East of Sembo, West of Pango, and North of Pemba and Butta; the Metropolis of it, and Residence of its Viceroy is a large Town bearing the same Name, towards the Frontiers of Pango.

Pemba lies South of Sunda, East of Bamba, North of Angola, and West of Butta. This is the prime Province, and in it the Capital City of all Congo, by the Natives call'd Banza, and by the Portugueses S. Salvador, or S. Saviour, where the King keeps his Court. It is almost in the middle of the Province, about 150 Miles from the Sea, seated on a Hill that overlooks all the Country, and all shaded with Palm, Limon, Orange and other Fruit Trees, wall'd only in part, but the King's Palace is enclos'd by it self. The top of the Hill is all inhabited by the better sort, the meaner below in good Streets, but the Houses all of Clay, except some few the Portugueses have built of Brick. The Palace is as large as a little Town, and within it three Churches, and in the Town ten or twelve, besides the Cathedral, and seven Chapels.

Pango is to the North East of Sunda, along the River Zaire, North of Butta, and has the Mountains of the Sun dividing it from the barbarous Nations. Its principal Town, where the Governour resides, is call'd by the same Name. This was once a free Province, but submitted to the King of Congo to put an end to the bloody Wars which had long consum'd it.

Butta, formerly Azilymba, is on the East of Pemba, South of Sunda, West of those they call the burnt Mountains, and North of Angola. The Metropolis of it is also call'd Butta, standing in a fruitful Country, all along the Road from which to S. Salvador there are abundance of Houses. To the Eastward of this Province is another call'd Ocango, which according to ancient custom is always govern'd by a Woman, who is subordinate to the Viceroy of Butta. These People, who have scarce ever been visited by Europeans, report, that to the East of them there are white Men, but not so white as those of our Parts.

This Kingdom is extraordinary well water'd by many considerable Rivers, the chiefest of these is the Zaire, coming out of the vast Lake of the same Name in the Kingdom of Mafimba. In the Lake it is confidently reported, that there is a sort of Fishes which differ in nothing from Mankind but in the want of Speech and Reason; and this F. Francis de Pavia, a Missioner, who before would not believe it, was shown by the Queen of Singa, on the same Lake. In the River there are many Mermaids, somewhat resembling a Woman in the Breasts, Nipples, Hands, and Arms, but the lower Part is perfect Fish, and the Head round, the Face like a Calf, a large Mouth, little Ears, and round full Eyes; which Creatures F. Meroua often law, and eat of them. The Portugueses call it Peixe Mulher, that is, Womans Fish. The River has also Sea Hories, and other strange sorts of Creatures, res, it runs from the Lake North West, till coming to the Borders of Anzico, it there turns to South West, swells to a mighty Body, and forming several small Islands, at last loses itself in the Ocean in about 6 Degrees of South Latitude. The other Rivers of most Note here, are the Lelunda, the Ambrizi, the Eucoqui, the Missula, the Libongo, the Dondi, and the Coanza.

Summer begins here in September, and Winter in March, being only a Rainy Season, which cools the Air and Ground. The Multitude of Rivers which overflow in the Rainy Season render the Land extraordinary fruitful, so that they generally produce much Grain, and infinite quantities of Fruit; besides abundance of Pasture, which makes Plenty of all sorts of Cattle and Poultry. The number of Elephants is very great, tho' so many are continually destroyed, not only for their Teeth, but because the Blacks eat their Flesh. A strange Creature here is that they call Zebra, being a sort of a wild Horse, somewhat shap'd like a Mule, beautifully spotted black, white, red, and blue, and extraordinary swift. It were too tedious to descend to all other Particulars.

The Natives are generally coal black, middle-sized and well shap'd, and for the most part handsomer than those of Guinea. They are haughty to one another, but courteous to Strangers, great lovers of Wine and Brandy, and such wretched Soldiers, that 20 Europeans will drive several Hundreds of them. The whole Nation professes Christianity, but many of them only in outward appearance, still retaining many of their ancient Idolatrous Superstitions. Yet the greater part are truly converted, tho' there be Vices among them, as in all Christian Countries, and there is no doubt but that they might have perhaps exceeded many others had they sufficient Instruction, which they want through the fault of their Climate, the excessive Heats destroying all the Missioners, and deterring others from undertaking that Function, and yet many thousands have expos'd themselves to those Suffering and Dangers for the Conversion of those People.

The Men of Quality wear fine Cloaks, white Shirts, and a piece of rich Cloth or Stuff wrapp'd about them, Boots on their Legs, white Caps, Gold and Silver Girdles, and Coral Collars. The Inhabitants of Towns are great Traders, selling Slaves to the Europeans; the Country People follow Tillage, those along the Zaire Fishing, and selling of Palm-Wine and a sort of a Cloth they make.

This Country was discover'd about the Year 1484, by the Portugueses, who found there a favourable Reception, and easily perswaded the King then reigning to embrace Christianity. This Example was follow'd by the great Men first, and then by the Commonalty, so that all publick practice of Idolatry was soon banish'd. Since which time Missioners have been continually sent over to instruct those People, and many of themselves being well educated, have been ordain'd Priests, so that the whole Kingdom has thorowly receiv'd the Light of the Gospel.

Angola

Comes next to the Southward, extending along the Coast, from the River Coanza, in 9 Degrees of South Latitude to the Kingdom of Metamon, from which it is parted by a small River and a ridge of Mountains in 14 Degrees; so that it has Congo on the North, the Ocean on the West, Metamon on the South, and Ethiopia on the East, because we shall here include the Kingdom of Malemba, which more properly belongs to this Tract of Land than to Monomotapa, tho' it be under a different King.

This Country is best divided into Angola, properly so call'd, Benguela, and Malemba. Angola, properly so call'd, lies between Congo in the North, the Ocean on the West, Benguela on the South, and Malemba on the East. The Europeans have given it this Name from the Founder of it, who first revolted from the King of Congo, for the Natives still call it Dongo, which is the Name of the Capital City. Its extent on the Sea between the Rivers Coanza and Sungu is narrow, but enlarges much up the Inland.

Dongo, or Engaze Dongo, is reckon'd the Capital City, seated amidst several Rivers which water it and the Country about, in the Northernmost part of the Kingdom next the Frontiers of Pemba and Batta. Tho' this be the chief City the King has, his Residence at Mapongo, at least 20 Miles South West of it, being no better than a Village, but seated on a Rock above 20 Miles in compass at the bottom, and so high, that the top seems to touch the Clouds. All about it are pleasant and fertile Plains, producing all things that are necessary for Life, and there is only one difficult Ascent to the Rock, which being guarded, the King need fear no Enemy. Not far from this Place is Massingan, signifying Conjunction, because it stands on the conflux of the two Rivers Lucala and Coanza. Here the Portugueses have built a Castle, and they are still Masters of it, the Houses being built of Stone.

Benguela is the next Kingdom, and contains the rest of what was above ascrib'd to Angola in general, terminating Eastward on the Kingdom of Malemba, from which it is divided by the River Coanza and the Mountains. The Town or Village of Benguela is seated on a Bay where there is good Anchoring in 13 Degrees of South Latitude. By the Village is a Castle, and about it seven other Villages, all depending on it, and subject to the Portugueses. On the South side of this Bay is a flat Mountain, which the Portugueses call Sombrero, because at a distance it somewhat resembles a Hat. Manikicongo is another Village full to the Southward, where the Portugueses have another Factory.

The Air of this Country is reckon'd very unhealthy, and the Diseases here are many, as burning Fevers, which carry a Man off in 24 Hours, Fluxes, Stupefaction of the Limbs, Gangrenes, Jaundice, Small-Pox, &c. The Land which is well water'd is fruitful enough, producing all sorts of Grain, Fruit and Plants, and very good Sugar. As for Beasts, it has all the same as Congo, and so for Fowl and Fish. Nor can any thing remarkable be added concerning their Manners, Language, or Coins, which differ very little from what has been said already. It is incredible what number of Slaves are yearly transported out of Angola into America, they being almost the only Commodity the Portugueses and other Nations resort thither for.

The whole Dominions of Angola were formerly divided into abundance of Principalities under so many little Kings or Lords, who all pay'd Homage to the King of Congo, till one of them call'd Angola, with the Assistance of the Portugueses, subdu'd all the rest, and erected himself a Monarchy; yet still sending Presents to the King of Congo, and mimicking him in all things that represent Grandure. Tho' the Portugueses have taken much Pains here to Establish the Christian Religion, they have not yet been so successful as in Congo. The Christians indeed are very Numerous, especially about the Coast, but still there are many Idolaters, it being very difficult to extirpate a false Religion in Countries of such vast Extent and indeed it is wonderful that so much has been done towards it.

Malemba is a Mountainous Kingdom of a large Extent, East of Angola, North of Marame, West of Monoemugi, and South of the Giaqua, another more Northern Mountain Nation, lying along the Lake Zaire. Of both these, little can be said, no Europeans having ever been amongst them, they being a Barbarous People, either over-run by the Jagos, or of the same Disposition themselves, which is the Reason, no Travellers dare venture to view them, and what so may pretend to write is mere Invention.

CHAP. XVIII.

OF MONOMOTAPA, or the Lower ÆTHIOPIA.

THIS is a vast Inland Part of Africk, so little visited by Travellers, that we have but a very obscure Account of it. The Portugueses have been the only People who have ventur'd farthest into it of any Europeans, and theirs the surest Relations; what else can be said of it is all taken from the Neighbouring Nations, which Trade thither, and they being all ignorant People, give us very imperfect Descriptions. The Lights we have of either Sort shall be here communicated, without running into the fabulous Stories of such as have deliver'd their own Imaginations for certain Truths.

The Lower Æthiopia commences where the Upper Ends; that is, in about Six Degrees of North Latitude and extends to 31 South, being about 2200 Miles in Length, and 16 Degrees in Breadth in the largest Place from East to West, amounting to 930 Miles. Thus we see the greatest

Part of it lies under the Torrid Zone, except that which extends from the Tropick of Cancer to 31 Degrees South. Its general Boundaries are, Abyssinia, or the Upper Æthiopia on the North, the Coasts of Zanguebar and the Cafres on the East, the same Coast of Cafres on the South, as also on the West, with Congo higher towards the Line.

Authors differ very much in dividing this vast Region, by Reason of its Obscurity in Relation to us, and therefore to avoid Confusion we will follow those who have either seen something of it, or liv'd so near as to receive the best Information. The great and general Division is into two Parts, which are Monoemugi and Monomotapa properly so call'd, which again are subdivided into their several Kingdoms and Provinces as we shall see in the Table, with what Towns we can find belonging to each of them.

Monoemugi

Is the most Northern of the two grand Divisions beforemention'd, and therefore comes next in Course, as lying East of Congo, North of Monomotapa, West of the Coast of Zanguebar and South of Nubia and Abyssinia. Its first Kingdom on the North, is

Mujaco

Bordering on Congo Westward, on Nubia Northward, on Abyssinia Eastward, and on Macoco Southward. That the Extent of this Monarchy is very great, appears by the distant Countries its Confines extend to, and the Sovereign's great Power by his being in continual War with his Neighbour the Emperor of Macoco, who could never subdue him; yet such as he is this is all the Account we have of him, and that from the People of Congo, who travel thither for Elephant Teeth, which Beasts they say are Kill'd there by a Dwarfish Breed of wild Blacks, living in the Woods and feeding on that Flesh.

Macoco

Is the next great Monarchy bordering Northwards on Mujaco, Gingiro and Cambate, Westward on Congo, Southward on Monoemugi, properly so call'd.

perly so call'd, and Westward on the Coast of Zanguebar. The Natives of it are call'd Monfoles, from Monfol, the Capitol Town of the Nation, a Place of no Note, and are great Men-Eaters. The King is very Potent, as having 10 other Kings that Pay Homage to him, and is said to Slaughter 200 Men, either Malefactors, or Prisoners of War, every Day, to feed his Court, as the more dainty Fleh, the Country having no want of Cattel or other Provisions. His Retinue is very numerous, and his Palace stately enough for that Country, his Wealth consisting in Slaves, in Senibos, which are the Shells of Loanda, Boessies, being those of India, little Pieces of Stuff and such Trifles, which they there Value as much as we do Gold and Silver. He always keeps a great Army on his Frontiers to secure them against the King of Muyaco, above-mention'd. The Portugueses of Loanda send their Slaves, they call Pomberos, bred up in their Houses to write and Cast Accounts, and of wonderful Fidelity, into this Kingdom to buy Slaves, Ivory and Copper, in which Journey they spend a Year, and sometimes two, and from them their Masters have this Information of that Country. Fungendo is one of the Kingdoms Tributary to the Monarch of Macoco, and lying next to Congo on the West, as is Giringbomba another on the North-east.

Gingiro,

Another Potent Kingdom lies between Narca, the Southermost Kingdom of Abyssinia, and those of Macoco and Cimbate, North and East of the first of them, and West of the latter. The great River Zebee, which runs down into Macoco, almost encompassing it. F. Antony Fernandez travell'd through this Kingdom, being sent to find a Way Southward to the Coast by the Emperour of Abyssinia, because the Turks had shut up all the Passes to the Red Sea. He informs us, that Gingiro signifies a Monkey, and says it was a very Proper Name, the King very much resembling that Creature. His State is extraordinary great, and he contends with the Sun, for which Reason he never goes Abroad, or gives Audience but before Sun-rising, alledging that two Suns cannot appear at once. This King is Elective, and much Sorcery us'd in the Way of chusing him; all those of the Family, who may be chosen, hiding themselves in Woods, and seeming to refuse the Honour, till it is forc'd upon them. His Palace is no better than a Cottage, which when he dies is always burnt, and the Successor has a new one built him, which is dedicated with the Blood of two or three Men of a certain Family, kill'd at the Door, and on that Account the said Family is free from all other Duties, which are so heavy that they render this cruel Composition acceptable; for when the King buys any thing of foreign Merchants, he pays them in Slaves, and those are the Sons, or Daughters of any Family, which he takes at Pleasure, without any Contradiction.

Cambate

Joins to this Kingdom on the West, has Abyssinia on the North, Alwa, or the Country of the Galas on the East, and Macoco on the South. This Country pays some Acknowledgment to the Emperour of Abyssinia, which is only voluntary, and as far as the People please themselves. One of the Principal Towns here is call'd Sangara, but of any more the aforesaid F. Antony gives no Names.

Alaba

Is another large Kingdom still to the Eastward of Cambate, inhabited by the cruel People call'd Galas, and reaching to the Coast of Zanguebar. The Prince is a Mahometan, but abundance of the Lords, his Subjects, are still Idolaters of the worst Sort, offering the Sacrifices of Human Blood, and sparing none that dare Travel through their Country.

Monoemugi, properly so call'd,

Follows next to the Southward, lying in the Torrid Zone, and about the Equinoctial, South of Macoco, West of Zanguebar, North of Monomotapa, and East of Congo and the Northern Part of Monomotapa. To ascertain the Extent is too difficult a Task, being a Country so little frequented. There are several petty Princes on all Sides, which pay Subjection to this Crown. The Country abounds in Gold, Silver, and Copper Mines, and Elephants. The Natives Cloth themselves in Silks and Cottrons, which they buy of Strangers, and wear Collars of transparent Amber Beads, brought them from Cambaya; which Beads also serve for Money, Gold and Silver being too common and of little Value among them; and therefore they give them, as also Copper and Ivory, in Exchange for those Commodities. This Monarch always endeavours to be at Peace with the Princes round about him, to keep an open Trade with Quiloa, Melinde and Monbaza on the East, and Congo on the West; from all which Parts the Black Merchants resort thither for Gold. Those Merchants report, that on the East-side of Monoemugi, there is a great Lake full of little Islands, abounding in all sorts of Fowl and Cattel. Besides Gold, Silver, Copper and Elephants Teeth, already mention'd, this Country affords abundance of Palm-Wine and Oil, and such great Plenty of Honey, that above half of it is lost, the Blacks not being able to consume it. The Air is generally very unwholsom and fiery Hot, which is the Reason that no Christians dare undertake to travel this Empire, besides that the Jagus, who are the Cruellest of Man-Eaters, lie on the Way and spare none they meet. The Religion of this Country is Idolatry, nor do we find that either Christianity or Mahometanism have gotten any footing here, and the People are generally reckon'd barbarous and scarce tractable. The principal Names of Towns we find in this Country from the Relations of the Neighbouring People, Gamba, Astagoa, Leuma, Agag, Camut, Beif, but what sort of Places they are, we know not, only suppose them according to the Nation, to be mean and inconsiderable.

Monomotapa, properly so call'd,

Is the other great Part of the Lower Æthiopia, reaching from 14 Degrees of South Latitude to about 31, and the same Breadth from East to West, as was before mention'd in speaking of the whole. Tho' not very perfect, we have yet some better Information of this Region than of the last, which we shall take from Manuel de Faria Sousa, who had all the Accounts of the Portugueses that were in Monomotapa, and generally enter'd by the way of the River Cuama.

This

This Empire is divided into 25 Kingdoms, which are Mongas, Baroe, Manica, Boesia, Macingo, Reno, Chique, Chiria, Chidima, Boquiza, Inhama, Chiruvia, Condesaca, Dabiria, Mozambique, Mungush, Antiovaia, Chove, Chingue, Duia, Romba, Rassa, Chiaro, Mocaranga, and Remo de Beza. All this was originally one great Monarchy, afterwards divided into three, call'd Quitve, Sabanda, and Chicanga, which in process of Time came to break themselves into so many smaller Dominions, yet so that all or most of them still own the great Emperour of Monomotapa.

All these Dominions are certainly the Richest of the World in Gold, no Mines affording such Quantities of that precious Metal as those of Musapa, Manchica and Batua, in the first of which has been found a Lump of pure Gold worth 12000 Ducats, and another of 400000. Three great Fairs are Yearly held, to which the Merchants resort to Trade; The first at Luanze, four Days Journey up the Country from the Frontiers of Zofala; the second at Bueto, farther up, and the third at Majapa still higher.

The Capital of this Empire is of the same Name, seated on the great River of the Holy Ghost. It is very Large, but the Houses all of Timber, neatly whited both within and without, the Roofs rising on all Sides till they end in a Point. The Emperour's Palace, tho' of Wood, is large, and divided into three Apartments; one for himself, another for his Wives, and a third for his Servants. This they say is all gilt or cover'd with Plates of Gold, as are the Chairs and other Moveables, except the Candlesticks, which are of Ivory hanging by Silver Chains, and his Plates and Dishes of Porcelane, inlaid with Gold. The Emperour has many Wives, and is serv'd even in the meanest Employments by the Greatest Men of the Nation.

Butua is a Province and City of the same Name to the Northward, towards the Mountains of the Moon, very rich in Gold, and consequently much resorted to by Merchants. Inhamban is another Province on the Frontiers of Monomotapi, shut up among the Mountains, the Capital whereof is call'd Tongue, and the People Idolaters, except some few converted by the Jesuits of late Years. The Heat is here so excessive, that few Portugueses are able to endure it. Inhamior lies lower towards Zofala and the River Cuama, its Capital, no better than a Village, where many Portugueses us'd to reside for Trade.

Monomotapa in general is more temperate than other Parts of Africk, especially towards the South, where it is out of the Torrid Zone. The Land being for the most part well water'd, yields Plenty of Pasture, and all Sorts of Grain, full of Trees and Sugar-Canes, which grow without the Help of Art, and yet the Country is not every where inhabited. The Natives are rich in Cattel, which they value above Gold, and the Elephants are very Numerous. Generally the People are Handsom and have short black Hair, and of a more ready Wit than those of the Coast. Their common Food is Beef, their Drink sower Milk, their Bread, Cakes of Rice, of Millet, or of the Root call'd Miamas. Their Habit is a Piece of Cloth of any colour wrapp'd about their Waste, being naked upwards, with their Privities in a Calabash. Their Arms are Bows, Arrows, and Javelins. Religion they know little of, nor have they any Idols, but acknowledge one only God, and believe there is a Devil, whom they call Mazaco, and having no Knowledge of Letters, they speak of Things past by Tradition, and are very inclinable to the Doctrine of Christianity, so that great Numbers have been converted by the Dominicans, who have several Monasteries there, and all free Exercise of Religion is allow'd.

Having had Occasion to mention the Mountains of the Moon, it is requisite to inform the Reader, that they divide the Upper from the Lower Ethiopia, running quite across Africk from East to West, and of such a Prodigious Height in some Places, that they are thought to exceed all others in the World. Yet must it not be thought a Mistake what we said above of Butua lying towards the Mountains of the Moon; for there are several vast Branches of them running out sundry Ways, and still retaining the same Name, as Parts of the Whole.

C H A P. XIX.

Of the Coast of the C A F R E S.

THIS is the Coast running round the Southern Part of Africk, and compassing the greater Part of the Lower Ethiopia on the West, South and East. It begins in 15 Degrees of South Latitude, and holds on to the Cape of Good Hope, in 35, which is 1200 Miles Southeast, at the said Cape it turns again to North-east to 22 Degrees of South Latitude, and tho' it reaches not so far Northward as the other Way; yet reckoning the Bow it makes, amounts to no less Number of Miles. The best Division that can be made of this Coast is this,

Mataman.

Cafres, properly so call'd, The Dutch Town at the Cape of Good Hope.

Chicanga.

Sabanda.

Zofala.

Quitvea.

Zofala.

Quitvea.

Mataman,

Is properly the Name of the Kings, tho' now appropriated to the Country, the People being call'd Climbas. On the North it is parted from

Angola by the Mountains of the Moon, on the East by a Branch of the same Mountains from Monomotapa; on the South by the River Bravagul from the Coast of Cafres, properly so call'd, and on the West it has the Ethiopic Ocean, extending ing in Length from 15 Degrees of South Latitude to 25, about 600 Miles, and lies in the Torrid Zone, a very small Part reaching beyond the Tropick of Capricorn.

Here are no Towns, or Cities, but only poor scattering Villages. However all this Land is subject to one absolute Monarch, under whom there are several petty Lords, who stile themselves Kings, tho' their Dominions be very small, poor and weak. The Climate is temperate enough for the Torrid Zone, and tho' the Coast be all a barren Sand, yet farther up, the Soil is fruitful, producing all Sorts of Provisions, and in the Mountain, there is much Crystal and several Metals. All the Coast as has been said is a deep Sand: In 18 Degrees South Latitude is Cabo Negro, or the Black Cape; in 21 that of Ruy Perez, and in 22 the Bay das Neves, or Golfo Frio, the Snowy or Cold Bay, about which there are abundance of Trees. The little Island Ferilhocns is almost under the Tropick of Capricorn, and then follows the River of Bravughul, which as has been said, parts this Kingdom from the rest of the Cafres.

The Coast of Cafres, properly so call'd,

Extends from the Kingdom of Mutamen above mention'd to the Cape of Good Hope, and back again towards the North-east, as far as Chicanga, from which it is parted by the River of the Holy Ghost, in about 28 Degrees of South Latitude. Here are no particular Kingdoms, or States, but what Distinction can be found among them is rather by Families or Tribes, each of which has its Chief, and lives in Villages separate from the Rest. None has ever visited any of this Country but the Dutch, and even they only a small Part about the Cape of Good Hope, for others have only touch'd upon the Coast, except some unfortunate Portugueses, who have been cast away on it, and forc'd to travel by Land towards Zofala, most of them perishing by the Way, either destroy'd by the Natives or for Want of Provisions. The Great Barbarity of these People has been the Occasion that no Europeans have ventur'd among them, and the little there is to be got by running such Hazards has made Men backward in exposing themselves. What is said of one Part of them may be apply'd to the Rest, for they all agree in their brutal way of Living, and the Country is much the same throughout all its Compass; for which Reason we shall content our selves with the Account Ten Rine gives of the Hotentotes about the Cape of Good Hope, which will suit any others, and is the latest we have from any one that was upon the Spot.

The Cape of Good Hope is in 34 Degrees 30 Minutes of South Latitude, first Discover'd by Barthelomeu Diaz, in the Year 1489, for Ten Rhine mistakes in assigning it to asco de Gama in 1498. The Discoverers call'd it Cabo Tormentoso, or Stormy Cape, from the great Storms they there met with, but King John the 2d of Portugal gave it the Name of Cabo de buena Esperanza, the Cape of Good Hope, from the Hopes it promised in discovering the East-Indies. The Soil Ten Rhine says, is Barren, affording nothing but what is produc'd by much Labour; yet all others agree, that generally this Coast has Plenty of Pasture, and abounds in Cattel. The Table Mount adjoining to it is so call'd from its Flatness on the top. The next is Lions Mount because it resembles that Beast at a Distance.

These Mountains are full of Wild Beasts, as Lions, Elephants, Rhinocerots, Tigers, &c. and the Plains abound in great and small Cattel. For Birds there are Ostriches, Peacocks, Cranes, Storks, Herons, Geese, Bitterns, Ducks, Turkeys, Hens, Teals, Felfares, Cormorants, Partridges, Pheasants, Lapwings, Nightingales, Snipes, Owles, Sea-Gulls, Martins, Swallows, and many peculiar to the Place. The Sea affords most Sorts of Fish known to us, and many more we are Strangers to; and as for Insects here are as many as in any Part of the World.

The People, whom we commonly call Cafres and Hotentotes, are, as was said above, divided into many Tribes or Families; their Barbarous Names will afford us little Satisfaction, since, as was said, they all agree in the Particulars we shall give of them. They are generally Tawny, but reckon Blackness a Beauty, and therefore daub their Hair and Faces with Grease and Earth of several Colours. Their Bodies for the most part tall, well-shap'd, and strong, their Lips large, their Noses flat, and their Hair woolly. All their Apparel is a piece of Leather hanging down before, like an Apron, the rest naked. The Women are known by being more deformed than the Men, and have two natural Labels hanging from their Privities, which they are so proud of, that they show them to all Strangers. In cold Weather, besides the Apron abovemention'd they wear a Leathern sort of Vest, hanging down to their Knees, and a Cap of the same on their Heads, with a Pouch hanging at their Back, to carry their Tobacco and other Necessaries.

They have no other Dwellings but little Huts, and all the Goods in them are Drinking Cups, made of Shells, and either Earthen Pots, or pieces of Trees hollow'd to put their Meat in, which they either roast on the Coals or eat raw. Being under no Restraint from Conscience, or Education they indulge themselves in all manner of Vice. Laws they have none. They despise the Female Sex, and put them upon all Labour. Their Food is Beef, Mutton, Fish, Butter, Milk and Sword-Grass instead of Bread. Their Weapons are Bows and Arrows, Darts, and Javelins. They know no Wealth but their Cattel, and that they Trade with, exchanging it for Tobacco, Aquavita, and Coral, Glals, or Copper Beads. Some notion of a Deity they have and call God, the Great Captain, yet have scarce any thing of Religion, but that they Adore the Sun and Moon. Every Tribe and Village has its peculiar Captain; which may suffice in Relation to these Barbarous People.

At the Foot of the Table Mountain the Dutch have built a Fort, where they keep a good Garrison, and have Gardens and Orchards about it, besides much till'd Land, the Fort being grown up to a Town, and well inhabited, and this is the general Watering-place of their Ships in their Voyages to and from the East-Indies.

Chicanga is a part of the Coast of Cafres, distinguish'd from the rest by this Name, and lying between the great River of the Holy Ghost, and the little one of the Kings; but on what account this separation is made, does not appear; since the Natives are nothing more civiliz'd than those already spoken of, nor have they any Towns or other thing of note among them, and the same may be said of the next Province; call'd Sedanda, lying between the aforesaid River of the Kings and that of Zimbere. Zofa-

Zofala follows next, which some confine betwixt the Rivers of Cuama and Zambere, and others extend to that of the Holy-Ghost, which last includes the above-mention'd Provinces of Cuicunga and Scamada, and also the other not yet spoken of, call'd Quiteva; this greater extent is allotted it by Emanuel de Faria y Sousa, whom we shall follow in the account of it, as being certainly the perfectest, none being so well able to give it as the Portugueses, who first settled there, and have continued till this Day for above 200 Years. When first discover'd, it was a Kingdom subject to the Emperour of Monomotapa, tho' it had a King residing in it, being about 250 Leagues in compass. Many Rivers water it, and most of them rowl golden Sands. It generally enjoys a temperate Air, and is pleasant, wholesome, and fruitful. Some Parts feed mighty Flocks of Sheep, with whose Skins the Natives cloath themselves because of the cold South Winds. Along the River Cuama the Country is mountainous, woody, and well water'd, which makes it delightful and populous. Elephants are here very numerous, and consequently Ivory plentiful. The Town of Zofala stands upon the River of the same Name, not far from that of Cuama. Fifty Leagues South West of it are the rich Gold Mines of Monica, encompass'd 30 Leagues about with high Mountains. In these Parts there are the remains of Buildings of a wonderful Structure, with Inscriptions on them in unknown Characters, but by whom erected the Natives have no Account. They believe in one God, whom they call Mozimo, and use no Idols; Witchcraft, Theft, and Adultery are severely punish'd. Their Wives, as many as they can keep. The better sort use Cotton Cloathing, and that adorn'd with Gold. The Houses are all of Wood; the Weapons Bows, Arrows, Javelins, Darts, Daggers, and small Hatchets. The Women are so much respected, that if the King's Son meets one, he gives her the way, and stops till she passes.

Of Quiteva we shall not need, nor is there any thing to add, that being only a small Province belonging to Zofala, and in it a Town which is much gone to ruin. Having thus run through the whole Continent of Africk, we will next proceed to the Islands belonging to it, which we have reserv'd to be spoken of all in one Chapter, as they are distinct Bodies and only belonging to the Continent, as nearer to it than to any other of the Parts of the Earth.

CHAP. XX.

Of the AFRICAN ISLANDS.

WE will begin with them as we did with the Continent on the North West, and so proceed Southward, to the Cape of Good Hope, then turning to the East and North finish the whole Compass of this Part of the World.

Madera and Porto Santo

Are two Islands in the Atlantick Ocean, lying off Westward from the Kingdom of Fez. Madera, the chief of them was discover'd in the Year 1420 by John Gonzalez, and Tristan Vaz, sent out to discover by Prince Henry of Portugal, who gave it this Name of Madera, or Wood, because it was all over one continu'd Forest without any Inhabitants; but the Trees being set on Fire, it run throughout, so that scarce a Stick was left in it. The Latitude of it is 31 Degrees and a half, the Shape Triangular, the Length about 140 Miles, and the Breadth about 24.

The Fire having discover'd the Land, it was found fruitful and pleasant, so that the Portugueses soon settled upon it, and in process of time built three Towns, the chief of them call'd Funchal, which is a Bishoprick, and besides the Cathedral, has three Parish-Churches, two Monasteries of S. Francis, and a College of Jesuits, the other two are Marchico, and Santa Cruz. The whole Island contains 36 Parishes, 5 or 6 Monasteries, 4 Hospitals, and about 25000 of both Sexes, not including Children, being so full of Country-Houses and Farms that it looks like one continued Garden. It produces all sorts of Fruit and Grain, has sufficient Cattel, and all sorts of Fowl; but the chief Trade is in its Wine, so strong that scarce any comes near it, excellent Sugar, whereof they make curious Sweet-meats, especially candy'd Citron, Wax, and Honey, and Dragon's Blood.

About 13 Leagues North-east from it is another Island, call'd Porto Santo, not above 5 Leagues in Compass, and discover'd by John Zarco and Tristan Vaz in 1428. It is in all Respects answerable to that of Madera, and inhabited by the Portugueses.

The CANARY Islands

Lie to the Southward of Madera, West of the Coast of Biledulgerid, being by common consent the Fortunate Islands of Ptolemy; they are so call'd from the greatest of them bearing that Name, and that had it from the many Dogs found in it when first discover'd, in Spanish call'd Canes.

That they were known to the Ancients is certain, but lay many Ages forgotten, till in the Year 1405, King John of Castile employ'd John de Betancour, a French Gentleman, who again found and took possession of them. They are seven in number, viz. Palma, Hierro, Gomera, Tenerife, Gran Canaria, Fuente Ventura, and Lanzarote.

Palma lies most to the West, except Hierro, which is 12 Leagues South of it, in 28 Degrees of North Latitude. It is small, but the Soil very rich, having very good Pasture, and producing much Wine, Sugar, and other Fruits. Its Wine is reckon'd the best of all those Islands, and much valued in all Parts. The Town in it bears the same Name, and much resorted to.

Hierro, or Ferro is 12 Leagues South of Palma, and S West of Gomera, in 27 Degrees of North Latitude.

Latitude, being about 6 or 7 Leagues in Compass. On the West Point hereof most modern Geographers, and we after them, place the first Meridian. Tho' this Island be one of those so much resorted to, yet there is a most unaccountable Story told of it, which very many afford little Credit to, and the Relaters themselves differ much in the Account of it. In short, they tell us, that it is wholly destitute of Water, but what drops from a Tree standing in the midst of it, which is receiv'd into a Basen in such quantity, that it not only supplies the Island abundantly, but all Ships that arrive there. They add, that this Tree is always cover'd with a Cloud, or thick Mist which settles on it, and so distils into Water. Jackson, an Englishman, who pretends to have measur'd it, says, the Basen under the Tree contains 20000 Tun, and is fill'd in a Night, but who should make such a Basen or Cistern in that Island is what appears as incredible as the rest. Nichols, another Englishman, speaks of the Tree, and its serving the Island with Water, as an Eye-witness. Many more write the same, but take it by hearsay, and most of them differ in the Particulars, so that nothing is decided, nor is the thing at all probable. However that be, the Island is fertile enough, and bears Corn, Sugar, all sorts of Fruit, and plenty of Pasture.

Gomera is Eastward of Hierro, and some small matter Northward. It is an Island not well improv'd, the Soil not being very kind, yet it has a small Town of the same Name, and a Port towards Tenerife, whence some Wine is exported.

Tenerife, notwithstanding that Grand Canaria is the biggest, and has given its Name to the rest, is now the chiefest, as being the principal Place of Trade, lying East of Hierro, and is about 60 Miles in length. The principal Town in it is call'd S. Christoval de la Laguna, or S. Christopher of the Lake, besides which there are Santa Cruz, Rotava, Rialejo, and Garachico. When first discover'd, it was under several Kings, who liv'd in Caves, and kept the Bodies of their Ancestors dried up like Mummies. In this Island is the famous Mountain, known by the Name of the Peak of Tenerife, reckon'd by some the highest Land in the World, but that is not to be rely'd on. The Ascent is reckon'd about 15 Miles, and the perpendicular height suppos'd to be a third Part. The best Wine in this Island is that which grows about the Sea-Coast, and here is a great resort of Ships from all Parts for it.

Gran Canaria, from which the rest have their Name, is the largest of them, and seated to the East, somewhat Southward from Tenerife. The City of Palmas, or Canaria, is the Capital of all the Islands, a Bishop's See, and the Residence of the Governour, well built, the Inhabitants wealthy, and the Streets always clean. Besides this, there are several other small Towns. The whole Island abounds in Fruit of all sorts, Corn, Pasture, and Vineyards, as being inferior to none for fertility.

Fuerteventura, still to the Eastward of the last, not above 12 Leagues from the Continent of Africa, and has four good Towns, Lanagala, Arasala, Pozzo Negro, and Fuerteventura. All sorts of Fruit grow here to Perfection, as does Corn; but being something Mountainous, it breeds infinite quantities of Goats, whose Skins and Tallow are of considerable value, besides that the Flesh is good, and they make excellent Cheese of their Milk.

Lanzarote stands North from the last, containing three Towns, Cayas, or Lanzarote, Puerto de Ajos, and Puerto de Cavallos, and is in all Points like Fuerteventura.

These Islands in general must be hot by Situation, as drawing near to the Tropick of Cancer, but cool'd by the Air of the Sea. The Soil of them all is good, and produces every thing necessary for the support of Human Life, but their principal Wealth consists in that rich Wine, which is thence transported to all Parts of Europe, and their Singing-Birds are known to exceed all others, being much better than those of the same Breed brought from Germany. All the Islands being subject to the Dominion of the Crown of Spain, and inhabited by Spaniards, we need not add any thing of their Religion, Government, or Manners.

The Islands of Cabo Verde,

So call'd from being to the Westward of that Cape, lie between 14 and 19 Degrees of North Latitude, and are 10 in Number, viz. S. Antonio, S. Vincent, S. Lucia, S. Nicolas, Sol, Boa Vista, Santiago, Mayo, Fogo, and Brava.

S. Antonio, which is most to the North West, and not three Leagues from S. Vincent, is small, and inhabited by about 500 Blacks, under a Portuguese Governour, without any Town but only a small Village of 20 or 30 Houses, the rest scattering about the Island, which produces all sorts of Fruit in Perfection, and some Goats, but has no Corn, nor any Trade, so that all the Inhabitants are miserable Poor.

S. Vincent, as was said, is three Leagues East of the last, about the same bigness, but affords no manner of Refreshment to Ships that touch there, except Water and an infinite quantity of Tortoises, which come daily out of the Sea, are excellent Meat, and of a prodigious bigness. Here are also wild Goats, but scarce ever above 20 or 30 Inhabitants.

Santa Lucia is to the Southward of both the last, and bigger than they put together, high and hilly, well wooded and water'd, yet generally has but very few or no Inhabitants.

S. Nicholas, South East from S. Lucia, not inferior to it in bigness, little inhabited, and the most Creatures it produces are Cats and Goats.

The Salt Island, so call'd from the great Plenty of Salt it affords, is very small, and lies East of S. Nicholas. It has a good Road, but the Soil is barren, yet it is frequently resorted to by Ships for its Salt.

Boa Vista has the Name from its agreeable Prospect off at Sea, and is South of the last above, being much of the same magnitude; only inhabited by poor, wretched People.

Mayo, or the Island of May, less than any others, and to the South of Boa Vista. On the North side of it is a good Bay and Road, and on it a little Village of 10 or 12 Houses. The Ground of it is Rocky, and consequently produces little Grass, yet it has abundance of wild Goats, and some little wild Horses, Asses, and Kine; those few People there are on it have but an uncomfortable Life.

Santiago, the biggest of all these Islands, lies West of Mayo. In it is a Town, which the Portugueses call Praya, or the Strand, betwixt two Bays, where there is a Bishop, this being the Capital of all the Islands, and near the Shore, where the Ships generally Anchor, there is a small Fort.

Foco and Brava are two other very inconsiderable Islands South of Santiago, in which there is Nothing worth observing.

Some will have these Islands to be the Gorgones of Mela, others the Gorgades of Pliny, and others the Hesperides of Ptolemy. The first Discovery of them in later Ages was by Antony Nole, a Genoese, serving the King of Portugal, in the Year 1460. They are subject to the Crown of Portugal; most of the Inhabitants Blacks, except some few Unfortunate Portugueses, who know not how to live elsewhere, and therefore pass their Days there in Poverty and Want, having no Trade, nor any Relief from abroad, but from those few Ships which touch there, some Times for Water, Salt, Boats, Tortoises, or Fruit.

Islands from the Gulf of Guinea, to the Cape of Good Hope.

The Island of Fernando Po, so call'd from its first Discoverer, is in three Degrees and a half of South Latitude, near the Coast of Guinea and Congo, is not inconsiderable for Bigness, being above 30 Miles in Length and 20 over, very high, producing Mandioc Roots, whereof they make Bread; as also Tabaco, Rice, and abundance of Fruit. The Europeans never touch at it, unless to be for Water, because the Natives are Savage, and fly as soon as they see them.

The Prince's Island, is next, lying South-west of the last, and about 30 Leagues from the Continent. It is smaller than the other, and inhabited by Portugueses, Mulattoes and Blacks, who have many Slaves, whom they employ in Sugar-Works, Planting of Tabaco, and Sowing Rice and other Grain; Some Cotton also grows in it, which the Women spin for their own Use. They have Plenty of Swine and Poultry, and as much Fish as they will take. On the Sea-shore is a small Town of about 200 Houses, defended by a small Parapet and 5 Pieces of Cannon.

S. Thomas's Island is directly under the Line, between 40 and 50 Leagues from the Coast of Congo, almost Round, and about 120 Miles in Compass. The Portugueses discover'd it, in the Year 1471, on S. Thomas's Day, from whom it had the Name. It was then all one entire Forest, having never been inhabited, but they Peopled and Planted it, since when it produces vast Quantities of Sugar, but no Wheat, by reason of its excessive Heat. Their Chief Town is call'd Po-voação, and is a Bishop's See, containing 5 or 600 Portuguese Families.

Annohon seated towards the 2d Degree of South Latitude, some Leagues to the South-west of S. Thomas, is about 10 Leagues in Compass, well furnish'd with Necessaries for Life, and inhabited by a few Portuguese Families, and many Blacks; who have a little Town intrench'd, to secure it against any Enemy.

S. Matthew is between the Second and Third Degrees of South Latitude, above 100 Leagues distant from the nearest Land, which is that of Guinea, but Desert.

The Island of Ascension, another small Place not inhabited, lies between 8 and 9 Degrees of South Latitude, above 200 Leagues from any Land. Ships often touch there for Water and Tortoises.

S. Helena, so call'd, because discover'd by the Portugueses on that Saint's Day, lies in 16 Degrees 15 Minutes of South Latitude 550 Leagues North-west from the Cape of Good Hope, 350 West from Angola, and 510 East from Brazil, being the farthest from any Continent we know of, and yet not above 20 Miles in Compass. It is all surrounded with high and inaccessible Rocks, except on the East side, where there are two small Bays, and good Anchoring for Ships, under the shelter of the Island. In this Place stands a small Fort maintain'd by the English, who are possess'd of the Island, and the only Inhabitants, being very few in Number, as may be imagin'd of such a small and solitary Place. Tho' thus Lonesome, it is healthy and pleasant, the great Heat being temper'd by the constant Winds on the Hills. The Mountains pour down excellent Water, which supplies not only the Inhabitants, but all Ships that touch there in their Way, to or from India. Most of it is Rocky and Mountainous, but the Valleys produce all sorts of Herbs and Fruit, tho' not much Grain, because the Rats destroy it. The Mountains swarm with Wild Goats, and there is great store of tame Fowl bred about the Houses. Besides there are Wild Boars and some Horses. The English have kept Possession of this Island many Years, for the Conveniency of Watering and the other Refreshments the East-India Ships find there, the Sick generally recovering when they are but a few Days ashore. From this forward we meet with no Island worth mentioning, till we come to that of Madagascar, which is one of the largest Islands hitherto known in the World, extends about 1000 Miles in Length, and above 200 in Breadth, in the widest Part, being seated between the 12th and the 26th Degrees of South Latitude, on the East side of Africa, opposite to the Coasts of the Cafres and Zanguebar; Mozambique being the nearest Place to it on the Continent, from which it is distant above 200 Miles. The Portugueses, who first Discover'd it, gave it the Name of S. Lawrence; the Natives call it Madagascar; the Arabs Sarandib; and the French, L'Isle Dauphine, or the Dauphin's Island. The Length of it runs North-east and South-west. All along the Coast there are many pleasant Rivers that fall into the Sea, and good Bays, which afford safe Anchoring for Ships. The French have made the greatest Discoveries both of the Coast and Inland, as being the only People, who have had a Settlement there for many Years, having built a Fort on the Southermost Part of the East side of it, which they call, the Dauphin's Fort, in about 25 Degrees 6 Minutes of South Latitude, whence they have conquer'd a considerable Part of the Island, and are long since settled in Peace with the Natives, many of whom they Convert. Here is great Plenty of Iron, and some Gold is found in the Mountains, but the Quantity small, and the Value inconsiderable; as also Crystal, Topazes, Granates, Amethysts, Eagle Stones, Emeralds, Sapphires, Hyacinths, Jasper and Blood Stones. No Place abounds more in Cattle, besides which, there are infinite Numbers of Monkeys, abundance of Wild Dogs and Cats, besides Porcupines, Crocodiles, Snakes and great Variety of

of Fowls and Fish. The Product of the Earth is no less various; for it produces all sorts of Grain, Fruit and Plants known to us, besides many more we are Strangers to; as also some Pepper, Tobacco, Sugar, and all these Things, except the last, may be gather'd twice a Year. Nor is this all, for the Trees and Shrubs yield the Gum call'd Tacumaca, Frankincense and Benjamin; The Sea often throws up Amber-greece; the Wild Beasts yield Musk and Civit; the Land has Talk, or lizing-glass for the Windows, instead of Glass; as also Salt-Peter, and good Coals in Pits. The Towns and Villages differ only in Bigness, as consisting only of Huts or Cottages, only the House belonging to the Lord of the Place, is larger and more lofty than the Rest; yet these Dwellings have generally a Ditch round them and are Palisado'd. Their chief Wealth consists in Cattel; their ordinary Diet is Milk, Rice and Roots, and some Beef, and they make a Drink of Honey, and of Sugar; their Habit a sort of Mantle about their Shoulders, and another Cloth wrapp'd about their Waist and hanging down, with Sandals on their Feet, and a Thing like a Basket on their Heads. All the Natives are Black, except those of one small Province, on the West side next the Tropick of Capricorn, who are Tawny, and most of the Chief Men, who say they are descended from the Acabs. They are generally of the larger Size, active and fierce, ready enough at any Handicraft, write Arabick Characters, and are addicted to Astrology and something of Divination, and extremely complaisant to their Wives. As for Religion, they have no particular Places of Worship, nor Priests, but use Circumcision and believe in One God, Creator of all Things, yet pay him no Adoration, living only according to the Law of Nature, and confessing their Sins. They also believe there is a Devil, whom they much Dread, by the Name of Tairadey, and that he is the Author of all Evil, as God is of all Good; and therefore they adore and endeavour to appease that mischievous Spirit. None exceed them in superstitious Observations of Signs and Tokens, and they have abundance of ridiculous Fables concerning the Beginning of the World.

There are many more small Islands about Madagascar, as those of John de Lisboa, Maurice, Ant. arenbus, &c. on the East side, Comera, S. Christopher, the Holy Ghost, and others on the North-west, and more along the Coast of Zanguebar, which have nothing Particular worth our describing. Zacotora, at the Mouth of the Red Sea, we gave an Account of, together with the Coast of Adrian, and the Islands in the Red Sea, do not deserve any peculiar Description. It therefore only remains that we proceed into the Mediterranean, and say something of the Island of

M A L T A.

Which, tho' much nearer to the Coast of Sicily, is yet by most Geographers reckon'd as a Part of Africa. The present Name is only a Corruption of the Ancient, which was Melita. Its Situation is in the 36th Degree of North Latitude, the Length about 15 Miles, the Breadth 7, and the Circumference 40, the Form almost Oval, with several Harbours on the Coast, defended by as many Castles, and the Position is South of Sicily, and North of Tripoli in Barbary. Valetta so call'd from John de Valette, the Great Master that Founded it, is the Capital Town, built on the Port

call'd Marza, upon a Rock, and almost cut off from the Island by a Deep Trench cut in the Rock. It is extraordinary well fortify'd with Outworks, after the Modern manner. The Streets are large and strait, the Houses lofty, all of Stone, to the Number of about 2000, with flat Roofs. The Gates are three, one to the Sea, and two to the Land, the Churches 7, that of S. John, the Patron of the Order being the chiefest. Here are also 6 Palaces, for as many Nations as the Order consists of, being those of Provence, Anvergne, France, Italy, Aragon and Castile; there was formerly one for England, but that is abolish'd. Besides these, the Great Master has a Magnificent Palace of his own; there are also some Monasteries, and a Noble Hospital, where the Sick are serv'd in Plate, and by the Knights of the Order themselves. The Arsenal is stor'd with all sorts of Necessaries for War. The Castle of S. Elmo, seated on the Point of Land next the Sea, from the City and founded on a Rock, is a regular Work of Modern Structure, and defends the City and Port. On the other Side of the Port is the Castle of S. Angelo, and behind it another Town, call'd Citta Vittoriosa, the Victorious City, because it held out a Siege against the Turks. Besides these, there is the Town of S. Michael, cut off from the Island by a Ditch, and Citta Vecchia, or the Old City, otherwise call'd Medina, in the midst of the Island. There are many Villages and scattering Parishes, which do not deserve any particular mention. The Natives hold that the Land of this Island, which is like a soft Stone, was bless'd by S. Paul when he landed there, after his Dangers at Sea, and they find abundance of Eyes, Tongues and other pieces of Snakes, so lively represented in Stone, that nothing of Art can exceed them. These they say were left there ever since the Apostle shook the Viper from his Hand, and they pretend they are an Antidote against all Poison. The Soil is naturally stony and barren, so that it yields not half the Subsistence necessary for the Inhabitants; yet Industry has made several curious Gardens. Men and Women of any Note are all clad after the Italian Fashion, the Meaner sort wear a close short Waistcoat with a Hood behind, and a red Cap. All Strangers are clad after their own Country manner. There are thought to be 40000 Souls living upon the Island, whereof 25000 Men able to bear Arms, many being Knights and Soldiers, who are not Married. Malta was anciently Subject to the Carthaginians, next to the Romans. After them the Mahometans possess'd themselves of it about the Year 828, but were again expell'd in 1090, by Roger, the Norman, Earl of Sicily; from which Time it continu'd annex'd to the Crown of Sicily, till the Emperour Charles the 5th being Master of that Island, gave it to the Knights of S. John of Jerusalem, who after being expell'd the Island of Rhodes by the Turks, in the Year 1522, had wander'd about from Place to Place, without any certain Abode. In 1530, they took Possession of this Island, and that of Gozo, a small one close by it, granted them, as has been said by the Emperour, where they have continu'd ever since, and thence call'd Knights of Malta, defending it bravely against the Turks, when attack'd by them, and they have always done great Harm to those Infidels, being ever at open War with them, and taking many of their Ships.

A Leaf of the Copy being Mislaid, this Account of the River Nile which should have been inserted in our Description of Egypt, was omitted by the Printer.

THE River NILE is so much talk'd of, as well on account of its Annual overflowing and fertilizing Egypt, as the length of its Course, that every body has heard its Fame. And it therefore we stretch a little our usual brevity in Speaking of it, we hope we shall not offend our Readers.

The Source or fountain head of Nile was in such obscurity in ancient Times that it became a Proverb of Similitude to an inscrutable thing. Nor was even the Learned Ptolemy rightly inform'd of it, for he and all others after him till of late, laid it in the 10th Degree of South Latitude, in the Lower Ethiopia where is now the Kingdom of Morogesi, where, says he, it issues from two Pools or Lakes lying at some distance East and West, which being encreas'd by the melted Snows from the Mountains of the Moon overflow, and unite in one Channel, which by the access of very many other Rivers, is encreas'd to the Magnitude we see it. Thus the common Opinion stood, till the Jesuits and other Missionaries in the last Age travell'd into the heart of Africa, and have by ocular Testimony discover'd that the River Nile primarily issues under the 11th Degree of North Latitude in the Western Part of the Upper Ethiopia; in the Country Goyame, which is a Province of Abyssinia: There two small Springs issue, in a verdant Plain on the Side of a Mountain, which soon unite and make a small River call'd the Abamis, and after a course of about 20 Leagues Northward it turns Eastward, and running about the same length that way, falls into the Lake of Dambea, whence issuing on the South, it makes a Course of 20 or 30 Leagues that way, then turns to the West, encircles the Province Goyame, and then turns its course Northward between Abyssinia and Nubia, passes thro' Egypt, and finally empties it self into the Mediterranean Sea. It is encreased by many Rivers in its course; as the Gema, and two other small Streams near its head, the Bashlo, the Kesem and some others, as it encircles Goyame; the Mateg and Taccaze larger Streams, in the 15 and 19 D. Lat. and the Nubia a very considerable River in the 25 D. of Latitude; with many others, But that the Niger R. issues from the same Fountain with Nile, as has been maintain'd by the Ancients, is not so, as we have told you when we spake of that River in Page 205. It's course is near 1500 Miles, but its breadth is not very great, for Thevenot compares it to the Seine; nor is its Stream very rapid. In its course it has Seven Cataracts or Falls, wherein the whole Body of the River falls Perpendicular from a very great height, and causes a Noise that is heard several Miles off. At its flux into the Sea it is divided into two great Branches, and formerly five more small ones, whence it was said to have seven Mouths, but these are so choak'd with Sand, that they are hardly discernable. It is a little below the ancient City Memphis, where the Town Rudac now stands, that it branches out, and composing a Triangle whose bottom is the Mediterranean Sea, was nam'd by the Ancients the Delta from it's Similitude to that Character in the Greek Alphabet. The Mouths of the two great Streams are, the East at Damieta, and the West at Rosetta. This is the only River in Egypt, and the only Water they have to Drink, wherefore all their Towns are seated near its Banks. The Water is muddy, but they have an Art to clarify it, and it is very wholsom Drink. It affords but little Fish, but abounds with Crocodiles, a Creature of ravenous Nature, and by his devilish Nature of loving Man's Flesh is very terrible: It is in form like a Lizard, with four Legs and a long Tail, and long Snout; arm'd with a wonderfully strong scaly Coat, which renders him almost invulnerable; his Mouth is very long, and his Jaws arm'd with long and sharp Teeth; and has these two Peculiarities in his Mouth, namely, has no Tongue, and moves his Upper Jaw while his under remains fix'd. The Crocodile is amphibious, and lives at Land as well as in Water, is oviparous and lays her Eggs in the Sand, which warm'd by the Sun hatches 'em; it grows its whole life, and so from 4 or 5 Inches, grows to 20 Foot in length; and is exceeding Strong.

The Encrease of the Nile, is by some attributed to the great Rains that fall in Ethiopia at that Season; by others, to the melted Snow from off the Mountains; and perhaps by both, as the Rivers in the India extra Gangem are in the same manner annually encreas'd, as we told in its place; the great River Niger is observ'd to overflow in the same manner. Of the encrease of the Nile, Mr. Thevenot has treated very particularly, from his own Observation on the Spot; the curious Reader may consult him for the tarriff of every day's rise of the Water, which not being so generally desir'd, and withal is of so much length, that it might seem tedious and impertinent to transcribe it here. The sum of that account is, that it begins to encrease about the Middle of May, and continues encreasing by easy additions of 4 or 5 Inches a day till the Middle of September, and sometimes till October. Because the Egyptians receive so much benefit by the Inundation of their Land, they are careful in observing its Rise. They call the Measure by which they observe its rise Pic, which is 24 Fingers breadth. When it is risen 16 Pic's they cut the Khalis or Bank that is made to confine the Stream, which is perform'd with great Ceremony by the Basha and his Chief Officers. On the 28 or 29 of June, a solemn Publication is made of the encrease of the River by a Cryer, whose business it is to declare every day after that day what addition of Water is made. The Year Mr. Thevenot was there, the Water of the Nile was encreas'd on the 28 June 8 Pic's; on the 14 Aug. it being risen to 16 Pic's the Khalis was cut, and continued encreasing to the 22 Sept. on which day it was risen to 21 Pic's and 16 Fingers breadth, which we may reckon to be above 40 Foot. After that day the Waters decreas'd, and went off in as gentle a manner as they came on. The Waters overflow almost the whole Land, for it lies so low, that the River from one Furlong's breadth encreases to 300 Furlongs.

O F A M E R I C A in General.

THIS last and greatest Part, of the Four the World is divided into, lay totally bury'd in Obscurity, and unknown to the other Three, for so many Ages as pass'd from the Creation till the Year of our Lord 1492, when first discover'd by the ever renowned Christopher Columbus, a Genese, but employ'd by Ferdinand and Elizabeth, King and Queen of Spain. It is in vain to form to our selves vain Notions of the Ancients being acquainted with it, on Account of Plato's Atlantis, and such groundless Hints in other Authors. These are all Chimerical Suppositions, for so vast a Continent once found out could never be lost again, unless Mankind had perish'd, and a new Race had sprung up that was totally ignorant of it.

The Name of America is certainly, tho' no less undeservedly deriv'd from Americus Vespusius, who continuing the Discoveries begun along the Continent by Columbus, usurp'd the Honour justly due to the first Undertaker of so Noble an Enterprize. The Spaniards to whom the World owes the Discovery, gave it the Name of the New World, and that properly enough, as being so immense a Tract that it exceeds any of the other three Parts, and is not much inferior to them all put together. A third Name of West-Indies it receiv'd from the first Discoverers, as no Way inferior to India for Wealth, with the Distinction of West, in Regard of its having that Position from us, as the other is East.

As to the Extent, it is so Prodigious, that in 200 Years since our first knowledge of it, we have not been able to ascertain its Bounds. What has been view'd is from 78 Degrees of North Latitude, in which Sir Thomas Smith's Bay lies, to 60 Degrees South Latitude, in all 138 Degrees North and South; which taken in a strait Line, amounts to 8280 Miles in Length, with a sutable Breadth in some Parts of near 4000 Miles, tho' the Isthmus it self, which joyns North and South America, be not 60 Miles over; yet from thence both Parts of the Continent stretch themselves out East and West, till they make the Breadth already mention'd.

What can be said of the Soil in such Variety of Climates, but that excepting the most Northern and Southern Parts, made barren, as elsewhere, by excessive Cold, the rest is all Immense Treasury of Nature, producing all Plants, Grain and Fruit known in the rest of the World in great Plenty, besides infinite other Sorts peculiar to itself, and which will not thrive elsewhere. Yet what is all this to the Inexhaustible Mines of Gold and Silver; which tho' all the Art of Man has been endeavouring to Drain for 200 Years, are yet so far from being impoverish'd, that they only want fresh Supplies of Hands to draw out their endless Wealth, to Gorge the insatiable Avarice of Man. Nor are Gold and Silver the only precious Commodities, such Quantities of Pearls, Emeralds and Amethysts have been there found, that they are become of inconsiderable Value, in respect of what they were. And to descend to other Particulars though not of so high a price, yet valuable and of Use, thence we receive our constant and plentiful Supplies of Cochineele, Indigo, Anatto, Logwood, Brazil, Fustick, Lignum Vitæ, Sugar, Ginger, Cacao, Banillas, Cotton, Red Wooll, Tabaco, Hides, Amber-greece, Bezoar, Balsam of Tolu, of Peru and of Chili, Jesuits Bark, Jalap, Mechoacan, Sarsaparilla, Sassafras, Tamarinds, Cassia, and very many other Things which these Parts were before utter Strangers to, or at least receiv'd them at second or third Hand, and at exorbitant Rates, from such as trading to Egypt and the Coast of Africa, distributed what they there had brought to them by Land, into all the Parts of Europe by Sea.

The Natives when first found out, were, as may be imagin'd in such a vast Extent of several sorts, some living according to the Primitive Innocence, as in many of the Islands; others Inhuman and Barbarous Canibals, or Man-Eaters as in other Islands and Parts of the Continent; some under Polite Government, and mighty Monarchies, as were those of Mexico and Peru, with stately Cities, and other Magnificent Structures; others more Rude, and scattering in Villages under petty Princes, as in the North and South, and between the two great Empires beforemention'd; and lastly, one Commonwealth regularly govern'd and civiliz'd, which was that of Tlascala. In such Variety of Nations, there must be no less of Customs and Manners. Learning cannot be said to have had any Entrance there, no Man among them ever knew what it was to write, or read, and consequently there must be a profound Ignorance of all Sciences.

Religion could not be expected to have any Footing in a Place, which had never been known to those who had receiv'd the Word of God. It is true, there are Authors who labour to find out some dark Tokens of Christianity, having been introduc'd among those Savages, and they take no little Pains to make S. Thomas, the Apostle, their Instructor; but these are such far-fetch'd Fancies, as have not the least Appearance of Possibility, much less of Probability; for which Way shall we suppose the Apostle to get thither, unless an Angel took him up, as we read of S. Philip, when he was carried to Convert the Eunuch. But it belongs not to us to enter upon these needless Arguments, this is certain, that when America was discover'd, nothing appear'd in it from North to South but Idolatrous Superstition. The most Innocent paid Adoration to Sticks and Stones, before which they perform'd many absurd and ridiculous Ceremonies; whilst the wickedest Part honour'd the Devil with Sacrifices of Human Blood, wherein they butcher'd Multitudes of Men.

The Seasons and Temperature of the Air are not as in the other Parts of the World, only answerable to the Climate or Position in Regard to North and South, but differ sometimes extremely in the same Latitude, one side of a Mountain being temperate and the other excessive hot; one hour scorch'd, and another frozen, and in other other Respects, as we shall see when we come to speak of those Countries.

The living Creatures are no less various than are all other Productions. Horses had never been seen in all this Continent, nor do we hear of any Kine, unless in the most Northern Parts; but for other sorts, they wanted scarce any that we have, unless we mention the Elephants and Camels of Asia and Africa, which are strangers to Europe. The great variety of Birds is wonderful, and many of them the most beautiful in the World for curious Feathers of the most delightful Colours to behold. Nor do the Seas afford less Diversity, and abundance of Fishes.

The Rivers here are the greatest in the Universe beyond all Controversie, as to instance in a few, that of Canada, in the North, which is known to run above 1500 Miles, and is 90 Miles over at the Mouth. That of the Amazon in South America, which rises in Peru, and after watering several Nations, and a Course of 3600 Miles, falls into the Northern Ocean, between Brazil and Guiana, rowling such a prodigious quantity of Water, that they take it fresh several Leagues out of the Sea from the Mouth of it. That of Plata descending from the Inland of South America, and growing so great with the accession of many other Rivers, that for many Leagues it looks like a Sea, and discharges it self into the Ocean at a Mouth above 150 Miles in Breadth.

What Mountains can be compar'd to those we find here? Those call'd Andes begin on the Shore of that call'd Tierra Firme, which is next the Isthmus of America, and cutting all that Southern Part into two, end at the Streight of Magellan, their length being about 3800 Miles, and their height so excessive, that they are several Days Journey over, and those who cross them ever suffer very much cold, tho' in the hottest Season, besides other Inconveniences. Of the rest it will be needless to speak here, when we shall offer more Particulars coming to the Provinces in which they are found.

This new World, as it was first discover'd by the Spaniards, so the greatest and best part of it fell to their share. Other Nations perceiving what a vast addition this was like to make to their Monarchy, would not suffer them to be the sole Possessors of such an ample Dominion. The Portugueses accidentally were cast upon the Coast of Brazil, when they were design'd for the East-Indies, and improving their good Fortune have made themselves Masters of all those Coasts. The English were not idle, but by degrees, and at several times, spread themselves along the Northern Shores, where they settled in Virginia, Ala-bama, Carolina, and other Provinces, besides the Islands of Jamaica, Barbadoes, and some of less Note. The French have a considerable Northern extent of Land along the River of Canada, which gives its Name to all their Conquests. And even the Dutch would not go without some Portion in this common Dividend, but have secur'd to themselves good Footing at Curaçao and Surinam, in South America. All this, as has been said, is nothing to what the Spaniards enjoy, as having no Competitor on the South Sea, where their Dominions extend from 40 Degrees of North to near 45 of South Latitude, being about 5000 Miles in Length, the more Northern and Southern Parts being still unconquer'd, and possess'd by the savage Natives. In all these vast Conquests of so many European Nations, Christianity has now utterly abolish'd Idolatry, so that nothing of it remains but only in those Parts which have not been subdued, which are principally far North and South. But only the Spaniards have spread the Light of the Gospel among the Natives, for the other European Nations have none, or very few Subjects of them, whereas the Spaniards have many Millions who have no knowledge of the Pagan Superstitions of their Fore-Fathers, and at this time the Christian Religion is so far advanc'd, that they have 5 Archbishopricks, 26 Bishopricks, 2 Universities, above 400 Monasteries, many more Hospitals, and an infinite number of Parish Churches. All these Matters have been here lightly touch'd upon, only to give the Reader a general View of the whole, referring him for a more particular Account to the Description of every Province.

It remains that we come to the Division of America, in order to which it is necessary to premise, that it is always divided into two principal Parts, call'd North and South America, these being two mighty pieces of the Continent, almost cut asunder by the Sea, and only join'd by the narrow Isthmus, or Neck of Land, which has Panama on the one side, and Nombre de Dios on the other, and is but 18 Leagues, or 54 Miles over, so small a Bar parting the North and South Seas. Now each of these two principal Parts or Regions is subdivided into its several Kingdoms, Provinces, or Dominions, as will appear by the following Table, in which the same Order shall be observ'd as in the other Parts of the World. Before we proceed, it is necessary to observe, that America is not known to join to any other Part of the World, and therefore the Boundaries on the East and West sides are those commonly call'd, the North and South Seas; on the South another part of the Ocean beyond Tierra del Fuego; but on the North, where it ends, has not hitherto been discover'd, the farthest attempts that Way proving in vain, those who have sail'd highest still meeting Land and Ice on the side next to Europe, and on the Western side, tho' some Maps represent the Land of Jesso and Streights of Anian as exactly as if they had seen them, there is nothing in it but Fancie, none having ever made a Progress far enough that Way to determine whether there is an open Sea, or a narrow Streight, betwixt Asia and America. Nay, were the World once convinc'd that there was only a Streight to separate these two Parts of the Earth, it would put an end to the many Speculations for discovering which way America came first to be inhabited, that being a Point much controverted, and to very little purpose, among the Learned, as only known to him that made it. But let us come to the Table of Divisions, which stands thus.

C H A P. II.

The POLAR or ARCTICK Countries.

Greenland is the most Northern Part of America, if we may assign it to this Quarter of the World, and it joins to it for any thing we yet know. How far it extends East and West cannot be determin'd, neither Extreimity being yet found out, only some will have it to be leparated from America by Hudson's Streights, which cannot be assur'd, since we are ignorant of what is higher. Southward it reaches to Cape Farewell in 60 Degrees of Latitude, and how far it runs to the North no Man yet could find out. From that Southern Point it runs away to the North East to Spitzbergen or Greenland. This Country the Danish and Iceland Chronicles say was first Discover'd and Peopled by one Tormald a Norwegian, about the Year 779. In his Son Erick's time it was divided into two Provinces, the Eastern and the Western, and the Christian Religion brought in from Denmark. The principal Town is in the East, and call'd Garde, and another nam'd Alb; in the West Kindlefjord, and Rempesingfjord, which Places had one Bishop, and several Monasteries. From the time above-mention'd all that was known of this Country, continued in subjection to the Crowns of Denmark and Norway, till about the Year 1390, the Communication being somewhat interrupted by Troubles at Home, and Losses at Sea, the Greenlanders were left to themselves, and utterly lost again till in the Year 1578, Martin Frobisher discover'd that we now call New Greenland, but the Natives so salvage that there was no possibility of dealing with them, as may be seen in the Accounts of his Voyages. They are strong of Body, and cloath'd in Sea Calves-Skins sew'd together with the Sinews of Beasts, the Women wearing Breeches as well as the Men; their Complexion Olive Colour, their Hair long, their Faces painted with Blue, all very nasty, and strangers to Modesty. They know no other Wealth but their Slings, Bows, Arrows, and Boats. The last hold but one Man, and are cover'd with Sea-Calves Skins; but they have a large Sort, cover'd with Whales-Skins, which will contain 20 Persons. Since then other Ships have several times been on the Coast, and in some Parts have Traded with the Natives for Furs, Sea Calves Skins, and pieces of Unicorn's Horn. Having mention'd this Horn, it is proper to observe, that the Beast call'd a Unicorn we cannot find in any Part of the World, but in these Northern Seas there are many of a sort of Fish, with a long Horn in the Forehead, and exactly answering to that we see in several Parts, vulgarly reckon'd to belong to that always invincible Beast. The Soil is certainly barren, by reason of the excessive Cold, inasmuch that the Natives do not know what Corn is, and their whole Subsistence is Fish, some Koots, Deer, and Bears, and the Drink they most delight in is Whale-Oil. Other Parts of Greenland are altogether Desert, and thither it is that several Nations of Europe resort for the Whale Fishery. But to draw nearer to America, in the Year 1576, Frobisher above-mention'd, after discovering several Capes and Bays, came into the Streight to which he gave his own Name, in 62 Degrees of North Latitude, and forcing his Way through the Ice, arriv'd at the Place he nam'd the Countess of Warwick's Sound, where he had design'd to build a Fort, having brought Timber from England, but part of that being lost in another Ship, he return'd home loaded with glittering Sand, which he imagin'd to be Gold.

In 1585, Mr. John Davis found the Streight which bears his Name, and tends to the North West, where he Traded with the Salvage Natives. Next, Mr. Hudson found another Streight, and through it came into the vast Bay which retains his Name, and lies between Estotiland and New Wales. Sir Thomas Button follow'd, and keeping more Northwards, fell into that still call'd Button's Bay, and Winter'd at Port Nelson. Baffin after this sail'd into 78 Degrees of North Latitude, where a Bay retains his Name, and return'd convinc'd that there was no Passage. Captain James, an Englishman, and Captain Munk, a Dane, made the like Attempts with as little success. Thus all the Advantage we have gain'd by their Labours, is to be satisfied there is no Passage or open Sea on the North of America, and that Greenland does not join to America as high as 78 Degrees of North Latitude, where Baffin's Bay parts them.

Captain Munk's Voyage has brought us to New Denmark, lying from 60 Degrees no Man knows how far Northward, nor can we give it any bounds Southward. A miserable Land, almost ever frozen, and consequently affording nothing for the support of Life but such as the barbarous Natives are oblig'd to take up with, being Fish, Deer, Bears, and several sorts of Water-Fowl, without any sort of Grain.

New Wales was partly found by Hudson, and part by James and others, being a Land lying South and East of New Denmark, bounded by that and Hudson's Bay on the North, by the same Bay on the East, by New France on the South, the Extent Westward unknown.

New Britain, Tierra de Labrador, or Estotiland, or Tierra de Cortereal, for it has all these Names, and the last from one Cortereal a Spaniard, who first found it after the Southern Discoveries were much advanc'd. It is divided on the North and East from the other Part of America and Greenland by Hudson's Bay and Streight, on the West it has the Northern Ocean, and on the South New France. All these Countries, and what lies North and West from them still unknown to us, have no Town, or Houses better than Huts; the Natives a wretched, salvage People, little better than Brutes, without any knowledge of Religion, or even of the Conveniences of this present Life; generally clad in Skins, and feeding on Fish, and the Flesh of wild Beasts, and such Water-Fowls as can live in those frozen Countries. The Land is bare and fruitless, and all that Merchants venture for to any of these Parts, is either the Whale Fishery of Greenland, or the Furs of Hudson's Bay. Therefore this may suffice for those unhappy Countries.

CANADA, or New France,

WAS first discover'd by the Spaniards, who finding nothing there of Value, call'd it Cabo de Nada, or Cape Nothing; whence by Corruption came the Name of Canada, that of New France being given it in Regard the French are possess'd of a great Part, and are daily extending their Conquests through the Rest. On the North it Borders on Essetiland, Hudson's Bay, and Part of New Wales; The East extends along the Northern Ocean; The South lies upon the Dominions of New England and Florida and the West is not determin'd as reaching to Nations not yet discover'd. The most Northern Part comes up to about 55 Degrees of Latitude, and the most Southern descends to 34, but the Figure is very irregular; the Length from East to West cannot be decided, as has been already observ'd, what has been hitherto discover'd runs above 2000 Miles.

The River of Canada, or of S. Lawrence, as the French call it, or Houelaga, is the largest in all North America, and inferior to few in the World, being above 30 Leagues over at the Mouth, and 200 Fathoms deep. The Course of it is already known for 1500 Miles, as flowing out of the Lake of the Hurons, which has a Communication with that call'd Superieur, or the Upper, and that of des Puans, or of the Stinking People, from which there is a Communication with that of Siout, and from that to another call'd Affibouels, 7 or 800 Miles North-west of that of Hurons; for so far the Friars have gone upon the Mission: and many are of Opinion that a Passage may be found that Way unto the South Sea. Several other Waters considerable enough in themselves, tho' inconsiderable compar'd with this, fall into it, as first that of Des Prairies, or of the Meadows, De Mons, Les Trois Rivières, or the Triple River, the greater of Saguenay, and S. Marguerites, near the Mouth, all those on the North-side, those on the South-side being inconsiderable. The Worst of this River is, that it has several great Falls which hinder Navigation; that at Niagara, La Hontan says is 7 or 800 Foot high, and half a League broad, the Water running to it with such Violence, that all Beasts attempting to cross it a quarter of a League above it, are swallow'd up, and it Tumbles off the Precipice with such Fury, that it makes an Arch, under which three Men may pass a Breast, without any Danger or Damage, but a few Drops of Water falling on them.

The

mighty Flocks of Sheep and Herds of Kine. The improv'd Land yields plentiful Crops of Indian Wheat, much Tobacco, and any common Herbs and Fruits. In the Mountains there are Coal Pits, and some say Silver Mines; tho' we do not hear of any Advantage made of them. Beavers and Otters swarm in the Marshes, and infinite Numbers of Fish in all the Lakes and Rivers.

The Natives are a rude ignorant People, having never known the Use of Letters before the French came among them, and there are still scarce any that incline to learn them. Their Government, suitable to their Knowledge, being all divided into small Tribes, under several Heads; some more Human, and others more barbarously Cruel, as having no Principles of Conscience or Politeness, but acting in all Things as Nature or their Education prompts them. As for Religion, they have some Notion of an Eternal, Almighty Being, but so imperfect, that it has no Effect upon them. All their Worship consists in Dancing, which honour they for the most Part pay to the Sun. In other respects they are altogether indifferent, and think all Spiritual Doctrine, well enough for those who like it, and absolutely need- less to those who do not. Polygamy is generally allow'd, nor are they by any means to be beaten out of it. Their Funerals are attended with mighty Lamentations, and the Women mourn a whole Year, with a sort of Hoods on their Heads. Towns they have none, but live in Huts, and that mostly till they gather in their Harvest, after which they disperse themselves, either to the Wars, in which they are frequently entangled, or to Fishing or Hunting, which is their Diversion, and support, affording them Food and Furs to trade with the Europeans.

It is Time we come to the Division of the Country into its several Provinces, under which, as Occasion offers, more may be said as to these Particulars. The Provinces are as follows, with their Towns; or where there are none, the sundry Tribes inhabiting them, beginning at the North-east Point, so running to the South-west along the upper-side of the great River, and returning from the South, North-east on the lower-side of the said River.

Esquimaux

is the most Eastern Part of Canada, lying without the Great River of S. Laurence, bordering Northward, on Tierra de Labrador; on the East it has the Northern Ocean; on the South the Gulph of S. Laurence, shut in between this Province, Newfound-Land and Accadia; and on the West the River of S. Margaret divides it from the Berriamites. The French at several Times built here the little Towns or Forts of Port Quartier, Port S. Nicholas, Ch. chequedec and Port Neuf, all of them at present little regarded, the better Trade up the River, having much obstructed the Increase of these Places. However they serve to keep Possession, and to protect the Missioners.
The Natives are extremely Brutal and Salvage, as in most of these Northern Parts, for we shall generally observe that the Politest Indians were farther remov'd from both the Poles. The Soil might be brought to bear all that is Necessary, but wants improving, and those People are sa-tisfy'd with what they have, as being Strangers to better.

The Berriamites

Are the next People to the Westward, including on the North of them the Oupapichoult Tribe, or Nation, and taking them both together, their Borders on the North lie upon Tierra de Labrador, on the East the River of S. Margaret divides them from the Esquimaux, on the South they have the River of Canada, and on the East the River Lequemin separates them from the Saguenay Nation, of the Province of Canada, properly so call'd. Here are no French Towns, Forts, or Settlements, the Country being like that last mention'd in all Respects, yielding little Profit, excessive cold and the Natives of the same Disposition; so that we shall not need to say more of them.

Saguenay,

The next Province to the Berriamites, and of a large Extent, is parted from it on the East by the little River Lequemin, has Tierra de Labrador on the North, the River of its own Name on the West, dividing it from Canada properly so call'd, and the great River of S. Laurence on the South.
Tadoussac is the only French Town in this Province seated at the Mouth of the River of Saguenay, the Port small under a Hill, which is almost cut off from the Continent, with a Point on the West call'd S. Matthew's, running almost a League into the Sea; the other South-east, call'd of all the Devils.

These People are Subject to a King of their own, who is in strict Alliance with the French, and has several petty Princes under him. Their Diversion consists most in Dancing, with abundance of An-tick Actions. They are of an Olive Colour, but that is occasion'd by their Painting, for naturally they are white. All their Clothes are made of Skins and Furs covering their whole Bodies in Winter, but only Part in Summer. Their Religion is much what was hinted at before, for they believe in one God, one Mother, one Son, and the Sun in the Firmament, but God above all; yet they trouble themselves little with Acts of Devotion. The way of Marriage is for the Woman to make Tryal of as many Men as she pleases, and for what Time she will, and then to chuse him she likes best.

Canada.

This is the principal Province of N. France on all Accounts, farthest subdu'd and the Extent of it yet not known. On the North it lies along Tierra de Labrador, Hudson's Bay and New Wales; on the East the River of Saguenay parts it from the Country of the same Name; on the South the great River of S. Laurence, the Lakes and the Rivers Mississipi and Illinois, separate it from the Etechemins, the Iroquois and Louisiana; but how far it runs to the West, must be left to Time to discover.

It is needless to speak in particular of all the Tribes mention'd in the Table, they being but so many small Parts of the Whole Body and differing little from one another, tho' they have several Names, and make distinct Districts. La Hontan one of the latest Writers of that Country, and who was conversant among the Natives, informs us, That they have no Beards, nor Hair on any Part of their Body, but only on their Heads, which is generally Black. As to their Persons they are proper, well shap'd, with large black Eyes and of an Olive Colour, which proceeds from their daub-ing their Skins, that would otherwise be white.
All Things among them are in common, they despise Sciences, and allow of no different Degrees among them. Their Food is Fish or Flesh boil'd or roasted, without Salt or Spice, both which they loath. Few Diseases reign among them, the chiefest whereof are Pleurisies, and these they have no Cure for. The Small Pox are common in the North, and as little regarded, the Venereal Disease is frequent in the Southern Parts, and that they cure with Simples and a regular Diet. Brandy is their greatest Enemy, for it destroys their Constitution, and throws them into Consump-tions. They despise all European Remedies, abhor Bleeding, and admire that Men should ever allow of Vomiting; but their principal Cures consist in Sweating, Sleeping when they can, and drinking of Water. All Wounds and other Hurts they perfectly Cure with Simples.

The most remarkable living Creatures here, not to speak of such as are common with us, are the Beavers, some of them above two foot long in the Body and three foot round, besides the length of the Head, which is 7 Inches and the Tail 14. These Creatures cut down great Trees with their Teeth, and carrying Earth on their Tails, make Banks 4, or 500 Paces long, 20 foot high, and 7 or 8 thick, with which they intrench themselves against the Water, and secure their Habitations. These the People catch in Nets, or else shoot them for their Furs and the Castor, which are the best Commodities of this Country. The Michibichi is a sort of Tyger, that never hurts Man, but assists the Natives in Hunting of Bears, and therefore they are never suffer'd to be kill'd. Bears are of three sorts, White, Black and Red. Flying Squirrels, so call'd from their skipping from one Tree to another, are not much bigger than curs. Here are also Black, White and Red Partridges, and Parrots along the Mississipi River; in which there are abundance of Crocodils, large Carps, and other great Variety of Fish, and in that of Canada
white

white Porcupines as big as Oxen. As to the Product of the Land, it is needless to add any more than what has been said in the General Account.

This Country may reckon'd to contain 150000 French of all sorts, the common sort living in good wooden Houses, well furnish'd and 2 Stories high, free from all Taxes, and with full Liberty to hunt and fish, so that they want for nothing to make them easy. The greatest hardship is the Winter Cold, which is excessive from December till April, in so much that the great River freezes over, and the Snow lies two or three foot deep on the Ground, and what is strangest, this is in 47 Degrees Latitude.

Quebec seated on the great River S. Laurence, in 47 and half Latitude, is the Capital City, divided into the Upper and the Lower; both of them commanded by a Castle standing on a higher Ground. In the Upper City there are six Churches, and to the Cathedral there is a Bishop and 12 Prebendaries, who live in Community in the Chapter-house, which is a magnificent and wonderful piece of Architecture, and the Priests live virtuously, allowing themselves bare Necessaries, and meddling with nothing but their Church Affairs. The Jesuits Church is stately, but their College small. This City has no Navy, nor Fortifications, but is the Residence of the Governour of the Country, who has 20000 Crowns a Year, besides Presents and other Profits amounting to as much more. The Bishop's Income is so small, that he could scarce subsist, did not the King allow him some other Benefice in France.

A little above Quebec, on the Bank of the same River is Sillery, another French Town, and about 60 Leagues above the Montreal, or Mount-Royal, another considerable Town, but all this way on both sides of the River the Habitations are so thick that they look like one continued Village.

Frontinac, as the French call it, or Catarahony, according to the Natives, is a Fort about 100 Leagues up the River of S. Laurence from Quebec, at the Mouth of the Lake Ontario, or Pretty Lake, built to curb the barbarous Iroquois, into the Heart of whose Country the French can thence make Excursions in 24 Hours. The Winter about this Place is much shorter than at Quebec, and the Ground beginning to be till'd yields all sorts of European and Indian Grain and Plants, as Hennepin, who liv'd there some time informs us, and whom we shall follow in the remaining Description of these Parts.

The Lake Ontario last mention'd, which the French call Lake Frontinac, in Honour of the Count of that Name, who was Governour there, and built the Fort, is 80 Leagues long, and 25 broad, full of Fish, and Navigable all over, the great River of S. Laurence flows from it. From this Lake is a Passage at the Fall of Niagara before describ'd, into that of Erie, or of the Cut lying South West from it, and is about 140 Leagues in Length. Betwixt this and Lake Huron to the Northward is a Streight 30 Leagues long, and the said Lake is reckon'd to be about 700 Leagues in Compass, 200 in Length, and of an uncertain Breadth. Hence there are two other Outlets, the one Westward in the Lake of the Illinois, signifying the Lake of Men, 120 Leagues in Length, and 40 in Breadth, Navigable all over, and forming a great Bay, to the Westward, call'd des Puans, or of the stinking People, because those who live about it came thither from their former Habitations towards the Sea, on account of the stinking Waters they had there. The other Outlet from Lake Huron is to the Northward into the upper Lake, which runs East and West above 150 Leagues, being about 60 from North to South, and upon Sounding, no Bottom was found to it. All those Lakes running into one another, and disburdening themselves into the great River of Canada, may be reckon'd as Parts of it, and make the Navigation of it of a prodigious length, as was observ'd speaking of that River.

Having spoken of all the Lakes, we must return to the South West end of that of the Illinois, where Monsieur de la Salle in the Year 1679, built a Fort, call'd Miamis, because it is at the Mouth of that River which runs from this Lake South West, at some small distance from which is that of Illinois, holding much the same Course till it falls into the mighty Mississipi, or Meschafpe, signifying the Great River. The other two with the Lakes divide Canada from Louisiana. Along this River lives the great Tribe or Nation of the Illinois, which in their Tongue signifies Perfect Men; they live in great open Villages, are tall and strong, but lazy, timorous, and have little regard for their Chiefs; besides they are brutish, wild, and stupid, and therefore little hope appears of their Conversion. On this River Monsieur de la Salle built another Fort, by him call'd Crevecoeur, and by the Natives Checagon. Somewhat to the Eastward are the Miamis People on the River of the same Name, and about 41 Degrees of Latitude; the Maskoutens, and Ontonagamis live higher in 43 Degrees Latitude. Still to the Northward of these are the Meadoios, the Changis, the Chongaskaby, and the Affenipais; these last in above 55 Degrees of North Latitude, all which Parts hitherto little known but by the Relation of the Natives, only the Franciscans have a Mission in about 50 Degrees Latitude, and the French a small Fort on a Lake above that, call'd the Upper Lake. The Hurons are among the Lakes, and upon their Banks, are their Neighbours and Allies the Ontonagamis, both united against the Iroquois. They both live upon Indian Wheat they sow, and Fish they take in the Lakes. The Algonquins lie between the Hurons and Montreal, little differing from those already mention'd. These are the most noted Nations we find in Canada, it being needless to trouble the Reader with the repetition of many more barbarous Names to be seen in the Table, there being nothing to say of them in particular, and therefore we will proceed to Louisiana.

The only Accounts of this Country are such as we have from F. Hennepin, and Monsieur de la Salle's Discoveries on the River Mississipi, or Meschafpe, whom we must be beholding to for what we can say. This mighty River is in the North, between 50 and 55 Degrees of Latitude, but the Springs of it are not certainly known. It runs to the Southward till it is lost in the Sea in about 38 Degrees, where it falls into the Gulph of Florida. Many great and small Rivers swell it with the addition of their Waters, the chief whereof whereof are S. Francis, and S. Antony, Tombeau, the River of Oxen, the Black River, Onisconsing, Illinois, Tamara, Hobio, Ouma, Hiens, and Sauvage. The great River sometimes overflows, but not considerably, being stopp'd by Hills, beyond which the Country is most delicious, most Plains, whose Bounds are not yet known, with some few Hills cover'd with Trees. All the Country abounds in Game, as Turkeys, Partridges, Quails, Parrots, Wood-cocks, Turtle-Doves, Wood-Pidgeons; and for Beasts, wild Bulls, wild Goats, Stags, Bevers, Otters, Martins, and wild Cats; but for dangerous, devouring Beasts, there are none. All the Trees Europe affords are there in great plenty, besides very many unknown to us, but particularly, there are stately Cedars, and a Tree, from which drops a Gum exceeding our noblest Perfumes; besides Cotton-Trees here growing to a prodigious height. The Meadows are full of Grass, and fit for any Seed, Beans growing up and down naturally. The Ground yields three or four Crops of Indian Wheat in a Year, for there is no Winter, but a rainy Season, and there are Cole-Pits, Lead and Copper Mines, and Quarries of Free-stone, and of a black and white Marble. The Natives are affable, civil and obliging, without any Religion more than some Veneration they pay to the Sun, whom they call Louis, offering him the first Smoke of their Pipes, and some of the best part of the Beasts they kill, which they leave with their Chief, and he makes his Advantage of it. Throughout all the Northern Parts of America there is wonderful variety of Language, insomuch that those who live 10 or 12 Leagues asunder cannot understand one another without an Interpreter. The People of Louisiana differ from those of Canada in all respects, being less morose and thoughtful, more lively and active, and the very shape of their Heads much flatter. Their Chiefs are much more absolute, and their Government much politer. They know nothing of Fire-Arms, or have any Instruments of Steel or Iron, all their Cutting Tools being made of sharp Flints. Their principal Ornaments are Bracelets, and Pendants of Pearls, which they spoil for want of knowing how to bore them. To give an Account of the Extent of this Country is impossible, tho' it is true Hennepin, from whom we have taken this Account, says it is bigger than all Africa, but he saw no more than what was adjacent to the River, and therefore speaks of all the rest by guess; and if we consider what was before discover'd and known, we shall perceive he magnifies his own Discovery, which appears thus. The River of the Illinois, where he began, is between 35 and 36 Degrees of North Latitude, and from thence according to his own Account, but 120, or 130 Leagues to the Gulph of Mexico, and from the River of the Illinois upward to the Ita may be about 180, so that the whole Length may make 300 Leagues, but then the breadth of his Progress, as has been said, is but along the River. In the Northern Part Eastward Canada was before discover'd, and the Southern Part of it cannot reach farther than Virginia and Carolina; then on the South side Florida has long been known, to which some Extent must be allow'd up the Land, and lastly, on the West New Mexico, Quivira and Calaca have been many Years subject to the Spaniards, who all place Quivira and the Apaches Vaqueros in 40 Degrees Latitude, describing the very wild Bulls, as Hennepin does, and it is certainly the same Country, as may appear by comparing the Position and Description, but that he enhances upon his Discovery, so that it wants to be made more plain by such as shall follow him, and Mortier de La Sille, which last might perhaps have given us further Satisfaction had not he been unfortunately kill'd by the Indians.

Iroquois.

This Nation, as was said at first, lies along the Southern Bank of the River of Canada, which is its proper Northern Bordering, on the East it touches the Eschimiens, has the English Plantation, on the South, and towards the South East Louisiana. It is true, F. Hennepin, whom we still follow, says there are three or four Iroquois Villages on the other side the great River of S. Laurence or Canada, about Fort Frontinac, but these are only Colonies of the others, and more civiliz'd than they, as living under the French.

These People are divided into five Cantons, or Tribes. The first to the North East is that of the Gnieneguez, or Agniez, neighbouring upon New York, who have three Villages, and make up 400 Fighting Men. The second to the Westward the Onreciouts, being not above 150 Fighting Men. The third still the same way of the Oumontagnez, or Mountaineers, because they live on the highest Ground, 300 Fighting Men the bravest of the Nation. The fourth the Oionguens, who make three Villages, and in them 300 Fighting Men. The fifth and last, the Tsonnentonnans, towards the farther end of the Lake Ontario, or Frontinac, containing in three Villages 300 Fighting Men. It is needless to say any thing of their Country, which is the same as all that Part of Canada already describ'd; but for the People, they are the most Barbarous, Insolent, and Inhuman of any in North America, and would never be at Peace, or entertain any Commerce with the Europeans, but for the advantage of such Commodities as they want, and particularly for Fire-Arms and Ammunition, which it is pity they were ever furnish'd with, since they have only serv'd to destroy many Christians, and thousands of Americans, whom they bloodily Butcher, and have made no difficulty to make Excursions some Hundreds of Leagues, only to satisfy their own cruel Disposition, which is such, that they are more like ravenous Beasts than Men. They put all the Prisoners they take in War to the most exquisite Torments, leave them extended whole Nights on the Ground in the coldest Weather; burn them by Piece-meal with hot Irons, tear off their Nails and Hair, cut out their Tongues, throw hot Ashes upon their Wounds. In all which Barbarities the Women are as active as the Men, and they give their Children the Blood of those Wretches to drink, which done, they devour the Flesh themselves. Yet nothing is done among these Monsters without mature deliberation, Councils being always held to consult about all publick Affairs. If they would put any of their own to Death for some enormous Crime, they have a Man to do the Execution, and first make him drunk with Brandy, that the Kindred of the Party put to Death may not seek Revenge; for they alledge that the Executioner being Mad and Drunk when he did it ought to be excus'd, and that appeases them. They always keep Spies abroad to give them Intelligence, and are themselves a subtle or sly People, and wary enough in the way of Trade.

The Etechemins

Are the next North East of the Iroquois, divided from them by a small River, has the River Canaan on the North, Gaspesia and Accadia with the Gulf of that Sea that forms it on the East, and the Ocean and New England on the South. The Country takes its Name from a River so call'd, running cross the middle of it, and falling into the Bay of Accadia. Here are vast quantities of Herrings in May and June. The Country is all so cover'd with Trees and Busses, that it looks like one continued Forest, which renders it unfit for Tillage till that Obstacle be remov'd, yet the Soil seems Good. The Woods and Waters breed such infinite Multitudes of Gnats that they are not to be endur'd. The Natives suffer nothing from the Souriquois we shall speak of below, in Manners, Customs, and Shape of Body; but their Language is quite different.

Accadia,

Once call'd New Scotland, but surrender'd up to the French, had by them the present Name, being a Peninsula, encompass'd on all sides by the Sea, except on the North, where a small isthmus joins it to the Continent in that Part which some wrongfully call Canada, but is in reality that part of the Etechemins Country to which others have given the Name of Gaspesia, from the Port of Gaspé, much resorted to by the French. On this Peninsula the French have several Settlements, the chief of them Port Royal on the West side of it, where the Sea makes a great Bay, the Port good, but the Town inconsiderable, yet fortified of late. The other French Dwellings are of less Note, as Port R. Signal, and La Hève, and Paspay on the South side, Toucheville on the West, and Montego on the Eastern Point. The People here inhabiting the Inland, and about Port Royal are call'd Souriquois, handsome and of a middle Stature, most black Hair, and of a dark Complexion, occasion'd by their daubing; only the principal Men wearing Beards, the rest pulling them up by the Roots; in other respects they are like the rest of the Savages. In Summer they live on Fish, and in Winter on what they kill in Hunting, and knew nothing of Bread till they learn'd of the French. They are submissive to their Caciques, but know little of God, or Religion, yet believe in Sorcerers, and respect them, these being also their Physicians and Surgeons, for which they use many Charms. Their Language differs from all other Parts of Canada. In this Province, and that of the Etechemins we have chiefly follow'd Laet.

Having run through the Description of these Provinces, it remains that something be added of the Manners, which can only consist in speaking of the Customs and their Actions, all America except Mexico and Peru, affording nothing of the sort, before found out by the Europeans. The first Discoverer for the French was John Ver- zand a Frenchman, in the Year 1524, who run along all the Coast from 28 to 50 Degrees of North Latitude, whence the French have sometimes given the Name of New France to all that Tract of Land, yet he did no more than view along the Shore, nor did this Discovery produce any thing for Years, for it does not appear that there was any Prosecution of it till 1541, when Jacques Cartier was upon Norfolk Island, and the next Year proceeded to S. Laurence's Bay, and to Canada, making farther Observations on that Coast, and Trading with the Natives, and in 1522 he built a Fort, and Winter'd there, but this came to nothing as well as the rest. In 1542 Monsieur Ribault went upon the Coast of Florida, of whom, and those who follow'd him thither we shall speak when we come to that Province. The Northern Expeditions still ceas'd till the Year 1603, when Samuel Champlain sail'd to those Parts, and in his Way met Mountains of Ice, yet went up the River of Canada, as far as Tadoussac, before describ'd, where he was entertain'd in most friendly Manner by the great Sagamo, or Prince of that Part of the Country. He went 10 or 12 Leagues up the River of Sagueny; but on that of Canada they proceeded as far as Quebec, where it narrows to 300 Paces, and thence proceeded to the great Cataract or fall, which they went by Land to View, and tho' La Hontan and Hennepin both represent it to be one, and entire of several hundred Foot, yet Champlain, who says he saw it as well as they, affirms it is step by step, that is, rowling from one Rock to another, and divided into Branches. Having view'd so much of the River and Country, he left a Colony at Quebec, and in all made six Voyages thither from France, contracting strict Amity with the Natives, and giving the Indians two great Defeats, with great slaughter of them. All that follow'd after him have left little light of what they did, being wholly employ'd in Trade, and settling the Possession before taken, so that they fortified themselves and erected other Forts in several Parts, as has been mention'd. The next Discoverer here was L. Hennepin, in the Year 1679, who running up the River of Canada into the Lakes, made his way through them to the River Missipi, or Mississipi, and sailing down that to the Southward, penetrated as far as the Bay of Mexico, taking a View of all that Country call'd Louisiana, before describ'd. Monsieur de la Sale he tells us did the same two Years after him, and then thinking to find the same way by the Mouth of the River upwards, sail'd from France to that purpose in the Year 1684, and after much wandering in vain was at last kill'd by his own Men, some of whom got safe into Canada, and thence to France. Baron La Hontan was the next Adventurer, who made his Discovery to the Westward of the Missipi, up that he calls the Long River, visiting the Nations of the Esquimaux and Crispates, who told him strange Stories of those beyond them, very little to be regarded till we have some better Information, and therefore with this we must conclude the Discoveries in New France, which has ever since continued annex'd to the Crown of France. Only in the Year 1629, Quebec being destitute of Provisions and Ammunition, as having receiv'd no Supplies from France in two Years, was taken by the English, Monsieur Champlain the Gover-

by safely surrendering to make his private Advantage, contrary to the Opinion of others, who were for defending themselves. However, the French soon after recover'd their Possession. In 1689, Sir William Phips, Governour of New-England, having got together a Fleet of 4 Ships, sail'd up the River of Canada as far as Quebec with a design to make himself Master of that Place; in order to it he Land'd 3000 Men a League and a half below the City, with some Field-Pieces, and advanc'd towards the Place, but they were receiv'd so warmly in a Copice by 3 or 400 French and Indians, that they fled back to their Ships, leaving 300 dead upon the Spot. They repeated their Attempt upon the Copice another Day, and fought better than the first, yet with as little Success, losing as many, and retiring to the River; by which the French were so encourag'd, that they pursued them to their Camp, and lay all Night flat on the Ground to be ready to attack it in the Morning, wherein they were prevented, for there being very few regular Troops in that great Number, they embark'd at Midnight with such Confusion that 50 more were kill'd getting into their Boats. In the Morning the French carry'd the Tents and Cannon they had left behind them into the City, and the Indians had the stripping of the Dead. Sir William Phips having thrown away so many Men to no purpose through his ill Conduct, Sail'd again out of the River, and return'd to New-England.

THEIR Length from North to South is considerable, but the Breadth from East to West not answerable. The first of these Ways, they reach from 32 to 45 Degrees of North Latitude, including Carolina, and may be about 350 Leagues of Coast; yet up the Land they reach not far; the farthest is Virginia, which extends wider than any other, being within an hundred Miles of the Ocean, and that only where there are considerable Rivers. In this long Tract and variety of Latitude we may well imagine there is no less diversity as to Temperature of Air, difference in Soil, and multiplicity of Indian Nations, as also many Rivers of Note, and other Particulars worth observing, which however shall not be touch'd in this Place for fear of Repetitions; but being to speak particularly of each Province, we shall in every one give as ample a Description of all those things which deserve it, as may form a true Idea of those Parts, and this Volume will permit. To come to the Division, beginning on the North, as we have hitherto done, and descending Southward, the several Provinces with the Counties in them, lie thus.

New-England.

This most Northern of the English Plantations lies between 41 and 45 Degrees of North Latitude, bounded on the East by the Ocean; on the North and West by New-France, and particularly the Province of the Etchebins, and the Iroquois; and on the South by New-York. The Inland Extent, as was said before of the English Plantations in General, is but small, all the Planters covering to be near the Sea, or at least on some Navigable River, for the Conveniency of Trade.

Those Rivers here are none of them very great, for their Course being short, they receive not the Addition of many Waters to swell them; but of Province is reckon'd to extend along the Coast North-east and South-west about 110 Miles in Length, the greatest Breadth up the Inland, being under 60, and much less in all other Places. The Northern Boundary of this Province, and of the whole Country, is the little River Saco. On the South this Province is divided from that of Plimouth, by another small Water at the Town of Scituate; to the East it has the Ocean, and on the West it has high Mountains and thick Forests to divide it from the yet unconquer'd Country of the Natives.

We will take the Counties and Towns as they lie from North to South. Main and Cornwal are very barren up the Inland, but towards the Sea and along the Rivers yield Corn, and Pasture; there are several Towns nam'd within them, which, as was said before, do not deserve to be so call'd and therefore not mention'd here; for even among the three Chiefest, which are York, Dover, and Wells, it will be hard to make a tolerable one, since they tell us, there were 100 Families in Wells before these the Connecticut is the Chief, Navigable in Boats about 50 Miles; and next to this the Thames, the Glass River, Patuxet, Ware, Providence, Quinebequin, Marimack, Saco, Pemmaquid, Casco, Sagadehock, Kenebeck and Penobscot; most of them so inconsiderable, that to Name them enough; but if any deserve more, it shall be in their proper Provinces.

This Country is divided into three Provinces and those again into several Counties, which with their Towns of any Note, are set down in the following Table, not to fill up Paper with above an Hundred Names of Places call'd Towns which are scarce Villages, but most of them Country Parishes, and not worth so much as Naming.

the Wars with the Natives, and consequently fewer now, by which we see they are inconsiderable Places, only that they have some Works thrown up about them, for a Fence against the Indians. This same may be understood of all the other Towns we give no particular Account of, which therefore shall not need repeating.

Essex County is water'd by the River Marimack, Navigable near 40 Miles; the Soil poor, except near the Coast; its principal Town Salem, where the County-Court is kept, a Market every Week, and two Fairs in a Year. Middlesex County, being water'd by many small Rivulets, is reckon'd one of the pleasantest and fruitfulest Parts of New-England, abounding in all sorts of Cattel, which is thence exported to other Parts. Its Chief Town is Cambridge, at first call'd New-Town, seated on the Northern Branch of Charles River, and chang'd its Name upon being made an University, and having two Colleges built in it, which are Howard College and Stoughton Hall, besides which, it has several good Houses and handsom Streets, and the County-Court is held in it twice a Year. Charles-town is the next, 4 Mile from Boston, across the Harbour, consisting of two long Streets, a Market-place, and a handsome Church; and here the County-Court is kept twice a Year. At Reading, another good Town, there is a Corn Mill and another to saw Timber. At Watertown there are two Fairs yearly.

Suffolk County is honour'd with the Capital of the Country, which is Boston, the largest and best Town in the English American Dominions, built on the Sea-Coast, conveniently for Trade. The Harbour secur'd by a strong Castle in an Island, at the Mouth of it, with Forts on the Shoar of the Continent to secure all the Avenues. This may be call'd a City, as well by reason of its Opacity, as for the several handsome Buildings in it, both Publick and Private; as the Court-House, Market-Place, Sir Will. Phip's House, &c. besides several spacious handsome Streets, and said to contain 10, or 12000 Souls, out of which they form four Companies of Militia, which is too little if the aforesaid Number of Inhabitants be true. There are 3 Parish Churches belonging to the Presbyterians; a French Church for that Nation, and two Meeting-Houses for a particular Congregation of the Church of England, and the Anabaptists. This is the great Port of New-England, where 3, or 400 Ships have been loaded in a Year with Lumber, Fish, Beef, Pork, &c. for several Parts of Europe and America, and here the Governour resides, the Courts of Judicature sit, and the Assembly, being like a Parliament, meets. There is a Market every Week, and two Fairs Yearly. The next good Town is Dorchester, built near the Sea and has two Fairs, and next to that Roxbury, only remarkable for having a Free School; and lastly, Weymouth, the ancientest, but inconsiderable.

Plymouth Colony, or Province is the next to Massachusetts, stretching along the Sea about 100 Miles, with a long Outlet, or slip of Land running into the Sea, ending at Cape Cod, and forming Barnstable Bay. Plymouth County is the first, of which little needs be said in Regard it is in all Respects like the last spoken of; Plymouth and Scituate being the only Towns of any Note in it, the last of which has two Churches. Next is Barnstable County containing the above-mention'd slips of Land, running out into the Sea and Cape Cod, which is very high and the Country about it barren, for which the Fishing makes amends. Its principal Town, call'd also Barnstable, is no way remarkable. Bristol County follows, in which are Swampscott and Bristol Towns, which have nothing worth taking Notice of. The Rivers of this Country are small, and there is nothing in it different from what has been said before.

Connecticut and New-haven Provinces, being now join'd, and but one Colony, lie along the Sea, where it turns away from Monmouth Bay, and lies almost East and West, a little inclining Southward, about 70 Miles from the Edge of Plymouth Colony to the Borders of New-York; and from the Sea up the Inland it extends about 50 Miles. All this Province to the Westward, and up the Country, is full of Woods, Mountains, and Morasses, where there is good Game and Trade of Furs. New-London County is the first here, whose Capital Town bears the same Name, seated on the River call'd Thames, which has several Branches that Water the Country. Saybrook the oldest Town in this County and Lime, are seated on both Sides, and at the Mouth of Connecticut River, which is Navigable in Boats, about 60 Miles up to Hartford, which is the Chief Town of a County of the same Name, lying from the Sea. New-haven is the next Maritime County, and then Fairfield the last, in both which there is no Town of any Note, but poor inconsiderable Places, most of the Country 8, or 10 Miles from the Sea, being barren Hills and Morasses, and uninhabited; the rest nearer the Sea does not want Beef, Pork and Corn, but has little Trade.

Thus much may suffice for these Provinces and Counties in particular; it remains to add something of the Country in general. No Sea affords more Plenty, or variety of Fish, but Newfoundland, has taken off much of the Cod Fishery, whereof there is still a considerable Trade to the Islands. For Beasts there are Bears, Foxes, Raccoons, Otters, Beavers, Deer, Hairs, Rabbits, and a strange Creature call'd a Mose, 12 Foot high, the Body as big as a Bulls, the Neck like a Stags, the Legs short, the Tail longer than a Bucks, and the Tips of the Horns 12 Foot asunder. There are besides abundance of European Beasts, as Cows, Sheep, Goats, Hogs, and Horses, the last small but hardy, sometimes exported to the Leeward Islands, as is a good Quantity of Leather, Beef and Pork.

Insects of all Sorts there are abundance, especially Flies and Gnats, which are very troublesome; and of Reptiles the most noted is the Rattle-Snake, so call'd from a noise it makes with the Tail, like a Rattle, and this is a dangerous Creature. Nor is there less Variety of Fowl, both Wild and Tame. The Product of the Earth is generally of all such Herbs and Fruit as grow in England, Corn and Indian Wheat, and for Trees Oak, Elm, Ash, Cypress, Pine, Chesnut, Cedar, Aspin, Beech, Fir, and Sassafras.

They carry hence to the Islands Boards, Masts, Pipe-Staves, Hoops, and Beef, Pork, Meal and other Provisions; and in Return, receive Sugar, Molasses, Rum, Ginger, Indigo and Cotton, either for their own Expence, or to transport into England, from whence they have Stuffs, Silks, Linnen, Birmingham-Ware, all Sorts of Working-Tools and Apparel. Money they have but very little, and therefore generally barter one Commodity for another, tho' they have a Mint at Boston.

It is needless to trouble the Reader with abundance of Barbarous Names of Nations, as they call them, of Indians, most of which are no longer to be found, being either destroy'd by the English, or fled from them. In general they were a naked People, Subject to petty Kings, whose Territories seldom extended above 10 Miles, and very often much less. The greatest Difference among them being in their several Languages. In Winter they would cover themselves with the Skins of Wild-Beasts, which they laid by in Summer. They fed on Indian Wheat, Fish and Game; their Weapons Bows and Arrows pointed with Fish Bones; their Boats and Canoes made of solid Trunks of Trees hollow'd. Some had settled Habitations, and others wander'd about like the Tartars. All their Religion consisted in a little Familiarity with and Worship paid to the Devil, to which Purpose they had a sort of Conjurers, or Juglers among them, who were both Priests and Physicians.

Since the English have been among them, those who live near them are something more civilized. Their Kings are Absolute; their Houses Maty'd about Poles fastned in the Earth. They believe there are many Gods, and Dancing is their chief Religious Ceremony.

They tell us of abundance of Indian Converts, nay of Indian Preachers, by whom it is likely those People must be well instructed; but the British Empire in America gives us a good Instance of this Nature, where it says, one Jacomes an Indian being converted, told the Sachems, or chief Men of his Country, The Gods they Worship'd had great Power, but limited and subservient to the God he had chosen. An excellent Expression to show what a Convert he was, for what more could the most stupid Idolater have said? He allows those they worship'd to be Gods, and of great Power, only that he had chosen one had more. Thus it appears what Notion he had of Christianity, and yet such Creatures as these they tell us in a few Years are made Pastors to Convert and Instruct others, then no Question but such Masters must have suitable Disciples. Enough of this and of the Colony, the Historical Part whereof, as to the Discovery and Planting shall be referr'd to the last, after speaking of all the other English Dominions along the Continent.

New-York

Is a narrow Slip of Land lying between New-England on the East and Hudson's River on the West, on the North it has the savage Country of the Natives, and on the South it has the Ocean, washing the Coast of Long-Island, which is a considerable, if not the best Part of the Colony, and separated by a small Arm of the Sea. The Continent is scarce 20 Miles over in the broadest place from East to West, and but near 150 in length from North to South. And Long Island is about 100 Miles in Length North-east and South-west, and not above 12 in Breadth.

The Climate is reckon'd more temperate than that of New-England, and the Soil so fruitful, that it has been known to yield an Hundred for one in Wheat, if we may believe the Planters. There is a great Manufacture in Long-Island in Earthen Ware; but the main Trade of the Province consists in Furs, Skins, Tabaco, Horses, Beef, Pork, Pease, Wheat, and Fish Oil. The Soil produces Flax, Hemp, and all Sorts of Fruit. In the midst of the Island is a Plain 16 Miles in Length and 1 in Breadth, which yields excellent Hay. In Winter the Inhabitants catch many Whales and Seals along the South-side of the Island, of which they make a considerable Quantity of Oil.

The Inhabitants on the Continent, trade with the Indians for Skins of Elks, Deer, Bears, Beavers, Otters, Rackoons, and all Sorts of rich Furs, and have Venison and Fowl from them very cheap. To Barbadoes, and the other Islands, they carry Hories, Beef and Pork, for which they receive Sugar, Molasses, Rum, &c. To Madera and the Azores they carry Pipe-staves and Fish, in return whereof they bring Wine and Brandy. The Soil is here Richer, and the Climate more temperate than in New-England; but it is hotter in Summer and colder in Winter than in the same Latitude in Europe.

The Beasts, Birds, Insects and Fish are much the same here as in New-England, and therefore nothing need be said of them; nor is there any considerable Difference as to the Natives, except in their Languages, which are difficult and barbarous. They are generally a handsom People, only make their Skins tawny by continually daubing, very dexterous at their Bows and Arrows apt to Learn, but much addicted to Sorcery, which is practis'd by their Priests, who endeavour to give them a great Aversion to Christianity. If a Man dislikes his Wife, he turns her off and takes another. They are extraordinary Submissive to their Kings, believe the Transmigration of Souls, mighty Dancers, fond of all Sports, and those who have learnt to play at Cards, so fond of them that they will lose all they have at them. In all the Territory of New-York there are scarce 1000 Indian Men left.

New-York is the Name of the Chief Town of this Province, containing about 800 Houses, many of them handsome, a great Church lately built, a Dutch, a French, and a Lutheran Church, as also a Free-School. The Town is conveniently seated at the Mouth of Hudson's River, and is defended by a Fort, call'd Anne, and two Batteries towards the Sea. This Place was most of it built by the Dutch, before the English took it from them, the greatest Part of Brick and Stone, and cover'd with Tiles. Near 150 Miles up the Country from New-York stands the Town of Albany, most inhabited by Dutch, who remain'd there after their Country-men lost the Province, and here a Stone Fort is lately built. Above Albany was another Town call'd Senechtada, of about 100 Houses, inhabited by Dutch and English, but destroy'd by the Indians. The rest of the Towns are not worth mentioning.

Yet this Province is divided into 10 Counties, 5 of them inhabited by Dutch and their Children, which are Albany, Ulster, Dutchess, Orange and King's-County; the others Suffolk, Chester, Richmond, New-York, and Queen's-County; in each of which there are Settlements, but most of them such as do not deserve the Name of Towns, tho' so call'd.

New-Jersey

On the East is bounded by the Sea and Hudson's River, this last dividing it from New-York; on the West by Delaware River, which parts it from Pensylvania; on the South it has the Ocean and Delaware Bay, and on the North a Line drawn from Delaware to Hudson's River, at 41 Degrees of North Latitude separates it from the upper Continent; so the Length from North to South is about 120 Miles, and the greatest Breadth about half as much East and West. The utmost Southern Extent reaching to about 39 Degrees Latitude.

It is divided into two Parts from North to South, which are therefore call'd East and West Jersey. The first is the biggest and best inhabited of them, commencing at Egg-Harbour in the South, and divided from the other by a Line drawn thence Northward, by which it has more of the Sea Coast. The Counties it is Subdivided into are four, viz. Berghen County on Hudson's River next New-York, besides which, several other Streams water it. The Chief Town bears the same Name, and is most inhabited by Dutch, being about 350 Souls, and about as many more dispers'd abroad in the Country. 2. Essex County, in which is Lizabet Town, opposite to Staten Island, inhabited by about 250 Families, and in it the Courts are kept and the greatest Trade carried on. To the Northward is another little Town of about 100 Families, call'd Newark. 3. Mid- dleton

Albany County, where are Perth City, yet will scarce make a Village; Piscataway of 80 Families, Woodbridge of about 100, and Perth Amboy of 40, yet call'd a City; by which appears what small Places they dignify with such Names. 4. Monmouth County, and in it Middleton, containing 100 Families; Shrewsbury 160, and Freehold about 40; and in all these Counties no Parish, nor Church, but only some Meeting-Houses.

West-Jersey, so call'd, in regard to its Position from East-Jersey; from which it is divided by the Line aforesaid in the East, and the same other Boundaries above-mentioned. It is divided into 4 Counties, viz. Burlington, whose Trade consists in Pel-tage; Glocester in Pitch, Tar and Rosin; Salen in Rice; and Cape-May County in Whale-Bone and Oil. The Capital Town is Burlington, where the Courts are kept, contains about 200 Families, the Houses of Brick, and the Market plentifully supply'd with all Provisions.

Nothing more particular need be added concerning the Soil and Climate, which are much like the other Neighbouring Parts we have treated of. The Trade here mention'd in speaking of West-Jersey is common to both, beside which, they also Export sufficient Quantities of Provisions. In all New-Jersey there are scarce 200 Natives left of all that inhabited so great a Tract of Land.

Pensylvania.

The next Province to New-Jersey, is divided from it on the East by Delaware River and Bay; Northward it extends towards the Iroquois Indians, or New-France; on the West of it are still the same Iroquois Natives, and Part of Virginia, and on the South Maryland, and the aforesaid Delaware Bay. The Length of it North and South from Pensbery, on the River Delaware to Cape Houtope, at the Mouth of Delaware Bay, being about 120 Miles, whereof about 50 are but a very narrow Slip of Land, between Maryland and the Bay, no where above 10, or 12 Miles over. This is the Length we find most agreeable to all Maps, and in reality the Truth of it; for tho' Gabriel Thomas in his Account extends it to 300, and the History of the British Empire to 330 Miles, that is all imaginary, supposing so much may be conquer'd or peopled, for the same History says the Extent is from the Beginning of the 40th Degree to the 43d Degree of Latitude; so that should we include all the 43d Degree, it would be but 3 Degrees in all, which can make no more than 180 Miles; but we have rather, according to their own Accounts allow'd it from the End of 39 where Cape Kinlope is, to the Beginning of 42 where the Falls of Delaware River are, being two whole Degrees, and making, as was said before, 120 Miles. The Breadth from East to West the first Author above-mention'd makes 180 and the latter 200 Miles, which must be understood in the same Manner as has been said of their great Length, rather what they would have it, than what it is.

The whole Province is divided into six Counties. 1. That of Buckingham, where the first Town, call'd Edis Township, has only 20 or 30 Houses, and then Bristol the Capital of 50 Houses. 2. Philadelphia, in which is the Capital of the whole Province, bearing the same Name, and dignify'd with the Title of a City, seated between two Navigable Rivers, the Delaware and the Schoolkil. The Houses being about 1200, built of Brick, 2 or 3 Stories high, with many Warehouses and Wharfs along the Rivers, a handsom Court-House, and under it a Prison. Two Fairs are kept here every Year, and two Markets a Week. It is inhabited by People of several Principles; so there is a Church for such as are bred to it, and Meeting-Houses for Quakers, Presbyterians, Anabaptists, as also a Swedish Church. The Assemblies and Courts of Judicature are held here, and there is a Key 200 Foot square, close to which a Ship of 500 Tun may lie. Next to Philadelphia, the best Town is German Town, of about 200 Houses. Over the River Schoolkil is the Welsh Plantation of 40000 Acres.

The third County is call'd Chester, whose Capital of the same Name contains not above 100 Houses; and besides that there is Chichester of the like Number of Inhabitants. 4. New-Castle County, whose Capital bears the same Name, and contains above 2000 Souls. 5. Kent, whose chief Town Dover has not above 30 or 40 Houses. 6. Suffex, where the principal Place is call'd Lewis, reckoned a good Town, as Towns go in those Parts.

The great Rivers here are, the Delaware on the East-side, descending from the Country of the Iroquois, and falling into the Bay of the same Name, and the Sasquahanagh coming out of the same Inland Country, and running almost Parallel to the Delaware till it falls into Chesapeak Bay. The Schoolkil before mention'd washing one side of the City Philadelphia is small, and loses its self in the Delaware.

As to the Climate, this Country lies equal with the South Part of France and Italy, which it somewhat resembles, the Air being Serene, Pleasant and wholesome, but colder in Winter and hotter in Summer. And for an Instance of the Cold, the great River Delaware, which is near two Miles broad at Philadelphia, has been quite frozen up. The Summer here would be intolerable were it not moderated by cool Breezes.

The Soil in so large a Tract may be imagin'd to vary, some good and some bad. The Product differs little from the Neighbouring Provinces already mention'd, for here are most Trees which England affords; and besides them, Cedar, Sassafras and Chestnut; and for Shrubs Sumack, Snake-root, Sassa-parilla, Calamus Aromaticus, Jalap and Cranberries. Here is also Plenty of Grain of every Kind, and all possible Variety of Fruit; nor is there less Diversity of Animals, as Tame Cattle and all the Wild Beasts, whose Flesh, Skins or Furs are of any Value, but all these last lie up the Country, and cannot properly be said to be in Pensylvania. Fish and Plants need not be mention'd, it being well known that all these Coasts afford the greatest Variety that can be imagin'd.

The Natives are handsom, and would have good Complexions, did they not spoil them, as has been said of their Neighbours, by anointing themselves with Bear's Fat, and other filthy Ingredients. They wash their Children, as soon as born, and carry them on their Backs ty'd fast to a board. The Boys first fish, and when big enough hunt; the Girls plant Corn, and carry Burdens as their Mothers do. Their Houses are Huts, made of Mat, or Bark; their Food, Indian Wheat, Beans, Pease, Flesh and Fish. No People are merrier, for half their life is Feasting and Dancing, and they are generous and free of what they have, as coveting nothing. The same Apparel they wear living, living, they are buried in when dead, and the Kindred throw some valuable things into their Graves. As for their Religion, they believe a God, and the Immortality of the Soul, and pay their Worship with Sacrifices and Singing. Their Government is Kingly and Hereditary, but the Kings or Sovereigns have very small Dominions. With the English they have always been friendly and courteous, so that there has never been any War between them.

The present Inhabitants English, Dutch, and Svedes, are reckon'd to be above 20000, who drive a considerable Trade to all the other American Plantations on the Continent, as well as to the Islands, and to England. The Commodities they export are Horses, Pipe-slaves, Beef, Pork, Bread, Meal, all sorts of Grain, Skins, Furs, Pot-Asbes, Wax, and Tabaco. In return for which they receive Rum, Sugar, Molasses, Silver, Slaves, Salt, Wine, Linen, all sorts of Wearing Apparel and Household stuff, &c.

Mary-Land

On the North reaches up to 40 Degrees Latitude, where a Line drawn from East to West divides it from Pennsylvania, and the Inland Indian Country; on the West Patomack River parts it from Virginia; as does the same River and Pocomuck Bay on the South; Pocomack River severs it from the rest of Virginia on the East, and the remaining Eastern Part lies along the Ocean. For the better understanding whereof, it is to be observ'd, that the great Bay of Chesapeak divides both Maryland and Virginia into two Parts, each of them from North to South, one Part of each lying on the East side of the said Bay, and the other on the West.

This Province, like the rest, is divided into Counties, whereof there are 11, 6 on the West, and 5 on the East of Chesapeak Bay. The most Northern on the West commencing at 40 Degrees Latitude, as has been said, is call'd Baltimore County, reaching as far as Bawl's Creek Southward, whence only some scattering Trees to the Westward shew its Extent and Limits, and in it nothing that can properly be call'd a Town, tho' that Name is given to a parcel of flatter'd Houses. The next is Ann Arundel County, not much better furnish'd with Towns, here being only one call'd Annapolis, consisting of 40 Houses, and a Free-School, and here the Courts of Judicature are held. Then follows Calvert County, lying along the East side of the River Patuxent. On the West of the said River Prince George's County. South of this, Charles County, and again South of this S. Mary's, where is a Place bearing the same Name with the Title of a City, yet contains not above 60 Houses. Passing hence over Chesapeak Bay, the first we come at is Somerset County, then Dorchester, where there are more Indians than in any of the others, but the chief Place of the same Name with the County, has not above 10 Houses. Proceeding still Northward, the next is Talbot County, then Kent, running out into Chesapeak Bay, and lastly Cecil, the most Northern County on the East.

The Air, Soil, Product, and Animals here are the same as in Virginia, where the Reader may find them; but the abundance of Brooks and Rivers makes the Ground exceeding fertile; and for the Natives, we must refer to the same Place, since there is no remarkable difference between them, only it is here observable, that of those People there are not at present thought to be 500 Men able to bear Arms remaining. Most of these live upon the Eastern Shore in two or three little Towns, but go over in Winter to hunt Deer, which is their only Delight, being very averse to the Europeans way of Living and Christianity.

The whole Country was like one continued Wood when the English came into it, and is now no otherwise any farther than they have clear'd, which is very much. The main Trade here is Tabaco, so strong that few English care to smoke it, and yet it turns to better Account than the sweet scented of Virginia, being most esteem'd in the North East Parts of Europe, whither vast Quantities are sent, and it proves so advantageous, that it encourages the Inhabitants to increase their Plantations, which are now so much improv'd that here is more Tabaco thought to grow than in Virginia, tho' it be a later Plantation. Most of the Country is plain, and what Hills there are, easie of Ascent, so that they afford a delightful Prospect.

Virginia

On the North is bounded by Patomack River, which parts it from Maryland; on the East by the Ocean, on the South by a ridge of Hills dividing it from Carolina; and on the West the Apalachean Mountains part it from the Inland unconquer'd Country, which may be reckon'd a Part of New-France, or Hennepin's Louisiana, as being no great distance from the known Lake of Eric. Thus this Country will in reality appear to extend above 300 Miles in length from North to South, stretching it the most that may, and not 100 in Breadth from East to West, allowing it to extend to the aforesaid Mountains, the one half of which is not yet inhabited by any English. And lest this should be thought a lessening of the Country, it must be observ'd that the History of the British Empire extending it to 400 Miles, must of necessity either run in deep into Carolina Southward, or into the Country of the Iroquois Northward, as will appear to any one that will take the Pains to examine whatsoever Maps are extant of those Parts. But let it be never so much stretch'd this way, nothing can be parallell'd to the extravagant Notion of extending Virginia Westward to the South Sea, which is at least 2500 Miles across the Country, either through Florida, or New-France, and then athwart all New-Mexico, now actually in the Possession of the Crown of Spain, and yet at the same time it is most certain that the most Inland Settlements come not near the Apalachean Mountains, which as has been said, are not above 100 Miles from the Sea.

Thus much may suffice upon this Point to convince the Reader that nothing is here deliver'd but upon good Authority, without following blindly the Mistakes or willful Errors common in Books of this Nature. Chesapeak Bay, as was said before in speaking of Maryland, divides this Province as well as that into two Parts. Now this might be more properly call'd a River than a Bay, in regard it runs up the Country try about 200 Miles, being near 20 Miles over at the Mouth, little less in most Parts within, and much more in many. It has a bold Coast all along on both sides, so that any Ship may go in at all times sounding, without the help of a Pilot. Many Rivers fall into it on both sides, and along the Shores there are several little Islands, some of which are Planted.

The whole Province is divided into 25 Counties, in which there are but 49 Parishes, a small Number for such an Extent, and what is more, no Place worthy being taken notice of as a Town; for that they call James City has not above 70 Houses, and those scattering; as for the New Town of Williamstadt, or Williamsburg, there are not 30 Houses in it, the Habitations being single for the sake of the Plantations. Of such there are great Numbers all along the Banks of the Rivers especially, which is a Situation every one desires, for the convenience of shipping off their Tabaco. The Names of the Counties, which is as much as need be said of them in particular, are Richmond, Stafford, Essex, Middlesex, Glocester, King's and Queen's County, King William's County, New-Kent, Elizabeth, Warwick, York, James, Prince George, and Charles City Counties, Henrico, Surrey, Isle of Wight, Nansemond, Princess Anne, and Norfolk, Westmoreland, LANCASTER, Northumberland, Accomack, and Northampton.

The main Rivers here, are, 1. James River, in the South, by the Indians call'd Pombatan, on which the English first settled, runs from the West to the East, and is Navigable 140 Miles above the Mouth. 2. Northward of the last is York River, coming from the North West, and running South East, passing so near James River in some Places, that they are not above 5 Miles distant; good Ships may sail up it 60 Miles, and smaller Vessels 30 Miles higher. The Indians call it Pamunky, a Name still given by the English to a Branch of it higher in the Country. 3. Rappahannock River, which runs the same Course with the two former, but somewhat longer, being also Navigable above 100 Miles. 4. The Potomack far exceeds them all, both in length of Course, and breadth, being some Miles over in several Places, Navigable higher than any of the others, and very full of Windings. Rivers of less Note there are many, as Elizabeth River, Nansemond, Chickahomony, Pocosen, North River, Eastmost River, Corotoman, Wiccocomoco, Pocomoke, Chiffenisske, Pungetogue, &c. Of the Apalachean Mountains little can be said, but those who have ventur'd so far as to see them, tell us they are of a vast height, and most difficult Ascent, but very few have taken the Pains to Travel over, and therefore little is known. Some, it is true, have conceiv'd there are mighty Mines in them, which hitherto has appear'd a meer Notion, for had they been worth the looking after they had not lain so long neglected.

The Climate is much commended, in order to draw People over, yet there is nothing more certain than that it is excessive hot, which, with the uncertainty of the Weather, makes the Country very unhealthy; for the Heat being so violent, all Men naturally seek to be as fresh as they may, and on a sudden there rise such sharp, piercing Winds as strike them through, and are the cause of many Distempers; not to speak of the danger of drinking too hot, or too cooling Liquors. Besides, there is a continual Plague of all sorts of Insects, as Gnats, Punaises, and other Vermin; and for the larger sort, the Rattle-Snake, whose bite is Mortal without immediate Cure. The Winter is no less troublesome than the Summer, consisting either of most violent Cold, or Floods of Rain.

The Soil is generally good, the best Plains near the Mouths of Rivers, producing Rice, Hemp, and Indian Wheat; the upper Country yields all sorts of European Trees, besides some others of the American Kind. They tell us of Iron, Lead, nay of Silver Mines, but these may very well be look'd upon as Notions till they produce the Metals. Nor is any more account to be made of their Vines, which tho' attempted by several, could never be brought to Perfection. Their best Trees are the Oak, Cedar, Cypress, Fir, Walnut, and Ash; besides the Sassafras, and Fruit Trees.

But of all the Growth, nothing comes near the Tabacco for Profit, and being so well known in England needs no Description. The manner of sowing it is in Beds, where it continues a Month constantly Weeded, and is then transplanted, after which there must be continual care to prune, top, and take off the bottom Leaves, as also to clear them of Worms. When ripe, which appears by the Leaves turning brownish, the Plants are cut, and after sweating in Heaps, every Plant is hung up in the Tabacco-House for a Month or five Weeks, then taken down again in moist Weather and sweated, then stripp'd and sort'd. The top Leaves being the best, and the lowest the worst, and lastly it is put up in Hogsheads.

Beasts in Virginia are as various as the Product of the Earth, for there is plenty of European Cattel, since first carry'd over by the English, and great numbers of Horses; the wild Beasts are Deer, Elks, Bears, Wolves, Foxes, Otters, and Beavers, as also Lions, and Leopards. The strange ones, unknown to us, are the flying Squirrel, so call'd, because it has a fleshy substance like Wings, which it extends, and by the help of it skips from Tree to Tree, tho' they be 20 or 30 Yards distant. The Opussum has a Head like a Hog, and the Tail like a Rat, being about the bigness of a Cat. The Female has a Bag under its Belly, in which it carries its Young, and thither they fly in case of Danger. The Mussasus is a sort of Water-Rat, so call'd because it smells of Musk. Besides these there are Buffaloes, wild Boars, infinite numbers of common Rats and Mice, some Polecats and Weezels, and abundance of Hares and Rabbits.

Fowl are no less plentiful and various, and not to trouble the Reader, they have all that England affords, besides other sorts over and above, among which the Humming Bird is remarkable for Size and Beauty, being scarce half so big as a Wren, and cloath'd in most lovely Scarlet, Green and Gold. Then for eating, there are wild Turkeys much bigger than ours, which we may suppose are large Bustards. It would be endless to enumerate their Fishes, and without following their Romantick Fables, no Place in the World affords more Variety, or greater Plenty.

Money is here so scarce, that rich Men can scarce get enough to pay their Travelling Charges;

ges; but all sorts of Coins pass, and it is a happiness to get any. The known Varieties are Spanish Dobloons, Pistoles, and Pieces of Eight at the common rates; Arabian Gold, Chequens at 10 s. French Crowns at 5 s. Dutch Dollars at 4 s. and all English Coin as in England. The whole Trade of Virginia is Tobacco.

The mighty numerous Nations of Indians which inhabited this large Country, are now reduc'd to about 500 Men, whereas when the English first Planted, one of the many Indian Kings was able to bring 20000 Men into the Field, and yet we exclaim that others have unpeopled Countries, without observing that they have infinitely greater Numbers of Indian Subjects in much smaller Provinces. This little Handful which remains, still follows the Religion of their Forefathers, which shews what Care has been taken of their Conversion. These People always had, and still retain the Notion of a Sovereign Deity, yet as our Deists do, believing that he does not concern himself with Worldly Affairs, but leaves us entirely to our own Disposal, and therefore expects no Worship from us, nor heeds it if paid. But they believe there is a wicked Spirit who always watches to do harm to Man, and therefore they use all possible means to please and appease him. They honour their Priests, who are great Conjurers, and reputed to perform extraordinary things among them by that Art. These Priests speak of a Heaven and Hell after their Way, are bloody in their Sacrifices, and sometimes offer up Children to the Devil. They have a Custom of shutting up their Youth, as it were in a Cage, and intoxicating them with poisonous Roots, till they are in a manner distracted, when they take them out and cure them, and they say they forget all their past Lives, and then are reckon'd Gentlemen. Matrimony they observe Religiously, and reckon Adultery an unpardonable Crime.

Their Cloaths consist in a Mantle, and under it a Cloth round their Waste, both of them ty'd with a Girdle. Their Food is all sorts of Fish, Fowl, and Cattle boil'd and roasted; they also eat Snakes, and Indian Corn steep'd, bruise'd in a Mortar, and then boil'd. They express their Friendship to Strangers by smoaking round in a Pipe, which if refus'd, it is a Declaration of War. All their Wealth consists in Furs, and Shells. Their Government is Monarchical, and they are zealous in preserving the Succession in the right Line.

The present Inhabitants being under an English Government, much need not be said of them, only as to their Number they are thought to be 20000 Souls, a great Number, if true, yet little enough for so much Land; but these must not be thought to be all English, for there are many Thousand Blacks, besides a considerable number of French gone over of late Years. The most usual Distempers are Colds, proceeding from the uncertainty of the Weather, as also Gripes and Fluxes, flowing much from the same Cause, or overmuch eating of Fruit; the seasoning being a sort of Fever New-comers are subject to; and the Yaws, which some represent as a high Scurvy, but others rather look upon as a Species of the Pox. The Government is by a Governour, Council, and general Assembly; this last is of the Nature of a Parliament.

Carolina.

The next and last English Province to the Southward, on the Continent, is reckon'd to lie between 31 and 36 Degrees of North Latitude, and may be about 250 Miles in Length, the Breadth at utmost scarce an Hundred, not to speak of the extravagant Notion of extending it to the South Sea, athwart all Florida, and the Spanish New Mexico before spoken of in Virginia. On the North it Borders on Virginia, on the East of it is the Ocean; on the South it joins to the Spanish Florida, and on the West to that part of the same Country, which is yet unconquer'd, and little known.

The whole Country is divided into North and South Carolina, and those two into six Counties, two in the North, viz. Albemarle and Clarendon; and four in the South, which are Craven, Berkley, Colliton, and Carteret. Albemarle County is the most Northerly, joining to Virginia, water'd by Albemarle River, which is made up of two, the Noratoke and Notoway. Next to it is the Pantagoe, and then the Nerfe, but there is no Town in this County that deserves the Name. The next is Clarendon County, whose first River is call'd Clarendon, or Cape Fear River, the first Name from a Proprietor, the latter from the Promontory so call'd, at the Mouth of it, and this descends from two Branches. Then follows Watercore River, capable of large Ships. Between these two is the little River Wingon, on which is a Settlement call'd Charles Town. Sante River parts North and South Carolina, and the first County in the latter is that of Craven, tolerably inhabited by English and French, the latter whereof have a Settlement on Sante River, as have the English on the next, call'd Sewec. Berkley County is next, the South Part whereof is only inhabited along the two Rivers, Cooper and Ashley. Between them is the Capital of the Country Charles Town, in about 31 Degrees and 40 Minutes Latitude, and 2 Leagues from the Sea. It is fortify'd with six Bastions, and Lines quite round, and hither all the Trade of the County is brought, yet no Ship of above 200 Tun can come into the Harbour. There are 14 or 15 good Houses, and as many others as make up some Streets. Here is also a Church and a publick Library, besides the Church a Presbyterian Meeting-House, another of Anabaptists, and a third of Quakers, as also a French Church, and the whole Number of the Inhabitants is about 250 Families. The Governour resides here, as do the Courts of Judicature. On the Southern Edge of this County is another Town call'd Dorchester, containing about 350 Souls, on the River Stono, and in it an Independent Meeting-House. Colliton County follows to the Southward, the two chief Rivers whereof are North Edistow, and South Edistow, along whose Banks there are several Plantations, and some Indian Towns about the Country. Above the meeting of the two Edistows is a Town of about 80 Houses, by some call'd Wilton, by others New-London. Carteret is the last County, not yet inhabited, tho' reckon'd the best Part of all the Province.

The Air here is Healthy, being always serene, pleasant and temperate, never subject to excessive Heat or Cold, nor to sudden Changes. The Winter is regular and short, and the Summer always cool'd with fresh Breezes. The Soil is naturally fertile, and easie to manure, and the continual Temperature makes the Trees and Fields green all the Year. The Beasts, Birds, and Fish, are much the same as in Virginia, and so for Timber and Fruit-Trees, Plants, and other common Product. Europe produces nothing but what will grow here, either as to Grain or Fruit. Sarsaparilla, Cassia, or other sorts of Trees grow in the Woods, yielding Gums and Rozin, as also some Oil excellent for curing of Wounds.

Winter

Its principal Commodities are Beef, Pork, Corn, Pease, Butter, Tallow, Hides, Pipe-staves, Hoops, Cotton, Silk, Rice, Skins, Pitch and Tar. The Provisions generally transported to the Islands, the latter sort to England. They also talk much of Vineyards, but no Wine of theirs having as yet appear'd abroad, no more need be said of it.

The Natives are generally well made, handsome, of good natural Parts, and much addicted to Hunting; their Skins tawny with Oiling and being much expos'd to the Sun. Their Religion and Customs differ little from the Virginians, and therefore need not be repeated, and they are like them given to drinking, but whether they learn'd it of the English, as some pretend, or had it of their own, is not worth disputing, tho it be known, that in most Parts of America that Vice was common before any Europeans came among them. The History of the British Empire says, the converting of them to Christianity is put off, for fear they should return to the Obedience of the Spaniards; a very unaccountable Argument to obstruct the Conversion of Infidels. Having thus run through all the British Dominions on the Continent, it remains to acquaint the Reader, that what is here said of them has been collected from the best Authors, who have treated of them, for to pass by Foreigners, we have extracted the substance of all the publick Accounts of Discoveries and Plantations in Virginia, New-England, and the rest down to Carolina, still keeping closest to the newest, the Particulars whereof may be seen in the Catalogue, omitting to quote them upon every occasion for Brevity sake, they often interfering too much one with another; besides that we have several Additions and Amendments receiv'd from Persons of Reputation, who have liv'd in those Parts. The next thing requisite, is, to shew with our usual Brevity the first Discoveries and Settlements made in each of them.

Historical Account.

It is needless to argue whether the English, French, or Spaniards were the first Discoverers of this Tract of Land, each Nation having enough to alledge in its own behalf, but all the World knows that the Spaniards first discovering America, gave encouragement for others to follow their Example, and the English being possess'd of these Lands, 'tis no matter who saw them first. To come to the Point, the first that brought any good Account of these Countries into England were Captain Philip Amidas, and Captain Arthur Barlow, fitted out in two small Ships by the Procurement of Sir Walter Raleigh in the Year 1583. The first Land they came to was Roanoke, and Landed in a Country call'd Wingandacoa, between Virginia and Carolina, where they traded for Furs, Sassafras, Cedar, and some Pearl, with which they return'd home, and giving a good Account of the Country, Queen Elizabeth gave it the Name of Virginia, which Name was extended to the whole Continent, now possess'd by England, till particular Grants of several Parts made a change of the Names of those Parts. Their Success encouraged the Adventurers to fit out seven Ships under Sir Richard Greenville, who arriving at Roanoke Island in 36 Degrees of North Latitude, in the Year 1585, after Trading with the Natives, left 108 Men on the said Island under Captain Lane, and return'd to England. These Men not being supply'd from England, as was promis'd, were reduc'd to the utmost Want, and Sir Francis Drake happening to come that way, he brought away as many of them as were left alive. Sir Richard Greenville return'd to Roanoke after the Men were gone, and again left 50 more there, with Promises to return to their Relief; but they were all destroy'd before it came, which was in 1587, under Captain White, who a third time settled there, and after a while leaving 115 Men in the Place, set sail for England to fetch Supplies, which he brought in 1589, but the Men he left being remov'd, and a sudden Storm dispersing his Ships, they all made the best of their way home, and none was sent for 16 Years to look after those Men, so that what became of them was never known.

The next that went out was Captain Gosnold in 1602, who fell in about Massachusetts Bay, in 42 Degrees Latitude, and thence sail'd to Cape Cod, on the Coast of New-England, where he Traded and return'd home. After him several Ships set out, and traded along that Coast very peaceably, till the English wronging the ignorant Natives, gave occasion to the many Slaughters that ensued. In 1606, a Charter of Incorporation and Donation of these Countries being granted by King James to the Adventurers therein nam'd, they sent Captain Nemport with 2 Ships, who erected a Fort at the Mouth of Powhatan River, left 100 Men there with all Necessaries for their Support, which was the first Colony that took effect; Captain Smith was also sent by the same Company, whom some will have to be the Settler of the first Colony, but that we leave to others to argue, and proceed to what is known, which is, that Smith having the management of Affairs, built a Fort on the South Cape at the Mouth of Chesapeake Bay, call'd Powhatan James River, in honour of the King, the Northern Cape Charles, and the Southern Cape Henry, from the King's two Sons. Next they pitch'd upon a Place 50 Miles up the River, where they built that they call'd James-Town. Here they gather'd a vast quantity of yellow Sand, with which they loaded a Ship, and sent it home, imagining it had been all Gold, but found it to be meer Dirt. Constant Supplies coming from England, the new Colony at James-Town was enabled to send out two others of 120 Men each, and continued still 500 strong, who not long after were through Want, and their Wars with the Natives, reduc'd to 60, when some other Ships arriving, they resolv'd to quit the Plantation, and were all accordingly got on Board when the Lord Delaware came with three other Ships as Governour, and prevail'd vail'd with them to return to James-Town, where they settled again. Sir Thomas Dale being Governour in 1611, stretch'd out and made a Settlement, which is from him call'd Dale's Gift. Thus they continued to increase till the Year 1622, when a Captain belonging to the Indian Monarch Oppeccanough being murder'd or kill'd by the English, the said Prince in revenge form'd a Conspiracy with all the neighbouring Natives, and on a sudden cut off 334 Men, Women, and Children of the English, who had far'd much worse but that an Indian discover'd the Design to them a few Hours before it was put in Execution. This put an end to all Improvements at that time, and so enrag'd the English, that they never gave over till they had utterly destroy'd all the Natives, so that there are now scarce 500 Men left of those Multitudes they found there. From that time the Power of the Planters increasing, and the Natives diminishing, all things have gone on more successfully, till the Province is brought into the Condition that has been shewn in its Place.

New-England, which was call'd South Virginia, after Captain Gosford above-mention'd, had Traded on the Coast, and several Settlements endeavour'd in vain, was for some Years resorted to by Ships from England with good Success, for Furs and other Commodities, and had the Name of New-England given to it in the Year 1614, by the Colony of North Virginia, who for some Years carried on a profitable Trade, tho' without thoughts of settling till the Year 1620, when some Independents first propos'd it, and Landing over against Rhode Island, built the Town of New Plymouth in about 43 Degrees of North Latitude, where the first Governour who had been one of the Promoters of the Colony, was Mr. John Carver. Soon after, one Mr. Weston dissenting from the rest of the Brethren, drew such as were of his Opinion after him, and settled at Weymouth on Massachusetts Bay. A War ensued with the Natives, upon the new Planters at Weymouth using them ill, who destroy'd the greater Number, and drove the rest out of the Country. Several other Colonies were from that time sent to divers Parts, which 'tis needless to repeat, having nam'd them all in the Description. In the Year 1630, a new War broke out with the Indians, call'd Pequots, Narragansets, and others about Massachusetts Bay, who were most of them destroy'd, others oblig'd to fly farther up into the Country, and those few that remain'd, to submit. Having thus oppress'd their Enemy abroad, they fell at Variance among themselves on pretence of Religion, the then prevailing Humour, but still the Colonies here increas'd, abundance of the Republican Gang flocking over, till the Rebellion breaking out in England they got all the Power in their own Hands, and then the Affairs of the Brethren throve amain. In the Year 1672, a new War broke out with the Indians, which began in Flynnish County, and thence by degrees spread over all New-England, sometimes one Party, and sometimes the other prevailing, and both sustaining great Losses, but the Actions were not considerable enough to deserve any particular Mention. This War lasted from 1672 till 1676, when great numbers of the Natives having been cut off, and many more sold for Slaves, the small remainder submitted, and Peace ensued. In 1688, the Indian War commenc'd again, which was no more successful to them than the former, yet they held it on till the Peace of Europe was concluded at Reswick. During this time Sir William Phips, Governour of New-England, undertook an Expedition against the French in Canada, where he lost abundance of his Men, and came off with Disgrace, as may be seen in La Hontan, who was then present.

New-York was first call'd New-Netherlands, the Dutch having possess'd themselves of it, and settled there, building the City of New-Amsterdam, now New-York, and several Forts up the Country, but the first Dutch War breaking out after the Restoration, and King Charles the 2d. having bellow'd that Country on his Brother the Duke of York, Sir Robert Car was sent thither with 3000 Men in the Year 1664, who easily possess'd himself of the City of New-Amsterdam, and from his Royal Highness gave it and the Country the Name of New-York. Many of the Dutch Inhabitants remain'd there under the English Government, as do their Children to this Day, the rest of the Country was distributed to English Planters, among whom nothing remarkable has happen'd since that time.

New-Jersey was first possess'd by the Swedes, of all Europeans, who built here three Towns, call'd Christina, Elfsburg, and Gottemburg, and extended their Plantations along the River, but made not any great Advantage of them, which the Dutch perceiving, who let slip no Opportunity that may turn to their Benefit; they encroach'd so far upon them as to take Possession of all the Northern Part of the Country, which went by the Name of Berghen. King Charles the 2d. insert'd this Country in the Grant above-mention'd to his Brother of New-York. His Royal Highness transferr'd his Grant to John Lord Berkley, and Sir George Carteret the same Year 1664, who divided the Country into two Parts, which are those now call'd East-Jersey, and West-Jersey. The Lord Berkley, and Sir George Carteret's Executors afterwards assign'd over their Shares to others, who procur'd a Confirmation of their Patent from the Duke of York in 1682. Most of the first Inhabitants that went over from England were Quakers and Anabaptists, and to this Day there are but two Church of England Ministers in all that Country, where there have not been any Actions that merit the Reader's particular Observation.

Pennsylvania may well be reckon'd still a Part of the New-Netherlands, as lying in a manner behind New-Jersey, and having nothing on the Sea but a Slip along Delaware Bay, and the rest all inland upon the Rivers Delaware and Susquehannough. Some few English had before straggled thither by the way of New-Jersey, but it became not an absolute Province of it self, till the Year 1681, when William Pen, Esq; obtain'd a Grant of it from King Charles the 2d, and from his own Name call'd it Pennsylvania. The Swedes and Dutch inhabiting there, had before submitted, and were under an English Governour, being about 3000 Souls, but the English very few. In 1681 Pen went over, and carried with him, or was immediately follow'd by 2000 Souls, most of them Quakers, he being the Head of those People. As soon as these People were a little settled, they built good Houses, and the City of Philadelphia, which tho' so young, is one of the best best in the British Plantations, and indeed the whole Province has throve for the time more than any other, and is likely so to do, having never had any War with the Natives, nor any Disturbance among the Planters.

Maryland was always reckon'd a Part of Virginia till the Year 1631, when King Charles the First made a Grant of it to George Calvert, Lord Baltimore, and gave it the Name of Maryland in honour of his Queen Henrietta Maria, so that the first discovery of it may be seen under that Province. In the Year 1633, Leonard Calvert, Esq; Brother to the Lord Baltimore, Jeremy Hawley, and Thomas Cornwallis, Esq; carry'd over the first Colony of about 200 Persons, several of them being Gentlemen of good Families, and Roman Catholicks, who hop'd they might there enjoy Liberty of Conscience, which was refus'd them in England. Coming to Patomneck River, the Governour call'd the South Point of it S. Gregory's, and the North S. Michael's. Fourteen Leagues hence Mr. Calvert setup a Cross, and took Possession of the Country. After sailing several Leagues up that great River he return'd to that he call'd S. George's, which is within 4 Leagues of the Mouth of Patomneck, where he presented the Natives with Cloth, Axes, Hoes, and Knives, which they accepted so kindly, that in return they resign'd him their Town, then call'd Yoamaco, and by him S. Marice, and both sides promising to live friendly, and make Satisfaction to one another if any Injury were offer'd on either side, the Governour took Possession, and the Natives remov'd. Being thus settled, they fell to building of Houses and a Fort, which they soon finished, notwithstanding some of the Virginian Planters endeavour'd to render them odious to the Natives. From that time fresh Recruits of People flocking over, the whole Country was Planted as it is at present, by degrees, without any War or Controversy with the Natives.

Carolina being the Northern Part of Florida, it is needless to contend about the first Discoverers of it, when all who have read any thing of those Parts, must be satisfied it was first found by John Fonce de Leon, a Spaniard, in the Year 1512, who took Possession, as the Form then was, and gave it the Name of Florida, both on account of its flourishing condition, and because he came upon it about Easter, which the Spaniards call Pascua Florida. After this other Spaniards made some unfortunate Attempts to settle there, which discourag'd others from proceeding for some time. Next the French settled there twice in Carolina, but were starv'd out the first time, and the next expell'd by the Spaniards, from which time that Country was never attempted by any European Nation, till in the Year 1663, King Charles the 2d gave a Grant of it to Edward, Earl of Clarendon, George, Duke of Albemarle, William Lord Craven, John Lord Berkley, Anthony Lord Ashley, Sir George Carteret, Sir William Berkley, and Sir John Colliton, and call'd it Carolina. The first thing these Proprietors did, was for the encouraging all sorts of Persons to go over to their Province, to grant entire Liberty of Conscience to all Religions, not only Christians, but even Jews, Heathens, and others, only excepting that no Person should have any Protection of the Law who was not a Member of some Church or Profession. In the Year 1670, the first Planters went over and brought the first Plantations to Perfection about Albemarle, and Port-Royal Rivers; but more People flock'd to Ashley and Cooper Rivers, which is accordingly best inhabited, on account of the conveniency of Pasture and Tillage. From that time constant Supplies have been sent, till the Province is brought into the Condition already mention'd in the Description. The Reception of these new Planters was peaceable, and the Indians continued so till provok'd by the Cruelties of those People, they commenc'd a War in the Year 1680, which had like to have prov'd the Ruin of the Colony, however it had the good Fortune to prevail, and ever since has gather'd Strength. But they have been continually at variance among themselves, and no Endeavours that have been us'd can ever set them right. In the Year 1702, this Province undertook to make War on their Neighbours the Spaniards, and accordingly drew together 600 English, and as many Indians, commanded by Colonel Moor, then Governour. He did some Harm in the open Country, and laid Siege to S. Augustine's Fort for near three Months, at the end whereof seeing two Spanish Ships making towards the Fort, he broke up in a Consternation, and march'd back to Charles-Town in Carolina 300 Miles by Land, leaving his Ships and a great quantity of Stores, Ammunition, and Provision to the Enemy. Since that time the Province has continued full of Broils and Confusions, which must needs much obstruct its Advancement, and yet it has throve as much as any other for the time, as being the most Southern, and consequently the best Land of any.

CHAP. V.

OF FLORIDA.

[Consult the Map of Mexico.]

HAvING run through the French and English Dominions, we come next in Course to the Spanish, far exceeding them both in Extent and Value, as containing not only the greatest Part of America, but the best and wealthiest, as we shall perceive by the Description of them. We begin in Course with Florida, as next to the English Plantations last spoken of. This great Piece of Continent, including Carolina already mention'd with the English Provinces, as being one of them, and yet a Member of this great Division, is separated on the North from New-France and Virginia, by the Apalachian Mountains, on the West it Borders on the Kingdom of New-Mexico,

Mexico, and Part of the Old, being the Province of New-Biscaya; on the South it has that of Panuco and the Gulph of Mexico, and on the East the Channel of Bahama and the Ocean. The Bahama Islands which lie off the East Coast at about 20 Leagues form a Bay which our Seamen call the Gulph of Florida. It is known to extend upon the Coast, from 25 to 35 Degrees of North Latitude; but what Height to allot it up the Inland is uncertain, that Discovery not being yet perfected, so as to determine where to set the Limits of this Country and those of Louisiana. The Maps it is true do lay them down, but that is at Pleasure, as is practis'd by some Geographers in other Parts they know nothing of, which is imposing on those who seek for Information. The Length of it from East to West is about 500 Leagues.

It is no less uncertain to pretend to divide this Country into Provinces, for tho' it be known to contain several Nations, yet they being unconquer'd, we cannot assign them any true Bounds; for which reason we shall content our selves with first speaking of it in General, then describing the Coasts, and lastly, delivering such Accounts of the Inland, as we shall find among those who travell'd any Part of it.

We may well observe out of Herrera, that the Spaniards, at first under the Name of Florida comprehended all that mighty Tract of Land which lies from the Cape of Florida, opposite to Cuba in 26 Degrees to 48 Degrees of North Latitude; after which they again restrain'd it to only that Part, which lies between the said Cape and the Apalachian Mountains above mention'd, but that extent above assign'd is what all Geographers at present allow it.

By the Situation already mention'd, it appears to lie all within the Temperate Zone, yet being so near the Tropick rather subject to Heat than Cold, which with the many Rivers that water the Ground, makes it inferiour to no other Country whatsoever for Pleasantness and Fertility. Much of the Coast is indeed Sandy, but at a small distance from the Sea the Soil is excellent good, as appears by its natural Product; for with the least Trouble in the World it yields all Sorts of Grain and Herbs, and Grapes. Then for Trees, not to speak of Pines, Cedars, Cypress, Lawrel and the like, there is all variety of Fruit growing without the least Improvement from Art, and tho' Wild, most delicious to the Taste. The Meadows abound in Grass, and the Woods swarm with Deer, Goats, Lions, Leopards, Wolves, Hares, Rabbits, and several other Creatures. As for Birds, there are infinite numbers of Turkeys, Partridges, Parrots, Pigeons, Turtles, Black-Birds, Herons, Storks, Cranes, Geese, Ducks, all Birds of Prey, and many others peculiar to America, the most beautiful in the World for delicate colour'd Feathers.

The Natives are generally of a large Stature, well shap'd and of an Olive Colour. They cover their Nakedness with Deer-Skins neatly fitted, the rest of their Bodies remaining naked; and therefore their Legs and Arms are adorn'd with many Figures, so printed that they will not wear out; their Hair black and long. For their Temper they are subtle, apt to dissemble, but bold and courageous, fighting with Bows and Arrows; which last they point with Fish-Bones, or sharp Stones. The Women are in all Respects like the Men, and their Olive colour not natural, but caus'd by anointing with a Sort of Oil, which hardens their Skins against the Heat of the Sun. All their Corn is laid up in Common and distributed out to every Family, according to its Number, the whole Stock being so contriv'd as to serve but half the Year; tho' the Fruitfulness of the Soil would yield much more than they have occasion for; but they sow no more, and live the rest of the Year upon Roots, dry'd Fruit, Fish and Flesh, much of which they dry to keep, and are very fond of the Crocodils Flesh which is delicious and smells of Musk. The common Drink is Water, but they are never without a good Quantity of a Liquor they call Cassia, made of the Fruit of a Tree, and much valu'd, not only by them, but by the Spaniards, for provoking of Urine.

To come to the Sea Coast, we must pass over that of Carolina, before spoken of among the English Dominions, and begin at the River of May where that ends. Thence it runs South-west to Cape S. Francis, about 20 Leagues, in the midst of which Space is the River of Dolphins. At the Cape it turns away West, forming another Bay, 25 Leagues farther to the Town and Fort of S. Mateo, a small Place possess'd by the Spaniards, who about 15 Leagues to the Southward have another Town and Fort call'd S. Augustin, which two secure them the Possession of all this Coast, running down South as far as Cabeza de la Martyres, or Cape Martyrs, in 25 Degrees and a half, above 80 Leagues, where the only Places of Note are Barra de Mosquitos, and Cape Cannaveral, the first an Inlet of the Sea to the Land, the other a Head Land, without any Towns. From Cape Martyrs the Land stretches West about 20 Leagues, then North-west 120, in which Space are the small Bays of Callos, Tampa, and some other small ones. At the Height last mention'd, the Land winds again to South-west 45 Leagues, forming another large Bay; thence West to the Bay and River of the Holy Ghost, 80 Leagues more, and then inclines again to South-west, above 100 Leagues to the River of Palms, which parts it from the Province of Panuco. This is the Account we have of this Coast from all the Spanish and French Discoverers, who have been most upon it, whom we shall Name in the Relation of their Discoveries; but it is fit here to observe from F. Hennepin, that he places the Mouth of his great River Meschassipi or Messissippi in the last mention'd Part of the Coast of Florida, between the Bay of the Holy Ghost and the River of S. Magdalen, whence he with Reason infers, that it must be the same, which in our Maps is call'd Rio Escondido, or the hidden River, which seems probable, if his Position be true; but that all Geographers hitherto have made the Rio Escondido very small, in Comparison of that he describes, and therefore this Point will remain undecided till some better Information.

It remains to proceed to what can be found more particular among the Discoverers. The first of these was John Ponce de Leon, who after settling in the Island of S. John de Puerto Rico, being ambitious of finding some new Land, sailed from that Island in the Year 1512, with three Ships well provided for such an Undertaking, and directing his Course to the North-west, after passing by the Lucayo Islands, on the 3d of April, saw Land in 30 Degrees and 8 Minutes of North Latitude, and supposing it to be an Island, gave it it the Name of Florida. that is Flowry, or Flourishing, both in Regard of its beautiful Prospect, as also because he discover'd it on Easter-Day, which the Spaniards call Pasqua Florida. Running on still farther they came to an Anchor in such a strong Current, that their Anchors would scarce hold them; yet there they Landed and erecting a great Cross, call'd the Place from it Rio de la Cruz, or the River of the Cross. On the 8th of May they pass'd Cape Florida, which they call'd Cabo de Corrientes, or Cape Currents, by Reason of the strong setting of the Water, and came to an Anchor under it, near the Indian Village of Abaioa. Off it lie those small Islands, or Rocks, which because at a Distance they look like Men impal'd, he call'd, the Martyrs. Having thus run along this Coast North and North-east, he return'd the same way he came, after some Skirmishes with the Natives, to the Island of S. John de Puerto Rico, whence he had set out, believing the Land he had discover'd to be an Island.

Lucas Vasquez de Aillon sail'd next from Hispaniola, with a Design to take some Indians out of the Islands, to work in the Gold Mines, and whether by Chance, or designedly fell in upon the Coast of Florida, in 32 Degrees of North Latitude, at the Place then call'd Chicora, and since S. Helena, being a River in Carolina. The Inhabitants were amaz'd to see the Ships under Sail, and fled at the Landing of the Spaniards, but two of them being taken, were well treated and sent ashore cloath'd, which invited many of them to come down and show the Spaniards all they desir'd; but they having inveigled many Aboard, set Sail to carry them to the Mines. One of the Ships was cast away in its return, with most of the poor Indians carry'd away, and the others dy'd. Yet Vasquez return'd thither again, in Hope of much Treasure of Gold and Silver, where entering the River of S. Helena, one of his Ships peris'd and 200 of his Men were kill'd ashore, which made him return home empty and despairing of any good Success there.

In the Year 1526, Pamphilo Narvaez, nothing daunted at the Disaster of Lucas Vasquez, and having obtain'd a Grant of the Emperor Charles the 5th, to be Governour of the Lands he could discover from the River of Palms, that divides this Country from New Spain to the farthest Parts of Florida, set Sail from the Port of Xagua, on the South Coast of Cuba, with 4 Ships and a Bark, in which he had 400 Men and 80 Horses. Of these last, the one half dy'd before he came to Land at Cabo de la Cruz. There hearing News of Gold at Apalache, he march'd that Way with 300 Men and 40 Horse by Land, ordering the Ships to Coast along. Alvar Nunez Cabeza de Vaca, the Treasurer, was against this Enterprize, but Narvaez being resolv'd, they travell'd 15 Days without finding any Inhabitants, or other Provisions, but Palmitos, tho' they took with them but two Pounds of Bisket and half a Pound of Bacon a Man. At the End they pass'd a River, on the other side whereof the Indians reliev'd and entertain'd them some Days, and then travell'd 15 Days more, without finding any Inhabitants; and lastly, came to Apalache, which Place they enter'd by Force, and found in it Store of Indian Wheat, Skins of Wild Beasts and Cotton Cloth. Here they continu'd 25 Days, and were several Times assaulted by the Natives, who still retir'd to the Woods and Marshes. Hence, by the Advice of a Cacique they had taken, they return'd to Aute, in about 32 Degrees of North Latitude; and after losing several Men, to the Sea, where having no News of their Ships, they contriv'd to build 5 Boats, making Sails of their Shirts, Vessels for Water of their Horses Hides, and Ropes of their Manes and Tails. In these they rang'd up and down several Days, till they were separated, and that which Alvar Nunez was in peris'd on an Island, where the Men stay'd as long as there was any thing to Eat. After which 15, who only remain'd, got over into Florida, ten of them dy'd traversing that vast piece of Continent, and only Alvar Nunez, and four more, arriv'd at last in New Spain, who gave this Account, for the other four Boats were never more heard of.

These Disasters made all Attempts upon Florida be laid aside for some Time, till in the Year 1538, Ferdinand de Soto obtain'd of the Emperour Charles the 5th another Grant for Discovering and Conquering of Florida, together with the Government of Cuba. To this purpose, he sail'd from Havana in Cuba, with 350 Horse, and 900 Foot, besides a considerable Number of Seamen, on the 12th of May 1539, and about the End of the same Month arriv'd in the Bay of Espiritu Santo, or the Holy Ghost, on the Southern Coast of Florida, lying upon the Gulph of Mexico. There he land-ed his Men, and had one John Ortiz sent him by the Cacique Moscoso, who had kept him, ever since the Misfortune of Narvaez, above-mention'd. Upon his Information, that the Country higher up was pleasant and fruitful, he sent away all his Ships, but four, to deprive his Men of all Hopes of returning. He left one Calderon with 40 Horse on the Coast, near the Ships, with Orders to give no Offence to the Natives, and then advanc'd North-North-east, through a Country full of Wild Vines, Mulberry, Cherry and other Sorts of Trees, and pass'd into a Province call'd Acuera, losing several Men in the Way, kill'd by the Natives, who took all Advantages against him. Thence he took due North and travelling 20 Leagues came to the Village of Ocali, of about 600 Cottages full of Grain and Nuts; Sixteen Leagues farther they came to the Province of Vitatucho, which extends 50 Leagues, and being past it arriv'd at Offachile, and thence to Apalache, the intended End of their Journey, where they stay'd some Days, sending one Party Northward and another Southward. The first of which found a pleasant fruitful Country and peaceable People; but the latter a barren Soil and little cultivated. It being now the Month of October, Ferdinand de Soto winter'd at Apalache, sending Advice of what he had done to Cuba. When the Season was proper, he advanc'd 5 Days march to the Northward to the Province Atalpaha, where he appeas'd the Salvages, and was then kindly receiv'd; and proceeding 10 Days Way farther through a fertile Land, arriv'd at the Territory of Achalaquin, which was barren, and ill peopled. Thence they came to the Province of Cofuchi and that of Cofachiqui, where they gather'd a mighty Quantity of Pearls, and thence to that of Xuala. Here by Computation it was reckon'd they had travell'd 410 Leagues from the Place where they Landed. Having rested 15 Days at Xuala, they turn'd off to Gnazala, then to Ychiaha, next to the Province of Coza, to Talissa, Tascaluza, Manila, Gicora, Chicacolla, Alibamo, Chisca, Capaha, Ciquin, Quignata, Quiguala, Colima, Tala, Vitangua, Nahuater, Guacharo, and Quigualonzi, all which Places, are here only nam'd, because the Relation of Soto's Expedition gives no manner of Light for finding their Position. In the last of these Places, the Governour Ferdinand de Soto dy'd, when he had lost the one half of his Men on the Expedition, and left the Command of the Rest to Lewis de Moscoso de Alvarado. The Spaniards now much discourag'd with the Addition of the Governour's Death to all their other Losses, resolv'd to quit Florida; and in November came to that they call Rio Grande, or the Great River, on which they built 5 Boats, and Imbarking on them and some Canoes, ran down the River, being soon pursu'd by at least 5000 Canoes full of Indians, who pour'd in Clouds of Arrows upon them, and never ceas'd the Pursuit for ten Days, after which they forbore, and the Spaniards came the 19th Day after they embark'd into the Sea, reckoning that they had run down the River 800 Leagues, which some look upon as Fabulous, and yet make no Scruple to allow Hennepin the same Length upon his River Meschasipi, and yet we know not, whether this may not be the same, or supposing it to be another, with the Windings it may well be equal to it. Being come to the Sea, they directed their Course Westward, and at last enter'd the River of Panuco, whence they made their Way with Safety to the City of Mexico, about the End of the Year 1543.

The Spaniards deterr'd by these Misfortunes, forbore farther Attempts upon Florida, which the French next took up, and John Ribault in the Year 1562, with two Ships visit'd that Coast of Florida, which now we call Carolina, Anchoring 3 Leagues up Port Royal, and running up 12 Leagues farther in his Boats. Here, having made Peace with the Natives, he built a small Fort, in which he left 26 Men, under the Command of one Albert, and return'd to France. These Men were some Time maintain'd by the Natives, but their Provisions at length failing, and no Prospect appearing of any Relief from France, they built a Bark and shipp'd themselves in it, with what little Provision they had, and venturing to return Home, were reduc'd to such Extremity as to kill one of their Company to eat him; and being taken up in this Distress by an English Ship, some of them were Land'd on the Coast of France, and the rest carried into England.

Rene Laudoniere, was the next French Adventurer in the Year 1564, and arriv'd in June at May River; where the King of the Country, whom they call'd Paracoussi, met and show'd him the Pillar erected by Ribault, and crown'd with the Laurel. In this Place he erected a Triangular Fort, which he call'd Caroline, and thence sent out to several Parts, where he was inform'd there was Gold and Silver, yet found very little, and at last wanting Provisions, committed much Rapine upon the Natives, to get as much as would carry him and his Men back to France. Whilst he was preparing for his Departure, Mr. John Hawkins hapned to come upon the Coast, who sold him a Ship and Provisions to return Home. Just at this Time John Ribault arriv'd again with 7 Ships, 3 of which were sent up the River, and immediately 6 Spanish Ships came to an Anchor near the other 4, who finding themselves too weak to withstand that Force, cut their Cables and put out to Sea. The other 3 coming down the River again, follow'd them and were surpriz'd by a violent Storm, which wreck'd some of them on the Shore, whilst the Spaniards landing their Men, enter'd the Fort, and put all they found in it to the Sword, except Laudoniere, who escap'd to the Ships that had been sav'd, and got safe to France.

Dominick Gourgues took upon him next the Enterprize of Florida, and arriv'd at May River, with 3 Ships and 200 Men, in August 1567, and surprizing the Spaniards, put all to the Sword that could not make their Escape with the Governour; but thinking himself too weak to keep that Place, perswaded the Indians to demolish the Forts, and return'd himself safe with his Ships to France; since which Time the French have not made any considerable Attempt upon Florida.

Since then the English have possess'd themselves of all that Coast call'd Carolina, as has been show'd above, and the Spaniards observing how other Nations incroach upon their Discoveries, to secure what remains on that Eastern Coast, have there built the Town and Fort of S. Augustin, in about 29 Degrees and a half of North Latitude, and that of S. Mateo, a little Higher, which last was attempted by the English, in the Year 1705. and formally besieg'd, but they were oblig'd to desist with considerable Loss. These two are all the Places the Spaniards possess on that Coast; but on the South Coast which faces the Bay of Mexico, and where none have made Attempts upon them, till the late of Monsr. de la Salle, mention'd by Hennepin, they have the Towns of Achalaque, Offachile, Hirritiqua, Colima, and some others of less Note. In this Description of Florida, we have made use of Herrera, Laet, Sanfon, and the Particular Relations of all those Discoverers already mention'd.

CHAP. VI.

Of New MEXICO.

THIS most Northern Kingdom of the Spanish Dominions in America, is of so great an Extent, that they have not been able in near 200 Years since its first Discovery to find out the utmost Bounds of it; tho' we must not altogether assign its Greatness for the Reason of their making no farther Progress in it, but their having so much Employment in wealthier Countries, and its running so far to the North, that little Profit is to be expected from what remains of it unknown, and the excessive Cold, which deterrs People born in a Hot Climate from pushing too far into frozen Regions. Yet is it wonderful that they who in less than 40 Years could Discover above 2000 Leagues in length from North to South, both Inland and Sea Coast, should not in near 200 Years more penetrate to the utmost Limits of this Kingdom. Whatever the Reason is, we must leave that for others to decide, and come to what is known of it.

Its Borders on the North, we are still ignorant of, as has been said, nor can they be exactly ascertain'd on the East any farther than by saying it joins to Canada and Florida, whose Extent is not yet agreed on; Southward it joins to the Kingdom of New Spain, or Old Mexico and its Provinces of New-Biscay, Culiacan, and Cinacola, and on the West that which the Spaniards call the Red Sea, and we the Streight of California, parts it from the Island of that Name. To assign it a certain Length and Breadth, after what has been said of our Ignorance as to its Boundaries, would be a Contradiction; however this may be said, that what has been discover'd extends 300 Leagues North from New-Biscay, and there is no less East and West from the Sea of California, toward Florida and New-France.

The particular Nations mention'd in the General Table of North America, are not distinguish'd from one another by any certain Limits, and the Spaniards have built but few Towns among them, the Natives since the first Conquest being Submissive, and become like Native Spaniards, and some of the remoter Parts living in perfect Amity, tho' not perhaps in entire Subjection to them, till we come to above 40 Degrees of North Latitude and 250 Leagues Eastward of the Sea of California, where there are still Nations unknown, and those there is any knowledge of are in Enmity with all Europeans. For these Reasons we shall not give any particular Table of Towns or Provinces, as in other Countries we have exact Information of, but proceed to the best Accounts we can find among the Spanish Travellers, as was done in Florida.

The best Description we have of this Country is from F. Alonso de Benavides, who printed it at Madrid in the Year 1630, and is to this Effect. The Metropolis of New-Mexico, call'd Santa Fe, or S. Faith, is in 37 Degrees of North Latitude. The way to it from New-Biscay, is through the Province of the Conchos, parted from New-Biscay by the River of the same Name. Next follow the Tobasos, Tarrahumaxes, Tepozanes, Tomites, Sumas, Hanos, and other Salvage Nations for an Hundred Leagues North and North-west, most of which were Salvage and Naked, and did the Spaniards much Harm before they were subdu'd. These hundred Leagues bring us to the North River, which is very Large, comes out of a Lake in the North-east, and after running above 250 Leagues South-west, falls into the Streight of California, in about 30 Degrees of North Latitude, and not into the Gulph of Mexico, as some Maps falsely represent it. From the Hanos above-mention'd, there are about 100 Leagues more to New-Mexico, properly so call'd; travelling Northward, a little to the East, through the Countries of the Mansos and Gornetas, who went quite naked, only the Women wearing Aprons of Deer-skins, and fed on raw Flesh, but are since civiliz'd and become Christians. Next follow the Apaches, a mighty Nation, of whom more anon. Here we again meet the North River, where New-Mexico, properly so call'd, commences and extends 100 Leagues Northward, from S. Antony of Senecu, the first Town of the Biroras, to the Town of S. Jerome in the Province of the Tuoros. New-Mexico, properly so call'd, contain'd several Nations, in this Order. At the North River begin the Piros, a civiliz'd People, clad, dwelling in Houses and Subject to their Chiefs, and have abundance of Indian Wheat, other Grain and Cotton, the Soil being fruitful and the Air wholesom. The chief Town here is call'd Socorro, that is, Relief; because here the first Discoverers being almost famish'd, found Plenty of Provisions. The Tebas are next, inhabiting 15 Towns, then the Queres 7, and next the Tompires 15, the Chief of them call'd Chilili. Farther Northward are the Tanos, in 5 Towns, and beyond them the Peicis in one great Town. Seven Leagues West of them is the Metropolis call'd Santa Fe, where at first only 250 Spaniards, not above 50 of them Soldiers, kept all this vast Country in awe, only by the Terror of their Name, but their Numbers are since vastly increas'd not only there, but in all the other Towns we mention. Besides, that all these Nations are become Christians, have quite forgot their Barbarity, and are become perfect Spaniards. Not far from thence towards the North River, from which we had stepp'd aside, live the Teos in 8 Villages, being the first that imbrac'd Christianity, and most passionate Lovers of the Spaniards. West of them are the Hemes, and to the North of these the Picuries, and beyond them the Taosis. Again West of the Queres is Acoma, a strong Town, on a Rock, and 30 Leagues West of them the Zumis in 12 Towns, and at the same Distance the Moquis, all of these now Christians; their Lands fruitful and abounding in Cattel and wild Beasts, as do their Rivers in excellent Fish. They have such an Art in Taming of Stags, that they make them draw Carts. The Summer is excessive hot and the Winter so cold, that the Rivers are Frozen over. All this Country of New-Mexico properly so call'd, is near encompass'd round with the numerous and warlike Nation of the Apaches, differing from all the other Natives in Language, living in Tents, without Houses, and removing up and down, and clad in Deer-Skins. They have many Wives, punishing Adultery by cutting off the Ears and Nose, are submissive to their Superiours, careful in instructing and punishing their Youth, which others do not, and some of them adore the Sun and Moon. The Spaniards distinguish them by several Names. Those next the Pires they call Apaches del Perillo, the next Northward of them, Apaches de Xila; the others still North of these Apaches de Navajo, the Extent of whose Country is not known; and lastly those on the East Apaches Vaqueros, or Cowherds, because they have great Numbers of a sort of Cows, that have large Bunches on their Backs. Passing on 112 Leagues through the Country of these last we come to the Xumons, Xapies and Xabotoas, near whom, on the East are the Aixais, and the Province of Quivira; from which to the Bay of Espiritu Santo, in Florida, the Spaniards, who have travell'd it reckon but 100 Leagues. This shews that either Hennepin is much deceiv'd in making the Rio Escondido, or hidden River, to be the same with his Meschasipi, that River lying between the Bay of Espiritu Santo & Quivira, or else that he imposes upon the World in pretending the Natives along it knew nothing of the Spaniards, or that these were unacquainted with that mighty River. Besides, be the Meschasipi where it will, the Spaniards, who have travell'd all Florida from East to West, could not be ignorant of so great a Stream. But these are not all the Improbabilities in his Account, and it is not our Business now to pursue them.

This Description is chiefly taken, as was said at first from F. Alonso de Benavides, with only some small Additions from others, who travell'd there as well as he, and some later Accounts, about the Improvement of that Conquest, some whereof may be seen in Laet, some in Herrera, and others since them. To come now to the Discoverers, F. Mark de Niza, a Franciscan, with only his Companion, a Black, and some Indians that spoke Spanish, set out from the Province of Culiacan, in New-Spain, in the Year 1529, and travell'd 60 Leagues, keeping towards the Sea to Petatlan, every where civilly entertain'd by the Natives, and advanc'd 30 Leagues farther on the Coast, without meeting any thing remarkable. Then crossing a Desert of four Days Journey, he came into a Country, whose Natives receiv'd him with much Respect and Admiration, and proceeding four Days farther, through their Territories arriv'd at Vacepa, 40 Leagues from the Sea. Having sent the Black before him to the Northward, he here receiv'd a Message from him, with a mighty Account of Cibola, which was 30 Days Journey from him, and in it three great Kingdoms call'd Marana, Acus and Tomeo; in the last of which the Indians said there was Woollen Cloth made. He was inform'd that in Cibola there were 7 great Cities, the Houses all of Lime and Stone, and many other Things which had not been seen in those Parts. Some of those, who had been sent before with the Black return'd and reported that he and the rest had been kill'd by the People of Cibola, whereupon the Indians with F. Mark refus'd to proceed any farther; yet he reported he did himself, and having seen a great City at a Distance, return'd to his Company, and with them to New-Spain.

This Relation caus'd Don Antonio de Mendoza, Viceroy of Mexico, to order Francis Vasquez de Coronado, Governour of New-Galicia, to take a Progress into those Countries. Accordingly he set out with 150 Horse, 200 Foot, some Field-Pieces, and abundance of Provisions, in April 1540, and traversing those Parts F. Mark de Niza had describ'd, came into the Province of Tucayan, five Days Journey from Cibola, where he found 7 populous Towns, which might pass for the 7 Cities F. Mark spoke of. All the Way as far as Cibola, all the Rivers run to the Westward, and doubtless fall into the South Sea. Thence they proceeded to the River Huex, on whose Banks there are 15 Towns in the space of 20 Leagues. After being some Days maliciously misled by an Indian that was their Guide, and set right by another, Vasquez left the rest of his Company behind, and with only 39 Horse travell'd 30 Days directly North till he came to a little River, which he call'd S. Peter and S. Paul, whence taking a Compass to Quivira, and to the Company he had left behind, he made his Way home again, much dissatisfy'd, for that he had found Nothing of what he came to look for. The seven Cities of Cibola, which he saw, and gives the Vice-roy an Account of, were nothing like what F. Mark had represented, but only 7 small Towns, yet the Houses, he says, were three or four Stories high, with Cellars under Ground, against the excessive cold. The Towns are about 4 Leagues distant from one another, some bigger than others. The Inhabitants proper well-thap'd Men, who cover their Nakedness slightly, and wear Cloaks of several Colours. The Country is very Cold, most Plain, with some few Mountains. Tomeo, which F. Mark took for a Kingdom is only a Lake; All Spanish Authors agree, that Quivira is in 40 Degrees of North Latitude.

After Vasquez; F. Augustin Ruiz, a Franciscan, travell'd about 250 Leagues directly North from the Province of the Mines of S. Barbara, in New-Biscay to the Province of the Tiguas, where a Frier being kill'd by the Natives, some Soldiers that had attended them return'd home, but F. Augustin venturing to proceed farther, was never heard of. The Report of those who came back mov'd Antony de Espejo to undertake an Expedition that Way with an Hundred Horses and Mules, a good Number of Men and all Necessaries. He pass'd the Conchos, Passaguates, Tobosos, Jumanes, or Patarabuyes; which last has good Houses built of Stone. Thence they pass'd into the Province of New-Mexico, properly so call'd, where they were kindly receiv'd in good Towns, where the Houses were Large, four Stories high, and well fenc'd against the Cold. The Natives were all clad in Cotton and Skins of Beasts, and what was not usual in the adjacent Parts, wore Shooes and Boots made of the Skins of Wild Beasts, and of Neats-Leather. The Womens Hair was curiously comb'd and platted; but they had no other Thing on their Heads. Every Town had a King, and abundance of Idols, which they worshipp'd as well in Publick, as in their Houses. The Country is Mountainous and Woody, but well cultivated. After resting here four Days, they proceeded to the Province of the Tiguas, and upon the Report of some rich Countries Eastward, the Commander, with only two Men went two Days farther to a Province, in which there were eleven Towns, which having view'd, he return'd to his Company and they all march'd together to the Queres, above-mention'd, and through the Cunames to Zumi, or Cibola, where Vasquez, before spoken of, had been. Here Espejo found three Spaniards left behind in that Expedition, who gave him an Account of a rich Country 60 Days Journey from thence, and the Company being unwilling to venture so far, he with only 9 Men set out that way, and at 20 Leagues distance Westward came to a Province, where he was courteously receiv'd, and presented him with 40000 Cotton Cloaks and other Things, which he sent away with 5 of his Men and some Indians, and ventur'd to proceed himself with the other four, and travelling 45 Leagues found the Silver Mine he had been told of, being a very rich Vein, on a Mountain of easy Access, and the Natives about it Courteous and good natur'd. Having made this Discovery he return'd to his Company at Cibola, and thence, after some small Excursions to New-Biscay.

In 1599, Don John de Onate set out from Mexico, with 5000 Persons of both Sexes and all Ages, abundance of Cattle and all other Necessaries, and subduing all those Nations lying directly Northward, which have been already mention'd, took the strong City of Acoma by Force, and laid it level with the Ground. Two other great Cities submitted to him, and he resolving to keep what he had gain'd, built a new Town and call'd it S. John's, where he discover'd rich Silver Mines. In 1602. he undertook another Expedition this Way, and passing beyond the North River, found the great Lake of Conibus, on the Banks whereof was a vast City 7 Leagues long and 2 in breadth, and full of stately Structures, but all of them parted from one another by small Woods, Garden-dens, and sometimes Ditches. The Natives being all here gather'd in the Market-Place to defend themselves, the Commander did not think fit then to Attack them. From this Time the Spaniards continu'd to undertake new Expeditions into all Parts of this Country, till they entirely subdu'd it, and are now extended to almost 45 Degrees of North Latitude. This shews, as was hinted before, that Hennepin magnifies his Discovery, and so does La Hontan; all the Western Parts they pretend to have found out, being long before known to the Spaniards.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Kingdom of NEW-SPAIN, divided into three Governments, viz. GUADALAJARA, MEXICO, and GUATIMALA; and first of that of GUADALAJARA.

It is to be observ'd, that as we divide America into the North and South, so the Spaniards, make only two Viceroyships of all their vast Dominions in those Parts, all the other Governments being subordinate to them. These are the Viceroyships of Mexico or New-Spain in the North, and Peru in the South. The first of these which we are here to speak of, comprehends all we have spoken of in the North, and thence down to the Streight, or Isthmus of Panama

What has been describ'd needs no Repetition, we come now to that, which is perfectly known and entirely subdu'd, being the Provinces; from New-Mexico and Florida, on the North, to the afore-said Isthmus of Panama. This, tho' under the Inspection of the Viceroy, is divided into three Districts, or Governments, call'd Audiencias, that is, Sovereign Courts, which decide all Matters whatsoever, whether Civil or Criminal, and this is done for the Ease of the People, who else would be

be oblig'd to repair to the City of Mexico from the remotest Parts upon all Suits; whereas by this Means they have Sovereign Courts to decide all Controversies, and direct all Affairs relating to the Government, within a Reasonable Distance. The three Districts, Courts, or Governments are those of Guadalajara, Mexico, and Guatemala, of the first whereof only we are to speak in this Chapter.

This Audiencia, District, or Sovereign Court of Guadalajara, is the most Northern of the three, bordering Northward on the Kingdom of New-Mexico; on the East it lies along Part of Florida, and the Province of Panuco, belonging to the

Cinaloa,

The most Northern Province of this Government, and stretching out farthest to the West, as the Gulph of California on this and part of the South side, the Prov. of Culzacan on the other Southern side, and the Kingdom of New-Mexico on the East and North. Its Situation is between the 27th and the 30th Degrees of North Latitude, and the Length North-west and South-east about 100 Leagues, the greatest Breadth not 40, and much less in other Parts.

On the East side it is bounded by a Ridge of high and craggy Mountains, call'd Tepecuam. Across it run several small Rivers, along whose Banks the Natives live in Villages, for the Conveniency of Fishing. The Air is serene and wholesome, and the Soil fertile, bearing all sorts of Fruit and Grain, particularly Indian Wheat, as also Cotton, wherewith the Natives cloath'd themselves after the Mexican Fashion, both Sexes wearing very long Hair, being a tall, lusty, and warlike People, formerly using Bows and poison'd Arrows, as also Clubs of a very hard Wood, and Bucklers of Red-Wood. The Spaniards found much Difficulty in subduing them, but they have been long since brought under and converted.

The first Town the Spaniards built here was call'd S. Juan, or S. John of Cinaloa, on a small River, that runs into the Gulph of California, which went to Ruin, and was again restor'd by Francis de Torra, in the Year 1554; yet the Difficulties they met with had almost destroy'd this second Colony, but that it was supported by constant Supplies from Culzacan. After the settling of this Town they founded another, nearer to the Borders of Culzacan, by the Name of S. Philip and Jacob; of both which there is not any Thing particular to say, nor are there any others of Note but small open Places, like Villages all inhabited by the Natives. The Substance

Government of Mexico; on the South of it is Mechoacan, another Province of the same Government; and on the West the South Sea and Gulph of California. The greatest Extent of it along the Sea Coast, North west and South-east, is above 200 Leagues; from East to West, in the largest Place it stretches not much less, but the Northern Part, which is the whole Province of Cinaloa, is very narrow, and from the South Part of New-Biscay it narrows again apace, the Shape of it being very irregular up the Inland, and the Coast forming a Bow. The Provinces it is divided into, with their Principal Towns, stand thus:

Chiametlan.	{ S. Sebastian. Chiametlan. Aguacera.
Nalisco.	{ Xalisco. Purificacion. Compostela.
Guadalajara.	{ Guadalajara. Espiritu Santo. Guaxacatlan. S. Maria de los Lagos. Zaporaco. Centiquipaque. Guacumota. Nochistan. Miskytlan. Tazazatlan.

of which Account we have from F. Martin Perez, a Jesuite, the rest from Herrera, Sanfon, &c.

Nuno de Guzman discover'd this Province in the Year 1532, and found 25 very Populous Towns, in which he was oblig'd to stay 42 Days, by reason of the continual Rains; being maintain'd with all his Men; during that Time by the Natives upon Venison and Fowl, till they growing weary of their Guests, fled into the adjacent Woods and Mountains. Being thus forsaken, they travell'd to the Southward, through a very desert Country, in which they often suffer'd much for Want of Water and Provisions. This and the Difficulty of passing the Mountains towards the Inland, as also the Thickness of the Woods on the Sea Coast, oblig'd them to return to Culzacan.

Culzacan

Joins next on the South-east to Cinaloa, which is its Northern Boundary, with some little Skirt of the Conchos; on the East is New-Biscay, and the Zacatecas; on the South Chiametlan, and on the West the Gulph of California, its Situation being between 24 and 28 Degrees of North Latitude; the Length about 60 Leagues, and the Breadth 50, being near an oblong Square.

Nuno de Guzman above mention'd, discover'd this as well as the last Province, and subdu'd it, in the Year 1531. He found the Houses here different in their Way of Building from all other Parts, and in the Corners of them Heaps of Snakes, stretching out their Heads, and gaping if any Body came near them, but without doing any Harm. These the Natives worship'd, because the Devil us'd to appear to them in that Shape, however they handled, and sometimes fed upon them. The Women were handsome, and there being great Plenty of Cotton, both they and the Men were clad in it. Most of the Towns or Villages were Desert, the Inhabitants being fled. At length he came to a River, where he saw a great Multitude Multitude of Women, and therefore he call'd it Rio de las Mujeres, or the Women's River, which gave Occasion to the Fable of Amazons living in that Country. Here were very thick Woods, where the People had their Villages and often encounter'd the Spaniards, killing many of them. When they had travers'd the whole Province and found nothing in it of Value, being much streighten'd for Provisions, they return'd to Chiametlan. Nunc de Guzman having thus taken a View of the Country, gather'd a Number of People and Cattle, and built a Town, which he call'd S. Michacl. on the River he had nam'd de las Mujeres, or of Women, in 25 Degrees of North Latitude; but it was afterwards remov'd some Leagues from thence, and two from the Sea, to a Valley call'd Horana, because it abounds in Pasture and all Sorts of Fruit. This is 80 Leagues from Compostela, in the Province of Xalisco. In Process of Time the Number of Spaniards increasing, they built another Town, North of the last, and from the Province call'd it Culiacan, and after that some others of less Note, among which the Principal are Macoa and Quinola. This from Herrera.

New-Biscay

Has the last spoken of Province of Culiacan, for its Western Boundary, the Kingdom of New-Mexico on the North, Florida on the East, and the Zacatecas with Part of Panuco on the South, lies between 24 and 28 Degrees of North Latitude, and is about 140 Leagues in Length, from East to West, and 50 in Breadth from North to South.

Most of this Country is Pleasant and abounding in all Sorts of Provisions, its Position a little above the Tropick of Cancer making it temperate, and the Waters that run through it fertilizing the Land. However towards the North-east Part of it there is a District, call'd Topia, which is for the most part Mountainous almost inaccessible, and by Reason of their Height excessive Cold, which Territory is of little or no value. In the other better Part there are three Spanish Towns, Endebe the most Western, then S. John to the East, and S. Barbara South of that. All three of them have considerable Silver Mines, which draw People to them, and therefore they are well inhabited; but particularly the last, which is extraordinary rich, the Veins proving inferiour to few of the best, so that their Product is of great Value, and occasions a considerable Resort. These are the Mines Hennepin tells us, Monsieur de la Salle arriv'd at, when under Pretence of seeking the Mouth of the River Missipi, he rang'd on the Coast of Florida.

Francis de Ybarra, after settling the New Town of Durango, in the Province of the Zacatecas, march'd into this Province, before any other had discover'd it, with 130 Men, and first found the Mines of Ladene and S. John. Not so satisfy'd, he left the rest of his Men behind, and advanc'd with only 30 to the Mountainous barren Part call'd Topia, where they suffer'd the utmost Extremities of Cold and Hunger; besides all the Difficulties in climbing those steep craggy Mountains, where several Men and Horses perill'd. This oblig'd them to take a Compass about through the Province of Coahuila, for an easier Road, and being return'd, he carry'd Colonies to the Mines, and fortify'd them against any Attempts of the Natives, which still continue and are very wealthy; but besides these three Towns, there are no others of any Note in the Province, which is entirely subdu'd and Christian. Lact out of the best Spanish Authors.

Zacatecas.

This is the next Province to New-Biscay, which borders on it Northward, as does Panuco on the East, Mechoacan, Guadalajara, and Chiametlan on the South, and the same Chiametlan and Culiacan on the West. A small Part of it reaches into the Torrid Zone, the rest in the Temperate, as being seated between 23 and 27 Degrees of North Latitude; its Length from East to West about 100 Leagues, the greatest Breadth from North to South between Durango and Xeres 45 Leagues, and much less in all other Parts.

The Inhabiting of this Province is owing to its rich Mines, which are many and considerable, for in all other respects it is of no Value, as wanting Water, and producing no sort of Corn, or scarce any other Provision. However the Treasure has drawn People to it, so that there are in it 3 wall'd, and 4 or 5 open Spanish Towns, besides others of the Natives, and many Villages. The Principal bears the Name of the Province, and is about 40 Leagues North from the great City of Guadalajara, and so North West from the greater of Mexico, inhabited by many Spanish Families, and has several Churches and Monasteries. 27 Leagues to the North West stands the Town of S. Martin, little inferior to the former. In the same Way about 25 Leagues from Zacatecas is that of Ellerena, and North from this is Nombre de Dios, as Durango is to the North West of the last, and Xeres the most Southern of the Province. At all these Places there are Mines, besides others at Avine, S. Lucas, Sombreta, los Ranchos, los Chalenites, las Nieves, and el Frenillo, on all which there are open Towns.

Francis de Ybarra, already spoken of, discover'd and subdu'd all this Province, and settled most of the Colonies, tho' not without great Opposition from the Natives, and after them from their barbarous Neighbours the Chickimetas, of whom we shall speak hereafter, and the Guachachiles, who infested the Roads from Guadalajara to Zacatecas, till they were finally brought under by the Marquess de Villa Manrique, Viceroy of New-Spain, since when they have been divided into 104 Tribes, which the Spaniards call Repartimientos, that is, Divisions, and live in entire subjection and Christianity, without knowing any thing of the Rudeness or Idolatry of their Fore-fathers.

Chiametlan

Is a small Maritime Province, having the last mention'd of the Zacatecas on the East, Guadalajara on the South, the South Sea on the West, and Culiacan on the North; seated under the Tropick, the one half in the Temperate, and the other in the Torrid Zone, about 20 Leagues in Length from North to South, and near the same in Breadth from East to West in the largest Places.

The Soil of it is fruitful, and it yields much Wax and Honey, besides very good Silver Mines. Captain Francis de Ybarra, the same above-mention'd, tion'd, led the first Colony thither, in the Year 1554, which he call'd S. Sebastian, and from him the Province has by some been nam'd of Ibarra. At his coming he found the Natives arm'd with Bows and Arrows, Clubs and Bucklers, which last were made of small Sticks strongly bound together. The Women were handsome, and clad from Head to Foot; the Men wore short Coats, and Shooes made of Bucks-skins. All their Luggage they carry'd on a Stick upon their Shoulder, thinking it mean to carry any thing under their Arms. When they went not to the Wars, they spent all their time in Hunting. They had many Idols, and made no scruple of eating Man's Flesh, indulging themselves in many Vices. Since the Light of the Gospel has shone among them, they have forsaken their inhuman Customs, and are become civiliz'd. Besides the Town of S. Sebastian above-mention'd, here are those of Chismatlan, so call'd from the Province it self, and Aguacera. Authors Herrera, Gomara, and Saxson.

Xalisco,

Tho' here mention'd next to Chismatlan, is separated from it by a narrow slip of Land, belonging to the Province of Guadalajara, and running out to the Sea, which is its Northern Boundary, as the same Province, and that of Michoacan are the Eastern, the South Sea washing both the South and West sides; its Situation being within the Torrid Zone, between the 19th and 22d Degrees of North Latitude, and the extent small, as not exceeding 50 Leagues any Way.

It produces abundance of Indian Wheat, but has very little Cattel of any sort. The principal Town is call'd Compostela, seated between one and two and twenty Degrees of North Latitude, and built by Nuno de Guzman, the Conquerour of the Province, in the Year 1531, on the Bank of a River, so barren that there is no Pasture for Cattel, nor any Necessaries for building of Houses; besides that the Air being extremely hot and moist, breeds infinite Insects, which shews that this Place was not well chosen. On the other Southern Extremity stands the Town call'd the Purification, at the Sea side, and that of Xalisco from the Province it self, up the Inland between them both. From this Province, Monardes says, is brought the Oil the Spaniards call of the Infernal Fig-tree, which has many excellent Qualities, being good against all cold Humours, for dissolving or Tumours, and expelling Wind, anointing the Belly, and taking a few Drops inwardly in Wine; as also by Clyster. It is also of excellent use for Ulcers in the Head, and Deafness; its Nature hot in the beginning of the 3d Degree, and moist in the second. Herrera, Monardes, and Laet.

Guadalajara,

The principal Province of this Audiencia, or District, and giving its Name to the whole, is limited on the East and South by the Province of Mechoacan; on the West by Xalisco, and on the North by the Zacatecas; only one narrow slip of it running out to the South Sea between Xalisco and Chismatlan; its Situation being just within the Torrid Zone, from 20 to 23 Degrees Latitude, not above 50 Leagues over any way.

Notwithstanding its being in the Torrid Zone scarce any other Province is more temperate or fertile, producing European and Indian Wheat in great Plenty, and all Fruits of both these Kinds, besides the mighty Treasure of Silver continually taken out of its Mines.

The City of Guadalajara, built by Nuno de Guzman, in the Year 1531, in about 22 Degrees Latitude, gave its Name to all this Province and Government, and took it from another so call'd in Spain. It is 87 Leagues North-west from Mexico. The Natives call'd the Territory of this City formerly Molino, and it is a large Plain near a good River, and water'd by several Brooks and Springs, which cause it to produce great store of Grain, and no less plenty of Grass, the Neighbouring Mountains furnishing all Necessaries for building of Houses. The Air is neither excessive hot nor cold, but wholesome, and breeds very few Insects. Four Leagues from it towards the Zacatecas is a very high Mountain, so steep that no Beasts of Burden can climb it, and it is a full League to the top; all the other Mountains about are craggy, and wooded, full of large Pines and Oaks. The City being the Metropolis of all these Provinces, is very large, populous, and curiously built, and the Residence of the Sovereign Court for all this District; besides that it is a Bishop's See, and consequently has a stately Cathedral, and several Parish-Churches, and Monasteries.

The next Town of Note is call'd Espiritu Santo, built by the same Nuno de Guzman, in a Part of the Province formerly call'd Tepique. The 3d is Santa Maria de los Lagos, founded by the same Man to the Eastward of Guadalajara, to curb the then salvage Chichimecas, who rang'd about the North and East Parts. Centiquipaque is an inconsiderable Maritime Town, on the Shore of that narrow Slip we said above, extended to the Sea. Guaxacatlan, Zapozaco, and the others mention'd in the Table, are open Places, of which nothing more can be added.

The greatest River here some call Barania, and others Esquitlan, proceeding from the Lake of Mechoacan, where it drives a rapid Stream towards the North-west, and four Leagues from the City of Guadalajara falls from a great height, whence it hastes into the South Sea, which it enters betwixt Xalisco and Chismatlan. It is no where fordable, but us'd formerly to be cross'd on Floats made of Calabashes and Canes, on which the Men sat with their Goods, and held their Horses in the Water, whilst the Indians swimming, drew all over, not without great Danger, but the Spaniards have made all conveniences of Boats.

The Natives were formerly like their Neighbours, large of Body, cloath'd in Cotton, lying upon Mats, and such lovers of Dancing to a little scurvy sort of Drums, that they would spend whole Days at that Folly. They are now all brought to live in Towns, and have their own Lords, Judges, and other Magistrates and Officers, after the Spanish manner; the Race of their ancient petty Kings still hold a Sovereignty over them, but other Officers are appointed by the Spanish Governours.

The Cuzcacos were formerly a distinct Nation, living towards the Frontiers of the Zacatecas, and differ'd from the other Natives of this Province in their Language, and some Customs; the the Guachachiles had also a particular Tongue; and the Guameres were not understood by the rest; but the bringing of them to live together in Towns, and a constant Interchange, which before were wanting, has now mollified their uncouth Geni's, brought them all to speak one Language, and Christianity has banish'd all their Heathen Barbarities, yet the prevailing Vice among them is observ'd to be Stealing.

The better sort of Spaniards here live by Trade, and are Masters of the rich Silver Mines; others follow grazing, and some apply themselves to Tillage. Tho' this Soil produces abundance of Sugar-Canes, yet no Body regards them, no more than they do whole Woods of the Tuna; which is the Tree that breeds the Cochineal, from which a vast quantity might be gather'd, did they take the Pains to look after, and cultivate the Trees, but it seems their other Employments turn to better Account. They every where make use of Carts and Waggon drawn by Oxen, Horses, and Mules, and their Weights and Measures are the same as in Spain. The Towns us'd to be Palisado'd about to defend them against the Natives, who being entirely subdued, that Precaution ceases. Authors, Herrera, Oviedo, Gomara, and Sanfon.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Provinces subject to the AUDIENCIA, or the Sovereign Court of MEXICO.

THIS District, or Part of America we are here to speak of, is such as would require a greater Volume than this to be describ'd as it deserves, it shall therefore be our Care to insert as much as may be in the Compass allow'd us. Its Situation is almost all under the Torrid Zone, only a Slip of Mechoacan, and a Part of Panuco being on this side of the Tropick, the whole lying between 25 and 14 Degrees of North Latitude, the Northern side bordering on New-Mexico and Florida, and all the rest encompass'd by the North and South Seas, except only that small Part of the South-west which joins the Provinces of Chiapa and Sacomisco of the Government of Guatemala. The Figure is so irregular, that it is hard to assign the Extent, but between the two remotest Points of Panuco and Mechoacan, North-east and South-west, where the greatest solid Breadth is, we find above 200 Leagues from Sea to Sea, from the Northern Part of Mechoacan to the Province of Chiapa North-west and South-east much the same Distance; but then across the Province of Guaxaca from Sea to Sea scarce 60 Leagues; but these Dimensions wholly exclude the large Province of Yucatan, because it is a Peninsula running out into the Sea above an hundred Leagues in Length, and only join'd to the Continent by a narrow Isthmus of less than 20 Leagues. I cannot give a better Account of this Country than what Joseph de Acofta does of New-Spain in general, of which this is the principal Part, and this Author speaks not by hearsay, but as an Eye-witness, it is to this effect.

New-Spain surpasses all the rest of America in fruitful Plains and Meadows, which is the Reason it has an infinite number of Horses, Kine, and other sorts of Cattel. It abounds in all sorts of Fruit, Grain, and whatever is necessary for the support of Human Life. Only Panuco exceeds it in Wine, because the Rains in July and August spoil the Grapes, and what little Wine they make is small and sharp. The Air is serene from the beginning of November till April, when the Sun is farthest off, for when it draws near, the Rains fall so heavy, that most Rivers overflow. They Sow and Reap twice a Year, and most Parts abound in Silver Mines, but there are few of Gold.

Francis Ximenes gives a particular Relation of the excellent Gums, Aromatick Liquors, and other Medicinal Product, as the Liquid Amber, as sweet as Storax, and of great use in Physick against Head-aches, Pains in the Stomach, Vapors, and Convulsions; the Copal, whereof he reckons eight several sorts, and all very Medicinal; the Balsam, not inferior to that of Gilead, and many more well deserving to be mention'd, but that we must not run too far into Natural History, no more than in describing the great variety of Fruit-Trees, Herbs, and Flowers this and other Authors treat of.

Being to speak of each Province in particular, the shorter general Account may serve turn, and therefore nothing shall be here said of the Natives reserving it to its proper Place, and so of every thing else that may be expected in this Description. But it is fit to observe here, that in the Division we are about to make, we follow that which is now settled, and in use among the Spaniards, as Masters of all these Dominions, for it were endless to follow all the small Divisions there were among the ancient Inhabitants, every great Town in some Parts being reckon'd a several Nation; besides that it is most proper to represent the Country as it is at present, yet so that Mention shall be made of those many Nations, Tribes, or petty Governments that were in each of these Provinces, which we shall begin to treat of in the North, and so descend to the Southward, according to which Method they stand thus:

Panuco.

The most Northern Province of the Government, subject to the supreme Court of Mexico, has the Gulph of Mexico on the East. Florida on the North, the Zacatecas and Mechoacan on the West, and the Provinces of Mexico and Tlascala on the South. It is under the Tropick of Cancer, part in the Temperate, and part in the Torrid Zone, being about 5 Leagues in length, and no less in breadth. All of it that lies next to Mexico is the best and richest, abounding in Provisions, and yielding some Gold; but the other Part adjoining to Florida is wretched, poor, and barren.

The principal Spanish Towns here are three; the first Panuco, otherwise call'd Santistevan del Puerto, built by Gonzalo de Sandoval, in about 23 Degrees of North Latitude, by Order of the Marquis Don Ferdinand Cortez, in the Year 1520, seated 65 Leagues North-east from Mexico, and 8 from the Sea, on a River, whose Mouth makes a Harbour. The next is Santiago de los Valles, 25 Leagues West from Panuco, the third S. Luis de Tampico, 8 Leagues North-east from Panuco, on the Sea Coast. There are several Rivers and Anchoring Places along the Coast of this County up to the River of Palms, but none of them worth noting, or ever resorted to, except Panuco River and Port, which is none of the best. Thus much Herrera, the most solid Author, gives us of Panuco.

Chilton in Hacklitt's Collection tells us, that travelling to this Country from Mexico, he came out of that Province into that of Guasteca, which is the Southern Part of Panuco, the first Town whereof was Tanculabo, where the Natives painted themselves Blue, and had Hair down to their Knees, but we cannot rely upon the Stories of these rambling Travellers of no Reputation, since the Spaniards, who live in those Countries, mention no such monstrous Hair. It will therefore be needless to spend more time upon his frivolous Relation, but to proceed from this Province to another more considerable.

Mechoacan

Follows, as the next Northern Province, bounded on the North by the Provinces of Zacatecas, and Guadalupe, on the West by that of Xalisco, and the South Sea, on the South by the same Sea and Mexico, and on the East by that same Province and Panuco. Along the Sea it extends 80 Leagues, and more in length up the Land. The Name in the Mexican Tongue signifies a Place abounding in Fish, and there were several Nations inhabited it, as we shall mention.

The Temperature of the Air differs much, some Parts being hotter, and others colder, according to their higher or lower Situation, or their being more or less expos'd to hot or cold Winds, which things alter the Weather there more than many Degrees difference of Latitude, yet in general it is pleasant, and so healthy, that many resort thither from other Parts to recover from Diseases. Here are abundance of Lakes, Rivers, and Springs, which are the occasion of feeding infinite numbers of fat Cattle; besides several Degrees of hot Medicinal Waters. This abundance of Water occasions such wonderful Fertility, that the Ground has been known to yield above an hundred for one, producing all sorts of Fruit and Grain, and exceeding most others in excellent Pasture.

But besides these things common to Europe, it has several noble Trees, unknown in our Parts, as the Xochicopilli, which distils a sort of Copal, or odoriferous Gum; the Quauhatepatli, yielding a yellow Liquor that cures the Itch and Scab, and will Purge, outwardly applied; the Copalxocotl, reckon'd a Cure for Fevers; the Moripenda, the Sprigs of which cut small, and boild to the consistence of a Salve, heals most Wounds and Sores; and to pass by many others, above all the Mechoacan Root, now well known, and much us'd in Europe, of which and many more the Curious may read Francis Ximenes.

For Beasts, here are great Numbers of great and small Cattel, as also Beasts of Burden, Goats, and Swine in Herds, without any Owners, Wild-Bears, Hares, and Rabbits, and that sort of Goat in which the Bezoar is found; and here we must observe, that the same Francis Ximenes affirms here is a sort of Bezoar found in the Rivers, which he says is wash'd down from the Mountains, where there is great store of Bolearmoniac.

The Natives formerly had four several Languages, the Chichimecan, the Ottomite, the Mexican, and the Tarasque; their Habit, and other Particulars was much like the Mexicans, they being of the same Race, tho' become Enemies to them. At present their Habit, Language, Manners, and Customs are all Spanish, being so incorporated with their Conquerours, that they are as it were one People, and know none but the Christian Religion. They learn all Trades, and particularly make curious Cabinets, and much Silk, and breed Cattel, but are particularly fond of Dogs. Their greatest Art is in making Pictures, or Imagery of Feathers, which they perform so exquisitely, that the ablest Painter cannot represent any thing finer in Colours than they do with Feathers, shadowing and giving every thing its proper Colour so exactly that it is really stupendious, and this done with such small Feathers, that it is wonderful how they can handle, and put them together, and what Birds they have to take them from, as Acofta, and many others who have seen this Work, inform us.

Mechoacan was formerly a Kingdom, which the Spaniards have reduc'd to a Province and Bishoprick, in which there are near 200 Towns of Natives, now all Converted, with their Parish-Churches, and many Monasteries. The principal Spanish Towns are these, 1. Valladolid, or Guanajuato, where the Bishop's See is, and near it a Lake larger than that of Mexico, full of Fish, especially one small sort, which dry'd and sold in the Country about, yields a considerable Revenue. 2. S. Michael, 40 Leagues West from Mexico, very populous, and seated in a Plain, which has the best Pasture of all the Country. 3. S. Philip, standing 60 Leagues North-west from Mexico, in a cold and poor Soil. This City, and the last above were built by the Viceroy Don Luis de Velasco, to secure the Country in those Days against the barbarous Chichimecas and others. 4. The Conception of St. Mary was built in the Year 1570, by the Viceroy Don Martin Enriquez, 35 Leagues from Mexico. 5. Leon is 60 Leagues from that Capital City. 6. Zimora 13 from Pascuaro. And 7. Lagos, 13 from Valladolid. Towards the South Sea is Zacatula, otherwise call'd the Conception, seated on a River a League from the Sea; and Colima towards the Borders of Xalisco, in a rich Soil, producing much Cacao, Cassia, and other things of Value, besides some Gold. Near this City are two Sea-Ports, the one call'd Navidad, and the other Santiago de Buena Esperanza, the first of them resorted to by those who go to the Philippine Islands. All about here there are abundance of Copper Mines, some of it so soft, that they turn and wind it to any uses, and some again so hard, that it serves for Country Tools as well as Iron.

The Coast of this Province runs North-west, and South-east, with several small Bays and Creeks along it, but the principal River is that of Zacatula, not considerable among those of America. Under this Province, as it is now, liv'd several Nations of Indians in former times, but all those Distinctions are now laid aside, and they are become one People.

Mexico,

From which the whole Government takes its Name, is the principal Province of all North America, and an Archbishoprick, extending about 130 Leagues in Length North-east and South-west, and about 60 in Breadth. On the North it is limited by Panuco, and part of Mechoacan, on the East by Tlascala, on the South by the same Province and the South Sea, and on the West by that Sea and Mechoacan.

In this Compass were formerly several Districts, or Lordships, as those of Lateotlapa, Meztitla, and Xilotepeque, Northward from the Capital; Maltalzingo, and Cultepeque Westward; Tezcucoc on the East, and on the South Chalco, Suchimilco, Tlalucoc, Coyxaca, and Acapulco. The burning Mountain between this Province and that of Tlascala, is call'd Popocatepec, all cover'd with Wood, and the bottom abounding in Wheat and Cotton. At the Foot of it is also Tepeyac, rich in curious white transparent Allom; the Neighbouring Hills producing great store of the sweet Gums, Copal, and Anime, by Incision on the Trees. In the Neighbouring Villages much Salt is made, and a most curious Jasper Stone dug out of the Quarries; and at Tuculula there are rich Gold Mines, but the Place is subject to Earthquakes, and therefore the Natives live in low Huts. South of the Metropolis are the Towns of Ceantrahuacal, Acapistla, Guastepeque, and Autepeque, belonging to the Marquess del Valle, descended from Cortez, and pleasant, hot and fertile Places, producing much Wheat, Cotton, and delicious Flowers; besides very white Sugar. North-west from Mexico are Escapuzalco, Tenyanca, Guatitlan, and Alexepit, and the Country of Xilotepeque, inhabited by an industrious labouring People. North from the City is Tepeaquilla, &c. yielding Cotton, Grain, and much Fruit, besides infinite Fish in its Waters. In fine, every where the Land is rich, and there are very many Silver Mines at these distances from the Metropolis, Puchia 14 Leagues, Tasco 22, Tzquiquilpo of Lead, 20, Zacualpa 20, Zumpango 40, Guanajuato 60, Comania 70, Achia-cica, Gautla, Zumatlan, and S. Luis de la Paz, all of Silver, about which several thousand Spaniards live, besides great multitudes of Slaves.

The

The City of Mexico, Capital of all North America, was first call'd Tenochtitlan, and is seated in the Latitude of 19 Degrees, and 40 Minutes, in a Valley 14 Leagues long, and 7 in breadth, surrounded with a ridge of very high Mountains, on the East side of the Valley is a great Lake that receives several Rivers and other Waters, in the midst whereof the City is seated, so that for want of a good Bottom, the Buildings sink very much. The Form of it is square, the Streets long, wide, and well pav'd, running North and South, East and West, whereby the whole Extent may be seen in the middle. The Compass of it is two Leagues, and the Diameter half a League, because it is almost square. There are five Ways into the City, over as many Causeways across the Lake. For noble Structures, and rich Churches, it vies with Italy, and surpasses it for beautiful Women. Of Inhabitants, there are about 100000 Families, but great Numbers of them Blacks, or Mulattoes. Within the City there are 22 Monasteries of Nuns, and 29 of Religious Men, all of them vastly rich. The Cathedral has 10 Canons, 5 Dignify'd Priests, viz. Dean, Archdeacon, School-master, Chanter, and Treasurer, 6 Demi-Canons, and 6 half Demi-Canons; one Head-Sacristan, 4 Curates, 12 Royal Chaplains, and 8 others call'd of Laurenzania. The Archbishop's Revenue is 60000 Pieces of Eight, the Dean's 11000, the four other Dignified Priests 8000 each, every Canon 6000, Demi-Canons 5000, the half Demi-Canons 3000, each Curate 4000, every Chaplain 300, the other Priests and Attendants less, being all in Number 300; so that the Revenue of the Church will all appear to be 300000 Pieces of Eight a Year. Yet all this is nothing to the Magnificence of that City before the Spaniards were Masters of it. The Clergy it seems are the Landlords of this City, most of the Grounds and Houses being theirs. (Gemelli.)

The Lake on which the City stands, consists of divers Limbs or Parts, some whereof are separated by Causeys only, others are more distant, and have Communication by small Canals. One part is stagnant, yet its Waters are fresh and good, and fill'd with Fish; another part ebbs and flows, and its Waters are brackish and naught, thus we are told by Gage. The Lake has about 30 Towns and Villages round on its Coasts, but before the Spaniards took it there were three times that Number, all very well inhabited. The old City consisted of at least 600000 Houses, some say 1000000. And Montezuma's Palace was the most noble that can be thought, for the Walls were of Marble, and other fine Stone, the Roofs of Cedar, the Chambers large, 100 in Number were adorn'd with curious Hangings of Feather-work, gilded Cielings, and all other sumptuous and beautiful Decorations. He had large Gardens, most pompous Summer-Houses, and vast Manereries for wild Beasts, Fowl, Serpents, &c. of the strangest, and of the most fierce Nature. His Chappel was so rich, that nothing was to be seen but Gold, which cover'd the Cieling, Agats, Cornelians, Rubies, and other rich Stones the Walls, and Pearls the Seats. There were many Temples for their Devotion to Idols furnish'd with high Steeples, the chief whereof was built of well wrought Stone and Timber, it was square, and a Cross-bow shot broad, in the middle was a high Mount, of Pyramidical Form, which had 114 Steps to the top, where stood the Altars whereon the Sacrifices, which were of Men taken in Battel, were offer'd. From this Pyramid a high Tower ascended, which over-look'd all the City. The Market-place was so large that 100000 Persons might have Dealings in it, and was well furnish'd with all Necessaries, and especially Gold, Silver, and Pearls, together with most beautiful Pictures made of Feathers, which is a Curiosity that no other Part of the World is acquainted with; in this Art the Indians were wonderfully Ingenious, as they were also in working Gold and Silver, whereof they make curious Pieces, far surpassing any wrought here. The Inhabitants were so numerous, that 50000 Boats were employ'd in bringing the daily Food necessary, and Passengers. When the City was taken on the 13th of August, 1521, after a three Month's Siege, 'twas reckon'd that at least 120000 Indians were slain on the Defendant's side, besides a vast number that died of Hunger and Pestilence. When Cortez had taken the City, he destroy'd all the Indian Buildings, and re-edify'd the City, giving out parcels of Ground to those that had assisted in the Siege, and obliging the Indians to work in the Building; 100000 Houses were then erected, but those being thro' haste but ordinary Structures, it has in process of time been in a manner all new built, and tho' at this time the Houses may not be so numerous, they are however much better, being built of Brick and Stone, and very fair, but not high, for the Ground being tender, and subject to Earthquakes, must not be too much loaded. The Indians live in the Suburbs, for the Spaniards by cozening them of their plot of Ground (which in the Foundation of the City had been equally distributed to such Indians as had assisted the Spaniards,) have from time to time so encroach'd, that all their little Houses are pull'd down, and new pompous ones built in their Place. Cortez built himself a stately Palace on the same Ground where Montezuma's stood, so large that 7000 Cedar Trees were us'd in it; which at this Day is call'd the Marquis del Valle's Palace, and Letts for 4000 Ducats Rent. The Market-place, altho' not so large as that of the Indians, is however very spacious, surrounded with Arch'd Piazza's, and well furnish'd with Shops of the richest Merchandize as well as all useful Commodities. Over against the Market-place stands the Viceroy's Palace, which is a large Building, with fair Gardens. The Streets in general are large and beautiful, surpassing ours in Europe, especially that call'd the Plateriaz, where the Goldsmiths live, exceeding in Wealth any that can elsewhere be seen; the Street of St. Austin, where the Dealers in Silk inhabit, remarkable for its Length and Breadth; and the Street del Aguila, where the Gentry dwell, admir'd for its fine Structure. The Spaniards live in great Splendour and Luxury, and so ordinarily keep Coaches, that Gage says there were in his time (1625,) reckon'd to be 15000 in the City, many whereof were surprizingly rich. 'Tis a Saying, that in Mexico there are four things remarkably fair, viz. the Women, the Apparel, the Horses, and the Streets; to which, says he, we may add the Coaches of the Gentry. The Alameda is an open Field shaded shaded with Trees, where the beau monde daily appear in Coaches, or on Horses, where every Afternoon may be seen 2000 Coaches fill'd with Ladies and Cavaliers dress'd in most gorgeous manner, and attended with large Equipages, and fine Liveries. The Town lies open, being not secur'd by any Walls or Gates, for the Indians are so perfectly reduc'd on all sides that the Spaniards esteem themselves in no danger, and therefore the Arms which the Inhabitants heretofore always kept by 'em are now slighted, and the Place is the least capable of Defence that can be; the narrowness of the Causeys from the Main Land, which may be defended by small Numbers, being all the security they have to trust to. The Viceroy is allow'd by the King 100000 Ducats per Annum Salary, together with Plenipotentiary Power, whereby he is able by Perquisites to raise his Revenue inconceivably high; whereby the five Years Government, which is the stint of their Commission, is considerable enough to be desir'd by the greatest Favourite at Court. Thus far I have taken from Gage.

All round this great City there are many other Towns of Note, as Chulula upon the same Lake, Telcma 6 Leagues distant, Quilavaca, Yxtapa-lapa, Alexicalzingo, Guatitlan, Suchimilco, Queretario, and many more, all of them large Cities formerly, and still considerable Towns, so curiously seated, that in one Plain not above 9 Leagues long, and two in breadth, there constantly feed above 100000 Head of great Cattel, 200000 Sheep, and 10000 Horses, and other Beasts of Burden.

Acapulco is a Sea-Port on the South Sea, whence the Ships set out for the Philippine Islands, and return thither again. It is call'd a City, but more like a Village, all the Houses being either of Timber or Mud Walls, seated in almost 17 Degrees Latitude, at the Foot of high Mountains, in an unhealthy Air, and destitute of Provisions. The Inhabitants are all Blacks and Mulattoes, the Spanish Merchants hasting away thence as soon as the Fair is over, which is when the Ships come from the Philippine Islands, loaded with Commodities of China, at which time the Place looks like a City, being fill'd with genteel People, and plentifully supplied with Provisions from all Parts. Here is a small Castle with good brass Guns, but has no Ditch nor Bastions. In describing Mexico and this Place, we have follow'd Gemelli, the last Traveller who has writ of those Places, and a judicious Man.

About 7 Leagues from Mexico stands a notable piece of Indian Antiquity, being a Pyramid two sides of it, about 160 English Yards in length, the other two about a fourth part less, and the height 50 Yards, made in Steps like those of Egypt, on which formerly stood a prodigious Idol of the Moon, and within the Pyramid were Vaults, in which they buried the Kings. 200 Paces from this is the Pyramid of the Sun, a third part longer on the sides than the former, and a fourth part higher than that, and on this stood the Idol of the Sun, of a monstrous Magnitude. These are so ancient, that there is no account who were the Founders of them.

But that we may not exceed, a word of the Birds, whereof there is such a beautiful Variety, that the World can scarce match it, among which is the Sesontle, which Name signifies 500 Voices, from the mighty variety of its sweet Notes; the Cardinal, which sings well, but is so call'd, because all over of a beautiful Scarlet, not only Feathers, but the Beak. The Tigrillo, or little Tiger, because spotted like a Tiger, and sings well, and many more both for Beauty and sweet Notes, besides several sorts of Parrots, which talk to Admiration. For eatable Fowl, there is no less Variety, and the same for Beasts, not to mention the infinite Herds and Flocks of Kine, Sheep, Goats, and Horses, there are Bears, Wolves, Wild-Boars, Hares, Rabbits, Deer, Foxes, Tigers, Lions, and Squirrels.

The Product of the Earth is no less amazing, the preciouslest whereof is the Silver and Gold taken out of the Mines. Then for Fruit, there are all sorts Europe affords, except Nuts, Cherries, Medlars, and Service-Berries, and besides these, many others unknown to us, as Aguacates, Sapotes, Mamey's, Granadilla's, and one prime Plant, which is the Cacao, we are now acquainted with through the use of Chocolate. Of the Silver Mines, what is necessary shall be said when we come to those of Peru, that the Subject may be entire; the History ancient and modern shall follow after describing the other Provinces of this Government, which it would be improper to part.

Tlascala

Follows next after Mexico, not only in Situation, but Dignity, and rather superiour in Extent, as reaching from Sea to Sea; for it has the Gulph of Mexico on the East, Panuco, and the Province of Mexico on the North, the same Province on the West, and the South Sea and Guanaca on the South.

The Product here is much the same as in Mexico, and the Temperature of the Air differs but little, for they both lie very near in the same Latitude; and as for the Natives, we refer the speaking of them till the last, when we come to their History, where it will appear that as Mexico was an absolute Monarchy, so Tlascala was a Republican Government, and having faithfully serv'd Cortez in the Conquest of Mexico, he obtain'd a Grant of the Emperour Charles the 5th, then Reigning, by which to this Day they are exempt from all Service or Duty whatsoever, and only pay the King of Spain a handful of Wheat a Head, as an Acknowledgment, which inconsiderable Parcels are yet said to make up 13000 Bushels.

The length of the Province from Sea to Sea is above 100 Leagues, and the greatest Breadth, which is along the Gulph of Mexico, about 80 Leagues, within which Limits are included the ancient Districts, or lesser Provinces of Tepeaca, reaching within 8 Leagues of the City Tlascala, Zempoala, the Mountaineers call'd Totonaques, and others.

The Capital City here is call'd Puebla de los Angeles, or the Town of Angels, 22 Leagues from Mexico, East and by South, containing 1500 Houses, and built by Sebastian Kumirez, in the Year 1531, on the Road from the Port of Vera Cruz to Mexico, and 5 Leagues from the ancient City of Tlascala, in a delightful Plain. The Buildings most of Lime and Stone, vying with Mexico, the Streets neat, handsome, and strait, crossing one another towards the four Quarters of the World. In the midst of it is a great Square, which on three sides is adorn'd with uniform Portico's, where are rich Shops of all sorts of Commodities. On the fourth side is the Cathedral, with a most beautiful Front, and one stately Tower, the other not yet finish'd. Within the Church there are 7 large Pillars on each side, forming 3 Isles; the Choir and High Altar have only 2 Pillars of Marble, the Revenue of the Church is worth 300000 Pieces of Eight a Year. Gemelli.

Tlascala may be also call'd a Capital, having been so long before the last mention'd was built, and still a noble City, but most inhabited by Natives, whereas the other is most Peopled by Spaniards. It has four principal great Streets, the first on the top of the Hill, built there before the rest, because safe in the time of War, the second on the side of the Hill towards the River; the third along the River, and the fourth back from the River. All the Buildings since the coming of the Spaniards are improv'd. To this City were subject 28 Towns and Villages, containing 150000 Families. Almost all the Inhabitants being Natives, are, as has been said, free from all Taxes or Duties, and therefore live at Ease upon their Lands, or follow Trades, and being all entirely converted, they have several good Churches and Monasteries, where the Service is perform'd with Musick, and much Solemnity.

Vera Cruz, the Port on the Gulph of Mexico, is the next Place of Note, seated in a barren Soil, which makes Provisions dear, because they are brought far; The Air is not wholesome, and the North Wind drives the Sand so, that it almost overwhelms the Houses, and has actually buried the Walls of the Town, which now People constantly ride over. The Bastions, and other Works are irregular, and too far distant from one another. The Castle is half a League from the City, and serves to secure the Harbour, and Ships in it. These Inconveniences mention'd, are the cause the City is but poor, as only inhabited by Blacks and Mulatto's, the Spaniards staying no longer than they have Business, or Ships come in.

S. John de Ulva is the principal Sea-Port for the Kingdom of Mexico; and here I cannot but observe the great Ignorance of Gage, who confounds this Place and the last above-mention'd so together, that it is not easie to understand him, saying, the one was remov'd to the other, as if there were but one still, whereas they are to this Day two distinct Towns, only S. John de Ulva is more frequented, as being much the wholesomer Place, and the better Harbour, and therefore inhabited by Spaniards, and better fortified and adorn'd with Churches, and other Structures.

Tlax-Rica is to the Northward of both the last, and on the Coast, all three of them in that Country which formerly was distinguish'd by the Name of Zempoalla; we will now go back to that District, within 8 Leagues of Tlascala, which was call'd Itepec, where the Spaniards have built the Town they call Segura de la Frontera. The upper Part was formerly, and is still inhabited by the Natives, the lower by the Spaniards; but all of it is built on Rocks, so that it had none but Rain-Water, till they had some brought from a River that falls from the Mountains of Tlascala. After saying so much of these principal Places, the others of less Note will not deserve any particular Mention to be made of them.

Guaxaca

As well as Tlascala reaches from Sea to Sea, being on that narrow Part which joins North and South America, having that Province, and the Bay of Mexico on the North; the same Bay and Tabasco on the East, Chiapa and the South Sea on the South, and the same Sea and Tlascala on the West. It runs near 100 Leagues along the South Sea, 50 along the Bay of Mexico, and extends near 120 Leagues along the side of Tlascala, but not above 50 on that of Chiapa. In it are comprehended several ancient Nations or Provinces, the chiefest whereof is the Valley of Guaxaca, giving Name to the rest, and that of Marques del Valle to Ferdinand Cortez, the first Conquerour of that Country, being 16 Leagues in length, 80 South from Mexico, and in 18 Degrees Latitude, according to Herrera and others. Here are Gold and Silver Mines, Crystal, and some Stones of small Value, and the Land produces much Wheat, Cacao, Cochineal, and Cassia Fittula, of which the Curious may see a particular Account in Francis Ximenes. The Air is serene and healthy, and much Silk is made here, because they have Woods of Mulberry-Trees, which Productions make all the Natives live at Ease, and in great Plenty. There are reckon'd in this Province 350 considerable Towns of the Natives, besides above 300 Villages, and among them above 120 Monasteries of Religious Men, and several Colleges of Clergy.

Except the Valley of Guaxaca, most other Parts are Mountainous, and yet extraordinary fruitful in all sorts of useful Trees and Plants. All the Rivers run Golden Sands, which the Natives sometimes take the Pains to gather, and sell for Provisions and other Necessaries, taking no care as long as that lasts to labour for any more, but when their Stock is spent, they repair to the Rivers again. That which was formerly the Province of Misteca, runs along between Tlascala and the Valley of Guaxaca, Tutepeque is on the South of the said Valley, Zapoteca on the North of it; and Guazacoalco towards the East, but at present all these, as has been said, are comprehended under the Province of Guaxaca.

Antequera is the Capital City of this Province, a Bishop's See, 80 Miles South of Mexico, in the sweet Valley of Guaxaca, on the Road through Chiapa to Guatemala, and it is sometimes call'd by the Name of the Province. Gage is much mistaken when in speaking of the City and Valley of Guaxaca, he says the latter is 15 Miles in length, and ten in breadth, whereas nothing is more certain, than that it is 40 Miles in length, and near 20 in breadth, if we may believe all the Spaniards that ever mention'd it. To return to the City, it contains several Thousand Families, Spaniards, and Natives, and has a very stately Cathedral.

The next Town of Note is S. Ildefonso de los Zapotecas, 20 Leagues from Antequera, seated in a Territory rich in Gold, Cotton, and Indian Wheat, and on a Hill, formerly the Habitation of Indians, call'd Migas, who were tall of Stature, and had great Beards, which was a Rarity in America. The third is Santiago, call'd Nexapa from the Valley it stands in, the fourth Espiritu Santo in the District of Guaxacoalco.

Tabasco

Is a small Maritime Province, extending about 40 Leagues from East to West along the Gulph of Mexico, which is its Northern Boundary, but the breadth is less, and on the East it joins to Yucatan; on the South it is parted by Mountains from Vera Paz and Chiapa, and on the West it has the Territory of Guaxacoalco of the Province of Guaxaca.

Most of this Country is flat and moist, with many Marshes and Lakes, breeding abundance of Fish. The Air is excessive damp, by reason it rains 6 Months in 12, and it is no less hot, which breeds infinite multitudes of Gnats; yet the Soil is rich, producing much Indian Wheat, and Cacao, wherein consists the principal Wealth of the Country. The Natives of this Province were extraordinary drinkers of Chocalute, and from them chiefly the Spaniards learnt it, and have since imparted it to all Europe.

The only Spanish Town here is call'd Tabasco, or Nuestra Senora de la Victoria, that is, our Lady of Victory, from a great one Cortez obtain'd there at his first Arrival. The River Grijalva here is large, but shallow within the Mouth. Three Leagues from the City another River falls into the Sea at two Mouths, one of them passing by the Town of Tabasquillo, the remainder of that of Potonchan, Cortez found at his Landing there. There is another River call'd S. Peter and S. Paul, which has a narrow Mouth, but deep, and very clear, and swarming with excellent Fish. The Mexicans, whilst their Monarchy stood, had Garrisons throughout this Country. This Coast, from September till the end of March, is subject to tempestuous North, North-east, and North-west Winds, which render it dangerous Sailing in it during that time.

Yucatan

Had this Name given it in the Year 1517, when Francis Hernandez first discover'd it, and was then thought an Island, as well it might, being a Peninsula, running out into the Sea 100 Leagues in length, and join'd to the Continent by a very narrow Isthmus at Tabasco, and Vera Paz, its Situation between 16 and 23 Degrees of North Latitude, the Gulph of Mexico washing its West and North sides, and that of Honduras the East and South, excepting only the small Isthmus, or Neck of Land above-mentioned.

The Temper of the Air is very hot, and there is never a River in all this great Peninsula, which, nevertheless, has no want of Water, through the innumerable multitude of Wells. Wheresoever they dig up the Land, they find abundance of Shells, which, with the lowness of the Country, and shallowness of the Sea about it, have given many sufficient ground to believe that the greatest Part of it was once under Water. Their Winter begins in October, and lasts till the end of March, during which time there is scarce any Rain, but in Summer, beginning in April, and lasting till the end of September it rains continually, yet they Sow and Reap, but it affords no European Grain or Fruit, nor does it yield any Gold or other Metal.

The Natives us'd to say, they had a Tradition from their Fore-fathers, that the first Inhabitants of the Country came thither from far Eastward, and that their God had parted the Waters on both sides for them to pass. The Spaniards add, that in this only Peninsula they found some shadow of Baptism, which the Natives call'd a second Birth, or Regeneration, looking upon it as a security against all the Snares of Evil Spirits.

Throughout all this Province they found many Structures of Stone, which they had not before seen in any other Part, and these were their Temples. At present the Country is full of black Cattel and Horses, and produces much Cotton and Indigo. A Ridge of low Mountains runs from the City of Salamanca in the West, quite across the Province to the East, and divides it into two Parts, the Southern whereof is ill-peopl'd and worse cultivated, for want of Water; but the Northern is very populous, for tho' the Sun be very Hot, it is moderated by the constant Breezes. However the Mountain Country is the healthiest.

The Capital City is Merida, about 12 Leagues from the Sea, in 20 Degrees of North Latitude, which is the Residence of the Governour, and a Bishop's See. The next is Valladolid, 31 Leagues to the South-east of the other, about which there are above 50000 Indians who pay Tribute to the Spaniards. The third is Campeche, almost 50 Leagues South-west from Merida, on the Shoar that looks towards New-Spain. This Name was given it from a sort of Wood like Brazil, us'd by Dyers, whereof great Quantities are transported into Europe. Campeche is a fair Town standing on the Coast in a small bending of Land, and is the only Town on all this Coast that stands open to the Sea; it makes a fine shew, being all built of good Stone; the Houses are not high but the Walls very strong, the Roofs flattish after the Spanish fashion cover'd with Pan-tile. There is a strong Citadel or Fort at one End planted with Guns, where the Governour resides with a small Garrison. Though this Fort commands the Town and Harbour, it has been twice taken, first by Sir Christopher Mims by Storm in 1659, and the second time by the Bucaneers in 1678 by Surprise. The Town is not very rich, the chiefest Manufacture is Cotton Cloth, which with Salt is the Trade of the Place; formerly it was the Market for Logwood, but now the English from Jamaica Land in the neighbouring Countrey, and Cut it themselves. 'Tis on account of this Commodity that the Bay of Campeche is become notable. Logwood is the Heart of a Tree that grows in this Country of Yucatan, and no where else. The Tree is like a White-Thorn but much larger, being sometime 5 or 6 foot about, the outer part is white, and therefore cut away till the heart, which is red, appears; this is useful in Dying, and therefore a valuable Commodity. It is but within 20 or 30 Years past, that the English have known the Tree; which they first found out at Cape Catoch the East-point of this Land, but having soon cut ail near the Coast there, they have since cut it at the Isthmus which they enter at Triste Island, seated at the bottom of the Bay, about 40 Leagues S. W. from Campeche. (Dampier.)

Lastly, Salamanca stands 70 Leagues South-west from Merida, is in a District which was formerly call'd Coetamal. Campeche was another Province, where is now the City of the same name. Cochuagua was a Mountain Province, where are the Towns of Tulma and Chable, and next to it is that of Guazamil. In the North-east was the Territory, of Coetichiniza, adjoining to it that of the Co-comes, and Westward that of Camul, inhabited by Mexicans. In all these Provinces, where other Authors are not nam'd, we have principally follow'd the undoubted Authority of Herrera, and where he fails, Laet, Gomara, Oviedo and Simpson. Let us next proceed to the Discovery, Conquest, and Ancient History.

CHAP. IX.

Containing the Discovery, Conquest, and History of NEW-SPAIN.

Columbus having first Discover'd America, beginning with the Islands, and then proceeding to some Parts of the Continent, several other Adventurers set out, some from Spain, and others from the Islands already subdu'd, to make their Fortunes by finding some New Lands. In the Year 1517, Francis Hernandez de Cordova, fell upon the Coast of Yucatan, and discover'd from Campeche, as far along the Continent, as S. John de Ulva. In 1518, John de Grijalva, set out by James Velasquez, Governour of Cuba, ran along the same Coast, but did nothing of moment.

That same Year Ferdinand Cortez, was set out by the same Governour of Cuba, with 10 Ships, 508 Soldiers and 109 Sailers. His first Conquest was over the Town of Tabasco, but removing thence he came to S. John de Ulva in 1519, where he continu'd some Months, and having broke up his Ships, that his Men might have no Hopes of returning, and leaving a Garrison in the Fort he built, he in August advanc'd with 400 Men towards the Province of Tlascala, which was a Potent Commonwealth, and always at War with the mighty Emperor of Mexico, Montezuma. The Tlascalans fearing lest the Spaniards should prove Friends to their Enemies the Mexicans, resolv'd to use their utmost Endeavours to destroy them. Accordingly they laid 30000 Men in Ambush, and 1000 others appearing drew the Spaniards into the Danger, who they were very near perishing, being enclos'd and in a narrow Compass, till forcing through and opening themselves a way, when they had more Room for their few Horse and Guns, they soon made their Enemies retire. They being thus worsted, drew out all their Forces, amounting to above 100000 fighting Men, wherewith they attack'd Cortez three several Days, and were every Time routed with wonderful Slaughter. This Success of so few Men against such mighty Numbers so very much daunted the Tlascalans, that they presently sent to sue for Peace, which was willingly granted, and Cortez with his Forces receiv'd into the City. There he enter'd into such a strict Alliance with the Commonwealth, that they never after forsook him, but prov'd faithful to the Spaniards in their utmost Extremities.

This Republick was erected by a Race of People descended from the Barbarous Chichimecas, who took Possession of the Country, expelling the ancient Inhabitants, and setting a Republican Government, maintain'd War against Mexico 70 Years, their own Dominions being 50 Leagues in Extent, naturally Strong, very fruitful in Corn, and extraordinary Populous.

Cortez having refresh'd his Men at Tlascala, notwithstanding all Persuasions to the Contrary, set out with a Resolution to enter the City of Mexico, as he did, and was receiv'd in friendly Manner by the mighty Emperor, Montezuma. To give some Idea of the Greatness of this Monarch, it is fit to observe, that he had every Day 3000 Dishes of Meat, and as many Bowls of their Wine serv'd up to his Dinner, and neither Dish nor Napkin was ever us'd by him twice. His Palace had three spacious Courts, and many Stately Rooms 100 Foot long, besides abundance of lesser Chambers 25, or 30 Foot Square, and 100 Baths. Every Thing about these Rooms was rich, and the greatest part of them were taken up by 3000 Women, and the Gardens and Fish-ponds belonging to it were amazing. The City was Stupendious, for it contain'd 60000 Houses, had three great Markets, where all Things necessary for Human Life were Sold, and above 50000 Boats were continually employ'd in the Service of it. The Temples were many, the greatest a mighty Pile, but most remarkable for the Inhuman Religion taught and practis'd by the barbarous Priests, who there sacrific'd Thousands of Men every Year, ripping out their Hearts and shedding their Blood, which caus'd an intolerable Stench, all that could get any Part, afterwards Feasting upon the Bodies of those human Victims.

But let us return to Cortez. After a considerable stay in Mexico, observing that the People grew weary and contriv'd his Destruction, he seiz'd the Great Emperour Montezuma, thinking by that Means to secure himself, and govern absolutely in Mexico, receiving infinite Sums of Gold and Silver by way of Tribute. Whilst he was in this Prosperity, James Velasquez, the Governour of Cuba, who had set him out, knowing that he acted for himself, without acknowledging who had employ'd him, sent Pamfilo Narvaez with 18 Sail, and in them 85 Horse, 800 Foot and 12 Pieces of Cannon to reduce him by Force. Cortez hearing that these Forces were Landed against him at Vera-Cruz, left Peter de Alvarado with 150 Men to keep Possession at Mexico, and march'd away himself with the Rest to meet Narvaez, to whom he sent several Messengers with Proposals of Accommodation, all of which manag'd their Business so dexterously that Narvaez's own Men began soon to be against him, and many forsook him. To put an End to the Controversy, Cortez surpriz'd him in his Quarters at Zempoala, took him Prisoner, and all the Men came over to his Service.

This done, he return'd with all speed to Mexico, to rescue his Men, who he heard were in Distress, the City taking up Arms against them. There he was besieg'd by the whole Multitude of the Town, who made furious Attacks upon his Quarters and were still repuls'd with incredible Slughter, yet they abated nothing of their Fury, being all resolv'd to perish, or destroy the Spaniards. In fine, Cortez seeing no End of his Confinement, and that he must either be starv'd out, or oppress'd by Numbers, he march'd out, fought his Way through all the City, with the loss of 200 of his Men, and all the Cannon and Baggage, besides 40 Horses, and 4000 Confederate Indians. When they were got out into the open Country, the Mexicans pursu'd several Days longer, killing above 100 Men more and some Horses, but at last the poor remainder got safe to Tlascala, where they were favourably receiv'd, and supply'd with all Things they could desire.

Cortez having refresh'd his Men, lost no Time, but subdu'd the Province of Tepeaca and other Parts, and having provided all Necessaries, and 13 small Brigantines to Sail on the Lake of Mexico, which he carry'd over Land, he march'd out with about 500 Spaniards and 100000 Tlascalans, with which Forces he laid Siege to that vast City of Mexico, subdu'd all the Country about it, and at last made himself Master of the Place, by which he brought under a great Empire and made Way for his future Successes, for hence ensu'd the subduing of Mechonacan, Guaxaca, Tabasco and Tucatan, in a continual Course of Successes, and thus was laid the Foundation of all the ensuing Conquests; for from hence, some spread themselves into the Northern Parts as far as 40 Degrees of Latitude, as has been shew'd, and others descended towards South America and Peru, which could not have been so easily conquer'd but for the preceding reducing of all that Continent of New Spain, where Spaniards began to swarm, and whence those Enterprizes Southward were supply'd.

As to the Manner of Montezuma's Death, Herrera, who saw all the Original Accounts from Mexico, delivers it thus. Cortez and the Spaniards being reduc'd to great Distress in their Quarters, in Mexico, the Indians attacking them for several Days, with unspeakable Fury, Montezuma, who was with Cortez, offer'd to speak to the Multitude from a Window, hoping to appease them. They gave him a Hearing, but as soon as he had done fell a railing and reviling of him bitterly, and let fly such a Shower of Arrows and Stones, that tho' two Spaniards stood to cover him with their Bucklers, a Stone hit him on the Temples. He so highly resentec this Affront and the Disrespect of his Subjects, that he would never suffer any Application to the Hurt, which was look'd upon as inconsiderable of it self; yet he dy'd the 4th Day, as was believ'd rather of Grief and Vexation than the Wound, tho' it was not dress'd. This was the more likely, because he all the while appear'd loving to the Spaniards, and at his Death charg'd Cortez to take Care of his Children, and not to fail of revenging the Affront and Indignity offer'd him by his People. Acosta gives the same Account of his Death, only adding, that the Indians deny it, and say they found his Body Stabb'd through in many Places, in the Spanish Quarters, when they left them. Gomara agrees with Herrera's Relation, and Gage delivers the same; so that there does not appear any Ground to question the Truth of the Fact.

Having thus briefly run over the Discovery and Conquest of Mexico, it only remains, that we add something of its History, which must needs be very obscure, it being well known that those People had no use of Letters; to make some amends for which Want, they had a sort of Painting, which with the Tradition deliver'd down by word of Mouth, preserv'd some little dark Knowledge of former Ages. It is needless to run too far back, where we are sure of nothing but Fables, as there are very many and those monstrous ones, about the first coming of the Mexicans into that Province so call'd; whence they came they knew not, but that it was from the Northward, and that they were of the Race of the Chichimecas, to which they add that they left their former Seats by the Command of their God Huitziliputzli, who after many Years wandring, at length conducted them to the Lake, and shew'd them the Place where they were to settle, erecting his Temple in the Midst, and dividing themselves into four Quarters or Wards about it, which were distinguish'd into other Sub-divisions, with every one its lesser Tutelar God.

When they were thus settled, they began to order their Civil Government, and in order to it chose them a King, which was Acamapichtli, the Son of a Mexican Prince, by a Daughter of the King of Culucan. This rais'd their Reputation, which before ran very low, and therefore the Tepanecas, to whom they were tributary; oppress'd them, still imposing new Burdens, and as their Stories tell us, demanding Things above Nature, which still they perform'd by the Help of their God Huitziliputzli; but those Fables we may well pass by. Acamapitzli reign'd 40 Years in this Subjection, and dying left not the Crown to his Children, but gave the People their full Liberty to choose his Successor.

The People in Return made Choice of his Son Vitzilonitli, or Huiztlauhli, who marry'd the Daughter of the King of Azcapuzalco, or the Tepanecas, and she prevail'd to have all the Tribute paid her Father to be reduc'd to only a couple of Geese and some Fish, which was a mighty Ease; but to qualify this Joy she dy'd, and her Husband the following Year, when he had reign'd but 13, leaving a Son at the Age of 10, whose name was Chimalpopoca.

Him they immediately inthron'd, and the City being in want of Water, because that of the Lake was muddy, they sent to the King of Azcapuzalco, to grant them leave to bring Water from the Mountain of Chapultepec, which they did, but the Aqueduct being of Canes, soon fail'd, and then they sent to the same King to demand all Necessaries of him, for making a solid Aqueduct of Stone. These repeated Demands the Tepanecas look'd upon as an Affront, and therefore enter'd into a bloody War with the Mexicans, which made the old King die for Grief, and the Tepanecas stealing into Mexico by Night, murder'd the young Chimalpopoca.

The Mexicans vowing revenge, elected Izcoatl, Son to their first King, to succeed in the Throne, and he heading his People overthrew the Tepanecas, plunder'd and destroy'd their Capital City of Azcapuzalco, and pursuing those that fled into the Mountains, entirely brought them under Subjection, dividing the Booty and Lands among his his own Men. This Success encourag'd him to farther Enterprizes, and accordingly he conquer'd Tambá and Cyotacan, who before had Princes of their own, and almost destroy'd the Suchimilcos, who were the first Inhabitants of the Lake. The King of Chilpancingo voluntarily submitted and own'd him for his Sovereign, by which means the Mexicans became Masters of all about them. This was done in only 12 Years Ixcóatl reign'd, who then dy'd, and Mohtezuma, the 5th King, but of another Family was chosen. He first brought up the inhuman Custom, that no King should be Crown'd till he had sacrific'd some Captives taken by himself in War, and to this Purpose pick'd a Quarrel with the People of the Province of Chalco, from whom he took several Prisoners and sacrific'd them on his Coronation-Day. Chalco being subdu'd, the new King still resolv'd to extend the Limits of his Empire, and accordingly was in continual Wars with his Neighbours. Yet he erected a stately Palace for himself, and a Temple for his God, and dy'd when he had reign'd 28 Years.

The Electors meeting chose Tlacatell, Uncle and General to the last King, who would not accept of the Crown, but prefer'd Ticochu, Son to the late King, whom the Mexicans soon poison'd, because he was no Soldier, and substituted his Brother Axagacac in his Place. His first Expedition was against the Province of Taquantepec, which he entirely subdu'd, as he did the City and petty Kingdom of Tlatelulco, and dy'd after a Reign of only 11 Years.

The 8th King was Ahuizotl, who before his Coronation, made War with the Quaximatlans, and extended his Conquests as far as Guatemala. The Mexican Story informs us, that at the Dedication of the Temple of Huitziloputzli, this Inhuman King sacrific'd 64080 Men, in the compass of four Days. This Devil dy'd in the 11th Year of his Age.

Next to him was chosen Montezuma, whom the Spaniards found on the Throne, and whose Name signifies Angry Lord. Before his Election he appear'd extraordinary Grave, Modest, and Hypocritically Religious, which recommended him to the Electors, and after his Installment he show'd more of his haughty Temper, turning away all his servants of the Common Sort, and refusing to be serv'd by any but the Nobility. Then he subdu'd a Nation towards the North-Sea, which had revolted, and returning with abundance of Prisoners to Sacrifice, took such mighty State upon him, that he was almost ador'd as a God. Before the coming of the Spaniards, the Indians tell of many Prodiges, which presag'd the Downfall of their Empire; but those Follies are not worth observing. When Montezuma heard of their Arrival on his Coasts, he was much amaz'd, and us'd all Means to divert them from coming to Mexico, but God having decreed the Destruction of that barbarous Empire, all his Endeavours were in vain, and Cortez overthrew all his Power, as has been shown above.

Cuauhtimotz was chosen Successor to Montezuma, but his Reign prov'd short and miserable, he being taken in Mexico by Cortez. The Account of those Kings is much the same in Acosta, Herrera, Gomara, the Indian painted Annals, Liet and Gemelli, all whom we have examin'd to give this short Abstract. Only Gage, will have Vitziloputzli to be the first King, and Acamapitzli the second; tho' all Authors whatsoever make his Second first and his first Second.

It will easily appear by what has been said, that this Empire was nothing near so great as the Indians represented it, the farthest Extent being to the South-east, and that only as far as Guatemala, and Northward it reach'd but a very little way; besides that Mechoacan, Tlascala and Tepeaca were never subdu'd, and all of them lay within a very few Leagues of the City of Mexico. Then as for Duration, we find but Nine Kings to have succeeded one another, besides the last not worth mentioning; so that in all Respects this Monarchy is infinitely inferiour to that of Peru, as we shall see in treating of that Country.

As to the Government, there is no Question, but it was as Politick and Civiliz'd as any other whatsoever, the Crown bestow'd by Election, but Montezuma was become a most absolute Monarch, and there was little to blame in his Management of Temporal Affairs. Yet if we come to their Religion, there shall we find all the Barbarity and Inhumanity of Devils rather than Brutes, for their Sacrifices as has been said were of Men, and 20000 are said to have been butcher'd this way in a Year, not forgetting what was instanc'd above of Ahuizotli slaughtering 64080 in 4 Days. The Manner was to rip out the Heart of the Victim and cast it still leaping into the face of the Idol, the Body at the same time being kick'd down the Steps that were before it. To this End they fatt'd the Slaves and eat them that were sacrific'd. They had another cursed Practice, which was to flea a Slave and draw his Skin upon another, who went about the City begging for the Temple in that Equipage, and striking such as would not give, over the Face with some of the Skin.

Christianity has long since put an End to all those Hellish Practices, the whole Nation being converted, and all those Diabolical Rites not so much as known among them. It is true, Men whose Talent lies in railing at all the World, make it their Business to inveigh against these People and the Spaniards both; but in all Countries it is likely there are more ill than good Livers, every Nation has its Vices, and the Indians are not exempt from their Failings, which are none of the smallest; as cruelty, when they have Power to show it; Lewdness even to committing of Incest with their own Mothers and Sisters; Thieving, Cheating, Falshood of Heart, Beastliness in their Way of Living, and Stupidity in Dying. These and other horrid Crimes have oblig'd the Spaniards to treat them with the utmost Rigour, without which, how could such a Handful of Men, have preserv'd the Superiority over so many Millions, as they keep under, notwithstanding the so much inculcated Falshood, as if the Spaniards had destroy'd all the Natives; but it is Time to have done with Mexico and proceed.

CHAP. X.

Of the Third Division of NEW-SPAIN, being the Provinces Subject to the Audiencia, or Sovereign Court of GUATIMALA.

THIS great District, under which are several Provinces, as we shall soon see, is bounded by the Provinces of Guaxaca and Tabasco, which are the utmost of the Jurisdiction of the Sovereign Court of Mexico, and this is all the Boundary it has by Land to the Northward, all the other Northern and Eastern Part being wash'd by the North-Sea, except that small Neck of Land on the East, which joins Veragua to the Province of Tierra Firme, or the Firm Land, of South America, which past all the South and West side to the Northward, is again expos'd to the South Sea. The Length of it along the South Sea, from South-east to North-west is above 300 Leagues. The Breadth is very uncertain, being 150 Leagues where largest, and not 30 where narrowest.

The Name of Guatimala is given it from the Province of that Name, and the City of Santiago de Guatimala in it, where the Sovereign Court is fixt. This Country as it is now divided into several Provinces, so was it before the Spaniards discover'd it, subject to an infinite Number of Caciques, or Petty Kings, or Lords, every little Town or Village having a Prince of its own, as shall be shown in the Particular Descriptions.

The Discoverers and Conquerors were also many, and very great the Losses sustain'd before those Petty Princes could be brought under; but the Desire of Wealth overcame all Difficulties, for no Island or Part of the Continent had given greater Hopes of mighty Treasure in Gold than most of this. Wheresoever Ships touch'd upon this Coast, they met with Plenty of that Metal, and the more Covetous the Spaniards appear'd of it, the more Pains the Natives took to convince them of the great Plenty there was of it farther on.

The Natives were not so Salvage as some have endeavour'd to represent them, they had all rational Forms of Government, and some of them better Notions of Religion, than most of our Ancient Idolaters, tho' the Generality were stupid enough. Their going so naked, may rather be ascrib'd to the Heat than any want of Understanding to Cloath themselves. For Fertility scarce any Parts exceed it, the Fruits are infinite of all Sorts. Indian Corn is every where Plentiful, the many Waters produce Plenty of Grass, especially along the Hills, which Feeds numerous Flocks and Herds of Cattle.

These Countries abound in Cacao, before mention'd, and now well known to us, being the Nut whereof Chocolate is made, a Drink generally us'd by all those People, who had no Wine, as both Acosta and Ximenes testify, who inform us, that the Nut pass'd among them for Money, 5, 10, 20, 40, or a greater Number being given in exchange for other Things, and that continu'd many Years, being scarce out of use at this Time; and the Liquor made of it, is well known to be pleasant and nourishing.

The Division of this Government is into Eight several Provinces, each of which contains several Petty Lordships or Nations of Indians, as they were before the Conquest, but since reduc'd into the present Form, with such Principal Cities, or Towns, as are here specify'd.

Chiapa

Is an Inland Province bordering Northwards on Guaxaca and Tabasco, Westward on Soconusco, the same on the South, and Vera Paz on the East. The Length of it from East to West is 40 Leagues, and the greatest Breadth not much less; but then some Parts are much narrower. Four Nations, or Tribes of Indians formerly inhabited it, being Chiapineses, the Zoques, the Zelsales and the Quelenes.

Here are great Woods of Pine, Cypress, Cedar, Oak, Myrtle and Walnut Trees, with wild Vines running up them, which Ximenes particularly describes. And for those Trees which distill Aromatick Gums, those of Liquid Amber, Tacamahaca, Copal, and others that yield sovereign Balsam. All Kitchen Herbs and Salads grow to Perfection, as also Beans, which once sow'd last several Years and Coleworts growing to a wonderful Bigness, and yet sweet and tender.

Among

Among the Birds of Prey Ximenes tells us of one, that has one foot like a Goose, and the other like a Faulcon, about the Bigness of a Hen, and not unlike it, the Feathers white, with some mixture of brown. It lives upon Fish, and being much in the Water the Goose's Foot serves it to swim, and the Faulcon's to seize its Prey. Besides this, there are most other sorts of wild and tame Fowl, and particularly most beautiful Parrots.

All four-footed Beasts brought from Spain; as Cows, Sheep, Goats and Swine have multiply'd to Admiration; but above all the Race of Horses here is so valuable, that they send Colts to Mexico, tho' it be 200 Leagues off. Of the Wild Beasts it will be needless to say any thing, they being such as are often mention'd in other Places. The worst is, here is no less Plenty of Snakes and other venomous Creatures, some of those last nam'd growing to 20 Foot long, and among them some of a curious red and streak'd with black and white, and these the Natives call, the Mothers of the Ants, and wear them about their Necks, without any Harm.

The Cniapeses above-mention'd breed the best Horses and know how to break them, and are besides great Masters in Musick, Painting, and Mechanick Arts; being naturally very civil and courteous, and obedient to their Superiours, originally descended from Nicaragua, as they declare. Among them the Spaniards found a pleasant Valley encompass'd with Mountains, and a Hill in the midst of it, at the Foot whereof, on the East side, they built a Town and call'd it Ciudad Real, or the Royal City, the Capital of the Province, 70 Leagues North-west from Santiago de Guatemala. This City by particular Privilege is Govern'd by Alcaldes, or Magistrates of their own Choosing, and is a Bishop's See, having a beautiful Cathedral and some Monasteries, besides the Parish Churches. I cannot impose upon the Reader the Forgeries of Gage, for in describing this Place, he is as much out as in all the Rest, dividing it but into three Parts, whereas, as was shown above, it certainly contains those four; then he makes but one Place of Ciudad Real and Chiapa, whereas they are two distinct Towns, the one Spanish, the other Indian; and therefore we must follow the Spaniards, who know what they have been so many Years in Possession of better than that Strowler, who by the fallhood of his Account, must needs take all he writes upon Trust. In short, Ciudad Real, as has been said is the Capital Spanish Town, about which there are many Indian Towns, the Chief whereof is call'd Chispá.

The next People are the Zoques, inhabiting 25 Towns, the Principal call'd Tezpatlan, where there is a Monastery of Dominicans. The third the Zeltales, dwelling in 13 Towns, and sowing much Indian Wheat, wherewith they feed great Herds of Swine, and have so much Cochineal, that they colour their Houses with it. The fourth and last are the Quelenes, who have 25 Towns, the Capital of them call'd Copanauztla, where is a Dominican Monastery.

The Chief Rivers here are, that of Chiapa running from the Northward across the Country of the Quelenes, and after receiving several lesser Streams, falls into the Sea of Tabasco. The other is Rio Blanco, or the White River, whose Water, covers any Piece of Wood thrown into it with a hard stony Crust, and yet is clear and may be drank without Danger. In the Village of Caza- culpa, a League and a half from the Capital, is a curious Spring, which Ebbs and Flows, like the Sea, and yet is at a vast Distance from it. Five Leagues from the aforesaid City is another Spring, which always swells and overflows in the Heat of Summer and dries up in Winter. In the Town of Chicomuzelo there is a Cave, with a very narrow Entrance, but within of a vast spacious Extent, and on one side of it a Lake of most clear Water, but standing, and two Fathom deep near the Bank.

Soconusco,

The next Province to the Westward, and consequently bounded on the East by Chiapa, and Vera Paz, on the South by Guatemala, and the South Sea, on the West by the same Sea, and on the North by Guaxaca and Chiapa. The Extent of it is about 35 Leagues along the South Sea, and less in breadth where largest.

The principal Wealth of it consists in Cacao-Nuts, which by reason of their nearness to the Sea, they easily send to all other Parts of New-Spain, and it is a considerable Trade. The Soil does not bear Wheat well, but any other Grain grows well enough.

The only Spanish Town here is both by them and the Natives call'd Guevetlan, built by Don Pedro de Alvarado, when he was Governour of these Countries. Chilton tells us, that when he travell'd through this Province, which was in 1560, there were very few Spaniards, if so, it is very much alter'd since, for all agree there are many there since. The Trade of Cacao, above-spoken of, makes the Inhabitants very rich, and they pay their Tribute to the King in Kind, which is carried to Mexico, and would be of considerable Value in Europe.

The Province is very subject to Storms and Rain from April till September, when such Floods fall from the Mountains, that there is no Travelling, and therefore those who have occasion to Travel to or from the other Parts of New-Spain during that time, must go about, tho' this be the shortest way. Suchitepeque, and Guasapacan, are two small Territories at the Eastern end of Soconusco, very ill Peopled, the greatest Town of them not containing above 200 Inhabitants.

The Coast of this Province commences 7 Leagues West of the River Ayutla, from which it runs North-west, and receives those of Coatlan, Capanercalte, Colatl, Haztatlan, Amaticur, and Quizatatlan, above which last the Mountains divide it from Guaxaca.

Vera Paz

Had this Name given it, signifying true Peace, because it was never conquer'd by Force of Arms, but only brought into subjection by the Preaching of the Dominican Friars, who obtain'd it of the Emperour Charles the Fifth, that they might make such a spiritual Conquest, without being disturb'd by any Conquerors, which was granted them, and punctually observ'd, so that no Soldiers ever came into the Province, which was entirely reduc'd by only the Preaching of those Friars. For this reason it has ever remain'd free from all Duties and Taxes, only receiving a Judge from the Spaniards, who ul-

no manner of Authority there, the Natives only paying a voluntary Acknowledgment rather than Tribute to the King. Tho' this be a known Truth, deliver'd by all that ever writ of those Parts, as Herrera, Gomara, Oviedo, Laet, and several others; yet Gage stubbers this over, saying, that the Indians of this Country hearing that the Spaniards had conquer'd Guatemala, and the Country about, yielded themselves peaceably, and therefore it was call'd Vera Paz. He adds, it is not yet all subdued by the Spaniards, and talks of a Town of 12000 Inhabitants, not subject to them, yet there were several Spaniards found in it by the Friar he pretends went thither, with mighty danger of his Life, as if he could be in more Danger than those he owns were there before him. This shews his Ignorance, for the Country being, as has been said, free, there are few Spaniards settled in it, only some few go thither to Trade with the Natives, and others pass backward and forward with all the safety imaginable. But the Dominicans, who were the Converters of the People, or spiritual Conquerours, have some Monasteries here, being highly respected, and preserving the first Immunities granted to those People inviolably; another Instance of the same sort we shall see when we come to Paraguay in South America.

This Province is enclos'd on the West by Chiapa, and Sacumisco, on the South by Guatemala, on the East by Honduras, and on the North by Yucatan, no Part of it but Golfo Dulce, or the Sweet Bay reaching to the Sea, which is the Gulph of Honduras. The Length of it is about 30 Leagues, and near the same Breadth. The Country is most Mountainous, with deep Valleys and thick Woods; the middle part temperate enough, but both ends extremely hot, and much pester'd with Gnats. Since the Woods have been destroy'd, it is much healthier and pleasanter.

Near the Town of S. Augustin is a large Cave in a Rock, with many others about it, which continually drop, and the Liquor which falls Petrefies, so that it forms abundance of Pillars of Stone as white as Alabaster; the cold within is so piercing that it is not to be endur'd. The Soil is not good for Corn, but produces all sorts of Aromatick Trees, as also a sort of hard Canes, which sometimes run 100 Spans in height, and so thick, that they will hold three or four Gallons of Liquor betwixt two Joints. The Beasts and Birds are much the same here as in the Neighbouring Provinces.

The East side of this Province is every where water'd by abundance of Rivulets, which all fall into a deep Bay, call'd Golfo Dulce, or the Sweet Bay, and that into the Gulph of Honduras, being a Sea-Port to this Country. The Spaniards have never a Town in this Province, for the Reason above given; but the Natives are brought to live in 17 open Towns, some few Spaniards living among them, and many Dominicans, who have the whole Charge of instructing those People in Religion.

Guatemala,

By the Indians call'd Quatnemillac, signifying a rotten Tree, runs along the South Sea North-west and South-east, and has Nicaragua and Honduras on the East, and Vera Paz and Sacumisco on the North. The Soil produces abundance of Cotton, and Indian, as also European Wheat. Here is not much Rain, but when it falls it is very heavy, which is most between April and October. The South Wind reigns most, and the North is very cold and stormy. All the Country is Hilly, and full of Rivers, which makes Plenty of Game, and Fish, as there is of all sorts of Fruit, and more especially of excellent Cacao, which yields a great Revenue. The great Plenty of Grass occasions the breeding infinite numbers of Cattel.

Notwithstanding all these Advantages, the Country is not healthy, because of the excessive Heat and Moisture, and very troublesome on account of the innumerable Gnats, and other Vermin. In the North-west Part of it is a burning Mountain, which sometimes casts out vast quantities of Alhes, very prejudicial to all the Cacao growing near. There were several Tribes here formerly, which gave as many Names to the Parts they inhabited, as the Tzalcas in the North-west; below them the Papeles; more to the South-east Chuluteca, and towards the Mountains the Chontales.

The ancient Idolatries of these People were much the same as what has been said of their Neighbours, and so for their Customs and Manners; but at present they have all embrac'd Christianity, and learn'd much of the Spanish Behaviour, living in perfect Liberty, notwithstanding Gage's Stories of their Slavery, for they are as free as the Spaniards, as absolute Masters of what they have, and they grow as rich as their Conquerours, if they are industrious. Don Pedro de Alvarado conquer'd this Province in the Year 1526, under whom it immediately flourish'd to a great Degree, and is still reckon'd one of the richest in those Parts.

Santiago de Guatemala is the Metropolis, not only of this Province, but of all the others subject to its Sovereign Court, which is settled in this City, which is seated in fourteen Degrees and a half of Latitude, 12 or 14 Leagues from the South Sea, in the midst of a Valley, divided by a River, and between two burning Mountains, which often cast out Smoke and Alhes, and sometimes cause Earthquakes. This is the most healthy Part of all about it, and no less fruitful. It is a Bishop's See, who is Suffragan to the Archbishop of Mexico, and besides the Cathedral and Parishes, here are two Monasteries, the one of Dominicans, and the other of Mercenarians, besides a good Hospital, as there is generally in all Towns of any Note. In the Year 1541 this City was almost destroy'd by an Eruption of one of the burning Mountains, but is since restor'd, and much improv'd, being counted very rich by reason of its Trade with Veragua, and other Parts.

San Salvador, by the Natives formerly call'd Cuzcatlan, is about 13 Degrees from the Line, 30 Leagues South-east from Santiago de Guatemala, and 7 from the South Sea, and Port of Acaxatla, where the Ships for and from New-Spain usually load and unload. Here is another Monastery of Dominicans. La Trinidad, by the Natives call'd Sanfonate, is but 26 Leagues from Santiago, and 4 from the Port of Acaxatla, and the Place to which all Goods brought from Peru and Mexico to the aforesaid Harbour, are transported, and it has another Monastery of Dominicans. The Town of S. Michael is about 60

Leagues from Santiago, and 2 from the South Sea and Bay of Fonseca, which is its Port. Xeres de la Frontera, the last Spanish Town towards the Frontiers of Nicaragua, and near 80 Leagues from Santiago. Besides these Spanish Towns, in which some Thousands of Natives live with them, there are some Hundreds of smaller Indian Towns, and many Thousands of scattering Country-Houses, by which it plainly appears that these Countries are not depopulated, as some would inculcate without any Ground; tho' they are not so populous as most Countries in Europe, which it is most certain they never were, even before the Conquest.

Honduras

Extends along the North Sea East and West above 150 Leagues, and may be near 60 Leagues over from North to South in some Places. On the North and East it is wash'd by the North Sea, on the South it has Nicaragua, and on the West Guatemala, and Verapaz. The Country is generally distinguish'd into Hills and deep Dales, and does not only produce Indian Corn thrice a Year, but also European Wheat, and Pease, and has excellent Pasture for Cattel; so that it abounds in all sorts of Provisions, as also Honey and Wax. Besides here are Mines of Gold and Silver.

Besides what has been said, it produces great quantities of extraordinary large Gourds, which the Hispaniola Indians call'd Hibueras; and the first Discoverers of this Country seeing many of them float along the Coast, call'd it Golfo de Hibueras, or Bay of Gourds, and the Province it self Hibueras; yet afterwards finding very deep Water at the great Cape of this Land, they call'd it Cabo de Honduras, that is, Cape Depth, and the Country it self Honduras, or Depth, which last Name prevail'd, and the other was forgot.

The ancient Inhabitants being extraordinary Sloathful, us'd to sow so sparingly that they often were in Want, and forc'd to feed on Roots, and even on many filthy things. At their Feasts they us'd to make themselves drunk with a sort of Metheglin, and then committed all the most heinous and abominable Crimes, which they have since left off by being converted to Christianity, and conversing with the Spaniards. Only the better Sort were allow'd to drink Chocolate, but at present it is common to the meanest.

Here is a Bishop, and four principal Spanish Towns, besides two of less Note, not to speak of those belonging only to the Natives, which are very many. The first and chief City is Valladolid, whose Indian Name is Commyague, about 40 Leagues from the North Sea, in a delightful Valley, temperate and wholesome, the Country about swarming with Cattel, which increases there wonderfully; besides very rich Silver Mines there are within the Liberty. Alonso de Caceres built this City by order of the Governour Francis de Montejo, in the Year 1539. This is the Residence of the Governour of the Province, and other the King's Officers, as also of the Bishop, who has here his Cathedral and Palace. The next Town is call'd Gracias a Dios, about 30 Leagues Westward of Valladolid, built in 1530, by Gabriel de Rojas, to secure those who wrought at the Gold Mines; and being abandon'd, was after restor'd by Gonzalo de Alvarado, in a very hard and rocky Soil, yet the Inhabitants, with much Pains, have good Corn, and breed very good Mules, and some Horses. S. Pedro, or S. Peter, is the third, 30 Leagues North-west from Valladolid, and 11 from Puerto de Cavallos, on the Bay of Horses. Truxillo the fourth, is 60 Leagues North-east from Valladolid, and on from the North Sea, having a safe Harbour at the bottom of a Bay call'd S. Giles. The Territory about it is so good that it produces all sort of Grain and Fruit, both of the Country, and Europe. S. George de Olancho is the fifth, about 40 Leagues East from Valladolid, inhabited by very few Spaniards, but its Territory swarm with Indians.

The running out of the Peninsula of Yucatan into the Sea, forms a very deep Bay with the Coast of Honduras, on which there are not any Rivers of Note, nor indeed any considerable Harbours, that call'd of Cavallos, or the Horses taking the Name from many Horses cast away there.

Nicaragua

Was first call'd the new Kingdom of Leon by the Governour James Lopez de Salzedo, and has Honduras on the North, the North Sea on the East, Costa Rica, and the South Sea on the South and the same Sea and Guatemala on the West, extending 150 Leagues East and West, and about 80 North and South, and formerly contain'd several Tribes of Indians, whose Territories were call'd Nicoya, Nequecheri, Mabyte, Diria, Mafaya, Managua, Cocoloaque, Cebraco, Miques, and Madera.

The Summer is excessive hot, and the Winter rainy and tempestuous. The Land is most plain, yielding little Corn, but abounds in Fruit and Cattel, as also Cotton, Honey, and Axi, which is the American Pepper. The Forests cover a great part of it, and consist of all sorts of Trees, especially one call'd Zeyba, which Herrera says sometimes grows so big that 15 Men can scarce Fathom it. Oviedo writes, that on the Coast there is a sort of long Shells, in which they find some Pearls, but not so good as those taken out of Oysters. The Natives were formerly much like their Neighbours as to their Customs and Manners, and have since, like them, embrac'd Christianity, and live like the Spaniards.

The most remarkable thing peculiar to this Province, is the famous Lake of Nicaragua, above 130 Leagues in Compass, all the Shores of it cover'd with Towns and Villages of the Natives, and ebbing and flowing as the Sea does. The Head of it is not above 4 or 5 Leagues from the South Sea, and yet it runs into the North Sea, through a Channel of a considerable breadth, which might have afforded a shorter Passage into the South Sea than by Panama, but that there are several great Falls in it, where those who pass up or down must of necessity go ashore, and transport themselves and Goods by Land beyond the Cataract. In the Lake there are several Islands, and it breeds abundance of Fish.

Leon de Nicaragua is the Capital City of the Province, seated about 12 Leagues from the South Sea, on the Bank of the great Lake above-mention'd, and the Residence of the Governour, and other Officers, as also of the Bishop, who has here a good Cathedral, and Palace, besides which there there are five Monasteries, and 120000 Natives within its Liberty. Near the same Lake stands Granada, the second City, 16 Leagues from Leon, where Francis Hernandez de Cordova erected a magnificent Church, and a good Fort, to oppose the Natives before they were subdued. About this Place grow abundance of Sugar-Canes, and the Spaniards have several Mills for making of the Sugar. The third City is Segovia, 30 Leagues from both the former Northward, in whose Territory there are rich Gold Mines. The fourth is Jaen, at the Mouth of the Lake, 30 Leagues from the North Sea. Lastly Realejo, seated a League from the Port call'd Possession.

On the North-east end of the Lake is the burning Mountain, call'd Maffayatan, very high and steep, with a great Mouth at the top, which sends forth a thick smook Morning and Evening, and sometimes great quantities of Pumice stones. Seven Leagues from the City Granada is another burning Mountain call'd Monbacho, most cover'd with excellent Fruit-trees, which are a delightful Supply to all the Country about. Herrera informs us, that a Friar once conceited that the Mass of Fire which continually burnt in this Mountain without being consum'd, could be no other than Gold, and therefore contriv'd a way to let down a great Kettle, with a strong Chain to draw it up, but no sooner they came to the fire than both the Kettle and Chain melted, as if they had been Lead.

Costa Rica,

That is, the Rich Coast, so call'd by the first Discoverers, from the great quantity of Gold they there found among the Natives, borders Northward upon Nicaragua and the Northern Ocean, has the same Sea, and Veragua on the East, and the South Sea on the South and West, with some Part of Nicaragua on the South side; and extends about 90 Leagues from East to West, and about 50 in the largest Place from North to South.

As for Product, it has much the same as its Neighbouring Provinces, but is somewhat Mountainous, and that Part is for the most part Barren, yet Wealthy, as containing Mines of Gold and Silver, which are not so much made of as might be, for want of Labourers.

The Spanish Towns here are four. First, Aranjuez, seated about 5 Leagues from the South Sea, upon the Borders of the Indians, call'd Chomes, and not far from their chief Town; 2. Cartago, 20 Leagues from both Seas, being in the Mid-way betwixt them, so that it has a Sea-Port on each; 3. Castro de Austria, near the North Sea, and the most inconsiderable of the three, there being nothing but the Name in any Author. Lastly, Nicoya, which some make a distinct Province, but in reality it is only a Part of this. The Town lies on the Sea, and has a small Port on the Coast, near which was formerly the Spanish Colony, call'd Brussels; afterwards destroy'd when the Spaniards fell at Variance among themselves.

On the North Sea this Province has two large and convenient Bays; that lying most to the Westward call'd of S. Jerome, the other near the Frontiers of Veragua, Caribaco. On the South Sea, besides the Port of Nicoya, it has several Bays, Capes, and convenient anchoring Places all along the Coast.

Veragua,

The last Province not only of the Government of Guatemala, but of North America and the least of them, joins on the West to Costa Rica, on the East to the Government of Panama, and has the North Sea on the North, and the South Sea on the South. The greatest Length of it from North to South is not above 50 Leagues, and the Breadth from East to West 25.

The Country is most Mountainous and full of impenetrable Woods, so that it affords little Food for Cattle, and as little of any Grain, except only some Indian Wheat and Kitchen Herbs; but to make amends it abounds in Mines, and especially of Gold, which are wrought by such as have Labourers, or else the Metal taken up in the Sands of the Rivers. The Natives were a bold daring People, and hard to be subdu'd by the Spaniards.

The Capital of this Province, where the Governour and others of the King's Officers reside, is call'd, the Conception, 40 Leagues West from Nombre de Dios, near the Coast of the North Sea. 2. La Trinidad, or the Trinity, an open Town, 6 Leagues East from the Conception, along the Sea Coast, the Inland Way being almost impassable, it stands on the Banks of the River Belen, 3 Leagues from the Sea. 3. Santa Fe, 12 Leagues South from the Conception, where the Gold is generally cast and refin'd, and to that Purpose the King keeps Officers there. 4. Carlos, a Town on the South Sea.

Christopher Columbus first discover'd these Provinces we have last spoken of, in the Year 1502, beginning at Cape Casinas, in the Province of Honduras, and thence turning it to the Eastward with much trouble, by reason of the continual East Winds, he sail'd 60 Leagues to another Cape, which he call'd Gracias a Dios, or Thanks be to God, because there the Land run away to the Southward, a Course he could better stand with the East Wind. Thence he sail'd down all that Coast, Bartering with the Indians, Looking-Glasses, Hawk's-Bells, Pins and other Trifles for Gold, till he came to Porto Bello and Nombre de Dios, since two noted Places, we shall have Occasion to speak of, when we begin with South America. This Province was particularly pitch'd upon to reward the great Admiral Christopher Columbus's extraordinary Merits, and to make amends for the Violation of the mighty Advantages he was depriv'd of, and which were his due by Grants made to him, when he undertook the Discovery. In short, his Heirs had this Province of Veragua granted them in Propriety, with the Title of Dukes thereof, which they hold to this Day, and are of the rich Families of Spain sufficiently ennobled by so glorious an Action, as the Discovering the greatest of the Four Parts of the World, which had been unknown to the other Three for so many Ages.

CHAP. XI.

Of the Islands.

THOSE belonging to this North-America are very numerous, and the more because it will be requisite to reckon among them all those which lie close to the Northern Coast of South-America, and might be reckon'd to belong to it, and this because they all lie within that vast Bay, the North and South-America make; for which Reason it would be improper to part them.

It will be needless to say any thing of those which lie in the Northern Frozen Sea, such as Mansfield Island in Hudson's Bay, Cumberland's Isles, between Hudson's and Davis's Streights,

Good Fortune, Resolution, and Button's Islands, without Hudson's Streight, and many more lying dispers'd in those Seas, they being neither habitable, nor scarce known any farther than that they have a being. Wherefore we shall come directly to those which can afford something to be said of them, and to give one general View, place them in their Natural Order from North to South, beginning on the East side of America, and then proceed to those few on the West side, as they are plac'd in the following Table.

Newfound-Land.

Newfound-Land.

The English will have this Island to be first discover'd by Sebastian Cabot in the Service of this Nation; the Spaniards pretend it was found out by Cortereal, who gave his Name to that great Part of the Northern Continent, otherwise call'd Tierra de Labrador, which Spanish Name seems to be an Argument on their Side; and the French are not without Pretensions to this Discovery. Whoever it was, for we avoid all Controversies, the Island is Triangular, about 300 Leagues in Compass, lying before the Bay of S. Laurence between North Canada and Acadia, but 600 Leagues from the Lands-End of England, and between 46 and 53 Degrees of North Latitude.

The Country is hotter and colder than could naturally be expected from such Latitude, the Winter being so excessive Cold that for five Months there is scarce any stirring abroad. The Soil is as barren as may be, being all Rocks, Sand and Gravel, so that the Inhabitants have no Provisions, but what are sent them from England, except Wild-Fowl, Fish and Venison; the whole Island being either cover'd with Woods, or where there is any Part open nothing grows but Moss, or else Sedge, instead of Grass. The Trees are Fir, Spruce, Pine, Birch and other Sorts of Timber; the Beasts Deer, Hares, Foxes, Squirrels, Wolves, Bears, Beavers and Otters.

The Natives are always represented as a tractable People, neither subdu'd, nor converted, but living after their old Manner; of the smaller size, broad-fac'd and chested, without Beards, painting themselves, and wearing only an Apron of Stag-skins about them in the Summer, and painting their Skins. They believe in one God, who they say created Men and Women by sticking Arrows in the Ground; yet they farther say there is one God, one Son, one Mother, and one Sun; but God above all. Some of them are said to have much Familiarity with the Devil; and the Women allow'd to try many Men before they Marry, but to be very faithful to him they make choice of. The Dead they place standing in the Grave, with all Necessaries for a long Journey.

The only Trade and Business here is Fish, whereof there is such Plenty in this Sea, that all the World might be supply'd from it. All sorts may be here taken in immense Quantities, but the only Fishery regarded is that of the Cod, whereof at least 500 Ships are Laden every Year for France, Spain, Portugal, Italy, England and other Parts. The Great bank, where the Main Fishery is, being a Sand 300 Miles in Length and 75 in Breadth is 20 Leagues from Cape Raz, the nearest Land to it. The next is Vert Bank 80 Miles long, and 40 over in the broadest Place; then Banquero, about as big as the last, and some others of less Note. The French generally fish most off these banks, and the English about the Island in Sloops. The fishing Season is from Spring till September.

The first Settlement here was made by Mr. John Grey, in the Year 1610, at Conception Harbour, on the East side of the Island, but was forc'd to quit it. In 1521, Captain Winn carried over another Colony for S. George Calvert, and settled at Ferryland, South of Conception Harbour, and call'd that Part of the Country Avalon, which Name it still retains. The other Settlements of the English, which deserve no particular Account are Ferryland, Cape Broil, Bay of Bulls, Brigs Bay, Bell Inn, Toads Cove, Mummables Bay, Petty Harbour, and S. John's Town, this last containing about 60 Houses, or Huts; the best of the others 20 and the worst 2, or 3. Besides these, there were 12 other such like Settlements scatter'd about, so that there have been reckon'd 4000 English Men, Women and Children on the Island. The French have always kept good Footing here, their Principal Town and Fortrefs is Placentia, and next to it S. Peters, then S. Laurence, and many more Habitations along the Southern Coast, where they are very Strong, and both Nations have there done one another much Harm during these Wars, yet both keep their own.

Assumption Island lies West of Newfoundland in the Bay the Land forms there at the Mouth of the great River of Canada; it is above 30 Leagues long, and 7 or 8 in Breadth, most Plain, and the Soil seems to be indifferent. S. John's Isle is to the South of the last, in the same Bay, and close to the Coast of Acadia, about 20 Leagues in length, and about 5 in Breadth where widest.

Breton Island, is so call'd from its Eastermost Cape, and S. Laurence from being the Entrance into the Bay of that Name, about 80 Leagues in Compass, inhabited by Indians like those on the Continent, and has nothing else remarkable. No more have any of those small Islands nam'd in the foregoing Table, being all inconsiderable, mostly barren and none inhabited.

Bermudas, or Summer Islands.

John Bermudez, a Spaniard, was the first who discover'd these Islands, and gave them his Name, after whom others of his Countrymen touch'd there, but none attempted to settle, as not thinking the Islands worth looking after. The first Englishman that saw them, was one May cast on them by Strefs of Weather in the Year 1593. Yet his Account mov'd not any Body to look out for them till Sir George Sommers had been wreck'd upon them in 1609, and given them his Name, which by Corruption is come to that we now give them of Summer Islands. After the return of Sir George's Company into England, the Virginia Company Sold these Islands to 120 Persons, who by Charter from King James the First became Proprietors of them. In 1612. one Richard Moor brought 60 Persons into the great Island, where they settled and built Huts, which after grew into Houses, and by degrees to a handsom Town call'd S. George, whence the same Name is given to the whole Island, which yielding good Tabacco at first and much Ambergreece, being found about it, encourag'd the relieving of them with fresh Supplies; but when they began to flourish, a Plague of Rats, which devour'd all Things both in the Houses and Fields, had like to have overthrown the Young Settlement. In 1619, there were 1000 English on the Islands, and soon after 3000, who had Ten Forts for their Security, but at last they increas'd to near 10000, a considerable Number for those small Islands.

The Number of these Islands is uncertain, they are so many and so small, the Names of the chiefest are, S. George, S. David, Ireland, Somerfer, Long Bird, Cooper's, Nonfuch, &c. amounting in all to about 400, but most of them so small that they are not habitable; the greatest Length they all together extend to being under 20 Miles, and the the greatest Breadth they take up 5. Their Latitude is between 32 and 33 Degrees, and they are 300 Leagues from Cape Hatteras in Carolina, which is the nearest Land to them. The greatest Island is call'd S. George, about 16 Miles long, and not 3 over in the broadest Place, naturally defended by Rocks out at Sea, and Artificially by several Forts on the Channels, and only two of them fit for any Ships to come in at. It is remarkable, that tho' these small Spots of Islands are so far from any other Land, yet here is a Tide, which rises and falls 3 Foot.

The Town of S. George has 6 or 7 Forts and Batteries to defend it, mounted with 70 Pieces of Cannon, a good Church, a tolerable Library, about 1000 Houses, well Built and a State-House. Besides this Town there are 8 Tribes, call'd Hamilton's, Smith's, Devonshire, Pembroke, Pager's, Warwick, Southampton and Sandy's Tribes.

The Air here is serene, delightful, temperate and healthy, whence the Trees are always green, new Leaves sprouting out, as the old ones drop off. The greatest Fault is, they are subject to dreadful Storms of Thunder and Lightning. Generally the Country is so very healthy, that the greatest Distemper is for the most part a Cold. Their Water is all brackish, which obliges them to save the Rain in Cisterns. The Soil is very fruitful, yielding two Crops every Year of Indian Wheat, which is the Common Food. All American and European Plants grow to Perfection. Trees there are of all sorts, particularly Cedars, which are the best of all the English-American Plantations, Palm, Barberry, Laurel, Olive, Mulberry, Pear, and Orange-Trees; the Fruit of these last the most delicious of any yet known. Of Fowl there is great Variety; but of Beasts the English found none but Swine, which had been left there by the Spaniards and increas'd; but for Fish there is as great Plenty as in any Part of the World.

Oranges us'd formerly to be brought over from Bermuda, which have not of late Years. Amber-greece is another of their Commodities, which they find upon the Shore, as was Sperma Ceti, and Whale Oil; but their Trade is much decay'd, and now they employ themselves much in building of small Ships and Sloops; so that the People are generally Poor, and their Diet ordinary, of which they have Plenty and live Easy.

The Lucayo Islands.

Guahani one of these Islands, was the first Land of America, Christopher Columbus discover'd in his first Voyage upon that Design, which he call'd S. Salvador, and reckon'd it was 950 Leagues from the Cannaries. This Island was very small, lying in 26 Degrees of North Latitude, and about it a vast Number of other Islands great and small. The Natives of them all seem'd to be in their Primitive Innocence, going naked, amaz'd at the sight of the Ships, flocking Aboard them, and admiring every Thing they saw. No Cattel or living Creatures were found in them, but Birds, especially Parrots, and some Snakes. They knew nothing of Iron, but instead of it made Use of sharp Stones and Bones of Fishes. The only Thing they had to Trade with was Cotton, Parrots, and Weapons pointed with Fish Bones. All these Islands are most Pleasant and Delightful, the Air being generally serene, the Heat temper'd with the constant Breezes, and the Soil extraordinary fruitful, the Trees and Fields always green. Some little Gold was seen among the People, but that they had from other Parts. Some of these Islands, are 20, 30, or more Leagues in Length; others much less, and many so small that they look more like Rocks. They differ not at all from one another, nor have they been much sought after by Europeans, and therefore there is the less to be said of them, since what serves one may be taken for them all.

Providence Island may be reckon'd in this Number, which has been possess'd by the Proprietors of Carolina, since the Year 1667, being in 25 Degrees of North Latitude, 28 Miles long and 11 over where broadest. The People that first went to inhabit it were, as is usual in such Colonies, a Lewd Gang, who shipp'd off their Governour for Jamaica, and liv'd as they pleas'd. Some Years after, the Spaniards carry'd off and destroy'd all they found upon the Island, and by that Means oblig'd the Rest of the Planters to quit it. About 1689, a fresh Parcel went over from England and other Parts. The chief support of this wretched Colony depended upon Wrecks and Trade with Pyrates, who often come thither to spend their Money and Riot. The Town in it was call'd Nassau, and said to contain 160 Houses, or Cottages, with a Fort. Besides this, there were other miserable Settlements on Harbour Island, and Eleuthera. The only Commodity they have here to Export is Salt, whereof they transport considerable Quantities to the Continent. In 1703, the French and Spaniards utterly destroy'd the Town and Fort here, carry'd away the Governour, all the Blacks, and several Inhabitants, the rest flying to the Continent, since which it continues Desert, as do the others above-mention'd.

Hispaniola,

Discover'd by Columbus in his first Voyage, and by the Natives call'd Ayti, or Hayti, and Quisqueia, lies between 18 and 20 Degrees of North Latitude, and is about 400 Leagues in Compass, as being near 150 in Length, and 60 in Breadth where largest. The Mornings are somewhat hot, but the Winds then rising from the Sea make it temperate all the rest of the Day. The Soil is very Fruitful, and the abundance of Pasture has occasion'd all Sorts of Cattel, as Horses, Kine, and Swine to increase so prodigiously, that they run wild, belonging to no Man, but are free to any that will take them. These were first brought from Spain; for at the Time of the first Discovery, here were no other Beasts, but a sort of little Creatures call'd Hutias, something like Rabbits, but smaller; and a sort of little dumb Dogs, which never bark'd.

Of all the sorts of Fish, which were most of thole known in Europe, and others we are Strangers to, the Manati was singular, being as big as a Calf, with two Feet before, which serve it to go on Land and swim in the Water. Some of these are 20 Foot long; the Females are deliver'd of their Young like Cows, and have two Dugs to suckle them. The Flesh of them is as good as Veal, and will keep a long Time either smoak'd, or dry'd in the Sun. The Fat of it never grows rusty, and is good for several Uses. Of Birds here is the greatest and most beautiful Variety, being of all sorts that America breeds.

Nor is there less Diversity of Fruits and Plants, than in any Part of the Continent.

When first discover'd, this Island was extraordinary rich in Gold Mines, particularly those in the Province of Cibao and S. Christophers, which yielded incredible Quantities, and were the Death of abundance of the Natives. At present we hear of no Gold brought from thence; which doubtless is because the Mines have been exhausted by the greedy search of the first Discoverers. Its other Product is Cotton, and Indigo, which is the main Trade at this Time.

The Natives went naked, and were an innocent simple sort of People, living upon what the Earth naturally produc'd, or at least with little Labour, in Villages of small Huts. They had something of Religious Worship, which they Paid to little Images of Wood or Stone, and endeavour'd to hide them from the Spaniards. These they call'd Cemis, and had Houses set apart to keep them in. Besides the Caciques kept three Stones, which they honour'd, pretending the one was good to preserve their Harvest, another to obtain Rain, and the third for Women in Labour. When a Cacique dy'd, they Bow'd him and dry'd up his Body at the Fire, preserving it afterwards with Bread and Drink by it, and his Wives to attend. They imagin'd the Souls of the Dead went to a Delightful Valley, where they found their Ancestors, and liv'd in all fulness of Pleasure. Many Superstitions were in Use among them, too tedious to relate, especially considering there are none of those People now left, they being all consum'd by the Wars, Diseases and the Labour of the Mines.

When Columbus first Discover'd this Island, he built a Wooden Fort on it, in which he left 30 Men, but at his return found them all kill'd, and the Fort burnt. He therefore remov'd thence, and built the Town he call'd Isabella, on the North side of the Island, where he found a small Harbour and a pleasant Situation; but neither was this lasting, the Inhabitants being afterwards remov'd to Santo Domingo. This is now the Metropolis seated on the South side of the Island, upon a good Harbour, in a delightful Plain. It is reckon'd one of the best Cities in those Parts, being very spacious, almost all of Stone, and encompass'd with a strong Wall. Here is also a Cathedral, this being an Archbishoprick, several Monasteries of Dominicans, Franciscans, Mercenarians and two of Nuns, a free School, to which is annex'd a Revenue of 4000 Ducats, and an Hospital worth 22000 Ducats a Year, besides a Mint, and a strong Castle; and it is the Residence of the Sovereign Court of all the Islands. The Trade of the West-Indies being remov'd to other Parts, this City is much decay'd. This Place was taken in the Year 1586 by Sir Francis Drake, who after Plundering and doing much Mischief, ransom'd what remain'd. There are 10, or 12 other Towns, but none to compare to this, and all much decay'd; the other Discoveries and Conquests on the Continent having drawn away the Inhabitants. The Names of the Principal Towns are Salvaledon, Zeybo, Cotuy, Azua, Jaguana, Concepcion de la Vega, Santiago de los Cavalleros, Puerto de Plata, and Monte Christo.

Cuba

Was like the last discover'd by Columbus, in his first Voyage, but he made not stay on it, nor did he know whether it was an Island, or part of the Continent. The second Voyage he sail'd a considerable Way along the Coast of it, but not about. James Velasquez, was the Man who entirely discover'd and subdu'd it, in the Year 1511.

The Island lies between 20 and 23 Degrees of North Latitude, East of the Coast of Mexico; South of Florida, West of Hispaniola, and North of Jamaica. The Length of it is above 230 Leagues from East to West, but not above 45 in Breadth in the widest Part. As to Air, Fertility, Product, Natives and Animals it agrees in most Particulars with what has been said of Hispaniola, the nearest Lands of them being not above 10 Leagues asunder, and both of them within the Tropick of Cancer, with inconsiderable Difference in Latitude. The Land is for the most part Plain, tho' there are very high Mountains at the East End, and others not so high in the Middle, from which several pleasant Rivers flow, some to the North and others to the South, and all full of excellent Fish. The whole Length of it is cover'd with Woods; so that Travellers may go from one End to the other in a continual Shade, of abundance of sorts of Trees, among which there are most stately Cedars; so large that Canoes have been made of the Body of a single one, that would carry 50 Men, or upwards. Gemelli tells us for Fruit, here are two particular sorts, which are not found elsewhere. The one is like a Hart, call'd Guanavana, green without, and has some thorny Prickles, within made up of white Morfels of a pleasant Taste, between sweet and sharp, with some Stones. The other sort is call'd Camito, exactly like an Orange on the out-side, and within has a white and red Pulp, of a sweet Taste. The Tree as tall as a Pear Tree, the Leaf on the one side green, and on the other a Cinamon Colour. Besides these, there are all other sorts of American and European Fruits.

The Mountains, he says, and is the last who has writ of that Place, are full of Wild Boars, Cows, Horses and Mules. Besides, there are abundance of all sorts of Birds, especially Parrots and Partridges, bigger than Quails, with blue Heads. And of those that are fit for the Cage, there is great Plenty of a delicate sort they call Chambergos. There is a sort of Parrots very common, call'd Cotorreras, some of which have Black and Green Feathers, and others Blue; others Black and Green Feathers, their Breast red and half the Head white, being good to eat. The Guacamayas do not talk, but are so curiously colour'd, that the best Pencil can scarce equal them. The County in general is very Delightful, being full of little Houses, with Gardens and Farms, where there is no want of Indian Fruit.

The Capital City and Bishop's See is call'd Santiago de Cuba, built by James Velasquez the first Conqueror, on the South side of the Island, about two Leagues from the Sea, at the bottom of a Harbour, which justly claims Place among the best in America, having a narrow Entrance, within which is a spacious Bay, full of little Islands, and is so still that there is scarce any need of Anchors. The Trade being remov'd to the Havana, this City is much decay'd, and is the Residence of the Deputy-Governour of the Island. The principal Commodities Exported thence, are Hides and Sugar, besides Copper, whereof there are rich Mines on high Mountains 3 Leagues from the City.

The

The Harbour, tho' it has not the Title, may now be reckon'd the Chief, seated in 23 Degrees 20 Minutes Latitude, in a delightful Plain. It is almost Round, about half a League in Compass, wall'd and lately much fortify'd. The Inhabitants are about 4000 Spaniards, Mulattos and Blacks; the Women beautiful, the Men ingenious, and the Houses low. The Harbour enclōies two sides of the City, and is safe against Enemies and Weather, so deep that the greatest Ships Anchor at a small Distance from the Shore. It is defended by three Castles, the Chief of them call'd El Morro, the second De la Punta, and the third only The Fort. The first on the Left hand entring the Harbour, which it defends with 12 heavy Pieces of Cannon call'd, The Apostles, lying level with the Water, and has 55 Pieces mounted in all. The Fort which is on the other side of the Harbour has 4 good Bastions and a Platform towards the Mouth of the Port, well furnish'd with Brass Cannon. The Castle of the Point is small, but has also 4 Bastions. Here are several Churches and Monasteries, and two very good Hospitals, and it is to be observ'd that of late Years the Fortifications of this Place have been very much improv'd.

Besides these two, here are many other considerable Towns, as Baracoa, S. Salvador or Bayamo, Puerto del Principe, Espritu Santo, La Trinitad, and others, which would require a much greater Compass to treat of in Particular, than this Volume will allow. Along the Southern Coast there lies a vast Number of Islands, parted by very narrow Channels; the Islands always green and beautiful, and therefore call'd by the Spaniards, Jardin de la Reyna, the Queens Garden. Many other small Islands lie about not only Cuba but Hispaniola, Jamaica and Puerto Rico, which cannot here be taken Notice of, as being too inconsiderable, and would take up a Volume to treat of them all, which no Man has yet done, and therefore it may suffice to speak of those, which deserve it.

Jamaica.

As well as the other two already mention'd, was discover'd by Christopher Columbus, but this in his second Voyage to America. It lies in about 17 or 18 Degrees of North Latitude, about 30 Leagues South from Cuba, and the same Distance West from Hispaniola; reckon'd 50 Leagues in Length, and 20 in Breadth.

The Spaniards possess'd themselves of this Island, as soon as any of the others after Hispaniola, and built some Towns in it, where they traded with Hides, Tallow, Pepper, Cotton and Indigo; for it never yielded any Gold, like Hispaniola and Cuba, and therefore it was always more neglected, and never well inhabited, or fortify'd. However they remain'd possess'd of it till the Days of the Harper Grace Cromwell, who being at War with the Spaniards, on Account of their harbouring King Charles in his Exile, fitted out a Fleet under the Command of Admiral Penn, with 6 or 7000 Land men aboard, Commanded by General Wentley, against the West-Indies. Those Forces at the Leeward Islands were increas'd to near 10000 Men, and sail'd thence to Hispaniola, where they Land'd, near the City of Santo Domingo, but were defeated and forc'd back to their Ships. This Disappointment put them upon some other Adventure, and accordingly they Land'd next in Jamaica, which being wholly unprovided to withstand such a Power as wanting both Men and Ammunition, they made an easy Conquest. The Spaniards retir'd to the Woods and Mountains, whence they made some Excursions, but receiving no Recruits, and being themselves no way Able to Cope with such a Numerous Enemy, they at last wasted themselves over to Cuba, and thence to other Parts.

Passing by other Particulars since it came into the Engl'sh Hands, which do not make to our Purpose, as the shameful sheltering of Pyrates so constantly practis'd there, and much more of that Nature, we will only speak a few Words of the most Dreadful Earthquake which hapned in the Year 1692. It began on the 7th of June about Noon, and in two Minutes shook down and drown'd 9 parts in 10 of the City of Port-Royal, the Water breaking and the Land sinking, so that the Houses were some half, and others quite under Water, above 1000 Engl'sh and Blacks perishing in the Town. All the Houses in the Island were thrown Down. Two Mountains were overthrown and met, and another split. The Swan Frigate, a Man of War, lying by the Wharf to Careen, was thrown over the Tops of some Houses. A hideous Noise was heard on the Mountains, and those few Houses that did not quite fall were so shaken that no Man durst live in them. The Shock was so strong, that People could scarce keep their Legs, when running for their Lives; many fell upon their Knees or Faces. Not one House was left standing at Passage Fort, one at Liguania, and none at Santiago, but a few low ones built by the Spaniards. The Earth open'd in several Places, and on the North side of the Island swallow'd People, Houses, Trees, and whole Plantations, leaving instead of them a Lake of above 1000 Acres.

The Island is cut in two by a Ridge of Mountains running across it from East to West, so high that they are scarce passable; and by them it is divided into the North and South sides. From these Mountains very many Rivers run down, crossing it the other way, which render the Land extraordinary fertile, and pleasant; for the Trees are green all the Year.

The Heat is temper'd by the daily Breezes, so that the Hottest Time of the Day is the first Part of the Morning, after which those Constant Gales rising from the Sea render it Moderate; besides which the Rains and Dews falling at Night help very much to cool. On the Hills the Weather is cool enough, especially towards the Tops of the high Mountains, which are excessive cold. The Length of the Days and Nights does not vary much, by Reason of the Nearness to the Equinoctial. All the Night the Wind blows off the Island, from every Part of it to the Sea.

The Product and Commodities of Jamaica, are
1. Sugar, which is finer than that of Barbadoes, and the Quantity yearly brought over very great.
2. Cacao Nuts, for making of Chocolate, whereof there is now very little, the Trees of late Years being said not to thrive, and when they did the Nut was one of the worst sorts that grew in America.
3. Indigo, which is good, tho' of less Value than the East-India, but abundance of it grows in the Island.
4. Jamaica Pepper, by some call'd All-Spice, how properly, is not worth controverting, but the two prevailing Tastes in it are of Pepper and Cloves.
5. Cotton, the Quantity

tity very considerable, but not reckon'd so good as that of the East. 6. Ginger, which also is plentiful enough. These are the chief Commodities for Trade, besides which the Island produces most Things necessary for Human Life; as Pasture, Fruit and Timber-Trees, and all Sorts of Herbs and Plants, Variety of Fowl, and the Sea Store of Fish. Besides what has been mention'd, here grows Guajacum, China, Sarsaparilla, Cassia, Tamarinds, and many more Medicinal and Useful Plants and Trees. The Tobacco here is not worth speaking of, for tho' it grows where planted, yet the Quantity is inconsiderable; either that it proves not good, or that the Inhabitants find better Advantage other Ways. More of the Growth of the Island the Curious may find in Dr. Sloan's Natural History of it.

Besides the Trade to Europe, there was another far more beneficial from Jamaica to the Spanish American Dominions, for Blacks, and English Manufactures, which brought in very considerable Sums of Pieces of Eight, and was a great Advantage, not only to the Island but to England. The present War has interrupted, and Peace may restore it. From England Provisions, all sorts of Cloathing, Household-Stuff, Working-Tools, and many other Necessaries are carried over thither, which yield a considerable Profit.

To pass by what this Island has been, it is at present divided into 16 Parishes, which beginning at Morant Point, being the first on the South-east side, lie thus. 1. S. Davids, where is a small Place call'd Free-Town, and Port Morant, where Ships find shelter. 2. Port-Poyal, the Name of the Capital City of Jamaica, very great and considerable before the Earthquake above-mention'd, but totally ruin'd by it, and being Rebuilt, was 10 Years after burnt down, and the Town remov'd to Kingston in S. Andrew's Parish. The Port which gave Occasion to build this City is so deep and large that it can contain the largest Fleet in the World, and Ships ride safe in it from all Weather. 3. S. Andrews, where, as has been said, is the Town of Kingston, increas'd to 7 or 800 Houses by the Destruction of Port-Royal. 4. S. Catharines Parish, and in it the small Town of Passage Fort, at the Mouth of the River that runs to Santiago, containing 200 Houses, being 6 Miles from that Town, and as many from Port-Royal. 5. S. John's up the Inland, reckon'd the Best in all Jamaica, and in it Spanish-Town, or Santiago, the Capital of the Island, of about 2000 Houses since the Ruin of Port-Royal. A Pleasant City, whose Inhabitants spare for nothing that Luxury can prompt. 6. S. Dorothy's Parish, has Old Harbour in it, a good Road, where many ships may Ride. 7. Vere Parish. 8. Elizabeth's. 9. S. James's. 10. S. Annes. 11. Clarendon. 12. Maries. 13. S. Thomas in the Vale. 14. S. Georges. 15. S. Thomas, and 16. Kingston.

It is remarkable that in so great and fruitful an Island as this is, there is scarce any Place that can be call'd a Town, besides those already mention'd; and yet some pretend to tell us there are 60000 English Men, Women and Children in the Island; how true is hard to determine.

Puerto Rico

By the Natives call'd Borriquen, was first discover'd by Christopher Columbus in his 2d. Voyage, Ann. 1493, and by him nam'd S. John, to which was afterwards added de Puerto Rico, or of the Rich Port, and lies East from Hispaniola about 20 Leagues. The Length of it is between 30 and 35 Leagues and the Breadth 20, being a long Square. It is for the most part temperate, being cool'd as has been said of Jamaica. The Soil is rich and affords excellent Pasture; but the Cattel here naturally are apt to grow very wild. Most of the Country is Hilly, but the Middle of it is cut asunder by a very high Ridge of Mountains, call'd by the Spaniards, Sierra del Loquillo, the little Madman's Mountain. Several Rivers fall from it and water the Land. The general Growth is the same as in Jamaica, and in the other Islands, and in this as well as them grows the poisonous Fruit the Spaniards call Manzanilla, or little Apple, most agreeable to look to, and of a delicious Scent, but eaten is certain Death; nay, the very Shade of it causes such as Sleep under the Tree to swell, and any Drops falling from it on the Flesh raise Blisters. To make Amends here are several Medicinal Trees, and among them the Tabernum, from which a Bituminous Substance distills, which heals Wounds and cures all Pains caus'd by Cold.

It was formerly extraordinary rich in Gold and Silver Mines, which are now either exhausted, or neglected for want of People to work in them. The main Wealth of it at present consists in Sugar, Ginger, Cassia, Cotton and Hides, there being such Multitudes of Cattel that they are kill'd only for them, and the Tallow, the Flesh being left a Prey to the Birds and Dogs.

John Ponce de Leon, was the Spaniard that began to settle here, in the Year 1510, who built a Town on the North side, but was forc'd to remove it, and afterwards fix'd it at that which is still call'd S. Germain on the West side. In 1514. the City call'd S. Juan de Puerto Rico, as well as the Island, was founded, on the North side, and had the Name from the Goodness of the Harbour, on which it is seated. It is a Bishop's See and has a noble Cathedral, two other Churches, and without a Monastery of Dominicans. The Port is large and defended against all Winds, as well as Enemies, the Entrance being a narrow Channel, commanded by a strong Fort, and another call'd the Fortress at a small Distance from it. The 3d Town is call'd Arezibo, besides which there are several smaller Places or Villages, and abundance of scatter'd Settlements.

The Caribbee Windward and Leeward Islands.

According to Herrera and the Spaniards, who gave the Names, the Windward Islands, or those which reach from the Island of S. John de Puerto Rico, above describ'd on the North, as far as Martinico Southward, that and all the rest below it towards the Continent of South America, being call'd, the Leeward Islands, because they lie off out of the common Course of Ships sailing from Spain to the West-Indies. Under the latter Name we include several small Islands lying farther in to the Westward, along the Coast of South America:

The Caribbee Islands, are also call'd Antilles; as is thought from the Greek Anti, opposite, with respect to their Position to the greater Islands. They have the Name of Islands of Caribbes and Canibals, from the Inhabitants eating of Man's Flesh. They are all within the Torrid Zone; from 10 to 19 Degrees of North Latitude, and yet healthy and temperate, for the same Reason as has been said in speaking of the other Islands, which is the Sea Breeze coming duly up in the Morning, and blowing the greater part of the Day. As for Cold, it is scarce known in these Islands. All the difference constituting Summer and Winter, is Rain and fair Weather, for the Trees and Fields are consequently green all the Year about. However the Nights are delightfully cool, but it is dangerous to lie uncovered, because that coolness gives Colds, and causes many Distempers, especially in the Stomach. The Days are never above 14 Hours long, or ever less than 10.

The Soil in many Places is as rich as any in the World, and all the inhabited Islands produce Plenty of all things for the Subsistence of the Inhabitants. To forward the which, they are all well provided with excellent Springs, Lakes, Brooks, and even good Rivers; besides Mineral Waters found in some of them, and successful for the Cure of several Distempers. Sulphur is found in many Parts of the Mountains; those which deserve the Name of Rivers are never dry, and have an infinite quantity of Fish; Vines thrive very well, and bear twice a Year, the Grapes are good, but the Wine made of them will not keep; Wheat never ripens here, by reason the Land is too rank, and it never comes to Ear.

The Natives call'd Caribbs, or Canibals, are well shap'd, proportionable, of a middle Stature, and a pleasant smiling Aspect, their Skins of an Olive Colour, and their Eyes black, their Nose and Forehead flat, which is done designedly, and not natural; but there are none lame, or Crook'd, or otherwise deform'd, and they have no Beard at all to be seen, for if any grows, they pull it up by the Root, thinking it a great Deformity. They go stark Naked as they come into the World, both Men and Women, and if any of them should go about to hide their Privities, they would be laugh'd at by the rest; nor could the Christians living among them ever persuade them to wear any Covering, only out of Complaisance, when they come among Christians, some of them will put on a Shirt, Drawers, and Hat, which they lay by as soon as they return home. Instead of Cloaths they paint their Bodies after several manners, but generally Red. As for Religion, they practise little, yet have some natural Notion of a Deity, or superiour Power residing in Heaven, in the same manner as our Deists; for they believe God does not concern himself with our Actions, good or bad, and therefore they neither honour nor regard him. All their Worship is paid to some good Spirits they talk of, which are their Gods, and they suppose to be very numerous, and that every Person has one peculiar. They have also a sort of Conjurers, which are their Priests, and have each of them a God of their own, or rather, as is believ'd, a familiar Devil. This may suffice in general; we now come to say something of each Island of Note in particular, beginning with the most Northerly, and so proceeding Southward.

Antigua, and Sombrero, are the two first, in 18 Degrees North Latitude, both small and uninhabited.

Virgenes, the Virgins, are 12 or 13 very little ones about the same Latitude, between the former and Puerto Rico, and depart as the last.

Santa Cruz, or the Holy Cross, somewhat to the Southward of the Virgins, is about 10 League in length, and somewhat less in breadth, has very fruitful Plains, possess'd by the French, who have made very good Settlements on it, their principal Trade being Sugar, for they do not much regard the Cotton, which it will produce in great Plenty.

Anguila, in Spanish an Eel, because it is long and narrow, is in 18 Degrees, all plain, but no thought worth a regular Plantation, yet there are several Families of English on it, who live almost like Indians, under no Government, and without any Trade, upon the Product of the Land.

S. Martin lies a little to the Southward of Anguila, 7 Leagues long, and 4 broad, famous for its great Salt-Pits, and possess'd by the French and Dutch jointly, its principal Commodity besides Salt being Tobacco, which is here very good.

Saba is to the South-west, between the last and Santa Cruz, a pleasant Spot, and inhabited by some few Dutch Families, sent thither from their Colony at S. Eustace.

S. Bartholomew, East of Saba, bears abundance of good Trees, is full of variety of Birds, and has very good Stone for making of Lime, which the French who inhabit it, send to all the other Islands.

S. Eustace, West of the last, in 17 Degrees, 40 Minutes Latitude, and not above 5 Leagues in Compass, being one entire Mountain rising in the middle of the Sea, like a Sugar-Loaf. Yet the Dutch have there a Colony of about 1600 Men well provided. Only the top of the Mountain is wooded, all the rest being improv'd, and yielding abundance of Tobacco. There are no Springs in it, but every House has a large Cistern to preserve Rain-water.

S. Christophers, in 17 Degrees, 25 Minutes Latitude, is about 25 Leagues in Compass, divided into four Quarters, or Cantons, two belonging to the French, and two to the English, the former having the plainer and better Lands, and better Forts, but the latter are more numerous. The French Forts are four, mounted with good Cannon, especially towards the Sea; the English have but two. There is scarce any crossing the high Mountains which divide this Island, but the Communication is by Sea. The French have also here a good Town, inhabited by Merchants and Handicrafts. The Houses are of Timber, on a Stone Foundation, and the Capucins, Jesuits, and Carmelites have Monasteries; there is also an Hospital, and the Governour has a very stately House. The English have several good Houses, and five Churches. The chief Commodity of the Island is Sugar.

Nieves, or as we call it Nevis, in 17 Degrees 19 Minutes Latitude, only 6 Leagues in Compass, and in the midst of it a high Mountain wooded to the top. All the Houses of the Inhabitants, being about 3000 English, are round the Mountain, which is well water'd down to the Sea side. They drive a considerable Trade of Sugar, Ginger, and Tobacco, have 3 Churches meanly built, and a good Fort to secure the Landing-place, and Ware-houses.

Redonda, so call'd because round, is very small, and not inhabited.

Barbuda.

Barbada, or as the English call it, Barbuda, is in 17 Degrees, 30 Minutes Latitude, and 5 Leagues round. The English possess'd themselves of it long ago, and were forc'd to abandon it by the continual Persecutions of the Caribbes from other Islands; however they settled there again, and are now stronger than ever, dealing much in Cattel and Corn, which they have plenty of Trade for to the other Islands.

Antego, as we call it, properly Santa Maria la Amigua, in 16 Degrees, 40 Minutes Latitude, about 6 Leagues long, but not so broad. It was once thought not habitable, for want of fresh Water, but the English, who are Masters of it, have dry Wells, and made Cisterns for Rain-water, which supply them, and it is now well Inhabited. Its Capital Town, call'd S. Johns, has about 100 Houses, the People are very well to pass, having a good Trade with the other Islands, and very great plenty of Fowl and Cattel.

Monserate, in the same Latitude, to the Westward of the last, in Figure Oval, and about 3 Leagues in length. Here is much Mountain, cover'd with Cedars, and other beautiful Trees, but the Valleys are very fruitful, being well water'd. All the Product is like the other Islands. The English have been possess'd of it many Years, and are grown numerous, the most remarkable thing in it being a handsome Church, the Pulpit, Pews, and Wainscoting whereof is neat, and all of sweet-scented Wood.

Guadalupe is the largest, and one of the finest Islands the French possess in that Part, being about 60 Leagues in Compass, in 16 Degrees Latitude, and is cut in two from North to South by a little Channel, only capable of carrying Canoes. The Eastern Part is call'd Cabes Terre, and the Western Basse Terre. There are several Hills in it, and particularly about the middle is a high Mountain, partly craggy Rocks, and partly cover'd with stately Trees. At the foot of these Mountains are many large Vales, water'd by several Rivers and Brooks, as also some hot Waters, good for curing several Distempers proceeding from Cold. Several parts of these Plains are Plow'd, which is not usual in the other Islands, and they produce Rice, Indian Wheat, Mandioca Root to make their Cassavi Bread, Potatoes, Ginger, and Sugar, as well as any Country in the World.

In that Part call'd Basse-Terre there is a good Town, consisting of several Streets, the Houses well built, and two Stories high; besides a Parish-Church, and Monasteries of Jesuits and Carmelites, and large Ware-houses. The Governour lives in a square Castle without the Town. In the other Part, call'd Cabes-Terre, there is also a very good Fort for the security of it. The French, who are possess'd of this large Island, have erected several Sugar-works, and drive a considerable Trade with that Commodity, and the others above-mention'd.

Desseada lies to the Eastward of Guadalupe, in the same Latitude, and but 10 Leagues from it. The Land is good enough, but not inhabited as yet.

Los Santos, and Las Aves, or the Saints and Island of Birds; they are four in number, South of Guadalupe, the other West from them, and so call'd from the multitude of Birds in it, besides which they have nothing remarkable, none of them being inhabited.

Marigalante is in 15 Degrees, 40 Minutes Latitude, plain and woody, inhabited by the French who have made their Settlements there later than in other Islands.

Dominica, in 15 Degrees, 30 Minutes Latitude, 13 Leagues in length, and near as much over in the broadest Place. In the midst of it several high Mountains enclose an inaccessible Bottom, where from the tops of certain Rocks may be seen an infinite multitude of Reptiles of a prodigious Length and Bulk. This Island has never been possess'd by any Europeans, but continues still in the Dominion of the Native Canibals, who are at Peace with the French, but hate the English, and do them all the Mischief they are able. Those who have seen it, say it is one of the best of the Caribbe Islands, for its fruitful Valleys, and large Plains, water'd by abundance of excellent Springs. And this is the last of those the Spaniards call the Windward Islands.

Martinico, as we call it, or Madanina according to the Indians, is the first to the Northward of those the Spaniards call the Leeward Islands, seated in 14 Degrees, 30 Minutes of North Latitude, 16 Leagues long, and about 45 in compass, now one of the most noted, and best Peopled of all the Caribbe Islands. It has more Mountains than any of the other Islands, which are all not habitable, being full of wild Beasts, and Serpents, and cover'd with stately Trees. But there are abundance of Flats on Hills, and the sides of them all habitable, and good Land, tho' hard to cultivate, by reason of their extraordinary steepness. The Tobacco that grows on the Eminences is much better than that in the Plains. Here are said to be above 10000 French Inhabitants, besides Indians and Slaves, who are no less numerous. The French have very much fortified this Place, and it is now one of the strongest they have in the West-Indies.

S. Lucy lies South of the last, in 13 Degrees, 40 Minutes Latitude. There are in it two very high and steep Mountains, and at the foot of them pleasant Valleys, shaded with Trees, and water'd with many Springs, where the French have some Settlements.

Barbadoes, or according to the Spaniards, Barbudas, is between 13 and 14 Degrees of North Latitude, about 25 Miles in Length, and 12 in Breadth, and lies more to the Eastward than any of the Caribbe Islands, the Land generally Plain, or with only some easie Ascents, which afford a pleasant Prospect, being always green. The Capital of it is call'd Bridge-Town, seated on Carlisle Bay, in the South-east Part of the Island, on a low, boggy Ground, and consequently unhealthy, yet the best in all the English Islands, as containing 1200 Houses all of Stone, and lofty, and the Streets spacious. The Wharfs and Keys are handsome and convenient, and the Forts strong, being two, call'd James, and Willoughby's Forts, besides Needham's at a distance, and three Batteries along the Bay betwixt them. Above this last the new Citadel is now building. Here is one large Church, and many Taverns and Eating-Houses. The Bay is capable of 500 Ships. Other Towns there are none of Note, but the Island is divided into eleven Parishes. Here are only two that can be call'd Rivers, which are S. Joseph's and Scotland River, the rest are all inconsiderable Brooks. The princhief Commodity of the Island is well known to be Sugar, besides which it produces Indigo, Cotton, and Ginger. The Inhabitants at present are computed at 25000 English, Men, Women and Children, and about 60000 Slaves.

S. Vincent is West from Barbadoes, somewhat Southerly, about 8 Leagues long, and 6 in breadth, with good Valleys under the Mountains, where the Native Cambals live pleasantly, and undisturb'd by any European Nation.

Balia, in 12 Degrees, 25 Minutes Latitude, is but 10 or 12 Leagues in Compass, and has a good Harbour, but is not inhabited, nor resorted to for want of fresh Water.

Grenada, in 12 Degrees, 16 Minutes Latitude, 7 Leagues long, the Breadth varying much. The French are in Possession of it, and drive a good Trade with Sugar, Ginger, and excellent Tobacco.

Tobago lies almost as far to the Eastward as Barbadoes, in 11 Degrees, 16 Minutes Latitude, is about 20 Leagues in Compass, and by the Dutch, who possess'd it, is call'd New-Walchire. It has no high Mountains, but some pleasant Hills, delightful Valleys, and fruitful Plains, shaded with Cedars, and other valuable Trees of a prodigious Height. The Land produces all things proper to those hot Countries without any great Labour; as Rice, Millet, Pease, Beans, Mandioca-Root, &c. being most plentifully water'd with curious Rivers, Brooks, and Springs. The Dutch, who have the Dominion of this Island, have, for their own Security, built on it 3 good Forts, and the Planters being grown very numerous, have now a very considerable Trade of Tobacco, Ginger, Cotton, Indigo, and Sugar.

La Trinidad, or the Trinity. The Spaniards reckon this and the others we are here to speak of, among the Leeward Islands, and therefore, as has been before observ'd, they are here plac'd with the others, tho' they seem more particularly to belong to South America. It is much larger than any of the others, seated between 10 and 11 Degrees Latitude, divided from the Continent, or Coast of Paria, by a Streight, which Columbus, the first Discoverer, call'd Boca del Drago, or the Dragon's Mouth, and is about 25 Leagues in length from East to West, and 25 in breadth from North to South. The Spaniards say it is neither healthy nor fruitful, tho' Sir Walter Raleigh contradicts them, yet they ought to know best, who settled it, and have there a small Town they call S. Joseph, which is as much as need be said of it, as being never famous for Trade, or any thing commendable.

Margarita lies to the Westward of the Trinidad, on the same Coast, in 11 Degrees Latitude, being about 15 Leagues long, and 6 in breadth, parted from the Continent of South America by a Channel about 7 Leagues wide. It is very destitute of fresh Water, and yet fruitful, woody, and full of Pasture. The Spaniards here have two small Towns, the one on the Sea Coast, with a Castle, the other two Leagues up the Land. This Place was formerly famous for the Pearl-Fishery, which was the occasion of building the aforesaid Fort, but at present that Fishery has ceas'd. The Natives receiv'd the Spaniards friendly, and were treated accordingly, so that they are still numerous, and live amicably with the Spaniards.

Guayana and Corte are two very small Islands between Margarita and the Continent. They were in esteem whilst the Pearl Fishery lasted, but quite neglected since that ceas'd.

Blanca, Tortuga, Orchilla, Roca, and Aves lie almost in a Row, still to the Westward on the same Coast, and have nothing in them worth taking notice of.

Buen-Ayre is still West, in about 12 Degrees Latitude, about 16 Leagues in Compass. The Banks are so steep that the Ships must make fast to Trees, or carry their Anchors ashore. It is full of Cows, Sheep, Horses, Swine, and Goats, which have multiply'd there since the Spaniards put them in, who live there, tho' very few in number, among the Natives, they being all Christians. The only thing it yields to carry abroad is Logwood.

Curaçao is to the West of the last, about 10 Leagues in length, the breadth various. On the North-east side of it is a large Bay, but it has no good Anchoring for large Ships. It abounds in Cattel, and has much Logwood, but the Dutch, who have made themselves Masters of it, now plant Tobacco, and have Sugar-works on it.

Aruba is the last of these Islands, still to the Westward, about 5 Leagues in Compass, inhabited by a few Spaniards and Natives, which is as much as needs be said of it.

All the Islands on the Coast of New-Spain, set down in the Table, are so small and inconsiderable, that no Author has any more than their bare Names, which shall also suffice us, there being nothing in them that can require a particular mention.

California, or New-Albion,

Is in the South Sea, on the back of New-Mexico, and it was long dubious whether a Peninsula or an Island, but at last the Spaniards sail'd quite round, and made a Map of it, which shews it to extend from 24 to 36 Degrees of North Latitude, lying North west and South-east, being above 500 Leagues in length, the breadth near 150 Leagues, in 40 Degrees Latitude, but somewhat to the Southward it grows narrower, and continues tapering off all the way to the end. The Streight which parts it from the Continent is all along 30, 40, or 50 Leagues over, and even more in many Places, but every where shoal, and many small scattering Islands in it, which renders the Passage very dangerous, and together with the vehement Cold of the Northern Part hinder'd the full Discovery of it for many Years; for the Discoverers have found it colder in 50 Degrees of North Latitude in America than in 60 in Europe, and so proportionably. All the Island is inhabited by abundance of Indian Nations, who either go naked, or at best use only some small covering of Mats, or Skins. Their way of Living and Superstitions much the same, as has been said, of other Northern Americans, besides that, to say the Truth, the Inland of it has never been discover'd, nor have any made so long a stay upon the Coasts as to know much of it. To this Day the Spaniards have made no Conquests in it that we have heard of, tho' on the Continent they have subdued as high as the most Northern Part of California. This makes it evident that the Island is not worth their trouble, tho' so large, for had it been, they who have run up to above 45 Degrees Latitude on the Continent

Continent would never have totally neglected that which is so near, and reaches even within the Tropick of Cancer. It is too remote from any other Nation, and that distance has been its greatest Protection, for except the Spaniards, no other European People can come at them, but that immense way of the Streights of Magellan, or the French, crossing all the Continent at Canada, the breadth whereof is yet unknown, notwithstanding the blind Guesſes and Conjecture of F. Hennepin, which no Man who understands any thing of Geography can think reasonable. This is as much as need be said of California till better known, and for the small Islands about it, the Name of them may suffice, there being nothing in them remarkable.

TERRA FIRMA.

AS all the North America, as far as subject to the Spaniards, being much the greater Part of what is worth Conquering, is subordinate to the Viceroy of Mexico, and comprehended under the Title of New Spain, so is all the South America, tho' of such vast Extent, under the direction of the Viceroy of Peru, and often call'd by that Name. However, this, as well as the North America, is divided into several Regions and Governments, and those again subdivided into Provinces, of all which we are now to treat, as has been done of the others, they being all to be seen at one View in the general Table of America, and now we come to describe them in particular.

The first entire Region, or Portion of this Southern Continent, is by one universal Name call'd Tierra Firme, or the Main-Land, not but that that all the others are also upon the Continent ; but this Name was given to this Part, because it was the first found out after the Islands, and therefore call'd Main-Land, to distinguish it from them ; yet as Discoveries encreas'd, every Country had its distinctive Denomination, and this still retain'd the first, which peculiarly adher'd to the Province of Panama, and more generally to the rest here mention'd under the Head, which may be seen at once under the following Table.

Tierra Firme, or the Province peculiarly call'd the Main-Land , or of Panama , or Castilla del Oro .	{	Panama. Porto Belo. Nombre de Dios. Nata. Acla. Caretta. Comagre.	{	Santiago Fort: Cumana, o Nueva Cordova. Morequito. Acavacuri. Santo Tome.

Tierra Firme, or the Province peculiarly call'd the Main-Land, or Province of Panama, and Castilla del Oro.

Which last Name is now quite out of use, and cannot be properly apply'd to this Province, because under that Name there was a much greater extent of Land, which in some old Maps is still made much more than it was ; but being to speak of things as they now are, it is needless to enter upon a farther Disquisition of that Matter. The Name it now generally goes by, is either Tierra Firme, the Main-Land, or the Province of Panama, from its Capital City.

The Extent of it is not considerable, the Sovereign Court establish'd at Panama being only intended to dispatch the Fleets, and decide all Controversies among those concern'd in Trade. Thus the greatest length of it from the Frontiers of Cartagena and Popayan, to those of Veragua, is about 90 Leagues, and the greatest breadth from Sea to Sea, 60, but where least, only 18, which is between Porto Belo and Panama, and that in a strait Line is not above 7 or 8 Leagues, as Acosta makes out, but the great Hills and Windings make it so long.

Most of the Land is uncouth and Mountainous, with abundance of Bogs, and consequently barren, producing little besides Indian Wheat, and but a small quantity of that, yet has good grazing for Cattel, and particularly Cows. The Air is generally thick, full of Vapours, hot and moist, and therefore very unwholesome from May till November ; however, the Trees are continually green, and cover'd with Leaves, but afford little Fruit. The Sea and Rivers afford great plenty of Fish, but the latter are very full of Alligators ; and as for Beasts, here are all sorts, but especially multitudes of wild Cats, and of a small sort of Creatures, which have a sort of a Bag under their Bellies, wherein they carry their young ones, and at Night get into Houses and Yards, and destroy the Poultry.

This Province is form'd of the famous Isthmus which joins the North and South America, and across across which all the Trade between Peru and Spain is manag'd, the distance round by Sea being too great, and the Danger, either through the Streights of Magellan, or farther to the Southward too great. The Resort of the Spanish Ships was first to Nombre de Dios, afterwards to Porto Belo, as the safer and more convenient Harbour, there the Commodities are all landed, and carried over that Neck of Land of 18 Leagues, as has been said, to Panama, where they are again Shipp'd for Peru, and all the Coasts of the South Sea. In like manner the Plate and other Goods of Peru are transported by Ship to Panama, and thence convey'd by Land-Carriage to Porto Belo, where they are imbark'd on board the Spanish Ships.

The City of Panama, Capital of the Province, is seated on the Coast of the South Sea, 18 Leagues, as has been said, from Nombre de Dios, its opposite on the North Sea. It takes up but a small Compass, because hemm'd in on the one side by a Marsh, whose foul Exhalations render it very unwholesome; besides that it stands due East and West, so that as soon as the Sun is up, there is no being in any of the Streets for want of Shade, and the Heat is so violent, that it kills any Man that goes about much in the Sun. It might have been built in healthy Places, half a League from the Sea, but the Mistake being once committed, building is so chargeable there, that they care not to remove, besides that, it is only inhabited by Merchants, who get Estates in a few Years, and are gone. Tho' the Country about it is barren, the City is plentifully provided with all things by Sea. Peter Arias de Avila, the first Governour of the Country for the Emperour Charles the Fifth, was the Founder, and it stands in near 8 Degrees of North Latitude. It has a good Port, where the Ships remain dry at the Ebb, as does all the Coast for half a League. This is the Account of Cieza in his first Part of the Chronicle of Peru, who speaks not by hearsay, but as an Eye-witness.

Nombre de Dios was built by James de Nicuesa, on the North Sea, where, for some time, it had all the Trade of Spain, and Peru, but being found to be extremely unhealthy, the Engineer John Baptista Antonelli, by the King of Spain's Order, remov'd the Station to Porto Belo, and says, that when he went to view it, there were not above 30 Families, and since it has decreas'd, as not being relorted to, so that it is only inhabited by a few Indians and Blacks.

Porto Belo, is the Place the Fleets now resort to, as being more healthy, and convenient for loading and unloading of the Ships, and their security against the Weather, and Enemies, having two Forts, one on each side the entrance of the Harbour. It is 5 Leagues West from Nombre de Dios, the Harbour deep, and capable of many Ships, all a good Sand, without Rocks or Flats, with 12 Rivers and Brooks falling into it, which make easie watering for Ships at all times. About it there is plenty of excellent Timber for building of Ships, and Stones for Ballist. There are two ways from hence to Panama for transporting of Goods, the one all by Land, of 18 Leagues, a better Road than that from Nombre de Dios; the other, 18 Leagues by Sea to the Mouth of the River Chagre, Westward, and thence up that River, when it has Water enough to a Place call'd Venta de las Cruces, whence there are but 5 Leagues more by Land to Panama.

Nata is seated 30 Leagues West from Panama, on the South Sea, Founded by the Governour Peter Arias's Order, but this is no considerable Place of Trade, and consequently of little Note. The same may be said of Acla, another inconsiderable Place of Trade, founded also by Peter Arias, above-mention'd, on the North Sea, at the Mouth of the Gulph of Uraba, now gone to ruin. Careta and Comagre are also upon the North Sea, inhabited only by Natives, and formerly the Heads of two Tribes of them, which had each its Cacique, or Petty King.

The chief River here is that above-mention'd, by the Natives call'd Chagre, and by the Spaniards sometimes Rio de Lagartos, that is, the River of Alligators, up which, as has been said, the Goods are sometimes carry'd towards Panama, that is, chiefly in Winter, when it has Water enough, for in Summer it has very little. This is on the North Sea, and on the South that of Chapo, near whose Springs formerly much Gold was found. Westward from Panama, is that call'd de las Balsas, on whose Banks there grows plenty of good Timber for building of Ships. At certain times this River swells so high, that it overflows all the Country about.

Columbus was the first that discover'd this Country, that is, the Coast along the North Sea, and gave the Names to Porto Belo, and Nombre de Dios. After him several attempted to make Settlements in those Parts, and when they had sustain'd great Losses, and suffer'd the greatest hardships imaginable, at length Vasco Nunez de Balboa commanding, got intelligence from the Indians of the nearness of the South Sea, and travelling over the Isthmus, open'd the way to it. Peter Arias, the succeeding Governour, founded, as was said above, Panama, and Ships were then built on the South-Sea to discover along those Coasts.

The Spaniards being possess'd of these wealthy Countries, and the Fame of the Treasure found there spread abroad, excited the Avarice of many to rob them of what they had purchas'd with such unspeakable Fatigues. The first we find attempting upon these Parts was Sir Francis Drake, who took Nombre de Dios and plunder'd it, and proceeded thence to Porto Belo, where he did the same and dy'd, as we read in his Expeditions; but when he took Nombre de Dios it was almost abandon'd, for its Unhealthiness, as was said above, and at Porto Belo there were not above 8, or 10 Houses built as yet. Capt. Parker in the Year 1601, again surpriz'd Porto Belo, when it was in a better Condition, which he Plunder'd and went off, without doing any farther Harm, and carrying away 9 or 10000 Ducats there was then in the King's Treasury, 120000 having been sent away to Cartagena before his coming. Next to him Capt. Morgan, having gather'd a great Number of Pyrates in the Year 1669, attack'd Porto Belo in the Night, and surprizing the Sentinels, who there lay secure without Thoughts of an Enemy, Master'd the Forts, Plunder'd the Town, and put the Inhabitants to Ransom. Here they stay'd several Days, committing all the Outrages the most barbarous Pagans could be guilty of, ravishing the Women, murdering the Soldiers after Quarter

Quarter given, and putting the Inhabitants to the Torture to oblige them to discover, whether they had any hidden Treasure. The following Year 1670, Morgan return'd again with a greater number of Pyrates, and running up the River Chagre, made his Way to Panama, which he also took, plunder'd and burnt, committing the same Barbarities over again, that they had practis'd the Year before, all which may be seen as large in the History of Bucaniers of America.

Before we leave this Province, it is proper to observe that Darien, once a Province of it self is now only a part of this we here speak of; but at present quite desert and abandon'd. It takes Name from a River so call'd, on which in the Year 1510 the Spaniards built a Town, and call'd it Nuestra Señora la Antigua del Darien, which advanc'd so far as to be erected into a Bishop's See. However when the South Sea was discover'd, Peter Arias, the Governour, remov'd all the Inhabitants to Panama, by reason of the unwholesomeness of the other, which had been the Death of many Hundreds of Spaniards, as both Peter Martyr and Comara inform us. This is the Place so much talk'd on of late Years, on Account of the Scots Settlement attempted to be made there, on Pretence that the Spaniards, with whom we were then at Peace had no Title to it, after an unquestion'd Possession of near 200 Years.

Cartagena,

The next Province to the Eastward, is divided from that of Panama, by the Gulph of Uraba and River of Darien, which are its Western Boundaries, on the North it has the North Sea; on the East Rio Grande, or the Great River; parting it from the Province of Santa Marta, and on the South is separated by a Ridge of Mountains from the Province of Popayan, according to Cieza, whom I rather choose to follow, as one that liv'd there, than Lut, who makes the New Kingdom of Granada, its Southern Boundary. Its whole Length from East to West, between Rio Grande and the Gulph of Uraba is about 80 Leagues, and about the same Breadth from North to South between the Ocean and Popayan.

The Country is mostly high Mountains and deep Valleys, cover'd with thick Woods, which make it very Moist, and the nearest to the Line, for it lies between 7 and 11 Degrees of Latitude, extremely hot, and consequently not at all healthy. That excess of Moisture is also the Cause it does not produce any European Grain, or Fruit; but the Mountains are full of Aromatick Trees, from which the Natives draw Odoriferous Gums and Medicinal Balsam of singular Virtue. There does not appear to be any Gold in this Country, or but very little. The Natives were fierce and warlike, doing much Mischief to the Spaniards for a long Time with their poison'd Arrows, till they have been all either destroy'd, or brought into Subjection. On the Mountains there are all sorts of Wild Beasts, and no less Variety of Fowl, and the Sea yields great Plenty of Fish.

Cartagena, the Metropolis of this Province, had its Name from that in Spain, because of some Resemblance there is between both their Ports; It is seated in 10 Degrees of North Latitude, in a Peninsula, on a large Plain, the Coast running flat and sandy to the Sea. On the South side it has a Morass, call'd Canapote, over which there is a Causeway, with two Arches in it, for the Tide to come in and out to the Marsh. The Building of the Town is very handsom, and it has 5 Principal Streets, each near 600 Paces in Length, with Stately Houses; besides a large Street running athwart them all, and several other smaller. The publick Structures are the Cathedral; the Town House, the Custom-House and some Monasteries of Dominicans and Franciscans. The Harbour is reckon'd one of the best in the World: And is the place where the Galleons lie at Anchor, and receive their Lading from Porto-Belo; and hence they sail to the Havana in Cuba, in their Way to Europe.

Sir Francis Drake took this City in the Year 1585, and after Plundering, set Fire to it, which consum'd only one Part of it, the rest being ransom'd by the Inhabitants for 120000 Ducats; however the Booty was not considerable, the Inhabitants having before sent away all their best Effects to Tolu, an Inland Town. This we have in the Accounts of Sir Francis Drake's Voyages. In 1697, Monsieur de Pointi with a Squadron of French Ships, took this City, after a formal Siege and carry'd off a very considerable Mass of Treasure, as may be seen in the particular Relation of that Expedition.

The other Towns here are Villa de Maria, Maries Town 32 Leagues South from Cartagena, built by Don Pedro de Heredia, in the Year 1534. Next Santa Cruz de Mopox, 70 Leagues distant from Cartagena, the Way that is always us'd, that is by Sea to the Great River and then up it, for it stands on the Banks of the River of S. Magdalena, very conveniently for Trade, but not healthy, as lying among Morasses, built by Capt. Peter de Heredia, Ann. 1555. Zenu is a Harbour, or large Bay 25 Leagues from Cartagena, where abundance of Salt is made, which has drawn some People, who have there built an inconsiderable Town of the same Name. S. Sebastian de Buena Vista, once an indifferent Place at the Bottom of the Gulph of Uraba, was afterwards abandon'd, so that it has scarce any Inhabitants at present. Tolu, or Santiago de Tolu is 6 Leagues from the Sea South-west from Cartagena and 12 Leagues distant from it, because there is no going all the way by Land, but about by Sea, and then round Morasses yet is reckon'd healthy, and the Land produces all sorts of European Grain and Fruit. From hence comes the precious and much fam'd Balsam of Tolu, reckon'd the best of Balsams, flowing from Trees by Incision, when the Sun is hottest. It is of a ruddy gold colour, of an indifferent Consistence, and no ill Taste, but an excellent Smell, and it is good for all the Uses that Balm of Gilead was put to; the Curious may see all its Vertues in Monardes, from whom we have taken this little.

Santa Marta

Follows next to the Eastward, having Cartagena on the West, the North Sea on the North, Rio de la Hacha on the East, and the New Kingdom of Granada on the South; its Extent 70 Leagues in Length and as much in Breadth. A Country abounding in Indian Wheat, and Potatoes, and yielding much Gold and Copper, as also some Emeraulds, and other precious Stones.

Towards the Sea, the Heat is excessive, but farther up the Land the Air is much more temperate, rate, because of the nearness of the snowy Mountains, which cool it; particularly that District or Liberty they call Tairona is very Cold, as being high and Mountainous. Near the Sea, the Breezes help much to moderate the Heat, being the East and North-east Winds. September and October are very rainy Months, because then the Winds blow more from the Land, but the rest of the Year the dry Winds prevailing, there is very little Rain.

The Natives are of a good Stature, and active; but haughty and perverse, so that the Spaniards have not yet been able entirely to subdue them; many still living a brutal Life on the Mountains, under their own petty King, wearing Cotton Cloaks of several Colours, and using poison'd Arrows in their Wars.

This Province is sub-divided into several Districts, as that of Tairona abovemention'd, six Leagues from the North Sea, the Mountain Part whereof is not yet fully subdu'd, but the Spaniards are Masters of the rich Valley; near to which is that of Mongay, no less large and wealthy. Beritica is a Liberty 13 Leagues from Santa Marta; Bondu but three Leagues and a half from it; and the Valley of Coto is half way between the City and the District of Poziguecia. Betoma and Chimala are two other Territories; the Men of the latter are noted for Strength and Bravery and the Women for Beauty. In this Province begins the great Ridge of Mountains, which cuts all South America in two, and runs down to the Streights of Magellan, of which we shall speak in another Place.

Santa Marta is the Capital City from which the Province takes Name, seated in 10 Degrees and a half of North Latitude, in a very wholesome Place; on the Coast of the North Sea, where it has a safe and spacious Harbour, with good Anchorage, and conveniency for refitting of Ships, and Watering. The City was once much more populous than it is since the Trade of Spain has decreas'd, however it is a Bishop's See, whose Prelate is Suffragan to the Metropolitan of the New Kingdom of Granada, and yet that scarce keeps up the Place, which is therefore neglected and expos'd to all Enemies.

The other Towns are Tenerife, 40 Leagues South-west from Santa Marta, on the Banks of the great River of S. Magdalen. 2. Tamalameque, or Villa de las Palmas, 20 Leagues South of Tenerife, and 2 from Magdalen River, in 8 Degrees North Latitude, the Country about it hot, but often overflow'd by the River, which occasions much Pasture, and consequently Plenty of Cattle, but it bears little else. The Indians of this Part are very stupid, and wholly addicted to Sloth and Feasting. 3. Ciudad de los Reyes, or the City of the Kings, 50 Leagues South-east from Santa Marta, on the River Guatapori, having its Summer when our Winter is, and that Temperate, by reason of the East Winds continually blowing, and their Winter all Rain, when the People are subject to Agues. The Soil is fruitful in Pasture and Fruit; and the Natives are Numerous, Cruel and Warlike, so that the Spaniards being very few, have not been able to subdue them all. 4. Oconna is a small Town upon a Pass up the Country, next the Territory of Tamalameque.

La Ramada, first call'd Salamanca, is 20 Leagues East from Santa Marta, at the Foot of the snowy Mountains, and on the Edge of the Valley of Eupori, which is as full of Veins of Copper as of Stones.

Rio de la Hacha

Is a very small Province joyning on the West to Santa Marta, on the North it has the North Sea, on the East a great Bay that parts it from Venezuela, and on the South the New Kingdom of Granada. The Extent of it up the Inland is but small, yet that extraordinary fruitful, once plentiful in Gold and precious Stones, and the Sea yielding Pearls and Salt; but all those precious Commodities have fail'd, except the last, which is of least Value. The Land has many wild Beasts, and the Water swarms with Alligators.

The Town call'd Rio de la Hacha, had first the Name of Nuestra Sennora de los Nieves, and after that de los Remedios, is 30 Leagues East from Santa Marta, 17 South from Cape de la Vela, built on a small Hill, about a Mile from the Sea, where it has an indifferent Port. It was formerly considerable for Wealth, yet had not above an hundred Houses, when in greatest Prosperity, and much less, when taken by Sir Francis Drake in his American Expeditions. Six Leagues to the Eastward of it is another small open Town call'd La Rancheria, being only a Village of Huts, as the Name imports, for those who follow'd the Pearl Fishery; besides there are two other Villages rather than Towns, the one call'd Tapia and the other Ramada, of all which there is nothing worth mentioning.

Venezuela,

On the West is separated from the Province of Rio de la Hacha, by the Gulph of Coro and the Lake Maracaibo, and by the Mountains from the New Kingdom of Granada; the same Kingdom of Granada being on the South; Paria, or New Andalusia on the East, and the North Sea on the North; so that it extends about 130 Leagues in Length from East to West, and 80 in Breadth, from North to South.

The Soil is fruitful and yields two Crops in a Year; besides there is excellent grazing, and abundance of Cattel, which is the Reason this is call'd the Magazine, or Granary; because from hence they send to other Provinces great Quantities of Wheaten Meal, Bisket, Cheese and Bacon; as also much Cotton Cloth, great Numbers of Hides, and vast Quantities of Sarsaparilla, but above all of Cacao growing in the Territory of Caracas, and reckon'd the best in the World. For all Game and Fish, there is as much Plenty as any where; but as for Gold or Silver, none is yet found.

This large Province contain'd several Nations of Indians, from whom of Consequence several Districts took Names, of some of which mention will be made. It is worth observing, that notwithstanding the great Havock made in this Province by the Germans and all the pretended Cruelty of the Spaniards, there are still reckon'd in this Country above 100000 Tributary Indians, all above 18 and under 50 Years of Age, for no others Pay. The Towns the Spaniards have built here are

Coro, or Venezuela, the Capital, seated in 11 Degrees Latitude, in a temperate Country, but ill provided with fresh Water, and standing in a Plain, tho' all about it be Mountainous. About the Town Santa Clara grow to a wonderful bigness, and there is much Honey and Wax, and sufficient of both European and Indian Wheat. Two Ports belong to it, the one a League from it Westward, the other 2 Leagues and a half to the Northward. The Land puts out from the City 12 Leagues into the Sea, and is call'd Paragana; but the utmost Point Cape S. Roman. The Governour of the Province and the Bishop, who is Suffragan to Santo Domingo in the Island Hispaniola reside here. Near the City, and the Way leading to the Mountains, is the Plain the Spaniards call Los Llanos de Carora, 16 Leagues in Length and 6 in Breadth, abounding in all things for the Support of Life, particularly Indian Wheat, as also Beasts of Burden. From the Town they go into the Territory call'd Bariquezameru, over the Hills Zizabaras, where are a barbarous fort of Indians, not yet wholly subdu'd.

Nuestra Señora de Carvalleda, is the next Town, about 80 Leagues East from Coro, in the Province of Caracas, near the Sea, but the Port not Safe; yet there is a Fort call'd also Caracas built on it. Next is Santiago de Leon in the same Province, 4 Leagues to the Southward of the last. 4. New Valencia, 25 Leagues from the last, and 7 from the Port of Bahia. 5. Nueva Xerez, 15 Leagues almost South from the last. 6. New Segovia, 25 Leagues South from New Xerez, and 80 South-east from Coro. 7. Tucuyo, so call'd from the Valley it stands in, and is about 50 Leagues from the North Sea. 8. Truxillo, or Nuestra Señora de la Paz, almost 80 Leagues South from Coro, in the Country of the Cucacas. 9. Laguna is on the Bank of the Lake Maracaibo, about 40 Leagues from Coro. 10. Maracapaná is one of the best Ports on all this Coast, on which Account there is a small Town built on it. There are two other little Towns or Villages call'd Porrilla de Carora and Comanagossa, of which there needs no more to be said.

The great Lake Maracaibo, abovemention'd, and by the Spaniards sometimes call'd Lago de Nuestra Señora, or our Ladies Lake, runs in from the Sea, or Gulph of Coro, reckon'd about 80 Leagues in Compass, or less according to some. Being open to the Sea, it ebbs and flows; several small Rivers fall into it, and it breeds abundance of Fish, especially Manatis. At the Bottom it receives a River which comes out of the New Kingdom of Granada, which make a great conveniency of Trade between the two Countries. Some of the Natives to this Day build their Huts on Trees hanging over the Lake, which the first Discoverers are thought to have taken for the Occasion of calling this Country Venezuela, or little Venice, from the People living so among the Waters.

This Country and all the Coast along to the North America was first discover'd by Christopher Columbus, after whom John de Ampues, in the Year 1527, by Order of the Sovereign Court of Hispaniola took Possession and began to settle in it, contracting Friendship with Manare, a Powerful Cacique. Whil'st he was there, the Emperor Charles the 5th made a Grant of these Countries to the Veslers, rich Merchants of Ausburg, whose Lieutenant Alfinger arriv'd there in 1529, with 400 Foot and 80 Horse. He having subdu'd the Natives about the Lake of Maracaibo, bent all his Thoughts upon finding out of Mines of Gold and Silver, which failing, he rang'd about the Inland Provinces, Plundering and Butchering the Natives, till he was wounded by them, whereof he dy'd. His Successors manag'd no better, all their Design being to enrich themselves at once, till the Veslers neglecting to send new Commanders and fresh Supplies of Men, the Sovereign Court in Hispaniola, undertook the Province again, and sent several successive Commanders, who settled in the Country and built the Towns we have mention'd, subduing all the Natives, except some that shelter'd themselves on inaccessible Mountains. In the Year 1550, the Blacks being grown very numerous, began to Mutiny, which oblig'd the Spaniards to put all the Males to the Sword.

Paria, or New-Andalusia, and Cumana.

There is no ascertaining the Bounds of this Province, especially on the South, because there the Inland is not conquer'd, and but little known; but on the West it borders on Venezuela, on the North it has the Ocean, and on the East no other Limits can be ascrib'd it but the Gulph of Paria, and the Country of Caribana.

It commences on the East at Cape Salinas, running out upon Boca del Drago, and tends Westward 70 Leagues to Cape Araya, along which space there is no Town, nor any thing remarkable till we come to Cape Araya, where there is a natural Salt-pit, which is capable of furnishing a great Fleet every Year, and thither the Dutch used to go for it without any Obstruction; till in the Year 1605, all their Ships were surpriz'd by the Spaniards, as the Men were loading the Salt, many of them put to the Sword, and the rest sent to the Gallies. After which the King of Spain caus'd a Fort to be built there, call'd Santiago, which hinders all other Nations taking Salt there.

Turning the aforelaid Cape Araya, is the Gulph of Cumana, which runs about 40 Leagues into the Land, and from the Mouth of the said Gulph the Coast is reckon'd about 40 Leagues more to Cape Cordillera, where Venezuela meets it. Near the Mouth of the Gulph, James de Castellon, in the Year 1522, built a Fort at the Mouth of the River Cumana; and 2 Leagues higher is the Town of Cumana, or New-Cordova, where the Spaniards have been ever since settled, and command all the Coast, by the help of three other small Towns and Forts, call'd Morequito, Acacurí, and Santo Tome. Up the Inland they do not extend far, the Natives being still unconquer'd, who yet come not within some Leagues to molest them.

These Indians went, and still go naked, only covering their Privities with Gourds, or Calves of Gold, or bits of Cotton Cloth. The Maids hide nothing, but when Marry'd, they cover as much as the Men. The Caciques keep as many Wives as they please, and by way of Courtship always offer one of them to their Guests. These Salvages eat Man's Flesh, and are of strong Bodies, and courageous. As for the Growth of the Country, it is much the same as in the Neighbouring Provinces, the Soil producing all sorts of Trees, Plants, and Grain.

Not to forget the East side, it begins at Boca del Drago, so call'd from the violent Current setting out of it, which is ready to swallow Ships, being a Streight form'd by Cape Salinas, and the the Island of the Trinity, leading into the Gulph of Paria, which is between this Coast and the said Island, whence the Coast runs first South, and then South east to the Mouth of the great River of Paria, or Oronoko.

Colambus having discover'd this Coast, the Dominican Friars begg'd of the King, in the Year 1513, that they might have the converting of those Infidels without any Force. This being granted, two of them landed, and being well receiv'd, continued there with hopes of Success, till a Spanish Ship carrying away several of the Natives, the others in Revenge murder'd the Friars. Nevertheless, in 1518, several Dominicans and Franciscans ventur'd thither again, and built two small Houses with the Consent of the People; but in 1520, Alonso de Ojeda surprizing several of the Natives, so incens'd the rest, that they combin'd together, kill'd him the next time he landed, and murder'd all the Friars. To revenge this, Gonzalo de Ocampo was sent with 300 Men from Hispaniola, who slew a great number of those Salvages, and destroy'd their Villages. The Natives soon after had their Satisfaction, falling upon a little Town Francis de Soto had founded on the Coast, and destroying all the Spaniards, except only 19 that escap'd in a Boat. To requite this Slaughter, James de Castellon came in the Year 1522 from Hispaniola, and put to cruel Deaths all the Indians he could catch who were any way concern'd in the Slaughter of the Religious Men, and other Spaniards, and then built the Town of Cumana on the Continent. Afterwards Jerome Ortal, and Anthony Sedeno, ventur'd many Leagues up the Inland, and dy'd there, so that their Followers grown weary of those fruitless Toils, return'd some of them to Venezuela, and others to Cumana, without finding any thing worth their Labour in several hundred Leagues.

The New Kingdom of Granada

Comes next in our way returning back to the Westward, and borders Northward on Santa Marta, Eastward on Venezuela, and other Countries not yet subdued, Southward with more Regions, as yet scarce known to us, and Westward on Popayan; the whole Length being 130 Leagues, and the breadth above 30, lying between 2 and 9 Degrees of North Latitude.

The whole Country is subject to great Rains, and is full of Woods, but breeds mighty numbers of black Cattel, Horses, and Mules. Its principal Subdivisions are those of Bogota and Tumia, and the Country of the Panches, almost surrounding them both, which last is excessive hot, but that of Bogota temperate; the People of this last, and of Tumia, are by one common Name call'd Moxes. Tumia far exceeds Bogota in Veins of Gold and Emeraulds, tho' the other is not without much Wealth. All Parts here are healthy, and yields great plenty of Salt, which is a good Commodity in the adjacent Parts. The Bogotes and Tumians are of a large Stature, and strong of Body, and their Women Beautiful and Fair, wearing Garments of Cotton of several Colours girt about their Waistes, and on their Heads some use Caps, and others Coronets of Cotton curiously wrought. They are extremely addicted to Dancing and Singing, much given to Lying, and tolerably industrious in learning of Arts. The Panches were formerly Man-eaters, but the other two Nations abhor'd that Food.

Generally the whole Country abounds in Provisions, yet there was a Territory adjoining to Tumia, where the People fed much upon Pismires. No Province affords better Grazing, but the main thing is, that there are many very rich Gold Mines, and more of excellent Copper. The great Wealth of this Country, and the goodness of the Climate has drawn abundance of Spaniards to settle here, so that they have many Towns, of which we are now to speak.

The Metropolis is call'd Santa Fe de Bogota, built by Gonzalo Ximenes de Quesada, in the 4th Degree of North Latitude, at the Foot of the Mountains of Bogota. This is the Residence of the Governour, the Sovereign Court, the Archbishop, and other Officers; besides here are two Monasteries, one of Dominicans, and the other of Franciscans. Near it is the Lake Guatavita, where the Natives us'd to offer much Gold, and other things of Value to their Idols. The Air is extraordinary wholesome, and there is great plenty of all Provisions, but no Gold has been found near it.

The Town of S. Miguel or S. Michael, is 12 Leagues to the Northward, erected for convenience of Trading with the Panches. Tocayma is 15 Leagues from Santa Fe, West North-west; on the Banks of the River Pati, which falls into that of the Magdalen, and in the Country of the Panches, a People much civiliz'd since the coming of the Spaniards. La Trinidad is 24 Leagues North-West from Santa Fe, and 6 West from the great Snowy Mountains, commonly call'd Paramo for their excessive Coldness, being a branch of the great Cordillera, or Andes, that runs to the Streight of Magellan, of which we shall speak elsewhere. Palma is another Town in this same Territory, 15 Leagues North-west from Santa Fe. Tumia takes Name from its Province, built on the top of a Hill 20 Leagues North-east from the Metropolis, and the most trading Town of all the Country. Pamplona, 60 Leagues North-east from Santa Fe, rich in Gold Mines, and abundance of Sheep. Merida, next the Borders of Venezuela, has some Gold, and a good Trade by way of the great Lake Maracaibo. S. Christoval, 30 Leagues North of Pamplona, quite destitute of Gold, but rich in Pasture and Cattel. The rest of the Towns are nam'd in the Table, and have not any thing particular to claim farther Mention.

Besides Gold and Provisions, and Salt above-mention'd, this Country produces all sorts of Fruit, much Guajacum, good for the Pox, and Xagua Wood, which tho' it self white, makes a black Dye.

In the Year 1536, Ferdinand de Lugo, Admiral of the Canary Islands, sent Gonzalo Ximenes de Quesada to discover the Countries along the great Magdalen River. He advanc'd above 200 Leagues from the Sea with unspeakable Labour, by reason of the difficulty of the Way through Woods, and over Morasses, and coming to the Territories of the powerful Cacique Bogota, easily overthrew him, which so terrified the rest of the Natives, that none durst oppose him. In plundering the Cottages of the Indians, he found every where abundance of Gold and Emeraulds. Hence he advanc'd to the Panches, and thence to Terra. Then reckoning the Booty that had been got, they found 191294 Pesos of the finest Gold, above 37000 of a coarser sort, and 18000 of the worst; besides 1600 Emeralds, great and small. Note that every Peso is worth about eight Shillings. Ximenes having afterwards subdu'd many of the Indians, built the Town of Santa Fe de Bogota, and call'd the Country the New Kingdom of Granada, because he was himself born at Granada in Spain. Having done thus much, and hearing that Sebastian de Belalcázar drew near to him by the way of Popayan, and Nicholas Fredeman from Venezuela, he hastened away, as did both the others into Spain, for the King to ascertain the Limits of their Conquests, and reward their Labours.

Popayan.

As in describing all the Provinces above, where others are not nam'd, we have follow'd Herrera, Gomara, Oviedo, Las, and Sanson, without naming them at every turn, to avoid so much Retition, so now we shall in great measure take the ensuing Account of Popayan, and most of Peru from Cieza, who travell'd those Parts from end to end, and has left a more perfect Description of them than any other.

According to him then, this Province is 200 Leagues in length, and 30 or 40 in breadth, in some Parts more, and in others less. On the West it has the South Sea, and high Mountains dividing it from the Province of Quito in Peru; on the North is the Province of Cartagena; on the East the New Kingdom of Granada, from which the vast Mountains call'd Andes part it, and on the South the Kingdom of Peru, and some other yet unconquer'd Nations.

The Andes, last mention'd, on the one side, and the other opposite ridge of Mountains send out many Branches, from all which many Rivers fall, and several deep Valleys are form'd, across the largest of which runs the River of Santa Marta. This various Situation causes no less Variety of Weather, and other Consequences, some Places being hot, and others cold; some healthy, and others unwholesome; some very wet, and others dry. The Natives were generally a free People, owning no Sovereign, but some of them were Man-eaters, and others abhorr'd it. That former Liberty made them disdain being subject to the Spaniards, but what most contributed to maintain it, was the Fertility of the Country, which every where afforded them enough to live on, and therefore they fled from Place to Place, till they were tir'd out, having no Rest any where, and are now wholly subdu'd. It will therefore be improper to say any thing in general of the Soil, and much better to hint at it under each Township or Subdivision.

Popayan is the Capital City, as well as the Name of the Province, and both of them so call'd from Popayan, a powerful Cacique the Spaniards found there at their first coming; it is in 2 Degrees and a half of North Latitude, in a healthy Situation, all the Year being like a continual Spring, without any excess of Heat or Cold, but it Rains very often, and Thunders oftner. The Territory above it is extraordinary fertile, yielding two Crops a Year, and better Indian Wheat than other Parts, besides all sorts of Fruits, both American and European, and feeding mighty Flocks and Herds of Sheep, Cows, and Swine. The Natives out to all other Americans in Industry, Courtesie, and civil Behaviour. The City stands upon a high Plain, the common Houses are spacious, but slightly built; but this is the Residence of the Governour and Bishop, and besides the Cathedral, here is a Monastery of Mercenarians. The Liberty of the City is very large, and contains several Indian Towns, and many Thousands of Natives, and it produces plenty of Gold, but that is generally of low Price.

Santa Fe de Antiochia is on the utmost Northern Borders of this Province, next to Cartagena, seated in a large and delightful Plain, between the Rivers of Darien, and Santa Marta in 7 Degrees of North Latitude. The Natives about it are of a peaceable Disposition, handsome, and fair; the Air temperate and wholesome, insomuch that they lie out all Night without any harm; the Land feeds much Sheep, and produces Fruits, and the Rivers Fish.

Caramanta is about 60 Leagues North-east from Popayan, on the River Cauca, and abounds in Indian Corn, and Fruit, but has no Wheat, few Cows or Sheep, and abundance of Swine. Anzerma, or S. Anne of Anzerma stands on an Eminence between two Rivers, about 50 Leagues North-east from the City of Popayan, with innumerable Fruit-Trees about it. From the Neighbouring Hills run some Streams very full of Gold Sands, which the Indians and Spaniards gather in considerable quantities. Arma is about 12 Leagues North-east from Anzerma, in a fruitful Plain, where there are rich Gold Mines, particularly near the River, and its Territory is very large, extraordinary populous, and surpasses all others in Wealth. The City Carthage stands in a Plain betwixt two Streams, 7 Leagues from the River Cauca, and 25 from Popayan to the North-east, the Country about it yielding neither Wheat nor Gold, but very rich in Cattel. Cali stands in a Plain, at the foot of high Mountains, in 4 Degrees North Latitude, 22 Leagues from Popayan and 28 from the South Sea. It is a Place of great Trade, but somewhat hot, and the Soil generally good about it. Buenaventura is a Sea Port to which all Goods are brought from New-Spain for this Country, is very thinly inhabited. Pasto or S. John de Pasto, is 40 Leagues South-west from Popayan, in a delightful Valley, encompass'd with Hills, healthy, the Territory fruitful, full of Cattel, and not altogether destitute of Gold. Besides these, here are many other Spanish Towns of less note, as Guadalajara de Buga, S. Sebastian de la Plata, Almaguer, S. Juan de Truxillo, Madrigal, Azreda, &c.

This is a proper Place to say something of the great River of S. Martina, and S. Magdalena. The Branch call'd of S. Martha, or by the Indian Name Cauca, rises in a Valley of the Mountains Andes, about 6 Leagues South-west from the City Popayan, among the populous Nation of Indians, call'd Coconucos, whence it runs a way to the North, as far as the Town of Cali receiving all the smaller Streams on both sides, so that at the said Town of Cali it seems to be as big as the Guadalquivir at Sevil, and this is not a Course of above 30 Leagues. Thence it rowls still Northward, gathering many more Waters, and is by them extremely swell'd when it comes to Buenavista, which is about 60 Leagues farther, and 60 Leagues below that again, which is also below the

the Town of Mopox, it meets the other Branch call'd of the Magdalen. This Branch has its Source above the Town of Timana, on the East side of the Mountains Andes, which divide the Springs at about 40 Leagues distance, from which Place they continually draw nearer and nearer till they meet, as above. This River of Magdalen is no less increas'd than that of S. Martha, by the accession of many others, whereof those of Pati, Carare, and Pomparao, are the chiefest. Where these two Streams meet they form one River a League broad, so great is the quantity of Water they rowl, and in the midst of it are several Islands, some of them inhabited, whence it runs always swelling down to the Sea, between the Provinces of Cartagena, and Santa Marta, and enters the Ocean with such Violence, that the Water is said to be sweet four Leagues out from the Mouth. No River has more plenty of Fish, and near the Sea more Alligators and Manatics, which last are River Cows. Both these Rivers run 400 Leagues betwixt their Sources and the Sea. All the Wealth of the Provinces of Cartagena, Santa Marta, Popayan, and the New Kingdom of Granada is about these Rivers; the whole Length whereof there are many rich, and inexhaustible Mines of Gold, besides the excellent Pasture, and Arable Lands, and all other sort of Product, and particularly between the two Branches is all a delightful Paradise, and a continual Mass of Treasure.

Sebastian de Belalcazar, Governour of the Province of Quito, after Pizarro, was the first who penetrated into this Province of Popayan, in the Year 1536, designing to open a Passage out of his Government to the North Sea, and to make himself Master of a mighty Treasure he was inform'd might be had out of the Gold Mines possess'd by the two Brothers, Calambaz, and Popayan. The Nations call'd Pastos and Patias united to oppose his entering the Country, and put him to much Trouble, together with the difficulty of the Ways, and scarcity of Provisions, which those People had hid. However, Belalcazar made his way through to the Cacique Popayan, where being taken with the richness and deliciousness of the Country, he first plac'd a Garrison. From that time, tho' the Natives were very Numerous, and most of them fierce, and Man-eaters, yet the Spaniards by degrees spread themselves abroad, building all the Towns above-mention'd, by which they have subdued all the Country, destroying great Numbers of such as obstinately oppos'd them, and bringing all the rest to Christianity and Submission, except some few who choose rather to live miserably, like wild Beasts in the Mountains, than be brought to Humanity and Politeness.

C H A P. XIII.

Of the Kingdom of PERU

IN describing of this mighty Kingdom, we shall chiefly follow Cieza, who travell'd all over it, Acosta, who resided in it several Years, and Herrera, who as the King's Historiographer, had the most Authentick Informations, both in Writing, and by word of Mouth. Besides, they are all three judicious Authors, in great Reputation among all that are acquainted with their Works, and Men of known Sincerity and Integrity.

This Kingdom extends from the Province of Quito under the Line, to the Kingdom of Chile, beyond the Tropick of Capricorn. 700 Leagues, says Cieza, 600 Acosta, and above 600 Herrera, in all which Accounts there must be allowance for the main Windings of the Coast from North to South, without which they will be found too long; because Quito beginning under the Line, and Chile commencing at 25 Degrees South Latitude, the whole length left for Peru in a direct Line, is but those 25 Degrees, which at 20 Leagues make 500. The breadth is very various, but most generally about 50 Leagues from the Sea to the ridge of Mountains, call'd Andes, yet stretching much farther in some Places about the Country of the Chachapoyas.

The most remarkable things belonging to this Kingdom, are, First, That only the South or South-west Wind reigns continually along its Coast, contrary to all other Countries under the Torrid Zone, where the East always prevails. 2^{dly}. That whereas this Wind is elsewhere naturally stormy and unwholesome; here on the contrary it is gentle, healthy, and delightful, rendring all the Coast temperate, which would otherwise be too excessive hot and destructive. 3^{dly}. That it never Rains, Hails, or Snows along all this Coast. 4^{thly}. That at a small distance from it there is not only excess of Rain, but of Snow, and Thunder. 5^{thly}. That there are two ridges of Mountains, which run through all Peru, always at an equal distance from one another, under the same Latitude, the one entirely cover'd with Trees, and subject most part of the Year to Rain, and a sultry Summer, the other quite bare and naked, rather cold than hot, and where Summer and Winter, Rain and fair Weather succeed in their turns. For the better understanding whereof, it is to be understood that all Peru is divided into three long, but very narrow Strips, which are Plains, Mountains, and the Andes. The Plains are next the South Sea; the Mountains consist of Hills and Valleys; and the Andes are prodigious high Mountains. The Plains are generally ten Leagues wide, little more or less, the Mountains 20, and the Andes the same; the length taken from North to South, and the breadth from East to West. Now it is wonderful, that in the small distance of 50 Leagues in the same Latitude, in one Place it should always Rain, in another never, and in a third there should be Rain and fair Weather alternatively; for in the Plains it never rains, but only a small Dew falls sometimes; on the Andes it rains almost continually, and on the other Mountains, it rains and is fair much as it is in Spain. Both the Andes and other Mountains run a Thousand Leagues from North to South, always equidistant from one another. Where these Mountains part they leave great Valleys, accounted the pleasantest, and healthiest Dwellings in Peru, as are those of Xauxa, Andaguayla, Yucay, &c.

The ancient Inhabitants of the Plains liv'd generally in open Air, or under Trees, the Men wearing short Garments to their Knees, and Cloaks on their Shoulders, and the Women their Robes down to their Feet. Those of the Mountains being much stronger of Body and more witty and industrious than the others, had their Houses cover'd with Turf, the Men wearing Garments and Cloaks made of the Wool of Peruvian Sheep, and the Women Robes swath'd about their Bodies, and Mantles. Before these People were united under one Monarchy, they were rude and barbarous, and addicted to great variety of Superstitions; but when subdued by the Incas, and brought into one Body Politick, they became civiliz'd, and only ador'd the Sun, as the principal Creature appointed by the Creator over the World.

The common Grain of this Country was that we call Indian Wheat, of which they not only made Bread, but also a Liquor like our Beer or Ale; and where this Corn was wanting, they made Bread of a Root they call Papas. Here is a Plant peculiar to this Province, call'd Coca, which they mix with a little Lime, as they do the Betele in the East-Indies, and chew it, affirming that it prevents Hunger and Thirst, and revives the Spirits. Of this Herb such vast quantities are consum'd at Potosi, that they amount to 50000 Ducats a Year. Acosta, and Garcia lasso de la Vega describe it very particularly, in whom, and Monardes, and Ximenes, most Indian Plants of Note may be found, to treat of which would require an entire Volume. Much might be said of the Beasts, but those which deserve particular notice are the Peruvian Sheep; which they call Llama, and are most excellent Creatures, as being of great use, and kept with very little Charge. They have very fine Wool, whereof the best Cloth is made, and they carry Burdens, like Horses, without standing in need of Shoes, Bridles, or Oats, living upon the Grass they find in the common Fields, or along the sides of Roads. But it must be observ'd, that there are two sorts of them, the one, which is woolly, for distinction call'd Pacos; and the other almost naked, with only a little Hair, and therefore properer for carrying of Burdens, and these they call Guanacos. They are larger than our Sheep, and have long Necks and Legs, and are of several Colours, will carry an hundred weight each, and are good to eat, and the only Beasts used there for carrying of Burdens of all sorts, and they it is that transport the Plate from the Mines to the Sea, sometimes 150 Leagues. Their Day's Journey is 3 or 4 Leagues when they have many Days to travel, or more for one Day, and for that time they will carry two hundred Weight. The Vicunas are wild Beasts, like Hinds, breeding on the high Mountains, and have a delicate Hair to spin, and in them the Bezoar Stones are often found; as also in the Tarugas, which are a larger sort, not unlike the last. For other Beasts, there are the same as in other Parts of the South America, and no less variety of wild Fowl; but as for tame Fowl, there was but very little before the Spaniards brought it.

Monardes says, there are a sort of Insects in this Kingdom, which the Spaniards call Spiders, because they spin Webs like ours, but are as large as Oranges, and so venomous that the Bite of them is mortal, unless immediate Remedy be apply'd; for if it once pierces into the Body, it is certain Death. God has provided against it, for the Fig-trees are here continually green, and two or three drops of the milky Juice of the Leaves perfectly deads the Vemon, after which they keep the little Bite open some time, and it heals.

Before we enter upon the Division of Peru, it will be proper here to give some Account of the vast Ridge of Mountains, call'd Andes, being one of the greatest in the World. It begins at the Streights of Magellan, and runs Northward through all South America, in some Places continually cover'd with Snow, in many others casting out Fire. In other Parts it generally rains all the Year, and it is very toilsome passing over, by reason of the thickness of the Trees. In the most uncouth, woody recesses of them, there are said to be People so brutal, that they have neither Cloaths, nor Houses, and only living upon such Beasts and Birds as they kill with their Arrows; without any Chiefs, or Governours, and only meeting accidentally in hollow Trees, or Caves. The Natives on the West side, towards the South Sea, were Men of good Sense, cloath'd, and govern'd by the Laws of the Incas; but those on the other side were more dull, and their chief Employment was to plant and gather much of the Herb Coca, above-mention'd. The highest Parts of the Andes are not habitable, either for their being perpetually cover'd with Snow, or the excessive Cold; but the lower were populous, and fruitful, yielding much Indian Wheat, and of the Root Tuca, us'd to make Bread, and excellent Fruit, not only of the Country, but of Europe. Cieza. It is needless to say more of them in this Place, because we may have Occasion to mention other Particulars in speaking of the several Provinces.

In so vast a Country, it is certain there were several Languages spoken, which are now almost forgot, and laid aside, all the Natives being brought to speak Spanish, which is the universal Tongue. The Government was Monarchical, under those mighty Princes the Incas, who were Sovereigns of all these Provinces, of whom we shall speak at last. Their Religion was Idolatry, and the Sun the principal Object of their Adoration, but since the Spaniards are become Masters, they are all converted to Christianity.

Let us now come to the Division of the several Provinces, and their respective chief Towns being those set down in the following Table.

Quito.	{ Quito. Rio Bambu. Cuenca. Loxa. Zamora. Jaen. S. Miguel. Paita. Guayaquil. Puerto Viejo.	Los Reyes, or Lima, or Peru, properly so call'd.	{ S. Francisco de la Vitoria. S. Juan del Oro. Arequipa. S. Miguel de la Ribera. Valverde. Castro Virreyria, or Chocolacocha. Val Guaura. Guamachuco.

Quito.

The Province properly so call'd, commences North of the Equinoctial, and extends 80 Leagues to the Southward, according to Herrera, and 70 says Cieza, which difference, as has been before observ'd, and is now again repeated, to avoid it for the future, may arise from the different ways of taking the Dimensions in a straiter Line, or allowing more for Windings. The Breadth is about 25 or 30 Leagues. The Boundaries of it are on the West of the South Sea; on the North the same Sea and Province of Popayan; on the East that same Province, and los Quixos; and on the South the Province of Los Reyes.

This Country, tho' lying under the Equator, is like Spain, the Air clear and serene, rather cold than hot, and the Snow lies all the Year in some Places. The Rains last from October till March, which they call their Winter, and during the other Months the Grass is parch'd up, which tho' not very long, is proper for the Cattel of Castile, whereof there are great Numbers, as also abundance of Wheat and Barly, and Gold in some Places. And this is a most pleasant Province to live in, for nothing can be more delightful than a clear and healthful Air, there being no excess of cold in Winter, nor of heat in Summer. Much more Gold might be gathered here, had they Slaves to set to work, but it is strictly forbid to force the Natives to it; but here is great Plenty of Salt-Petre, whereof they make good Powder. Fruits of all sorts, either Indian or European thrive well, and there is abundance of both.

The Natives are generally of a proportionable Stature, strong, and healthy, industrious enough, and apt to learn any Trade; but then they have other ill Qualities, as particularly they are given to Lying, and Drunkenness, vain, inconstant, and hard to be civiliz'd, except some that have been brought to live in the Spanish Towns, for they choose rather to dwell scatter'd about, than in Towns and Villages, but that they are constrain'd to it, in order to their living more like Christians, which they are naturally averse to. Their Habit is a loose Garment, ment, without Sleeves, so that their Legs and Arms are naked. Their chief Employment is making Cloth of Cotton, and Wool, and they pay Tribute to the Spaniards.

Monardes says we have the best Sulphur Vivum, or live Brimstone from Quito, which is of a fine Gold Colour, and found near the Gold Mines, whence Naturalists have reason to say that Quick-silver is the Matter of Gold, and Sulphur the Form.

Guaya is a small Northern Territory in this Province, where commences the so famous Road of the Ingas, running above 1000 Leagues in length, and carry'd across Mountains, Bogs, and Desarts, with such immense Labour, that it seems incredible, being every where smooth and fair, laid with vast Stones where there was need, tho' they had no Iron, nor other Inventions, such as we have. And what is yet more remarkable, there were Inns built all the length of it at 4, 5, or 6 Leagues distance from one another, for the conveniency of Travellers, and these Inns were call'd Tambos, and are in use to this Day, there being Indians under a Chief in each of them, who, as soon as any Traveller comes in, bring him Water, Wood to make Fire, provide a Bed, and other Necessaries; dress his Meat, and carry out his Horse or Mule to Grass, and secure his Baggage; all which they do very justly and carefully for nothing, and if he require it, furnish him with Guides.

Near where this Road begins, there runs a River, over which there is a natural Bridge of solid Rock, the Water running through a hollow below, over which the said Rock lies above like an Arch, which the Natives call Lumichaca, that is, Stone Bridge. In the way to the City of Quito, is the Lake call'd Yaguarcocha, that is, Sea of Blood, because the Inga Guainacapa cast into it the Bodies of 20000 Men of the Carangues he had slain, for rebelling, and being bloody Man-eaters; and not far from the Lake is the wonderful Palace of Carangues, built all of Stone, without Lime, or any other Cement. Hence all the Country forwards is full of Indian Towns, and Spanish Seats and Villages.

S. Francis de Quito is the Metropolis of this Province, seated in the declivity of a Valley, enclosed on the North and West with a ridge of high Mountains, in half a Degree of South Latitude. The Territory about it fruitful, and well stock'd with Sheep, and the Natives more civil and industrious than others more remote. The Streets are wide, and strait, with four Squares, one of them before the Cathedral, another before the Dominicans, and a third before the Franciscans Monasteries, besides which there are two other Churches. Here is the Residence of the Sovereign Court, the Bishop, and other the King's Officers, and a noble College of Canons. Besides the Town is fortified, and good Gun-powder made in it. A League from it is a burning Mountain. In these Descriptions we follow Herrera, Cieza, Zarate, James Fernandez, and Garcilasso de la Vega, who are the Authors that have writ best of Peru, which may serve once for all.

From Quito to Rio Bamba is about 25 Leagues, which tho' nam'd among the Towns, is rather a Village, chiefly inhabited by Shepherds, who have vast Flocks of Sheep on the Plains about it. Thence to the magnificent Palace of Thomebamba they reckon 20 Leagues. It is to be observ'd, that the Ingas, Emperors of Peru, had very many Palaces in several Parts of their Dominions, but this of Thomebamba was a wonderful Structure, as still appears by the Ruins, besides the Tradition that is preserv'd of it. Close to it was a Temple of the Sun, built with Stones as black as Jet, and others like a green Jasper. The Portico's were of several Stones of curious Colours, and the Floors not only of the Temple, but of the Palace, cover'd with Gold, curiously wrought. In short, the Treasure of Gold and Silver within it was inestimable, but at present only the Ruins remain. The Indians of this Territory are call'd Canares, a handsome, and well dress'd People, and the Country very rich in Gold and Silver.

Following the same Road 51 Leagues from Quito, we come to Loxa, another good Spanish Town, whose Territory has Gold, Silver, Copper, Iron, and Sulphur Mines; and 16 Leagues still South from that, is Cuenca, in 5 Degrees of South Latitude, in the Valley of Cuxibamba, a pleasant and healthy Seat, and free from all sorts of Insects. Next is Zamora, 80 Leagues from Quito, no less healthful and delicious than the last, and its Gold Mines so rich, that one pure Lump of that Metal found in the Earth, is said to have been presented to King Philip the 2d of Spain, which weigh'd 8 Pounds. None but Blacks work in the Mines, for the Natives must not be compell'd, there being severe Laws against it, and they are sloathful, and unfit for Labour. Fifty Leagues from Loxa is Jaen, in the Territory call'd Chacaynga, among Mountains, but very temperate.

Having run through the upper Country along the great Road, we come now in the Plain, where we find the Town of S. Miguel de Piura, in the Territory of Chila, which is the extremity of the Province of Quito Southward, where tho' it never Rains, yet the Soil is water'd, and produces all sorts of Grain and Fruit. In the Liberty of this City is the Port of Payta, which is large and safe, and where the Ships touch in their Passage from Guatemala to Peru. The Marquess Francis Pizarro was founder of the City, being the first the Spaniards built in Peru.

Santiago de Guayaquil stands 15 Leagues from the South Sea, and is otherwise call'd La Culata, because seated at the bottom of a Bay, or deep Inlet the Sea makes there, and this and the last above are in that they call the Valley of Tumbes, from an Indian Town of that Name, formerly very famous, and Capital of that lower Territory.

Puerto Viejo, or the old Port, is in one Degree of South Latitude, and tho' so call'd, is not a Sea Port, being at some distance from the South Sea, but there is a Place call'd Manta, which is a Harbour to it.

Besides the Road above-mention'd, which was along the Mountain, the Ingas had made another along the Plain, 15 or 16 Foot wide, pav'd with great Stones, wall'd in on both sides, and shaded with Trees against the violent heat of the Sun, with Inns at proper distances, and all other Conveniences, as has been said of the upper Road.

The most remarkable Rivers here, are that of Santiago, the most Northern, remarkable for the uprightness of its Banks, which is such, that

A Ship touching the Ground with its Prow, has eight Fathom Water at the Poop, for rowing with incredible Swiftneſs, it makes an extraordinary deep Channel, and yet Ships enter it without any Danger. The next to the Southward is the River of Tumbez, which is in three Degrees and a half of South Latitude, of which there is nothing remarkable.

Los Quixos

Is an Inland Province, partly Plain, and partly Mountainous, and not discover'd till the Year 1557, after the building of the Spanish Town of Cuenca, abovemention'd. On the West it has the Province of Quito, on the North that of Popyan, on the East the unknown Country, call'd Dorado, from the abundance of Gold suppos'd to be in it, and on the South that of the Bracamoros. Northward it scarce reaches to the first Degree of South Latitude, being 60 Leagues in length, and no less in breadth.

All this Country is excessive hot and rainy, bearing little Indian Corn, and no Wheat, but abundance of all Peruvian Fruit, as also the European, and variety of Kitchen Plants. It is under a particular Governour, appointed by the Viceroy of Peru, and has but four Spanish Towns.

The chief of them is Baeza, built in the Year 1559, by Giles Ramirez Davalos, 181 leagues from that of Quito, where the Governour resides. 2. Archidona, about 20 Leagues South-east from that of Baeza. 3. Avila, to the Northward of Archidona. 4. Sevilla del Oro, or the Golden Sevil, the Southermost of them all.

The Natives have a peculiar Language of their own, tho' they understand that of Peru, and differ in nothing from the rest of their Neighbours. They vigorously oppos'd the Spaniards, and rebell'd once or twice, but being since entirely subdued, have embrac'd Christianity, and apply themselves to Husbandry.

The Eastern Part of this Country is by a peculiar Name call'd Canela, or Cinnamon, from whole Woods there are in it of Trees, in some respect resembling those of the Cinnamon in the East-Indies. Monardes says, these Trees are of an indifferent size, always green, their Leaves like Laurel, and the Fruit shap'd like a little Hat, about the bigness of a Crown-piece, of a Purple Colour, which has the perfect taste and scent of true Cinnamon.

Pacamoros,

Or Bracamoros, as also Tgaurfongo, and John de Salinas, are all the same Province, or several Parts of it, bounded on the West by the high Mountains Andes, before spoken of, on the North by Los Quixos, on the East by the Countries undiscover'd, and on the South by Peru, properly so call'd, being about 100 Leagues in length from North to South, and as much from East to West.

All the Country enjoys a pleasant, temperate Climate, and the Soil is fertile, producing every sort of Grain and Fruit; but above all proper for Cattel, by reason of the great Plenty of Grass. But the greatest Wealth consists in the Gold Mines, in which they find Grains of an unusual bigness, which are highly beneficial to the Spaniards of the Colonies there.

Here are three Spanish Towns, all of them founded by John de Salinas de Loyola, when he was Governour. The first is Valladolid, about 20 Leagues East from Zamora, in 7 Degrees of South Latitude. 2. Loyola, 20 Leagues East from Valladolid, and so call'd from the Founder, the Indian Name being Cumbinama. 3. Santiago de los Montanas, 50 Leagues East from Loyola, in a Country extraordinary rich in Gold, and that so fine, that it excells all the Neighbouring Parts, and none exceeds it but that of Carabaya in Peru, and Valdivia in Chile.

Since we have so often had occasion to speak of the Gold found in these Countries, and shall again as often, it will not be amiss to speak a word of the Nature of it, out of Acosta, who writes what he saw. He says it is found in three sorts, in Grain, in Dust, and in Stone. The Gold in Grain needs no refining, being bits as big as the Seeds of Cucumbers, or Pompions, fine, and without any mixture; yet some happen to be bigger, and even to weigh some Pounds. Of this kind there is least Gold. The Gold in Stone, is Veins of it running through hard pieces of Rock, of which he says he has seen many at the Mines of Zaruma, which is in the Province of Pacamoras, and some were half Gold, and half Stone. This sort is dug out of Mines, wherethere are Veins like those of Silver, and they are extraordinary laborious to dig. The greatest quantity of Gold in the Indies, is in Dust, found in Rivers, or other Places where much Water has run. The Gold Dust is cleans'd by much washing in Water, till the Earth or Sand runs clear off from the Vessels they do it in, and the Gold being heaviest, settles at the bottom. There is another way of cleansing it with Quick-silver; and another with Aqua Fortis, which separates the Gold from any other thing. When refin'd, it is cast into Pigs, or small Bars, in order to be sent into Spain, for none can be exported in Dust, because it cannot be essay'd, and mark'd, and pay the King's fifth till it is Cast. There is no ascertaining what Quantity is sent into Spain every Year; but in the Fleet Acosta return'd to Spain, he says there went from the Main 12 Chests, each containing at least an hundred weight, and from New Spain 1156 Marks, each Mark being half a Pound, and all this only for the King; without reckoning all that went for private Persons, which is always much more, the King having only the fifth Part of what is found.

Los Reyes, or Lima, or Peru, properly so call'd.

The last the general Name, the two others taken from the Capital City, which is call'd by them both, and it is a large, rich, and noble Province, commencing at about the sixth Degree of South Latitude, and extending to about 17; the Length upon the Coast in a strait Line, reckon'd at least 220 Leagues from Cabo de la Aguja in the North, where Quito ends to a little below Arequipa in the South, where Los Charcas begins. From East to West it stretches out in breadth in some Parts 100 Leagues, in some more, in other less, not to include any of the other Provinces we are to speak of apart.

The South Sea washes it on the West, Quito and Pacamoros are on the North, the Countries as yet unknown on the East, and Los Charcas on the South. Augustine Zarate, in his History of Pern, divides the Natives into three Nations, by the Names of Tungu, Tassanes, and Mochichu, differing among themselves in Languages, but all of them speaking that of Cusco. Garcilasso informs us, that the Peruvians call all Countries near the Sea, and such as are hot, Tunga, and thence all the Inhabitants of the Plains are call'd Tungu. Now for the better understanding the Situation of these Countries, we will begin with the Plain, and run along the Sea Coast from North to South.

This lower Part is call'd the Plains of Pern, where it never Rains, nor Thunders, because the height of the Mountains shelters the bottom, so that there can be no Land Breezes, and consequently the Wind off the Sea prevails, which meeting with no opposition, does not press the Vapours that rise into Rain, for they can never sufficiently condense. This is the Reason that here never falls any more than a thick Mist, which yet helps to ripen the Corn, and all the watering is less beneficial to this end. The Land is generally a deep Sand, except in the Bottoms about the Rivers that come down from the Mountains, where Channels being cut to water the Ground, there grows much Corn, Oil, Sugar, and all sorts of European and American Grain, and Fruit. At the foot, and sides of the Mountains there is rich Pasture, and multitudes of Cattel, and as much difference of Weather as can be wish'd, for the top is cold, the bottom hot, and the middle part temperate.

Coming along these Plains from the Province of Quito, the first Valley is that of Xayama, about 26 Leagues South from the Town of S. Michael, before-mention'd, then that of Tuqueme, 3. Cinto, 4. C. Liqueu, and 5thly, Sana. All which as has been said before, are fertile and delightful, with Rivers running across them, and all between them deep, barren Sands, without any Tree, Plant, or living Creature on them, which the Reader is to observe, holds all along the Coast, and therefore shall not be repeated.

In this last Valley of Zana stands the Spanish Town of Miraflores, sometimes call'd by the Name of the Valley, about 110 Leagues from Lima, the Capital, and 5 from the Sea, on which it has a Port call'd Cienepa, all the Way between them full of pleasant Woods, Villages and Farms, and the Town itself populous and very rich.

The next Valley still Southward is Pasamayo, reckon'd the best and most populous of them all, the Inhabitants whereof, before the Incas subdu'd them, were Potent and dreaded by their Neighbours, and had abundance of Idol Temples, but are all now carefully instructed in Christianity. Coacama follows, little inferior to the last, and then Chimo, much admir'd by the Incas, and now the Seat of the Town of Truxillo, abounding in all Things for Conveniency and Delight, in 7 Degrees and a half of South Latitude and 80 Leagues from Lima. It is reckon'd one of the best Towns in Pern, very large and well Built, and has 4 Monasteries. About 20 Leagues South from it is the Town and Valley of Santa, otherwise call'd La Parilla, near the Sea on a good River, forming a convenient Harbour. Armedo, another Spanish Town is in the Valley of Chancay, 9 or 10 Leagues from Lima, and a half from the Sea.

The Valley of Lima is the Largest in all the Plains from Tumbez, of the Delightfulness whereof all Men speak Wonders, for the Heat is never offensive, nor is there ever so much Cold as to require a Fire, for the tenderest Persons. Their Summer is our Winter, and their Days are never longer than 14 Hours, or shorter than 12, and the Earth produces all Things in wonderful Plenty. To come to the City which is the Metropolis of this Province, it is call'd Ciudad de los Reyes, that is, the City of the Kings, and sometimes Lima, from the Valley it stands in, the Latitude being 12 Degrees and a half South; no Town in Pern, unless it be Cusco, can compare with it. The whole is divided into square Wards, each of them of 150 Paces, the Streets crossing them all strait, without the least winding, and there are 22 of these Wards or Quarters from East to West and 14 from North to South. A great River runs on the North side of it, over which there is a good Stone Bridge, and over it the Suburb of S. Lázaro, divided after the same Manner: On the East is another Suburb inhabited by 800 rich Indian Families, enclos'd with a Rampart of Earth, with a College of Jesuits, and a Governour of their own. In the City is the Viceroy's Palace, and the Sovereign Court consisting of 8 Judges. The Viceroy's Salary is 40000 Ducats, but that is the least Part of his Revenue, which in Effect cannot be worth much less than a Million of Crowns a Year. The Archbishop's Revenue is 30000 Ducats, and the other Churchmen proportionable. In the midst of the City is a large Square, and on the North side of it the Viceroy's Palace, extraordinary Great and Magnificent; on the East side the Cathedral, like that of Sevil; on the South rich Shops, and on the West more Shops, the Town-House and Prison; near which is the Arsenal for all Publick Stores. From this Square eight spacious Streets lead directly through the Town into the Fields. In short, there are many other noble Streets, and stately Structures, too long to be mention'd particularly; but in the main, there are 6 Parish Churches, 15 Monasteries of Religious Men, Jesuits and Nuns, four Hospitals for the Sick and Poor, and several other Churches and Chappels. This is the Place of greatest Trade in all South America, all the Treasure of the Countries about being convey'd thither, as are all the Goods coming from Spain, and other Parts, in return of it. The Number of Spanish Inhabitants does not exceed 5000, who are reckon'd to have 40000 Blacks. This Account, Laet says, he had from Persons of Credit, who had liv'd in Lima, and the Compiler of this Work has had much Information to this Effect from Spaniards, who knew this and other Parts of the West-Indies, of which as being the most Modern Relations, he has sometimes made Use.

Callao is the Port belonging to this City, about two Leagues distant from it, and inhabited by 600 Spaniards, besides Blacks and Natives. Of late Years some slight Works have been thrown up about it, since the Pyrates have made their Attempts upon those Coasts.

Four Leagues from the Valley of Lima Southward is that of Pachacama, than which nothing can be more Pleasant and Delightful; and there formerly stood that prodigious rich Temple, from which Ferdinand Pizarro is said to have taken the Value of 900000 Ducats in Gold and Silver, besides the immense Treasure the Soldiers had already dy Plunder'd, and what the Heathen Priests had hid before their coming; at present only the Ruins of it remain. The Valley of Chilca is next, 10 Leagues from Lima; three Leagues farther that of Malá, and 5 from this that of Guarco, where is a small Spanish Town call'd Cannete or Guarco. Two Leagues from it is the River and Valley of Luncguana, and 6 from that to Chinca; then Yca, and in it the Spanish Town call'd Valverde very beautiful and rich, containing about 500 Spaniards, 3 Monasteries and an Hospital. Six Leagues from it is a Port on the Sea, call'd Puerto Quemado, whence they transport the Wine growing along these Coasts in vast Quantities, to other Parts which want. Four Leagues hence is the Valley of Tingez.

About 20 Leagues to the Eastward is the Town of Chocolococha, or Castro Virreyra, the Way to it rough and stony; but the Place famous for the great Quantity of fine Silver taken out of the Mines, which are but 2 Leagues from it, on the top of a high and barren Mountain, always cover'd with Snow, and excessive Cold. After Yca follow other pleasant and delightful Valleys, call'd in general Lanajca; in one whereof known by the particular Name of Caxamalca, the Incas had formerly a wonderful Palace; then Najca, Hacari, Oconna and Camana, where is the Town of S. Miguel de Ribera, 13 Leagues South from Lima and 22 North from Arequipa. Lastly, the Town of Arequipa, is in the Valley of Quilca, about 12 Leagues from the Sea, standing in an excellent Situation for Fertility and wholsom Air, with a good Port at the Mouth of the River Chila, which passes by the Town, and brings a great Trade to it. It is 150 Leagues from Potosí, and the Way very bad; yet formerly all the Treasure was brought down thither, as it is now to Arica. Not far from the Town is a burning Mountain, and the only Fault of it is, that it is very subject to Earthquakes.

Having run along the Sea Coast and Plains of Peru, let us now return to the Inland and Mountain. The first Province there to the Northward, joining to that of S. Miguel of Quito, is Caxamalca, distinct from the Valley of the same Name mention'd above. In this Province the Ancient Incas had a Palace, a Stately Temple of the Sun, and other noble Structures, and here Atagualpa the last of them was taken and dy'd. The Soil is as fruitful as any in the Universe, and has Mines of several Metals; and the Natives are peaceable, courteous and industrious, making curious Cloth of the Wool of the Peruvian Sheep. The Town call'd by the Name of the Province is at the Foot of a Hill divided by two Rivers, over which there are Stone Bridges. This Province is 90 Leagues from Lima, in the Way to which is the Territory of Guaylos, inhabited by few Spaniards, and many Indians, vastly rich in Sheep, Wool, and fine Cloth they make of it.

Beyond Caxamalca, there is another Road Paved by the Incas of Peru, leading to the Chachapoyas, where there is a Spanish Town call'd S. Juan de la Cruz, 100 Leagues North-east from Lima, and with Gold Mines, besides Multitudes of Sheep of whose Wool much Cloth is made; besides Acoña describes a sort of Almonds, or Fruit growing here, not unlike them, in great Plenty, which he says is the best and most delicious of all Fruit in the World. The Mountains Andes enclose this Territory of Caxamalca on the East, and beyond them is the River and District of Moyobamba, where the Spaniards have another Town, call'd Santiago de los Valles and sometimes Moyobamba, above 100 Leagues North-east from Lima.

From Caxamalca 11 Leagues to the spacious and populous Valley of Guamachuco, whence another Road ran to the Conchucos and Bombon, the first of which is two Days Journey off and has several Gold Mines; from Conchucos to Piscobamba 17 Leagues; from Piscobamba to Guaraz 8, where the Indians are so laborious, that they will work in the Mines; next is the Territory of Pincos, and then that of Chucurpu, near which was one of the Stateliest Palaces in Peru, with a Temple of the Sun and Vestal Virgins attending it. At present there is a Spanish Colony call'd Leon de Guanuco, 60 Leagues from Lima, the Mountain Way, others call it Guanuco de los Cavalleros; it is pleasant, rich, and abounds in all Things for the Conveniency of Life, having many Indian Towns about it.

Next to Guanuco follows Bombon, which Zarate says is the highest Country in Peru, and all Plain, consequently Cold, and the Natives warlike. In it is a Lake 10 Leagues in Compass about which the Natives live in Villages. Ten Leagues from Bombon begins the Territory of Tarama, more fruitful than the last, and adjoining to it those of Atabillos and Chupachos, beyond which Eastward is that of Mama, and beyond that again downright Desarts. From Tarama the great Road leads next to Xauxa, the most famous Port of all Peru, with the River Xauxa running through it, often call'd the Marañon, as believ'd to take in many other Rivers from the Midland Provinces, and to fall into the North Sea. This Valley of Xauxa is 14 Leagues in Length and 4 or 5 in Breadth, and in it a stately Palace of the Incas. The whole District enclos'd by high snowy Mountains, and about 36 or 40 Leagues distant from Lima, in it there are 14 great Towns of Indians, with several Monasteries of Dominicans and Franciscans to instruct them.

From Xauxa to the Spanish Town of S. John de la Vitoria or Guamanga, is 30 Leagues over the high Mountains enclosing the Valley of Xauxa; on which are to be seen the Ruins of ancient Structures. The Town of Guamanga stands in 13 Degrees of South Latitude between 70 and 80 Leagues East, somewhat Southerly from Lima, near the great Road, on a Rivulet of excellent Water. The Houses are all of Stone til'd, and there are three Churches, besides several Monasteries, many Brotherhoods, and a noble Hospital, as also a Bishop. The Air here is temperate and the Soil fertile, yielding excellent Wheat, abundance of the Herb Coca, before spoken of, many Medicinal Plants and feeding Plenty of Cattel; besides all which, here are Mines of Gold, Silver, Copper, Iron, Sulphur, and Loadstone.

From Guamanga to the Plain of Chupa are two Leagues, and thence 11 to the great Palace of Bilcas, reckon'd by the Indians the Centre, and formerly one of the most Magnificent in Peru, now only Ruins, with an Indian Town about it, and several others at a Distance. Seven Leagues from Bilcas is Uranorca, or Andaguzyla, thence to Abancay 11, thence to the River Apurima 12, and from Apurima 12 more to Cusco, before we speak of which City, we must return towards Guamanga to give some Account of the famous Mines of Guancavelica, 8 or 10 Leagues distant from from Cuzamanga North-west, and call'd by the Spaniards, El Affiento de Oropeza, yielding a vast Quantity of Quick-silver, of mighty use for Cleaning the Silver taken out of the Mines. The Natives knew nothing of this Metal, but dug out the Vermillion, which runs in the Vein with it, to Paint themselves; nor did the Spaniards themselves know it till the Year 1566, when one Henry Garces, a Portuguese, who had seen the Quick-silver Mines in Spain found it out; for the Quick-silver does not run Liquid in the Vein as many imagine, but is solid mix'd with the Vermilion; and this Mineral is beaten small and put into Crucibles, where the Metal running, all the Quick-silver evaporates with the Smoke, and as soon as it cools, or meets with any other Body it falls down again Liquid, as we see it, which the Curious may see at large in Acosta. Nor is there any Danger in the Digging of it, which many conceit, but all the Hurt is in the Smoke that rises from melting, and therefore they come not near it till quite cold, when it does no farther Harm. Of this Quick-silver between 6 and 7000 Quintals, or hundred Weight is spent every Year in refining the Plate at Potosi. To return to

The City of Cusco, it was the Metropolis of Peru, the Court of the Ingas and noblest of their Cities, seated in 13 Degrees and a half of South Latitude, 120 Leagues East from Lima, on a hard rugged Ground, encompass'd with Mountains. It is divided into two Parts, which are Hanan-Cusco, the Upper Cusco, and Hurin-Cusco, the Lower Cusco, and the e into 7 Quarters or Wards, and 5 Suburbs. On the Top of the Mountain Sacsabuta, which hangs over the City, the Ingas have a Castle, the Ruins whereof still show it was a wonderful Structure, the Stones of it being of such a Prodigious Magnitude, that no Man can imagine how the Indians destitute of all Iron Tools could cut them, or how they could bring them 6 or 7 Leagues without Horses, or Carts, and even across great Rivers: and lastly, how they could join them so nicely without Lime, or other Cement. This they who desire more Particulars may see farther describ'd in Garcilasso, Zarate, and Laet. The Streets of the City are long, but narrow; the Houses of Massive Stone, and it has 4 Churches, besides as many Monasteries, a College of Jesuits, and some Hospitals. In the midst of it is a Spring, whose Water congeals of it self into pure Salt. 3000 Spaniards and 10000 Indians inhabit this Place, which is also a Bishoprick, and the Treasure found in it, when the Spaniards came first was incredible, besides what has been often found since in places under Ground, which have been accidentally discover'd.

Four Leagues North-east from Cusco in the delightful and fertile Valley of Tucay, whither they send the Sick from Cusco, to recover their Health. On the West is that of Cumbibiltu; Eastward towards the Andes that of Vilcabamba, where the Spaniards have the Town of S. Francis de la Vitoria, among the Mountains Andes; and lastly, 40 Leagues South is the Valley of Caraboya, beset with Mountains, and in it the rich Gold Mines, which yield it 24 and 23 Carats and a half fine, and sometimes in large Pieces, near to which the Spaniards have built the small Town of S. Juan del Oro, or Golden S. John, which is the last Place we have Occasion to speak of in this Province.

Los Charcas, or La Plata.

The latter Name given it from its Capital City so call'd. Its Length from East to West is about 150 Leagues, where most, and the Breadth from North to South along the Sea Coast 150. On the North it borders all along upon the Province of Peru, properly so call'd, Eastward for the most part on Santa Cruz de la Sierra; Southward on Tucuman and Chile, and the West side is wash'd by the South Sea.

The Seasons here are the Reverse of Europe, our Summer is their Winter and their Winter our Summer, as lying between 17 and 25 Degrees of South Latitude, and the Cold is much more prevalent than the Heat; yet there are Valleys, encompass'd with high Mountains, which are hot and fruitful. The rest of the Land is generally barren, as to bearing of Wheat and other Grain; but abounds in Pasture, especially in the large Province of Collao, and about the Banks of the Lake Titicaca; more particularly it is excellent for feeding of Sheep, whereof there are great Multitudes, and have very fine Wool; but above all the Plenty of Silver Mines and other Metals is here stupendious.

This Province is divided into several Districts, whereof that call'd El Collao is the largest and most populous of all Peru, extending Eastward to the Andes, Westward to the Snowy Mountains, Northward the Territory of Cusco, and Southward La Plata and La Sierra. All this Country is plain, water'd by many Rivers, and consequently vastly Rich in Flocks of Sheep. The Cold is more intense than in any Part of Peru, except the snowy Mountains, and the Reason they think is, because this Plain is as high as they; and this Coldness is the Cause that it yields not much Grain, which makes the People feed on the Roots they call Papa. The Natives are of a ready Wit and Industrious, and understood the Course of the Sun and Moon, and reckon'd by Months and Years, before the coming of the Spaniards. Here following the High Way from Cusco, we meet with the Lake Titicaca, where the great Road made by the Ingas, before spoken of divides it self, on both sides the said Lake.

This Lake Titicaca, the Largest yet known of in the South America, is in the Middle of El Collao, about whose Banks there are abundance of Indian Towns, as there are in the several small Islands within it. The Compass of it is about 80 Leagues, and the Depth in some Places reaches to 70 or 80 Fathom, and it swells with Storms, as if it were an Arm of the Sea, tho' it be 60 Leagues from it. Acosta tells us above 10 considerable Rivers fall into this Lake, which has but one Out-let, not large but deep, along which the Water runs so swift, that there is no building either a Wooden or Stone Bridge over it; yet the Indians have contriv'd a Bridge of Straw and Rushes ty'd in Bundles, and made fast to both Banks with Ropes, so that both Men and Beasts loaded pass over without any Danger, and it rises so lightly upon the Water, that giving no Opposition, it easily subsists. In the Lake grow a sort of Rushes call'd Tutora, which the Natives eat, and feed Swine, Horses and other Beasts with them; they serve to thatch their Houses, to make Boats, for Fuel and many other Uses.

Uses. The Water is not salt, but muddy and unfit to drink. For Fish it has but of two sorts, the one call'd Barras and the other Sachos, neither of them very good; but there is on it an innumerable Multitude of Geese, Ducks, and other Water-Fowl. The Out-let having run near 50 Leagues, forms another smaller Lake, call'd Paria, or de Andagaz, in which there are several Islands, but no other Out-let to it, which makes many believe that it has some subterraneous Passage into the South Sea, and the rather because not far from it, there is a River that runs to the Sea, whose source cannot be found. The Land about the Lake is full of Cattle, especially Swine, because of the Tutor Rushes, which those Creatures delight in, and fattens them extreamly.

Passing along the great Road by abundance of Indian Towns, on the Western Bank of the Lake, the next District is that of Colquito, inhabited by many Thousands of Natives, among whom the Jesuits have several Schools, and the Spaniards a Town of the same Name, the Government whereof is worth above 40000 Ducats a Year. Beyond the Out-let, is a small Indian Town, in which there are Ancient Structures of marvellous Magnificence, and beyond them a Hill wall'd in, and on it two Images of Men, of a Gigantick Stature, with long Robes, and Veils over their Heads, nothing like what the Peruvians wear, and seem to be carv'd by excellent Statuaries, whereof the Natives can give no Account; as Cieza and Garcilasso write.

Nuestra Señora de la Paz, otherwise call'd Pueblo Nuevo, is on the East of the Lake, at a great Distance from it, a Town taking up a small Valley among the Mountains which shelter it from the Winds, the Winter being very sharp, and but 10 Leagues from the Andes. The Territory yields little Corn, but has Cold Mines and much Salt. This Town is in the Territory call'd Chaquabamb. Proceeding along the Out-let of the great Lake, follows the Territory call'd Paria, full of Indian Towns, and turning thence towards the Mountains Andes, that of Conquisaca, where stands the Metropolis of this Province, sometimes call'd Conquisaca, but more generally La Plata, 18 Leagues East from Potosi. Here resides the Sovereign Court of the Province de los Charcas, and therefore it is very populous, and has several Monasteries and a Cathedral, the Bishop's Revenue being worth 80000 Ducats a Year. All the Country about is full of rich Silver Mines, which gave the Name to the Town. Besides those in it, there are several Hundred Spaniards living in Country Houses, and many Thousand Indians Tributary to them, all extraordinary rich.

Twenty two Leagues from Potosi to the Eastward is another Town call'd Oropesa, the Inhabitants whereof make a great Trade of carrying their Corn and Cattel to that City. Thirty Leagues to the Eastward of Conquisaca, there are three little Towns, which serve as Fortresses against the Chiriguano, an Inland People not well dispos'd.

The Imperial City of Potosi, as the Spaniards call it, lies in 21 Degrees of South Latitude, 10 Leagues West from La Plata, 80 Eastward from the Mouth of the South Sea, and above 350 from Monte Aliz, or the great River of Ucayali, inhabited by 5 or 6000 Spaniards, and a much greater number of Strangers; for Traders resort to it from all Parts, and no fewer idle People, who have nothing to do but Game and make Merry. Above 30000 Indians are continually in the Suburbs, who come far and near to work in the Mines, because the Pay is very great, and very often they give the Proprietor so much a Day, and make all they can of a Mine, by which they enrich themselves prodigiously. In the City there are several Monasteries of Religious Men and Women, and a College of Jesuits. Acosta says, all the Country about is extreme Cold, barren and destitute of all Things necessary for the support of Human Life; yet the Plenty of Silver has not only made it so populous, but brings the greatest Plenty of Provisions and all other Necessaries, or Conveniences from the remotest Parts, so that no Place is better serv'd. The Mountain of Potosi appears above the rest, like a Sugar-Loaf, naturally difficult of Access, but now Horses go up. The Bottom of it takes up a League, and the Top ends in a Point. At the Foot of this is a Part of the Mountain, proceeding from the great one, where several flat Pieces of natural pure Silver have been found. This is call'd Little Potosi, and on the side of it begin the Buildings of the Spaniards and Indians, being almost two Leagues in Compass, so that it is the largest City in Peru. The Mines here were not known to the Incas of Peru, but accidentally discover'd by an Indian 12 Years after the coming in of the Spaniards, and were four in Number, so rich, that none in the World could ever compare to them; for almost half the Ore was at first pure Plate, and the King's fifth Part of them for several Years amounted to at least a Million of Pieces of Eight a Year, and there is no Doubt but that he was cheated of half. Another excellency of these Mines is, that at 200 Fathom depth, they find no Water; but to ease that immense sinking downright, in many Places they dig in at the Side of the Hill and meet the Veins upon the Level, which are sometimes larger, and sometimes smaller, some richer, some poorer in Ore; but the Vein is always found to run between two Rocks, the one side of which is much harder than the other, and those Rocks, they call the Box, or the Case.

Having extended so much on account of this beloved Metal, it will be grateful to add a Word more concerning the manner of cleansing and refining it, wherein we shall still follow Acosta. All the Ore is carried on Sheeps Backs to the Mills. When broken and bruis'd, the rich Ore is refin'd by melting only in Crucibles, where the Dross settles to the bottom, the Lead which is always mix'd with it, lies on the Dross, and the pure Silver swims on the Lead. An hundred weight of Ore will yield 30, 40, or 50 piece of Eight of pure Silver by this way of melting; nay some has yielded 200, and 250, but that is rare. The poor Ore is that which of an hundred Weight yields 2, 3, 4, 5, or 6 pieces of Eight at most, and this being hard and dry, without mixture of Lead, cannot be refin'd by Fire, and therefore vast quantities of it lay about Potosi, as meer Dross, till the cleansing with Quicksilver was brought into use, which is thus. The Ore is ground in the Mills, and then sifted through Wire Sieves, very close. The fine Stuff is put into Troughs, where it is temper'd with Brine, allowing five hundred Weight of Salt to every fifty of pounded Ore, which serves to loosen the Plate from the Clay. Then they squeeze the Quicksilver on it thro'

a Holland Cloth, which makes it fall like a Dew, working and stirring all continually, that they may mix, and incorporate. The better to bring this to pass, they make a gentle Fire in Vaults under the Troughs, and that heat makes the Quicksilver operate, and cling to the Plate in 5 Days, whereas before, when they did it by the heat of the Sun, it took up 20 Days, and much Labour to work it together over and over. When the Quicksilver and Plate are well incorporated, the Ore is all put into Vessels of Water, where stirring it continually about, all the Clay and Earth washes off, and the two Metals sink to the bottom. This they squeeze in Cloths, through which much of the Quicksilver will drop, the rest remains in a Mass with the Silver; and that they put over a fierce Fire, with a hollow Vessel over it. The Fire expells all the Mercury, which the hollow Vessel receives, and the Plate remains in a Mass, full of holes, like a Honey comb, where the Quicksilver has flown out of it. We have exceeded on the Account of this precious Metal, they who desire more Particulars, may see them in Acosta.

Porco is another Town 6 Leagues West from La Plata, where were once the famous Mines of Peru, before the discovery of Potosi, but much decay'd by reason of their being so much infested with Water. Continuing on the way hence to the Sea, we come to the famous Port of Arica, in 15 Degrees, 20 Minutes of South Latitude, well fortified of late Years against the attempts of Pirates; because all the Plate of Potosi; and other Parts, thereabouts, is brought down hither on Sheep, and here shipp'd off for Lima; and this is the only Place of Note of this Province on the Coast.

Having spoken so fully of all Places, and matters of Note in this Province, it will be needless to add any more, relating to things of less Consequence. What other Towns there are, have not any thing that can require a special mention, and to run through all the Indian Names of Tribes, which are almost as many as Towns, would not afford any matter of Information, and therefore we proceed to the next Province, which is

La Sierra, or Santa Cruz de la Sierra, Lies up the Inland, has Los Charcas for its bound-dary on the West, on the North for the most part the Inland Countries little known, and much of the same sort on the West, and South; the Name of La Sierra signifying the Mountain taken from its Position among them, and the addition of Santa Cruz, or the Holy Cross given to the Capital City.

The City bearing the same Name of Santa Cruz de la Sierra, is about 100 Leagues to the Eastward of La Plata, on the Road to the Assumption, in Paraguay. The Country about it is scarce of Water, yet not barren, as bearing Wheat, Indian Corn, and Wine. Its Situation a Plain, extending far, the Houses cover'd with Palm-Tree Leaves, and by it runs a Brook, issuing from a Rock, and forming a Lake 4 Leagues from it, whence it is plentifully provided with Fish, as it is from the Neighbourhood with all Fruit of those Parts.

The Natives of this Province formerly liv'd in Houses of Clay, and gather'd the Rain-Water in Wells, or Cisterns, yet they often suffer'd to Extremity for want of it, and were cruelly infested by their Neighbours the Cheriguanes, and Titanes, who enjoy a fertile Soil 35 Leagues from them, and are great Man-eaters. Twenty five Leagues from the City is the Territory of the Paicanos, where there are Gourds of such a prodigious bigness, that the Shells of them hold a quarter Cask of Wine, and the Natives use them instead of Chests, to put up their Cloaths, and other Goods. Their Country is subject to much Heat and Cold, only inverting our Seasons. The Natives are of a base and dull Disposition, without any Industry. The Men wore loose Robes of Ostrich Feathers, and the Women others straiter, of Peru Wooll; at present they all use Cotton.

There are some other small Towns of Spaniards in this Country, and many of Natives, and among the first, Barranca, Santa Cruz la Nueva, Jesus Maria, &c. Of all which it would be superfluous to make any particular Description, nor indeed do any Travellers, or Historians furnish us with any thing of Moment concerning them, for being very near the barbarous Nations, and destitute of Gold or Silver Mines, they are not as yet any way famous.

C H A P. XIV.

Containing the Historical Account of P E R U.

IT is most certain, that before the coming of the Spaniards, the Peruvians had no knowledge of Letters, Characters, or any sort of Writing, any more than the rest of the Indians, and yet they had Methods to preserve their Ancient History, and good Order in things relating to their Government. In order to it, they were very exact in their Tradition, which the Youth receiv'd from their Elders, and deliver'd to their Children, as a thing Sacred. Besides this, they had a sort of Pictures to supply the want of Writing; but the most wonderful, and unintelligible thing to us, were those they call'd

Quipos. Those consisted of abundance of Twists, or Threads put together, and those full of variety of Knots, and diversity of Colours, every one of which signified something; so that a bunch of these Threads was to them instead of a Book, and by it they told all things in their History, knew their Laws and Ceremonies, and cast Accounts to Admiration. For the preserving of these Quipos, there were Officers, call'd Quipocamayos, who were oblig'd to give an exact Account of what all those things signified, as the ablest Scholar in Europe may do; having several Quipos for all different Uses. This they can do to this Day, and an Indian by such a cluster of Threads will tell exactly what any Officer has done there for several Years, and in all Parts. Others have little Stones, by which they remember any thing they are to learn, and by that means get all the Christian Doctrine, so that when they are out, looking upon the Stones, they set themselves right again, as we might do by looking in a Book. Then for the most intricate Accompt in Arithmetick, they will cast it up in a Moment with only a few Grains of their Corn, better than an able Accountant shall do with his Pen, which must be what is still practis'd among us with Counters.

These were the Means by which the Indians preserv'd the Knowledge of their Antiquities, and the Kings of Spain having order'd all that could be learn'd of this sort, to be diligently collect-ed, and preserv'd; several Authors have treat-ed of it, and tho' they differ in many Points, that is no more than we see in our own written Histories, and in the main they agree all well enough, but because we have not here room to deliver things more at large, we shall content ourselves to follow Acosta, a learned and judicious Man, who learnt what he delivers, upon the Spot.

Formerly, before the Ingas had subdu'd all the Country, there was no Kingdom of any Note, but the People liv'd either absolutely free, or under petty Princes, or Lords, like the Caciques of most other Parts of America. Since the Ingas began to reign, is under 4, and above 300 Years before the coming of the Spaniards; but for a long time their Dominion did not extend above 5 or 6 Leagues about the City of Cusco, where they had their Original, and by Degrees stretch'd farther and farther over all the Country we call Peru, from above Quito, and the River Pasto, in the North to Coile, in the South being almost 1000 Leagues in Length. In Breadth from the South Sea, on the West to the great Plains beyond the long Ridge of the Mountains Andes in the East, where is the Inga's Pucara, being a Fortrelis erected to secure the Frontiers on that side; and they went no farther that way, because of the immense Waters, Morasses, Lakes, and vast Rivers there were in the way to obstruct their Passage, so that it did not exceed an hundred Leagues. These Ingas surpass'd all other Nations of America in the Art of Government and Politicks, and much more in Martial Discipline, and Bravery.

The Pretence they had for conquering of that Country, was the Fable, that after the universal Deluge, of which they had some dark Knowledge, the Ingas had been the Restorers of Mankind, seven of them coming out of the Cave of Pacaritambo, and therefore all other Men ow'd them Tribute and Subjection, as to their Progenitors. Besides they affirm'd, that they only had the true Religion, and knew how God ought to be serv'd and honour'd, and therefore were to instruct all others. For this Reason they insist'd much on their Rites and Ceremonies, for which end they had above 400 Places of Worship in Cusco, as a Holy Land, and all Places about it contain'd some Mystery, and as they conquer'd, so they introduc'd their Religion. The principal Object of their Adoration, was Viracocha Pachayachacbi, that is, the Creator of the World, and next to him, the Sun, who, as well as all their other Gua- cas, or Idols, they said, had their Virtue and Being from the Creator, and interceded with him.

The first Inga the People of Peru name, was Mangocapa, who, they feign, after the Flood came out of the Cave of Tambo, 5 or 6 League from Cusco, and from him descended the chie Families of Ingas, the first of them call'd Huancusco, and the other Urincusco, from the former of them came the Sovereigns, who conquer'd the Country. Inga Roca was the next they mention, as head of the Family they call Vizquirao, who tho' not great, first was serv'd in Gold and Plate, and order'd that all his Treasure should be dedicated to the Worship of his Body, and maintainance of his Family, and in his Days they us'd golden Idols. His Successor did the same, and thence it became a Custom, that no Inga should inherit the Wealth or Goods of his Predecessor, but furnish all anew.

It is here to be observ'd, that Inga among the Peruvians signifies King, or Emperour, and Capac Inga, the only King, which was the Title they gave their Sovereigns, all the Male Issue being call'd barely Ingas; and the Queen was call'd Coya. Yaguarquaque succeeded Ingaroca, for the Crown was Hereditary, and was founder of the Family call'd Asacili Panaca. His Son Viracocha Inga succeeded him, and was wonderful rich in Gold and Silver, whose Treasure, buried with him, Gonzalo Pizarro found at Xaquixaguana, and burnt his Body because the Indians worshipp'd it; yet they gather'd the Ashes, and offer'd Sacrifice to them, till afterwards those, and all the Bodies of the other Ingas kept embalm'd, were taken away to destroy that Idolatry. This Inga was blam'd for calling himself Viracocha, which is the Name of God, and he to excuse it, pretended that Viracocha had appear'd to him in a Dream, and order'd he should do so.

Pachacuti Inga Tupangui reign'd next for 60 Years, and was a great Conquerour. During his Father's Life, it happened that his elder Brother, who govern'd for the old Inga, was routed by the Changas, which are the People of Andaguaylas, about 30 Leagues from Cusco. Hereupon Tupangui gave out, that Viracocha, or God, had appear'd to him, and order'd that he should raise Forces, and cause him to be worshipp'd, as he ought, because Men paid equal Worship to the Sun, and other Creatures, whereas he was their Creator; and that he would assist, and make him Victorious. He did so, thrust out his Father and Brother, overthrew the Changas, and then ordain'd that Viracocha should be held the universal Lord, and from that time his Idol was set above that of the Sun, and their other Gua-cas, or Deities. After the Victory, he acquaint-ed his Soldiers, that it was not they who gain'd it, but certain bearded Men sent him by Viracocha, whom he saw, tho' they did not, and had been converted into Stones, which were to be found out, for he should know them again. Accordingly he gather'd abundance of Stones near the Mountains, which he appointed for Gua-cas, or Idols, and to them they offer'd Sacrifice, and carry'd them to their Wars, with assurance of Success through their assistance, and through this Conceit they gain'd many Victories. He made a large Statue of Gold, which he call'd Indalapa, and plac'd it on a Bier of Gold, much whereof was carry'd to Caxamalca to ransom Atahualpa, when when Pizarro had him Prisoner. His Body, with those of many of his Servants to attend it, was found afterwards at Cusco, as entire as if it had been alive, and it was sent to Lima, and there kept a long time to be seen by the Spaniards.

Topa Inca Tupac Inca was his Successor, and after him another ascended the Throne, of the same Name. The next was Guaynacapa, which Name signifies a Valorous, and Wealthy Youth, and he was both, governing with Prudence and Wisdom, and extending his Conquests on all sides much farther than any of his Predecessors, till he dy'd at Quito. He was ador'd whilst he liv'd, which the Indians affirm'd had never been done to any other; and when he dy'd they slew a Thousand of his Family, to go wait on him in the other World, which they all willingly embrac'd. His Treasure was immense, and the Spaniards coming in soon after, the Indians took care to hide it, tho' they afterwards produc'd a considerable Part for the Ransom of his Son Atahualpa. His Son, Tito Cusi Gualpa, who afterwards took the Name of Guascar Inca, ascended the Throne at Cusco; but Atahualpa, his younger Brother, rebell'd at Quito, and sent Forces which took the elder Prisoner after he had been proclaim'd King. All the People were extremely afflicted at this his Misfortune, and not being able to assist him, because Atahualpa had such a powerful Army, they offer'd up a great Sacrifice to Viracocha Pachayachac, the universal Creator beseeching him, that since they could not deliver their Sovereign, he would send People from Heaven to do it for them. Soon after this was done, they receiv'd Advice, that a strange People coming by Sea, had Landed, and taken Atahualpa. Now this happening soon after their Sacrifice, and those that took him being so few, they concluded they were Men sent by God, and therefore call'd them Viracochas, a Name given the Spaniards to this Day.

After the Death of Atahualpa, and Guascar, Pizarro possess'd himself of a great Part of the Kingdom; but Almagro, another Son to Guaynacapa, belieg'd him in Cusco, and reduc'd him to great straits, but was at last forc'd to desist, and retire to Vilcabamba on the Mountains, where he defended himself by the natural strength of the Place, as did his Successors, till Amaro, one of them, was taken, and publicly executed in the Market-place of Cusco, to the unspeakable Sorrow of the Indians. After him several others of the Family were made Prisoners. One Don Carlos, Grandson to Guaynacapa, and Son to Paul, became a Christian, and always favour'd the Spaniards against Almagro. When the Marquis de Caceres was Viceroy, Sayritopa Inca came from Vilcabamba to the City of Lima, where he submitted, and had the Valley of Tucay and other Lands given him, which his Daughter inherit'd.

Hitherto we have follow'd Acosta in this brief Account of the Reigns of the Incas, now we will add a few Words out of Garcilasso concerning their Government. They had divided their Dominions into four Parts, answering to the Quarters of the World, and all the People were distributed, that there were Officers to every Ten, to every Fifty, every Hundred, and every Thousand, who were to see they wanted for nothing, and committed no Offence, so that the King knew exactly how many Subjects he had, and in every Village there were Judges, who decided all Controversies without Appeal, the Inca himself determining all Disputes between Provinces. The People pay'd the greatest Honour imaginable to their Sovereigns, and they had secret Spies in all Parts, who gave them notice of any Misdemeanours, which they caus'd to be severely punish'd. The Kings were absolute over the Estates and Persons of their Subjects, so that they took such of their Daughters as they pleas'd, either for their Concubines or Servants; and it was a general Rule among them to Marry their own eldest Sisters, who dying, or proving barren, they Marry'd the next, and so on; and for want of them, the next of Kin. Extraordinary Care was taken that the Fields should be till'd and sow'd, and because there was want of Water, there were magnificent Conduits in all Parts, and Trenches drawn for Rivers. The Land which was sow'd they divided into three Parts, the first belong'd to the Sun, the next to the King, and the 3d to the Tiller. The King exacted no other Duties from his Subjects but the sowing, reaping, and carrying in of his Corn to his Granaries, and the Cloaths and Arms for his Soldiers, besides the Sustainance of the Poor, whose Tribute was a certain number of Lice, that they might not add to their own Misery by being natty. Gold and Silver they receiv'd from their Subjects as a Present, not as any Duty, they knowing no other use of it but to adorn the Temples, and Palaces. Of their sumptuous Works and Structures enough has been said in speaking of the Places where any of them were.

It has been also said, that they ador'd God by the Name of Viracocha, and under him the Sun; to God they gave nothing, because he is Lord of all, but to the Sun they offer'd Sacrifice of Sheep, of Corn, of Garments, &c. and to this purpose they had many Priests, and one chief of them. They consecrated Virgins to the Sun at 8 Years of Age, like the Roman Vestal Virgins, of which there were near 1000 in the City of Cusco, who never went abroad, but were employ'd in spinning for the King and Queen. They also made the Bread us'd at Sacrifices, as also the Liquor call'd Aca, for the Inca and his Family to drink on Festivals; and all the Vessels they us'd were either of Silver or Gold.

To say something of the Discovery and Conquest of this Kingdom, after some vain Attempts to the Southward from Panama, by Persons who met with nothing but Discouragements, Francis Pizarro, James de Almagro, and Ferdinand de Luque, in the Year 1524, join'd Partners for this Undertaking. A Ship was bought, in which Pizarro sail'd to Port Pumas, near the Line, where he Landed his Men in a Country belonging to a Cacique, call'd Birn, or Birraque, from whom it is supposed by Corruption the Spaniards afterwards gave that Name to all this great Monarchy. The Natives here fled before them, and they, after travelling three Days with scarce any Provision, through a rocky, impetrable Country, return'd to their ship, and sail'd ten Leagues farther to Port Limac, so call'd, because some dy'd there for Hunger. He continued his Discovery with unpeasable hardships, which, as well as the Indians, destroy'd many of his Men. Almagro was not idle the mean while, he fitted out another Ship, and steer'd the same Course with no less Sufferings, at length he met Pizarro and his Men, whom, after consulting together, he left ashore, and return'd to Panama for more Men. He came back with that Reinforcement, and they advanc'd, but with no better Success than before, for they lost many of their Men, and having proceeded only as far as Tumbez, made their way back again to Panama for Supplies. There the Governour refus'd to expose any more Men to be lost as the rest had been, whereupon Pizarro went away to Soria in the Year 1527, where he obtain'd a Grant of the King for carrying on his Discovery, and making such Conquests as he should think fit, and accordingly he made what Provision he could for his Expedition at Sevil, and went over to Nombre de Dios, and thence to Panama. In the Year 1530 he set out again for Peru, Landed his Horse at the Bay call'd S. Mateo, and Coasted along with the Ships, plundering an Indian Town call'd Quaque in the way, where was found a mighty Booty in Gold, Silver, and Emeraulds, which he sent back to Panama, and Nicaragua, to fetch more Men and other Necessaries. This done, and a Ship having brought him some Supplies from Panama, he advanc'd to Puerto Viejo, and thence went over to the Island Puna, where he continued till the following Year 1571, when two Ships join'd him with Supplies. With this Reinforcement he sail'd to Tumbez, where after several small Encounters with the Natives, he founded the Town of S. Michael, the first in that Kingdom, which still continues, tho' a little remov'd from the first Situation.

It happen'd fortunately for the Spaniards, that at this time the Kingdom of Peru was divided in it self; Guascar, the elder Brother having been Proclaim'd Inga, or King at Cusco, the Capital City, and Atahualpa, the younger Brother, supported by the Army usurping the same Dignity in Quito, and overthrowing his Brother in the Country of the Paltu, whereupon he march'd on towards Cusco, but stopp'd at Caxamalca, upon the News of the Spaniards being in Tumbez, and sent part of his Forces against Guascar, which defeated him twice, and at last took him Prisoner. Pizarro at this time had but 200 Men with him, which Atahualpa understanding, he made slight of so inconsiderable an Enemy, and applied himself to settle his Affairs at Home. However Pizarro, in September 1532, set out from his new Town of S. Michael with a Resolution to proceed to Caxamalca to see Atahualpa, the whole Force he had with him being only 67 Horse, and 110 Foot, among all whom there were but 3 or 4 Muskets, of which Number 5 Horsemen, and 4 Foot Soldiers with Leave return'd to the Town of S. Michael.

About the beginning of the Year 1533, Pizarro came to Caxamalca, where Atahualpa expected him with 100.00 Men, resolving to destroy all the Spaniards, who enter'd the Place in good order, as knowing the Reception that was designed them. Atahualpa came into the Marketplace with 8000 Men, the rest of his Forces following, and order'd them to sieze all the strangers, and not suffer one to escape, nor to touch as a Dog. Hereupon Pizarro gave the Signal for his Men to fall on, which they did with such Fury, that the Indians not expecting an Attack fled with so much Precipitation that they bore down one another. Pizarro himself with 15 Men made up to the Inga, and took him Prisoner. When he had been some time confin'd, tho' with civil Usage, he offer'd 10000 Ingots of Gold, and a great Room full of silver Vessels for his Ransom, which being accepted of, he sent to Cusco and all other Parts to have all that could be found of those Metals brought to him with all possible Expedition. His Forces, as was said before, had taken his Brother Guascar, who was brought towards Caxamalca, and by his Order put to Death on the Road. Vast heaps of Treasure were brought from Cusco for the Inga's Ransome, and at the same time the famous Temple of Pachacama was stripp'd of all its Wealth, which amounted to 90000 Castellanos, worth about 8 Shillings each, besides what the Soldiers stole, and the Priests had before conceal'd, thought to be much the greater Quantity. Now was Pizarro reinforc'd by his old Partner Almagro, who brought him 200 Men. After his arrival, there being repeated Information that the Inga underhand contriv'd the Destruction of all the Spaniards, and no security for so small a Number against the Power of so great a Prince, he was put to Death, which caus'd an universal Lamentation throughout all the Kingdom, and Toparpa, a Son of Guaynacapa, was chosen his Successor by consent not only of the Natives, but of Pizarro himself, who immediately advanc'd towards Cusco, and coming to the delicious Valley of Xauxa had there several Encounters with the Indians, whom he as often routed with great Slaughter, and at length arriv'd at Cusco, the Capital City of that Empire, where Mango Inga, who had a better Right to the Crown than the other before-mention'd, being able to make no Opposition, put himself into the Hands of the Spaniards, and was courteously receiv'd. The Inhabitants all fled, setting Fire to the City in several Places, which the Spaniards put out, and found immense Treasure in it.

After subduing the Country about Cusco, Pizarro march'd into the Plains, and founded the City of Lima, since the Capital of that Empire. The Natives being pretty well brought into subjection, there happen'd to be much Variance between Pizarro and Almagro, who were at first reconcil'd, the latter going away to Chile. Mango Inga however gave the Spaniards much Trouble, but he was still defeated, and all those Enemies drove far off, and the Country might have been soon settled in Peace could the Conquerours have agreed among themselves; but the Differences increasing between the Factions of Almagro and Pizarro, after long Treaties, and many endeavours of Accommodation, in the Year 1538 they came to a Battel, in which the former was routed, and taken, and some time after put to Death. Next follow'd the Rebellion of the Pizarroes, which ended in their utter Ruin, but that being foreign from our Purpose, we must refer the Reader to see it in Herrera, James Fernandez, and others, who have treated of those Wars, whilst we proceed to those Countries that lie next in our Way.

C H A P. XV.

Of the unconquer'd vast Provinces comprehended under the Names of CARIBANA, GUIANA, CAYANA, and EL DORADO.

THis great Portion of the Continent is so little known, that to pretend to give a true Description of it, would be only imposing upon the Reader, whereas it is not design'd to inculcate Notions for Truth, but rather to deliver things as really they are, and where not known to relate what has been seen by any who have travell'd those Parts, without adding our own Conceits, or asserting more than is probable. This Method shall be here follow'd, using all possible Caution to omit nothing material that has been writ of these Parts, without presuming to determine what is not perfectly come to Knowledge.

In general, this Tract of Land borders all Westward on the Kingdom of Peru, Northward on Papayan, the new Kingdom of Granada, Venezuela, and New Andalusia, with a considerable Coast upon the North Sea; on the East it has the same North Sea, and Brazil, and on the South the Provinces of Paraguay, and part of Peru.

To assign the Extent of these Regions is impossible, the Inland having scarce been seen by any Europeans, and tho' we would fix the Limits of Peru on the West, yet how far to extend what the Spaniards have on the North Sea, is uncertain; the Portugueses in Brazil have made very little Progress up the Country, and how far the Provinces of Paraguay should reach, is not ascertain'd. This same Ignorance must follow of Course, as to the Manners, Customs, Religion, and Government of those Nations, and it must be observ'd, that those set Limits assign'd in Maps to all these Provinces, are Arbitrary and at the Pleasure of the Maker; as also that many of the Names of Nations we there find, are plac'd after the same manner, or at best by guess, most of them having been only heard of and never seen, and perhaps many altogether fabulous, as taken upon Hear-say from Indians who were never rightly understood, or perhaps knew what they said.

To proceed Methodically, as has been hitherto done, that is, returning from West to East, since these Countries are not yet to be regularly describ'd, we will next speak of the mighty River of the Amazons, or of Orellana, which runs through them. When the Commander Belalcazar, before mention'd in his proper Place, had subdu'd the Province of Papayan, he met with an Inland Indian, who told him wonderful Stories of the great Plenty of Gold in those Parts, from which the Spaniards gave them the Name of El Dorado, in the Year 1535. Gonzalo Pizarro being afterwards made Governour of Peru by his Brother, set out with some Men to find this Golden Country, taking Francis de Orellana with him for his Lieutenant. Having pass'd the Mountains Andes, and being in Want of Provisions, a Boat was built and Orellana sent in it with some Canoes down a River they found, which prov'd to be this of the Amazons, to gather some Subsistence. He running 20 or 25 Leagues a Day, with the Violence of the Stream, which receiv'd several other Rivers on both sides, without seeing any Man; at last on the 8th of January 1541. he found a Village, whose Inhabitants had abundance of Provisions, and Ornaments of Gold, which he took without any Opposition. Here, he built another Boat and resolv'd to run down farther. Having finish'd it in February, he proceeded 20 Leagues farther, where he had like to be Over-set by the Rapidity of another River falling in from the South. Then running 200 Leagues farther, they saw neither House, nor living Creature. After this they came to a Village, the Cacique whereof, call'd Aparia, treated and presented them with Parrots, Partridges and Fish. Having taken in Provisions, he went on in April about 80 Leagues, into other Desert Provinces, where the Banks of the River were so steep that they could not Land. In May they came to the populous Country of Machiporo, and were pursu'd two Days by the Natives, till they came to a Village stor'd with Provisions, which they enter'd without Opposition, the Inhabitants being fled, and here they found by their reckoning, that they had run 340 Leagues from Aparia. Proceeding thence, they found the Country pleasant and plentiful, abundance of Canoes following them full of Indians, and thus they held on 100 Leagues, which brought them to the Country of another Cacique call'd Pannana, where they had a good Reception and saw many Sheep of such as are in Peru. In the next Province they were oppos'd and took Provisions by Force. Below this they met a River coming down on the left, which they call'd Rio Negro, or the Black River, because the Water of it discolour'd that they were on, for 20 Leagues. Having pass'd by several Provinces and Villages they came to the Country of the Amazons, as they were told. Below this a Woman told them, that up the Country there were Men, like them, by which they guess'd that some Spaniards had been that Way. On the 22th of June they saw many Villages on the Left-hand Bank, but could not Land by Reason of the Current. To pass by many more Repetitions of this sort, they saw some fighting Women among the Men, which was the Occasion of calling this the River of the Amazons, and at last came out into the Sea, on the 26th of August 1541, whence they coasted along the Gulph of Paria, and to the Coast of Cubagua, and were thence transported to Spain. By their reckoning they made Account that they had run upon that River about 1800 Leagues.

Orellana going into Spain obtain'd a Grant from the Emperour Charles the 5th for farther Discovering upon that River, and set out with three Ships for that Purpose, one of them he lost at Sea, and with the other two enter'd the River, up which he sail'd 100 Leagues north, and many more in Boats, but he left no exact Account of that Country, that may be a help to Geography. Thus much we have in Herrera, and Acosta inform us that in the Year 1560, Peter de Orta came down the River Amazon, 4 or 500 Leagues from Guano in Peru, and fell into the River of Amazons, about 200 Leagues from its Source, but was himself Kill'd by the Way, his Companions prosecuted the Voyage to the Sea, and we have nothing more of them worth relating.

Not to be tedious in these Uncertainties, Samler, who has collected all that can be said of this River and the Country about it; finds it runs above 800 Leagues, without including the Windings, which are much more as has been seen above. Abundance of other Rivers are swallow'd up by it on both sides, some of which have a Course of 2, 3, or 400 Leagues. The People inhabiting along it are infinite, neither so Barbarous as those of Brazil, nor so Polite as those of Peru. They do not eat Man's Flesh, but have abundantly to subsist on of Game, Fish, Grain and Fruit, and worship Idols, without troubling themselves with much Ceremony.

The River, he says, springs at the foot of the Mountains 8 or 10 Leagues from Quito, and runs to the Eastward; both the Source and the Mouth being near the Equinoctial. The Breadth of its Mouth is variously represented, some allowing it 50, others 40, and others but 25 Leagues.

In the Year 1635, two Religious Men, with only five or six Soldiers, ventur'd down this vast River and arriv'd safe at Para in Brazil, where they gave an Account of their Expedition to Pedro Texeira, the Governour there. Texeira fitted out 47 Barks, aboard which he put 70 Portuguese, with 1200 Indians well Skill'd at their Arms, and 800 Servants and Women and set out in October 1637, ran up the River and arriv'd safe in Peru. When leaving his People behind, he went himself with a few to Quito, and reported what he had done in September 1638. The Count de Chinchen, then Viceroy of Peru, order'd him to be furnish'd with all Necessaries, and F. Christopher de Acuña a Jesuit, with his Companion, to go down the River with Texeira and carry an Account to Spain, which he did in the Year 1640, publishing his Relation, as we now have it.

Hence it is we have more Light than from all that was done before, and according to their Information all the Country along that River, tho' in the midst of the Torrid Zone, is temperate. The East Winds, blowing all the Day, the Nights equal in length to the Days, the Annual Inundations like those of the Nile, and the Multitude of Trees refreshing the Air, and rendering it delightful. The Honey there is excellent, they have Pastures for all Harts, all Grain and Fruit grows in Plenty and as good as in any other Part of America, and there is infinite Fish in the Rivers and Lakes. There is vast Plenty of excellent Timber for building of Ships, and no End of the Ebony, and Brazil, and so of Cacao, Tabacco, Sugar, Cochinele and abundance of other Commodities, besides Gold and Silver. The Navigation on the River easy, the Stream carrying Vessels down, and the East Wind up it.

Along it, and the other Rivers that fall into it, they reckon'd 150 several Nations, populous and inhabiting many Villages; of which the Honoches excel in making Cotton Cloth; the Coropaces in Earthen Ware; the Shanaco in Journey; and the Topinambies are the strongest. Arrows and Javelins are their Weapons, and they only make War to get Slaves to serve them, whom they use very favourably.

The Napo, the Agarick, the Patomayo, the Temapapo and the Coropache, Rivers falling into that of the Amazons, all rowl Golden Sands. Above Coropache there are many Mines in the Mountains of Gold in that of Tucure, of Silver in that of Picore, of precious Stones in that of Paruacole, and of Sulphur in others. The Story of the Amazons is found to be a Fable, as has been hinted above.

Let us go up from this great River to that of Oronoco, or Paria, or Viapuri, the Mouth whereof lies between 8 and 9 Degrees of North Latitude. James de Orta, a Spaniard, was the first that attempted any Discovery up it in the Year 1531, and 1532 marching along the Bank of it with 200 Foot and 40 Horse for fifty Days, without meeting with any Town, and only a few Fishermen, who had no Corn, but fed upon Roots, he proceeded up the River 200 Leagues in all, till he came to a great fall, and then return'd to his Ship, and to Spain, where he died.

The Spaniards had made other Attempts to discover farther along this River, but with little Success. At length Sir Walter Raleigh having taken one Bueto, a Spaniard, who had been one of those Adventurers; and being told mighty Things by him of the Riches of Guiana, he undertook a Voyage thither in the Year 1595, and contracting Friendship with the Natives, obtain'd of them Guides to conduct him up the River Oronoco, without the Mouth of which there is such a Multitude of Islands, that it is a Matter of the greatest Difficulty to find the Way through them. Sir Walter having got Guides, found the true Mouth of the River, yet after all sail'd up it but five or six Days, to the Place where the River Caroli falls into it, and then return'd towards the Sea, promising the Indians his Friends to be with them again the next Year. At his coming Home he publish'd a mighty Account of his Discoveries, and the immense Wealth of those Countries, tho' at the same Time he knew no more than what some of the Natives had told him, nor indeed had he been near so far as Orta, before spoken of.

After his Return, in the Year 1596, he sent Lawrence Keymis, with two Ships to the River Oronoco, who indeed found the best Way into, and sail'd up it 8 Days, but finding the Spaniards had a Settlement there, made all the haste home he could, without doing any thing remarkable. Nor was Sir Walter himself more successful in his next and last Undertaking, for he never so much as Landed, or made any new Discovery, but only incens'd the King of Spain against himself, and had his Head cut off soon after.

To leave these useless Voyages, the Spaniards, perceiving that other Nations began to attempt settling on that River, as looking on it as the best In-let to that Country reputed so rich in Gold, built themselves a small Town some Leagues above the Mouth of the River, where it makes a sort of Bay, and call'd it S. Thomas, where they planted Tabacco, and Traded with other Nations for several Years, till that Commerce was Prohibited. However the Town increas'd, and is a part of the Government of New Andalusia.

What more we find of this River, is that it comes down from the New Kingdom of Granada, or Government of Papayan, the Country it runs through from West to East being above 300 Leagues in a direct Line, its Course with the Windings, must of Necessity be much more.

The Reason of Skipping from the River of the Amazons to this of Oronoco, is because the Country lying between them generally bears the Names of Guiana and Caribana, which some distinguish and will have Caribana to be that next the Sea, and Guiana the Inland, but these are imaginary Distinctions.

The length of this Country is above 400 Leagues, where several Nations have endeavour'd to establish themselves upon the mighty Hopes of a Golden Trade with the much talk'd of, but never discover'd Dorado and Manoa, which doubtless have no other Being, but in Imagination. Sanfon has best collected all that these Adventurers agree in, touching this Coast, and from him we will deliver as much as is requisite.

The first River of any Note South-east from Oronoco is that of Essekebe, whose Source is but a Days Journey from the great Lake of Parima, and on it there are several Cataracts or Falls, which hinder the sailing up it to discover the Country. Next follow the Berbice and Corretino, whose Course is much shorter than the last; but no less interrupted with Falls. The next is Surinam, where a Fort was first erected by the French, from whom it was taken by the English, and from them again by the Dutch, who still keep it, with some Country about it, which with some other small Settlements on the Berbice and Essekebe affords them a considerable Trade of Tabacco and Sugar. The Marmyn is about 4 or 5 Leagues wide at the Mouth, and the length of its Course about 30 or 40 Days Journey. The Cayana has also its Rise among the Mountains near the Lake of Parima, and runs about 100 Leagues in a direct Line to the Sea, where it forms an Island, on which the French have settled a Colony, and some others along the Continent. Aperuvaca, or Covernaca has a longer Course than the Cayana, forms a large Lake, not far from its Source, and encloses an Island, where it falls into the Sea. Wapero is little inferior to the last, and like the rest, has a great Fall, or Cataract about 18 or 20 Leagues from the Sea. Along this River there is Tabacco, Sugar Canes, Cotton Trees, and several sorts of wild Beasts.

As for the Temperature of the Air, it is the same in Guiana, as was said above of both sides of the River of the Amazons. Provisions are so plentiful that they may be had for little or nothing. For Game they have Deer, Wild Boars, Wild Goats, and all sorts of Fowl, not only of those known among us, but many others. Nor is there less Variety of most delicious Fish, and such Plenty that any Man may take more than will serve a great Number in a very small Time, especially of Tortoises weighing some hundred Weights, of which as many may be taken in one Night as every one Pleases. Of Fruit there are infinite sorts totally unknown to us, and most of them pleasant and delicious.

The Commodities the Europeans carry them are necessary Tools, as Hatchets, Hoes, Shovels, Knives, Scissors, Saws, Hooks, Nails, &c; or Curiosities, as Looking-Glasses, Bells; Rings, Glass Beads, Bits of Chrystal, Pendants for their Ears, Trumpets, Needles, Pins and all sorts of Toys, worth little here, in return whereof, we bring home an incredible Quantity of Cotton, Hammocks made of the same, which are sold in the Islands for 3 or 4 hundred Weight of Tabacco. Here is also Ebony, red and white Sanders, Indigo, Brazil Wood, Balsam, Sarsaparilla, Jalap, Turbith, Guajacum, several sorts of Gums, Turkey-stones, Emeralds, Deers, Tigres and Foxes Skins, Musk taken from the Alligators, and Monkeys.

Nothing of the Inland can be said with any Certainty, but there the imaginary Dorado and Manoa, so long sought after are plac'd. The Lake Parima above mention'd is as little known, as those Places, but suppos'd to be of a vast Extent, the only Account there is of it being from the Natives, who represent things as they please; for I do not find any Europeans that have been at it. These People are said to practise a singular Custom, which is, that on their Festival they anoint their Bodies all over with Oyl, or the most precious Balsam, and then strow all over that the finest of Gold Dust, as thick as it can lie; so that they are all over in an entire Case of Gold. We will not pretend to any farther Account of the Inland, which is altogether unknown, but proceed in Order.

CHAP. XVI. OF BRAZIL.

THIS is the only Part of America, belonging to the Crown of Portugal, and of a considerable Extent, the Coast of it running almost 1000 Leagues, not in one Line, but first East and West, and then North and South, the whole lying between One and 25 Degrees of South Latitude, which will amount to near 500 Leagues from North to South; but then up the Inland they have gone a very little Way, so that they have only a long Skirt upon the Sea, whilst all the Mediterranean Part remains unconquer'd and unknown.

The North Sea washes the North, East, and part of the South sides of it, the rest of the Southern side and Part of the Western borders upon the large Provinces of Paraguay; the remaining Part on the West reaches out to other Provinces hitherto unknown. It commences at the Mouth of the great River of the Amazon, whence it runs out Eastward near 500 Leagues, and there turns away to the South about the same Length, till it comes to joyn the Spanish Province of Guayra, from which it is parted by the River Capibari, two Leagues from the City of S. Vincent. Thus we find it lies all under the Torrid Zone, except only some very small Part in the South, which reaches but a few Leagues beyond it.

It is true, the Portugueses would extend their Right as far as the Mouth of the River of Plate Southward, and quite to the Mountains of Pern Westward; but those are only Pretensions, for they have never been possess'd of any thing farther either Way, than what has been above set down in General, and shall be hereafter specify'd, when we come to the Particular Subdivisions. Herrera tells us this Country was first discover'd by Vincent Tanz Pinzon, and after him by James de Lepe in the Year 1500, both of them Spaniards, and in the Service of the Crown of Spain. However the Portuguese claim the first Discovery of it, alledging, that Peter Alvarez Cabral sailing from Lisbon, with 13 Ships, for the East-Indies in the Year 1500, was by a Storm cast upon an unknown Country in 10 Degrees of South Latitude, where he saw a Tawny People with lank Hair and flat Faces, who fled at the sight of them, and being spoken to at a Distance in several Languages, understood none of them. Hence Cabral pass'd on and anchor'd in a Port he call'd Seguro or Safe, because it prov'd so to him, where he set up an Altar, had Mass said and a Sermon preach'd, the Heathens being present with wonderful Attention. That Admiral sent back one of his Ships to give his King an Account of his Discovery and erecting a Cross on a great Tree, call'd the Country Santa Cruz, or the Holy Cross. He also left two Portuguese there, to learn the Language and enquire into the Customs of the People and Product of the Land. The Name of Santa Cruz was afterwards chang'd into that of Brazil, from the abundance of that sort of Wood found there; as may be seen in Emanuel de Faria y Sousa and all other Portuguese Authors who treat of this Country.

Nienhoff who resided here some Years with the Dutch, and one of the last who has writ of the Country, speaks thus of it. Brazil is excellently qualify'd for the producing of all Things, which are generally found in the West-Indies about the same Climate; but no Mines of Gold, or Silver worth taking notice of have been yet found, and Sugar is the Principal Commodity. He highly extols the Conveniency of its Situation and many Rivers and Harbours proper for Trade and Shipping. Besides, he says it enjoys a very wholesome Climate; for tho' lying betwixt the Equinoctial and the Tropick of Capricorn, and consequently subject to burning Heats, yet they are allay'd by the East Winds off the Sea, not interrupted by Mountains or Islands, which is the Reason the same Distempers are rarely to be met with, which frequently reign in Angola, Guinea, and other Places, where the East Winds cannot afford the same Advantage. The Plague is a Thing unknown in Brazil; but they are not free from continual Putrid Fevers, caus'd by the hot and moist Air and excessive Use of Fruit.

Thus far he agrees well enough with all others, but besides the Sugar we must observe, that the next great Commodity is Tobacco, which is very strong, and inferiour to none for Goodness if kept till old enough. Cotton does not prove so well, tho it grows in several Parts, yet not so as to make any considerable Trade. For other Goods here is sometimes Amber-greece found, but inconsiderable, some Rozin, and Train-Oyl, the excellent Balsam of Copayva, and abundance of Sweetmeats, Hides, and Ginger, as also some Indigo.

The Natives are divided into several Nations, the Chief of them distinguish'd by the Names of Tubambis, Tebayaw, Petiguaras, and Tapuyas, or Tapyers, the three first using the same Language, and only differing in Dialect; but the latter subdivided into several Tribes or petty Nations, differing both in Customs and Tongue. They are generally of a middle stature, black ey'd, wide mouth'd, with black curl'd Hair, and a flat Nose, and commonly Paint themselves. The Women generally of the same size, well limb'd, and not ill featn'd. The People up the Inland go stark naked both Sexes; but those near the Sea, who have convers'd with Christians wear a Cotton Shirt, or a Clout wrapp'd about them, and some of the Chiefest begin to be proud of Cloaths. The Wife follows the Husband wheresoever he goes, tho' it be to the Wars. He carries nothing but his Arms, and she is loaded with a Basket at her Back and another on her Head, containing all the Household-stuff; and perhaps a Child hanging in a piece of Callico over her Shoulder; besides all which, she often carries a Parrot or an Ape in one Hand, and leads a Dog in a string. Travelling they lie in the open Fields, on their Hammocks, hanging at Trees or Stakes.

Their Dwellings are small Villages, consisting of Huts, made of Stakes and Palm Tree Leaves, or such like Covering. All the Household-stuff consists in Hammocks made of Cotton Net-work to lie in, Cups and Dishes all made of Calabashes cut in the middle, painted red without and black within; the biggest of which will hold 30 or 35 Quarts. The poorer sort have Knives made of Stone, or of Cane, which was all they had before the Portuguese came among them; now the rich ones buy of them. Besides which they have several sorts of Baskets for divers Uses. Their general Food is Flour made of Mandioka Root, and the Flesh of all Beasts and Birds; as also Fish, boild or roasted, but half raw. For Spoons they commonly make Use of Oyster-shells. The General Drink is Water, besides which they sometimes make a Liquor with Black Sugar and Water, which they will sit Drinking whole Days, and adding to it some Akaju Leaves, it grows heady. They also press a Liquor from the Akaju Fruit, with which they will be very drunk, both Men and Women. The same they do with other sorts of Drink made of several Roots, all which they will drink to great Excess, and be very Frolicksome, and Dance for whole Days together. Nor are they less fond of Brandy, which they swallow very greedily, and smoke Tobacco in great Quantities.

As for any Thing of Religion, they have but little Notion of it; yet they are not void of some Idea of a God, whom they call Tuba, signifying, a most excellent Being. Therefore they call the Thunder Tubakunanga, a noise made by the Sovereign Essence. So much Knowledge they have of Heaven and Hell, as to believe the Souls do not die with the Bodies, but are either sent into Mansions of Misery, or else enjoy much Pleasure in Dancing and Singing, in some delightful Fields, behind the Mountains. These Fields they fancy are enjoy'd by all the brave Men and Women, who have kill'd and eaten many of their Enemies; but such as have been idle and done Nothing considerable are tortur'd by their Devil. They have a sort of Priests, whose Business it is to Sacrifice and foretel Things to come, whom they particularly consult upon undertaking a War or Journey. The Dread they have of Spirits is incredible, for some have dy'd upon the Apprehension of Apparitions. Yet all the Worship they pay to these Spirits, is endeavouring to appease them by Presents they fix to stakes drove into the Ground. Some of them pay a sort of Adoration to Thunder, and others to several Constellations. Among them the Nation call'd Petiguaras are accounted mighty Sorcerers, inasmuch that they believe they can bewitch their Enemies, even to Death. Some Knowledge they have of a general Deluge, by which they say, the whole Race of Mankind was extirpated, except only one one Man and his own Sister, how the World was again re-peopled.

Many Distempers, common in Europe, are scarce known in Brazil. All their Remedies consist of Simples, and they laugh at our Compositions. Bleeding is us'd both by Suction upon Scarifications, and by opening a Vein. When any one falls Sick, they all consult together, and every Man declares the Medicine he knows, and that which they approve of is us'd. If all their Remedies prove ineffectual, they apply the last, which is knocking out the Patient's Brains with their Clubs, whom then they eat as well as their Enemies, the one for Love, the other out of Hatred.

The Women are extraordinary fruitful, have very easy Labour, and seldom Miscarry; but as soon as deliver'd, they get up and going to the next River without any Help, wash themselves. Then the Husband keeps his Bed 24 Hours and is very much made of, as if he lay in. Mothers lament the Death of their Infants, with Howling and Crying for three or four Days. This may suffice in general as to the Natives and Product of the Country out of Nienhoff, who therein agrees very well with all others before him, as he does in respect to the living Creatures and growth of the Land, for which Reason we shall continue to say something of them out of him.

The Indian Salamander, call'd Cekko, is a long four-legged Insect so venomous, that the Sting of it is Mortal, unless immediately burnt with a red hot Iron, or cut off. Of Snakes or Serpents there are several sorts, among which is the Rattle-snake, so call'd from the Noise it makes with the Tail, like a Rattle. The Guala, has a narrow Throat and a vast Belly, sometimes 30 Foot long. The Seembi or Leiza is a sort of Land Crocodile, seldom exceeding 5 Foot in Length, in the Head whereof there are certain Stones, reckon'd an infallible Remedy for the Gravel in the Reins, either taken inwardly, the Quantity of two Drams at a Time, or worn on some Part of the Body. Lizards there are infinite Numbers, and some 4 Foot long; as also Creatures call'd a Thousand and others an Hundred Legs, both very Venomous. Scorpions are no less frequent, and some grow to 5 Foot in length, but their sting not so pestiferous as those of Europe. Pismires are so prodigiously numerous, that the Portuguese therefore call them Kings of Brazil, and they devour all that lies in their Way.

For Beasts the Kuandu, or Porcupine, is as big as an Ape, without any Hair, but with strong Quills sticking thick upon the Back, which it can dash out when vex'd. The Ai, or Lazy Beast is about the bigness of a Small Fox, the Head round, the hind Legs much longer than the fore, and has the Name from its slow Pace, for it will scarce move a Stone thrown in 15 Days. The Pismire Eater is call'd, because it feeds on those Creatures, has a Body like a Bear, but longer and a long Tail as is the Snout and the Tongue, which it lays out and with it scoops up the Pismires. The Armadillo, or Beast in Armour, has a Head like a Swine and is about the same Bigness, all over cover'd with scales like Armour.

There is no less Variety of strange Birds; the Toucan, or large Bill, is about the bigness of a Wood Pigeon, and so call'd, because the Beak is prodigious large and a Span long, yellow without and red within, but very thin and light. The Cari is like our Stork, but of most curious Variety of Colours. The Jabou-Garika, or Barn Bird, has no Tongue, but a Bill of a wonderful length, turning up like a Bow towards the End, and is of the bigness of a Stork. There is a small Bird no bigger than the Joint of a Finger, which yet makes a great Noise, and is easily taken off the Flowers on which it feeds. The feathers of it are changeable, for as you turn them, they still appear of a different Colour. Besides these, there are many other sorts too tedious to treat of, and an infinite Number of Parrots.

To speak of the sundry sorts of Fish would much exceed the Bounds of this Work, and no less the great Variety of Fruits and Plants, more proper for a Natural History. On the North-west Coast of Brazil there are very considerable Salt-Pits, in several places, where the Salt is made in 3 or 4 Weeks, only by letting the Sea into them, by the Heat of the Sun, without any other Industry, and therefore require very few Hands to manage them, tho' they will yield some Thousand Tuns of Salt, to serve all the Country. In all that has been said, we have not only follow'd Nienhoff, but compar'd him with Lery, Thevet, Knivet, and all the Ancient and Modern Portuguese Writers.

It is Time to come to the Division of Brazil into its several small Governments, which the Portuguese call Capitanias, that is Captainships; because each under a particular Commander, they being 14 in Number, which begin at the West, and run along the Coast Eastward, and then to the South, with the Portuguese Towns in them.

The Captainship of Para,

Bounded on the West by a large Bay the Sea makes before the Mouth of the River of the Amazons, on the North by the Ocean, on the East borders on the Captainship of Siara, and on the South is shut in by the unconquer'd Natives, call'd Toupinambes. The Portuguese Town or Fort bears the same Name, in which there is nothing remarkable, but that it is seated on a Rock rising 5 or 6 Fathom above the Plain. Next the River it has no other Fortification but Gabions, between which there are many Pieces of Cannon. On the other sides it is enclos'd by a Stone Wall two Fathom high, with a dry Ditch about it. About 300 Portuguese inhabit it, whose Employment is Planting of Tobacco, and Sugar Canes, and gathering loose Cotton, which grows wild. The River running by it is almost two Leagues over in that Place, having about 15 Fathom Water in the Channel, and 10 close by the Fort. To the South-east of this Fort, near the bottom of the Bay above-mention'd, is another small Fort call'd Commora, which serves to check the salvage Natives, and cover the Portuguese Plantations. Of late Years the Portuguese have from this Captainship pass'd beyond the Mouth of the River of the Amazons, and made two small Settlements, which they call Corupa, and Esteiro, and another in an Island among the Mouths of of the same River, which they name Cagemina.

The Captainship of Maranhao

Follows next to that of Para, which bounds it on the West, as does the Ocean on the North, Siara on the East, and the Country, not yet subdued, on the South. The greatest Length of it from East to West may be about 80 Leagues, and the Breadth from North to South up the Inland inconsiderable, which may be observ'd once for all in speaking of the several Captainships, or Governments, for the Portuguese have never been able to penetrate far into the Country. And to say the Truth, the best Possession they have in this Captainship is the Island of Maranhao, at the Mouth of the River of the same Name, for in the Island stands their only Town, which is also call'd like the said Island, and River, or S. Francis of Maranhao. Besides which they have some small Dwellings, the most noted whereof are S. Arãrem on the most Northern Point, and Santiago on the South.

On the Continent opposite to the said Island, and but 3 or 4 Leagues from it is the Nation the Indians call Taponytapare, inhabited by the Toupinambes, who have there 15 or 16 Villages. Adjoining to this is the Territory call'd Commã, and next that of Cayeta, all of the same People, in both which there are above 40 Villages, and the Soil of them is much richer than that of the Island where the Portuguese reside. All these are Enemies to the Tapoumiers, their Neighbours, with whom they us'd to be continually at War, and therefore agree the better with the Portuguese, who have their Plantations among them, and have destroy'd the greatest part of them. The Dutch once settled in this Island, but were beaten out, and the Dutch have made several unsuccessful Attempts towards possessing themselves of it.

There is no such thing as a River Maranhao, which some Geographers lay down in their Maps, if we may believe the Account of Claude de Abbeville, who was there a considerable time; but three Rivers, the first call'd the Easterliest Mounin, whose whole Course is not above 50 Leagues; the second, Taboucourou, of the same Length, and the third Miaru, 4 Leagues over at the Mouth, which springs under the Tropick, as the Natives say, and all these fall into the Bay that is before the Island Maranhao.

The Captainship of Siara.

Let us hear Nieuhoff concerning it, that we may not be impos'd upon by Portuguese Relations, magnifying all their own Affairs to Extravagancy. It is of no great Extent, says he, its whole Compass being not above 10 or 12 Leagues. The River Siara, which rises far up in the Continent, disembogues about 7 Leagues and a half to the North of the Bay Alangorypa, under 3 Degrees, and 40 Minutes of South Latitude. The Natives of this Captainship are of a large Stature, with ugly Faces, long Hair, and a swarthy Skin. They have large holes in their Ears, stretch'd down to their Shoulders, and some of them holes in their Lips and Noses, in which they wear Stones for Ornament. The Country produces Sugar Canes, Crystal, Cotton, Pearls, Salt, and other Commodities. The Inland was in 1636 govern'd by a King of its own, call'd Algodoi, who was a sort of Tributary to the Portuguese, who had built a Fort upon the River Siara, and made themselves Masters of all the Sea Coast about it. In 1638, the Dutch took this Fort from the Portuguese, but were some Years after beaten out again, and the former Conquerours recover'd their Dominion, which we see was but small, and just upon the Shore; tho' that People would perswade the World that their Conquests extend a mighty way up the Land, where in reality, they have nothing.

The Captainship of Rio Grande.

This we shall also take from Nieuhoff, as the last that has writ of it. The Name is given it from a River so call'd by the Portuguese, for among the Natives it is nam'd Potigi, or Potingi. Southward it borders on Parayba, Westward on the Captainship of Siara, the North and East are expos'd to the Ocean. It is divided into 4 Parts, from so many Rivers that run through them, viz. Cunhao, Goyana, Mumpobu, and Potegi.

The Portuguese have never made any great matter of this Country, and yet it produces plenty of wild Fowl, and most delicate Fish. Of the latter there is an incredible Quantity in a Lake call'd Goraires, and abundance of the Root Amindioka, of which they make Meal, grows in most Parts.

Rio Grande, the great River, is so call'd by the Portuguese, from its bigness, and by the Natives, Potigi; the Mouth of it is in 5 Degrees, 42 Minutes of South Latitude, 3 Leagues from Punta Agria, coming from the West, and falls into the Sea, 4 Leagues above the Fort Tres Keyes, or three Kings, and bears great Ships. The River Cunhao is only Navigable in Barges, and Yachts. The Fort Tres Keyes is the only one the Portugueses have in this Captainship, under which is the Town, or rather Village of Natal.

The Captainship of Parayba,

Following the same Nieuhoff, derives its Name from the River Parayba, which has also communicated it to the Capital City, seated upon its Banks, 5 Leagues up from the Sea, and otherwise call'd Nossa Senhora dos Naves. This Place has many stately Houses with Marble Pillars, the rest being only of Stone. Here is kept the Court of Judicature for this Captainship. Within the Mouth of the River Parayba there are 3 Forts, one on the South Point, call'd S. Catherine, defended by 5 good Bastions, and a Hornwork. The second on a small Island, off the North Point, and call'd S. Anthony, with strong Walls, and a wet Ditch. The third in another Island higher up the River, and call'd Refugio.

Two considerable Rivers water and divide this Captainship, viz. Parayba and Mongoipa, or S. Domingo. The former lies under 6 Degrees, 24 Minutes of South Latitude, 4 Leagues North of Cabo Blanco, and discharges it self by two Mouths into the Sea, being separated by a large Sand Bank. In Summer this River is very shallow, but in Winter swells so high, that it often overflows the adjacent Country, and carries away many Men and Cattel. Two Leagues North of this River is a Bay, which affords a safe station to the largest Ships, and is call'd Porto Lucena. Half a League farther North is the River Mongoipa, which contrary to all others, is larger towards its Source than at its Mouth.

The Natives of Parayba inhabit about 7 Villages, the chiefest of which call'd Pinda Una, in the Year 1634, contain'd 1500 Inhabitants, the others scarce 300 each, and consisting of only 5 or 6 very long Buildings, with a great many Doors, but very small.

The chief Commodities of this Captainship are Sugar, Brazil-wood, Tobacco, Hides, and Cotton. Near the River the Country is low, and plain, but not far from thence rises by degrees, and affords an agreeable Variety of Hills and Valleys. The flat Country being the most fertile, is distinguish'd into several Divisions, under as many Names, much fertiliz'd by the overflowing of the River, and producing Sugar, Barley, Indian Wheat, Patatoes, Ananas, Cacao-Nuts, Melons, Oranges, Citrons, Bananas, Papayas, and other Necessaries for Humane Life. In 1634, the Dutch possess'd themselves of this Country, but were at last beaten out, and continues ever since under the Crown of Portugal.

The Captainship of Itamarika

Owes its Name to an Island so call'd, being the chiefest Part of its District, which however extends 35 Leagues along the Sea-Coast on the Continent, having Parayba on the North, and Serribuna on the South, the Ocean washing it on the East, and the West extending to the unconquer'd Nations.

The Island Itamarika is parted from the Continent by the River of the same Name, the most Southern Part of it lying in 7 Degrees, 58 Minutes South Latitude. The Length of it from North to South is about 2 Leagues, and the Circumference 7; pleasant and fertile enough, producing Brazil-wood, Cacao-Nuts, Cotton, Sugar, Melons, &c. Besides Wood for Firing, Timber for Building, and good Water. On it, next the Entrance of the River is the Portuguese Town, call'd Nossa Senhora da Conceicao, or Itamarika, and over it a small Fort, with a Redoubt at the entrance of the Harbour, which is at the South Entrance of the River forming the Island, where Ships drawing 14 or 15 Foot Water, may safely pass. Several small Rivers cross this Country not worth naming, but a League and a half North of the North Entrance of Itamarika is the famous Point of Land call'd Ponta Pedra.

A League farther North is the small River Goyana, in 7 Degrees 46 Minutes South Latitude; and 3 Leagues up it, is the Town of the same Name, in which the Court of Judicature for the Captainship is kept. This Country also produces Brazil-wood, Ginger, Cotton, and Indian Nuts.

The People call'd Periguanes inhabit here, tho' this whole Tract of Land, as far as Cabo Blanco, is not very populous, as having only a few Villages, inhabited by Natives. But this is to be understood of Natives who live subject to the Portugueses along the Coast, for up the Country, where they are not subdued, there are People enough. Besides Goyana, there is another Settlement, call'd Capibaribi, well inhabited, and has several Sugar Mills belonging to it.

The Captainship of Pernambuco

Extends above 60 Leagues along the Coast, having Itamarika on the North, the Ocean on the East, the River of S. Francis dividing it from Serez de on the South, and the unconquer'd Country on the West. It is subdivided into 11 small Districts, which are, the City of Olinda, Garazu, Arracife, Moribela, S. Anthony, Poyulca, Serribuna, Gonzalo de Uma, Porto Calvo, the Northern Algoa, and the Southern Algoa; among all which Olinda and Garazu are the chiefest.

Olinda was once the Capital Town of this Captainship, seated on the Northern Part of it, at a small distance from the Arracife, where was the Harbour. This was a Place of Note, a great Part of the Product of North Brazil being transported from it to Portugal. The best Part of it is built upon several Hills, pretty plain on the South side, extending to the Sea Shore, which has a very white Sand; and more steep and craggy towards the Land, and North side. The upper Part has a curious Prospect both to Sea and Land, and over the adjacent Islands and Villages. On the highest Hill in the Place stands the Convent of the Jesuits, very richly endow'd, and may be seen far at Sea. Not far from it is the Monastery of the Capucins, and near the Sea another of Dominicans; besides all which there are two other Churches of S. Saviour, and S. Peter. The Inhabitants were reckon'd about 2000 besides Clergy-men and Slaves, but the Dutch having formerly destroy'd it, what remains is inconsiderable. About a League from the City, near the Water-side, is a Village, or Suburb, with many Warehouses. The Capital now is call'd by the Name of the Captainship of de Maurício, being the same Town the Dutch built, and call'd Maurice's Town. As may be seen in the H. E. Cartier, and Carl's Voyage to Congo.

Gonzi is rather a Village than a Town, about 5 Leagues from Olinda, on a River of its own Name. Abriçá more to the South, about 5 Leagues from the Arraçá. S. Anthony about 7 Leagues South of Arraçá, near the famous Cape S. Augustin. The City of S. Alchael de Poyré, 10 Leagues South of Arraçá, on a River of its own Name, that falls into the Sea on the South side of Cape S. Augustin, it was once populous, but much decay'd. Serribim is a Village, but a pleasant Place, and producing much Sugar. Gonçalo de Sousa is also a Village 20 Leagues from the Arraçá, and has 5 Sugar Mills. Porto Calvo, and the Alvares are also Villages, whereof there are two more in the Palmeira, or Palm-Tree Woods, inhabited by Blacks. The Arraçá is by situation the strongest Place in all Brazil, and defended by several Forts. Arraçá in Portuguese signifies a Ridge of Rocks, or of Sand running in Length, such as there is before a great Part of the Coast of Brazil, with some openings, through which Ships pass. On a small Island of Sand, near the rocky Ridge stands a small Town well-built, and inhabited, taking its Name from that Ridge, and call'd Arraçá. Its Situation is in 8 Degrees, 20 Minutes of South Latitude. To the South of the Arraçá lies the Island of Anthony Viz, on which the Dutch, when possess'd of that Country, built that they call'd Maurice's Town, above-mention'd, with several Forts about it, whence they were afterwards expell'd by the Portugueses. The Harbour being the space between the Town of Arraçá and the rocky Ridge, is very safe, but has not above 13 or 14 foot Water. The Town of S. Paul the farthest up the Country, is a Place of Delight, where any Stranger is welcome, and soon meets with a rich Wife that will keep him at his Ease. Gattina, and Carli.

Kapibari is a River rising several Leagues to the Westward, and then dividing it self into two Branches, the one call'd Ayogadú, running to the South, and the other to the North, under its first Name, and so falls into the River Biribiri, or Salt River, near the Island of Anthony Viz. The whole Province of Pernambuco abounds in several sorts of Fruit, and Pasture which makes plenty of Cattel, and the lower Grounds, near the Rivers, produce much Sugar. During the rainy Season, the Heat is more tolerable in the Day, than the Cold Nights.

The Captainship of Seregipe,

Otherwise call'd Carigi, from a small Lake of that Name in it, extends about 23 Leagues along the Sea Coast, the River of S. Francis dividing it on the North from Pernambuco, as does Rio Real on the South from Baía de todos os Santos, the Ocean being on the East, and the Country not subdued on the West. All these Captainships are divided into several Districts, or rather Parishes.

The principal Town here is call'd by the same Name of Seregipe, or Vila de Bon Saccó, seated at the Confluence of the 4 Rivers, Mucuna, Tamandu, Comentabunda, and Monguaba, on a rising Ground 4 Leagues from the Sea, which the Portugueses when there, fortified, but it is an inhabitable Place. Within this Captainship is the Mountain Talanda, whence several Samples of Ore have been taken, which have prov'd not worth looking after.

On the back of these Captainships, that is, towards the Westward, live the Natives, call'd Tupoyers, or Tapoyers, divided into several Nations, under as many Kings of their own. They are taller and stronger than the other Brazilians, of a dark brown Colour, with black Hair hanging over their Shoulders, only the forehead shav'd as far as the Ears, all the rest of their Bodies they keep without Hair, even to their Eyebrows. Their Kings, and great Men shave their Heads like a Crown, and wear long Nails on their Fingers and Thumbs; the common sort keeping those of their Thumbs short, as not permitted to let them grow, because long Nails are accounted an Ornament. Both Men and Women go stark Naked, the Men only tying up their Privities in a Bag, which yet they are very cautious of exposing. The Women cover theirs with a bundle of Leaves, or small Branch of a Tree, and the same over their Backsides, but so carelessly, that much is expos'd to View. The Men tie some Feathers about their Heads, and have Cloaks of Cotton wove like a Net, stuck so close with Feathers, that they will keep out the Rain, and fasten Combs of some Birds to their Foreheads with wild Honey. If their Fathers or Mothers die, they pull every Hair out of their Heads, and have Holes in their Ears big enough to thrust a Finger through, in which they wear the Bone of an Ape, or a Stick wrapp'd up in Cotton; and holes in their Lips and Cheeks, in which they wear fine Stones and Sticks in those of their Nostrils. They paint their Bodies brown, and stick abundance of Feathers on them, and their Shooes are made of the Rind of a Fruit call'd Aguay. Some of them use no Bows or Arrows, but throw their Darts with their Hands, and have Clubs made of hard Wood, and make Trumpets of Men's Bones, or of Horns, yet are they not so good Soldiers as the other Brazilians. They neither Sow nor Plant, but feed upon such Roots and Fruit as they find, and the wild Beasts they Kill. They also eat Man's Flesh, and if a Woman happens to miscarry, devour the Child immediately. Nor have they any settled Habitation, but wander about like the Arabs, yet within certain Bounds, for the most part in Woods, and those who have Bows are so expert, that they will shoot a Bird flying. As soon as a Woman has conceiv'd, she abstains from her Husband, and when brought to Bed, cuts the Child's Navel-string with a Shell, which she boils with the After-birth, and eats them both. If she is convicted of Adultery, the Husband puts her away, but if taken in the Fact, he may kill both. Of their Religion enough was said in the general Account, and these People will not hear of any more. They are generally Enemies to the Portugueses, and preserve their Brutal Liberty. Thus far the Dutch had once extended their Conquests upon the Portugueses, who at last expell'd them, and recover'd their own, and Nienbof was there in the Dutch Service, whom we have therefore mostly follow'd thus far, as giving the most exact modern Account of those Places, and must have recourse to others for what follows.

The Captainship of Bahia de todos os Santos,

On the Bay of All Saints, so call'd from a very large Bay the Sea makes there, about 2 Leagues and a half over, in some Places 12, in others 18 Fathom deep, and full of little Islands, very pleasant, and producing much Cotton. It is divided into several Branches, and runs into the Land above 14 Leagues, with many small Rivers falling into it, and among them three more considerable; the first of them running by the Capital City call'd Pilae, the next Gouape, and the third Cachoeira. This Bay opens to the South, and runs up to the Northward, a long Island call'd Tapetica, helping to secure the Mouth of it, on the Point whereof stands the Fort of S. Antony, and the small Town they call Vila Velha, or the Old Town, within which a Point of Land makes an Inlet like a half Moon, on which stands the Capital City S. Salvador.

This Captainship reaches about 60 Leagues along the Sea Coast, and runs up the Continent as little as the rest, bounded on the North by Rio Real, parting it from Sergipe, on the East by the Ocean, on the South by the Captainship of Ilheos, and on the West by the Indian Nations, who still stand in defiance of the Portugueses. It is the richest, and most populous of all Brazil, and has between 40 and 50 Sugar Mills about the Bay; besides that, it produces much Cotton, and some Amber-greece is found along the Coast.

Concerning the Capital City of S. Salvador, Dampier places it in 13 Degrees of South Latitude, and besides what has been already said of the Bay, says, there are several Forts about it, one whereof stands on a Rock in the Sea, half a Mile from the Shore, betwixt which and another call'd the Dutch Fort all Ships must pass. There is another Fort on the Hill where the Town stands. The City he makes to contain 2000 Houses, 13 Churches, Chappels, Hospitals, and Convents, and one Nunnery. The Governours and Archbishops Palaces are very noble Structures, but indifferently furnish'd within. This is the Residence of abundance of rich Merchants, who import Serges, Bays, Hats, Stockings, Biscuit, Wheat, Flour, Wine, Oil, Cheese, Salt-Beef, and Pork, as also Iron, and Pewter, Looking-glasses, and Toys, in lieu whereof they export Sugar, Tobacco, Snuff, Brazil, and other Woods for Dying, raw Hides, Tallow, Whale Oil, &c. The Country about it is flat, neither very high, nor low, and very fruitful, producing all those things we have already mention'd Brazil affords.

It will not be amiss to add a few Words out of F. Alencar, in his Voyage to Congo, who speaking of this City, and the Country about it, tells us, the Number of Slaves kept to work at the Tobacco and Sugar is so great, that there are some Masters who have no less than 500, wherein it is to be mistrust'd he was impos'd upon by those boasting People, and their Labour so hard, and Sustenance so small, that they are reckon'd to live long if they hold out seven Years. So great is the Application of all People there to this Trade, that they take no care to Sow, or Plant, which makes all Provisions excessive dear, the Fish, tho' they are upon the Sea, because there are none to take it, and the Meat, because the Distance is so great, that the Cattle either starve by the Way, or is murther'd by Poles when it comes to Town. F. Alencar adds, that a Congo who had resided there 14 Years, assur'd him that the Natives were very docile, and readily embrac'd the Christian Religion, and when once converted, continued very zealous and devout, all which is directly contrary to what all others have writ of the Portugueses, which makes it much to be mistrust'd, unless we suppose some particular Tribe or Nation of those People living about that City, to be so much better than the rest.

The Captainship of Ilheos,

So call'd from several Islands lying before the Bay, on which the chief Town of it is seated, follows next to Bahia de todos os Santos, from which it is divided on the North by the River Comary, on the East it has the Ocean, on the South the Captainship of Porto Seguro, and on the West the barbarous Nations.

The chief Town above mention'd, is in about 15 Degrees and 45 Minutes of South Latitude, and contains about two hundred Families, and has eight Sugar Mills belonging to it, the Product whereof, and other Commodities, are sent to Pernambuco in Barks. Seven Leagues from it, up the Country, there is a sweet Water-Lake, 3 Leagues over every way, and 15 Fathom deep, out of which runs a River through such a narrow Channel, that small Boats can scarce get through it. In blowing Weather the Waves rise very high in this Lake, which abounds in good Fish, especially Almonis, some of them so big as to weigh an hundred Weight.

On the back, or West of this Government, and that of Bahia, live first the Tapinambas, then the Cariacou, and the Toungans, which last came from the Coast of Pernambuco, and since then there is come a worse sort of People, no Man knows from whence, call'd Guguanes, and reckon'd the most barbarous of the Brazilians, for they eat their own Children, and rip up Women with Child to devour the Fetus, besides they drive Flocks of Men as if they were Cattel, to kill and feed on them. They are of a Gigantick stature, whiter than the other Salvages, and said to have been expell'd their Native Country by their Enemies; wandering up and down, without any Houses, but lying in the open Fields, like Beasts; using strong Bows, and long Arrows, and never fighting openly, but lying in Ambush, and taking Men by surprize. By these means they much distress'd the Portugueses, and at last almost destroy'd the Town of Ilheos, till about the Year 1581, the Portugueses taking Courage, and receiving some Succours, destroy'd them upon several Occasions, so that they have since done but little harm. Liet.

The Captainship of Porto Seguro

Retains this Name given it by Peter Alvarez Cabral, the first Discoverer, drove on it by a Storm, as has been said above. On the North it borders on Ilheos, the East is wash'd by the Ocean, the South is divided by the River call'd Rio Doce from the Captainship of Esperita Sana, and the West is shut in by the barbarous Guguanes, above-mention'd, and the Native Tapinambas.

... who extend far up the Country, and along the Portuguese Dominions as far as the Captainship of S. Vincent, and are mortal Enemies to the Portuguese.

The principal, or rather only Town in it bears the same Name, inhabited by near 500 Families of Portuguese, seated on the top of a white Rock, from which there is very high Land to the Northward, plainer to the Southward, and ending in a flat Strand. In the Town there is a small College of Jesuits, who instruct the Youth, and labour to convert the Natives. This Place, as well as Ilheus, was almost ruin'd by the Inhumane Guaymire, who utterly destroy'd another Portuguese Town, call'd S. Amaro, so that at present there is only this Porto Seguro, and a poor Place call'd S. Ana Cruz. The whole Livelihood of these Portuguese depends on carrying Provisions to sell along the Coast, for they abound in them, but have very little Sugar.

The Dutch, and others, who of late Years have touch'd on this Coast, especially towards the Captainship of Espirito Santo, say they have found no People at all, but large Deserts, and impenetrable Woods, which shows, that the Portuguese for the most part along all this vast Continent, have only a little Land about their Towns, tho' they represent it as if all the Coast were in their Possession, because they have the few Towns we mention along it at such Distances. Jaricis, Laci, and Sanfon.

The Captainship of Espiritu Santo,

Joining on the North to that of Porto Seguro, on the South to Rio de Janeiro, on the East lying along the Ocean, and on the West by the Natives Topugua, and Apiactangas, mortal Enemies to the Portuguese.

The only Portuguese Town here bears the same Name, is in about 20 Degrees of South Latitude, 60 Leagues North from Rio de Janeiro, and 50 South from Porto Seguro; inhabited by about 200 Families, the Jesuits have a House here, and there is a small Fort on one side of it.

This Captainship is reckon'd the best furnish'd with all sorts of Provisions of any in Brazil, having incredible Plenty of Fish, and infinite Game of all sorts in the Woods and Forests; besides that, the many Rivers crossing it every way, render the Land extraordinary fruitful. The noble River Parayba divides this Province from that of Rio de Janeiro, falling into the Sea in 20 Degrees and a half of South Latitude, about which live a People call'd Paraybes, differing little from the other Natives. We must here observe, that there are 3 Rivers bearing this Name upon this same Course. The one in the Northern Part of Brazil; this we here speak of the second, said to come far from the Westward; and the third between the Captainship of S. Vincent, and the River of Plate.

The Town stands on a Bay on the right side of it, about 3 Leagues from the main Sea, without any Wall, or other Defence; on the East side of it is the Monastery of S. Benedict, and its Church, in the midst of it, on the upper Ground, is that of S. Francis, and on the West that of the Jesuits. The Natives of this Spot are call'd Margayates, formerly mortal Enemies to the Portuguese, now their Confederates, and little differing from the rest of the Brazilians. They live in 7 or 8 Villages about the Town, and many of them are become Christians. Lery, Horcia, and Jaric.

The Captainship of Rio de Janeiro.

So call'd from the River of that Name, discover'd by John de Solis in the Month of January, tho' the French, who once endeavour'd to settle there under Villeprou in the Year 1555, call'd it Grasbana. The Mouth of it is 23 Degrees South Latitude. The Land of Brazil, which hitherto from Rio Grande runs most to the Southward, now at Cape S. Thomas, where this Government commences, turns off, and lies almost East and West, only a little inclining to the South, or between the North-east, and South-west, so that the North-east side of this Captainship lies to that of Espirito Santo, the South-east to the Ocean, the South-west to the Captainship of S. Vincent, and the North-west to the Barbarians.

The French, who, as was said above, made a Settlement here in 1555, being beaten out by the Portuguese, these built the Town of S. Sebastian on a small Bay, which is about 2 Leagues in from the Main Sea, on a plain Spot, encompass'd round with Mountains, to which there is an easie Ascent. The Town lies in length the whole extent of the Bay, but has very little Breadth, without Walls or Ramparts, but has four Forts to secure it against Enemies; the first on the East side of the Bay; the second, an Island on the West side; the third on a Rock to the South-west; and the fourth on the North-west side of the Place, which is divided into three Parts; the first, which may be call'd the upper, where stands the best Church, and the College of the Jesuits; the second, the lower in the Valley, call'd S. Anthony's Ward, and the third upon the edge of the Bay from the Castle up the Land, to the Monastery of S. Benedict. The Jesuits above-mention'd, teach Divinity, Philosophy, and Latin, and have the Charge of instructing the Natives, who live by the Town in two great Villages, being about 2000 Men, converted by them to Christianity. There are some few Sugar Mills belonging to this Place, but the principal Trade of the Inhabitants is Cotton, Brazil-Wood, and Provisions, whereof there is great Plenty.

The other Town belonging to this Captainship, is call'd Angra dos Reyes, about 12 or 13 Leagues West of Rio de Janeiro, as Figueiredo represents it in his Chart, seated on the Continent opposite to an Island, they call Grande or great, and a lesser, nam'd Ypoia. This Colony was Planted much later than the other, and is inconsiderable. The ancient Natives were call'd Toupinambaults, who have been all destroy'd, or fled, for those Indians, said to inhabit there now, seem to be a medley of several Nations, being no better than Slaves to the Portuguese. Lery, Thevet, and Lut.

The Captainship of S. Vincent

Is the last to the Southward, joining on the West to the Province of Goyaz, belonging to Paraguay, on the East to the Captainship of Rio de Janeiro, on the South it has the Ocean, and on the North, the Inland unknown Nations.

The chief Town here is call'd Santos, seated about 2 Leagues from the Sea, defended by a Rampart on the side next the River, which is there half a League over, and 5 fathom deep. Besides it has two Castles, the one on the South side, and the other in the middle of the Town, which does not contain above 200 Inhabitants, part Portuguese, and part Mestizos's, or Mungrels, one Parish-Church, one Monastery of Monks, and a House of the Society.

The next Town, 3 or 4 Leagues South from this, is S. Vincent, the Place it self well enough built, but has an ill Harbour, and not above an hundred Inhabitants, and 3 or 4 Sugar Mills, but 8 Leagues up the Country they have two Villages, call'd Tanji, and Caxaze. Besides there are some other inconsiderable Settlements, such as Itambai, Cumma, &c.

The little Town of S. Paul lies some Leagues up the Country, seated on an Eminency, at the Foot whereof run two small Rivers, the one coming from the South, and the other from the West, which meeting here, fall into the Jacumbi. This Place has not above 100 Houses, one Parish Church, two Monasteries of Benedictines and Carmites, and a House of the Jesuits. The chief Revenue of the Inhabitants proceeds from Sheep, and Tillage. The Summer heat is cool'd by the Air from the Mountains; but in Winter sometimes it freezes. The Soil produces good Wheat, it is proper for feeding of Cows, so that nothing is wanting but Salt, Wine, and Oil. About a League North from the Town runs the River Jacumbi, capable of small Barks, and well stor'd with Fish, coming from the Mountains of Parapizaba, and running to the Westward.

On the abovesaid Mountains of Parapizaba, there are some Gold Mines, which at first were thought considerable, but afterwards came to little or nothing. Since which there is another Vein found on the Mountains of Birguabá, or Jacumbá, about 30 Leagues South from the Town of S. Paul, whereupon the little Town or Village of S. Philip has been built there, and now, within these very few Years, we have heard of Gold brought to Lisbon from the New Mines, since when it has been told, that the Portuguese from the River of Plata, have beaten the Portuguese off, and possess'd themselves of the Place.

To the North of this Province live the Tupacambas, before spoken of, who are irreconcilable Enemies to the Portuguese; on the adjacent Mountains, and farther off, are the Tupacambas stretching down to the Sea side, and in Peace with the Portuguese, and to the Southward of them are the Caras, belonging to the Provinces of Paraguay, and therefore need no mention here. The Jesuits in their Annual Letters from those Parts, make mention of a salvage Nation, they call Airummaos, or Mernimius, vagrant, herce and cruel, which have done much Mischief to the Portuguese. A great part of the Country has been depopulated by the Cruelty and Baseness of the Portuguese towards the Natives; for the Religious Men use all their Endeavours to obstruct the treating of those People barbarously or sending them away into Slavery, yet the Portuguese have been so far from being averted from their Inhumanity, that because those Religious Men are confided in by the Natives, they have often made use of their Habit to deceive those Wretches, and by that means drawn them into their Snare. But we shall have more occasion to speak to this Point in treating of the Provinces Paraguay, where they have committed the utmost Barbarities, as will appear; and thus we close the Description of Brazil.

CHAP. XIV.

Of the Provinces of PARAGUAY, or the River of PLATE, including GUAYRA, PARAGUAY, properly so call'd, TUCUMAN, PARANA, URVAIGA, and RIO DE LA PLATA.

These Provinces, frequently call'd by the general Name of Paraguay, are of a vast Extent, as reaching about 500 Leagues from North to South, and near 600 from East to West in the largest Part, but much less in others, for they slope off both Northward and Southward, yet so, that they are at least 200 Leagues over in the narrowest Place. The Limits of them to the North lie along the yet undiscover'd Midland Nations, almost at 12 Degrees of South Latitude, about the Springs of the River of the same Name; those on the South lie about 33 Degrees of the same Latitude, on the unconquer'd Magellanick Land. Westward they border upon Peru and Chile, in about 304 Degrees of Longitude, and Eastward they lie along the Ocean as far as 377 Degrees of Longitude.

Besides the large Provinces contain'd in this immense Tract of Land, a vast multitude of Indian Petty Nations may be reckon'd to inhabit it, of which we shall have occasion to speak in the particular Parts. The Manners and Customs of those several People must therefore be referr'd to the same Places, to avoid Repetitions of the same things, or giving one imperfect Account of Countries differing much from one another. As for the

the Product, tho' it vary not so much, it will be no less convenient to follow the same Method, only observing that none of these Provinces have been yet found to yield any Gold, or Silver, which may in a great measure have obstructed the better Peopling of it with Spaniards, those precious Metals having drawn the greater Multitude to other Regions, where they abound, and yet we shall not find these are well Planted, considering the immense Extent. But the most remarkable thing here, will be to see a mighty Tract of Land subdued, and converted, without the least Force, only by the Preaching of a few Missioners, notwithstanding the incredible Discouragements from the Portuguese Inhabitants of Brazil, whose Inhumanities committed against the poor Natives, were sufficient to have given the best dispos'd Infidels an Aversion to the Name of Christianity, and an utter Hatred to all Europeans. But leaving this to its proper Place, let us come to the Division, where the several Provinces, with their respective Towns, lie thus.

Paraguay, properly so call'd, and Chaqua.

The most Northern of the Provinces contain'd under the general Name of Paraguay, has on the North the Midland Nations not yet known, on the East Brazil, Guayra and Parana, on the South another Part of Parana, Rio de la Plata, and Tucuman, and on the West another Part of Tucuman and Peru. There is no ascertaining its Bounds on the North and West, tho' in most Maps they are set down at Pleasure, neither of those Sides, or the Countries joyning to them being known, only about so far as has been discover'd by the Spaniards, as is mention'd in the general Account.

All the Inland Country between the River of the Amazons and that of Parana, being above 1000 Leagues is inhabited by the Nation call'd Guaranian, who have extended themselves beyond the Paraguay to the Borders of Peru, which makes the whole Province of Paraguay. Yet do not these Possess all that vast Tract of Land, but are mix'd with very many other lesser Nations, as Conquerors who have subdu'd those Parts, the Natives being scatter'd among them, whom they call Slaves, and have continual Wars with them, sending the Prisoners they take, to eat. They are scatter'd Villages under Caciques, choosing a General for their Wars, being hot the first Charge, but cowardly when cool, their Weapons being Clubs and Arrows. Their Houses are built of Clay, and commonly so large, that one contains the whole Village. Every one has as many Wives as he can get, and each Cacique has a Right to choose the handsomest, whom they often give up to be made Use of by their Followers, or Friends. To turn any Stranger out of Doors, is look'd upon as a heinous Crime. All their Bodies are naked, except their Privities cover'd with short Garments, made of Shells, or Feathers put together. They sow Indian Wheat, Pompions, Beans and Roots. When any Person of Note dies, the Women make horrid Lamentation, shrieking and howling, tear their Hair, beat their Foreheads, sometimes cast themselves Headlong from high Places, do many extravagant Actions, lay the Carcasses into great Pots, and, believing the Souls are bury'd with the Bodies, cover the Faces with Concave Dishes, that the Souls may not be filled.

Touching Religion they have no particular Worship of God, but are addicted to Superstitions of Wizards and such Impostors, giving the greatest Honour to those who are most familiar with the Devil. Those who are to be initiated in Magick Arts, Macerate their Bodies with fasting and other Austerities, letting their Nails grow and living alone in a beastly Manner, and then their Practice is to do Mischief. Another sort of them do no Harm, but only, like our cheating Astrologers, pretend to tell Fortunes and the like, and others to Physick, sucking the Patient to draw out the Distemper. Besides these follies, they believe in Dreams and many other Superstitions. Notwithstanding all this Barbarity, this Nation, is found by Experience, if well taught, more apt than any other Nation to embrace and retain Christianity, and to learn Mechanick Trades and Civility.

No Part of the new World did so much deceive the Expectation of the Europeans, for Paraguay affords no Gold, Silver, or Jewels, nor do they dig any Iron, tho' the Country abounds in it, so that the Inhabitants have no Use of Money, but live by exchanging of Commodities. There are few Places, where they make Wine, or sow Corn, but they make Bread and Drink of Indian Wheat. All their other Dainties, they seek by Fishing, Hunting, and Shooting; but have vast Herds of Black Cattel. For a long time Sugar and Cotton, both produc'd in small Quantities, were their chiefest Wealth, till the Leaves of certain Trees, growing in Marshy Grounds, and commonly call'd the Herb of Paraguay, began to be in Esteem. These Leaves they dry, and reduce to fine Powder, then mixing it with Water, the Spaniards and Indians, both Men and Women, drink of it several Times a Day, which provokes them to Vomit what they have eaten, and creates an Appetite. They pretend it has many Virtues, but the immoderate Use, causes Drunkenness and breeds Distempers. This is become a principal Commodity, in all the Countries round about.

That Part of Paraguay, which lies on the West side of the River Paraguay, is call'd by a Particular Name Chagua, and divided by several Rivers rising in the Mountains of Peru, and running down to this great River. The most noted Nations here are the Tamirians, formerly inhabiting 188 Villages, the Tents, Mataquois, Agois, Mesobies, Japitilagans, Churumutans, Tonocutas, Aipenes, &c. differing more in Languages than Customs. They are subject to Caciques, whose Power extends not beyond a Village. Every Man chooses a Fish for his Deity and worships it so religiously, as rather to starve, than eat any of the same Species. These People the Jesuits drew together into Towns, where they converted and civiliz'd them; so that of most bloody Infidels, they are become a peaceable Christian People.

The Metropolis of Paraguay is call'd, the Assumption, seated in 25 Degrees of South Latitude, 240 Leagues from the Mouth of the River of Plate, and 40 above that of the Paraguay, on the East side of that River. The City is Populous, being inhabited by about 400 Spanish Families, besides several thousands Mestizos, which are the Race of Spaniards and Indians, as many Mulattoes being the Off-spring of Spaniards and Blacks, and no less Number of Native Indians, infinite Multitudes of whom live in the Country about the Place, which is extraordinary delightful and fertile, which occasions great Plenty of all sorts of Provisions. The Air is temperate, and healthy, and the Trees continue green all the Year. Most of the Americans in the Neighbourhood are passionate Lovers of the Spaniards, and fond of serving them, out of that natural Affection. And it is to be observ'd, that the Spanish Inhabitants are many of them of the best Families in Spain, who settled here after most of the Scum had flock'd into other Parts of America, and being Gentry, they knew better how to gain the Love of those People than others in other Parts.

The other Spanish Towns in this Country, are Villa Rica, between 30 and 40 Leagues to the North east of the Assumption, on a little River of no Note. Next Amarapí, 20 Leagues North-east still from the last; Arcadia, and Ipame, still Northward; Nuestra Señora de la Fe, higher the same way, betwixt the Rivers Picraí, and Taqueri, and Xeres de la Frontera, North-west from the last, which is the furthest the Spaniards have any Settlement that Way. But on the West side of the River Paraguay, in that part of the Province call'd Chagua, is the Town of the Conception on the Rio Vermelo, or Red River, which coming from the Mountains of Peru, falls into the River of Plate, a little below the Paraguay. S. Juan is on the River Lobo, and these are all the Towns that we know the Spaniards have there.

The River of Paraguay, here several times mention'd, and which gives its Name to the Province, runs 300 Leagues from its Source, which is to the Northwards, among the Nations not well known, receiving several other great Rivers on both sides, and carrying a Channel fit for Ships of Burthen, before it falls into the Parana, by which it is swallow'd up 200 Leagues from the Sea, and the Conjunction of these two mighty Rivers makes that which is afterwards call'd the River of Plate, of which, and the Parana, we shall speak in their Places. It is remarkable in the meeting of these two Rivers, that tho' they run in the same Channel, yet for several Miles each preserves its own Colour, the Parana running clear, and the Paraguay troubled.

Tucuman

On the East, borders upon the Provinces of Paraguay, and Rio de la Plate, Northward on Peru, and the Province of Chagua, Westward on the Province of Cuyo, or Concuyo, a dependence of Chile, and Southward the Plains that run to the Streights of Magellan, call'd the Magellanic Country. It is all within the Temperate Southern Zone, a very small Part of it reaching the Torrid, and that, contrary to the Opinion of the Ancients, excessive Cold, as being full of high Mountains.

The Length of it is about 300 Leagues, the Breadth varying, as ending somewhat like a Cone; and generally speaking, inhabited by four sorts of People. The most Southern liv'd in the Plains, and on craggy Mountains, without any Habitation, feeding on what they kill'd, and carry'd about Mats to serve them for Houses, or Tents. The Northern liv'd in Marshes, and fed upon Fish, both of them equally fierce; the Northern the tallest, and the Southern the more brutal. Others born to Darknefs, deny'd themselves the enjoyment of the Air, lying buried most of their Days in Caves under Ground. The last liv'd in small Villages about the Plains and Mountains, being more civiliz'd by the Neighbourhood on Peru. They are all given to Sloth, and value neither Silver nor Brats, some of which they have, for Gold there is none. They make use of Sheep to carry their Burthens, like those before spoken of in Peru. Here are Lions no bigger than a Mastiff, but not so strong, or fierce, without Manes, and only terrible for their roaring; but the Tigers are fiercer than in any other Country.

The chief Rivers are two, the one call'd Dulce, or sweet, and the other Salado, or Salt, from the taste of their Waters. Both, tho' increas'd by many other, incapable of carrying any but little Boats, and that not in all Places. Next to these is Corcaranial, and some others not worth naming, which are either swallow'd up by the Earth, or lose themselves in Lakes. Some of them petrifie Sticks and Bones, and cause great Swellings under the Chins of Men and Beasts, which are dissolv'd by the Waters of other Rivers. This scarcity of Rivers is sufficiently made amends for by the multitude of Springs gushing from the Woods and Mountains, as also the Lakes in many Plains, which was the Reason that most of the Province was well Peopled. That Part which lay next to Peru, was subject to the Incas, the rest to many Caciques, less distinct in Manners than Languages. They seldom combin'd to repel their Enemies, which was a great help to the Spaniards towards subduing of them.

The City of Santiago del Esteco is the Metropolis of Tucuman, and Bishop's See, seated on the Banks of the River call'd Dulce, or Sweet, in 28 Degrees of South Latitude, and inhabited by 500 Spanish Families, besides great Numbers of Mestizos, and Mulattoes. The Country about it is inhabited by many Thousand Families of Natives, all converted, and become a very civiliz'd People. S. Michael was the first Town the Spaniards founded in this Country, 28 Leagues North-west from Santiago, on a Plain at the foot of high Mountains, well water'd, which renders the Territorry fertile, producing abundance of Wheat, Barley, and Grass, so that there is Plenty of Cattel; as also much Cotton, and Flax, and some Wine, besides abundance of Wood for all Uses. The Air is reckon'd the wholesomest of any Part of the Province. Cordova, another large Town, is in 32 Degrees and a half of South Latitude, in a temperate, and delightful Climate, with equal Winter and Summer, and all the Territorry full of Cattel, great and small, by reason of the excellent Pasture; and besides Corn, and all other Necessaries, here are plentiful Salt-Pits. This Place is conveniently seated, as being in the Road from Buenos Ayres to Peru, and therefore has a considerable Trade. The Inhabitants are about 300 Spaniards, whose main Business is Tillage, and making of Cotton Cloth, which they sell at Porosi. Esteco, or Nuestra Senora de Talavera is to the North of S. Michael, Solta, or Lerma North of that, and Xuxui, or S. Salvador, the most Northerly of them all, being within a Degree of the Tropick. Londres, or London, why so call'd I do not find, lies West from S. Miguel, Rioja next the Frontiers of Cuyo, besides which, there are several other Places of less Note, have nothing remarkable.

The Province of Rio de la Plata

Borders Northward on that of Paraguay, properly so call'd, and Part of Parana; Westward on Tucuman, the South it has the Magellonick Plains, and to the East Urvaica, and the Ocean.

It lies all along the River of the same Name, on both sides of it, and thence has the Name, the Extent being the same as that of the River, that is, 200 Leagues from North to South; but from East to West, the greatest Breadth scarce exceeds 100 Leagues; yet, to say the Truth, the Limits of these Provinces are not well ascertain'd, especially those between this and Tucuman, because there are no Boundaries, the Country being all a Plain, without the least Hill, nor so much as a Tree, House, or Hut.

The River which gives its Name to this Province, was by the Indians call'd Parana, signifying a Sea, for they reckon'd the Parana and this all one, but the Spaniards call this the River of Plate, from the Mouth to the Place where the Parana and the Paraguay meet, the latter whereof has been already spoken of, and the other shall be in its Place. The Name of the River of Plate was given it on account of a considerable Parcel found by some who went very far up it, which gave them hopes of rich Mines to be found in the Neighbourhood, but what they found had been brought from Peru, and all this Country, as has been said, produces none. To return to the River of Plate, it commences, as was said, where the two others join, in 33 Degrees of South Latitude, and runs 200 Leagues to the South, and South-east, all the way Navigable for the greatest Ships, and full of delightful Islands. The Mouth of it is reckon'd 60 Leagues wide, tho' it is true some allow but 30, which vast difference proceeds from the taking of it farther up the Land, or out to Sea, for all the latest Writers do allow it 60. Several great Rivers fall into it on both sides, and among them, those call'd Rio Vermeyo, Rio Dulce, Rio Salado, Carcarual, and others on the West, and the mighty one of Urvaica on the East, not to mention others of less Note. In short, this is in all Probability the greatest River in the World, for Breadth, and continued Depth, tho' perhaps that of the Amazon, or others may equal, or exceed it in length of Course.

The Natives inhabiting next the Mouth of this River on the South side, where Buenos Ayres stands, are call'd Quirandies, when first discover'd, they were a wandering Nation, like the Arabs, often changing their Dwelling-Places, and removing their Huts; fierce, and Man-eaters, who at first put the Spaniards to much trouble, and destroy'd many of them. Above these are the Timbues, and Carcares, a People then living most upon Fish, but more peaceable and courteous than the others. The rest were, for the most part, the Guaranians, before spoken of in Paraguay, and for those on the North side of the Mouth of the River, they will be mention'd in the Province of Urvaica, to which they belong.

The Product is much the same as is said of the other Provinces, that is, all sorts of European, or American Fruit, where Planted, and both sorts of Wheat, as also Cotton, and Sugar. But the most wonderful increase of this Country consists in Cattel of all Kinds, for here being Plains, as was before hinted, which extend 200 Leagues in length, and these abounding in Pasture, the Beasts brought out of Spain have multiplied to such a prodigious degree, that they are all in common, and no Man has any Property in them, but whosoever has occasion, takes what he wants. The number of black Cattel is so great, that the;

they kill many Thousands every time Ships go for Spain, only for the Hides, leaving the Carcasses to be devour'd by Birds of Prey, whereof there are no less Numbers; nay, when they have not vent for the Hides, they kill them only for the Tongues. Those who will not be at the trouble of catching those Beasts, may buy a good fat Cow for two Shillings, or less. The same is to be understood of Horses, which are no less numerous, and have no Owners, but he who wants, takes what he likes, and breaks it, or may buy one ready broke for a Piece of Eight, and these not poor Jades, but of the true Spanish breed, strong, mettlesome, and serviceable Beasts, fit for War, and all other Uses; and it is certain the Spaniards here can bring 30000 Horses into the Field, of Indians well mounted, accouter'd and disciplin'd, as F. Sepp avers to his own Knowledge, having been long a Missioner in those Parts.

Of Partridges there are such Multitudes, that they may be kill'd with a Stick, being as tame as our Hens, and as large as they. Their Bread is made of the best Wheat, and as white as Snow, but the Natives want Salt. All the Fuel they burn, is of Almond and Peach Trees, there being no other, and whole Woods of these, all Planted by the Spaniards, who keep them up by only putting the Kernels into the Ground, and the next Year they bear.

The Return for European Commodities is immense, they give a Crown for a twopenny Knife, for a Hat not worth 2 s. here, 10 or 12 Crowns; for a Gun of 10 or 12 Shillings, 30 Crowns, and so in Proportion for other things. Nay they will give two good Horses for a sixpenny Knife, a good Oxe for a few Needles.

The Town of Buenos Ayres is seated in 35 Degrees of South Latitude about 60 Leagues from the Mouth of the great River, upon a gently rising Ground, healthy, and pleasant, as the Name imports, for Buenos Ayres, is good Air. The Houses and Churches have none but Mud Walls, the former but one Story high, not for want of Stone, but of Lime, which they have but lately began to burn, as also to make Tiles and Bricks. Since when they have built a Steeple, and intend a Church of those Materials. The Jesuits are the Architects, and certain Indians sent from the several Cantons the Workmen. The whole Town consists of two principal cross Streets, but it has four Monasteries, of Franciscans, Dominicans, Trinitarians, and Jesuits, all of them very poor. The Castle where the Governour resides, has only Mud Walls, with a deep Trench, defended by 900 Spaniards. The Ecclesiastical Government consists of a Bishop, and three Canons, whose Revenue is not above 3000 Crowns, which is very inconsiderable, especially considering the little Value of Plate, and the great Price of any European Commodities in that Place, to make amends for which, Provisions are almost for nothing, as has been mention'd already. Most of this Account is from F. Sepp, who was there in the Year 1692.

Santa Fe, the next Spanish Town, is 80 Leagues up the River from Buenos Ayres, and in about 31 Degrees of South Latitude, on the same side. Corrientes is near 50 Leagues higher in the Latitude of 27, on the East side of the River, opposite to the Place where the Paraguay and the Parana meet. Santa Lucia, and Chanas, are inconsiderable Villages between the two last.

The Province of Parana

Has its Name from the great River so call'd, which is its Boundary on the South and East, dividing it from the Provinces of Buenos Ayres, Urvaica, and Guayra; on the North it joins the unknown Inland we call of Brazil, and on the West that of Paraguay, the extent of it may be reckon'd 200 Leagues, which is what is well known, all above that not yet conquer'd, or converted, the greatest Breadth being about 100 Leagues.

The River Parana runs above 300 Leagues before it joins the Paraguay, at which Place, as has been said, the Spaniards have chang'd its Name, and from the Conflux to the Mouth call it the River of Plate. The Name of Parana signifies a Sea, given on account of its greatness, and sometimes they call'd it Paranaguazu, that is, the great Sea. It has the quality of petrifying Wood, as is daily seen, and the Governour Ferdinand Arias set up a wooden Pillar thus turn'd into Stone in the Porch of his House. The Springs of it are scarce known, as lying far up in the Inland of Brazil, whence it is South and South-west, cutting the Province of Guayra in two, and then running between those of Parana and Urvaica, till it loses its Name, as has been said.

In the middle of this River is an Island 18 Leagues in Compass, beset with Rocks and Whirlpools, which render it almost inaccessible, and was therefore formerly the Fortrels of the Natives against the Spaniards. Both the Shores, as well where open, as where wooded, produce a multitude of Beasts and Birds, especially Parrots, three times as big as those of other Parts, and most beautifully Feather'd. Several Nations inhabit along its Banks, differing little in any thing but Languages, excepting those who liv'd upon a certain sort of Earth dried at the Fire, and then dipp'd in the Fat of Fish, an unaccountable Diet. Yet these several Nations all agreed in fierceness, and opposing the Spaniards, who sustain'd great Losses by them, till they were at last civiliz'd, and brought to Subjection, only by the Preaching of the Jesuits and the Franciscans, who drew them from their salvage way of living dispersed, into Towns, where they all profess Christianity, acknowledge the King of Spain for their Sovereign, and are exempted from all Duties, or Burthens, having no Spanish Garrisons, nor any other Governours but those Religious Men. The Towns built here were S. Anne, on the Lake Appupen, Itapua on the great River, 60 Leagues above its Mouth; Acarai, 60 Leagues higher; Iguazu, on the East side of the same River, and upon the River Iguazu. Cacapa, and Yuti, more remote from the Parana on the West side.

The Province of Guayra

On the North lies along the Inland of Brazil; on the West it borders on the Captainship of S. Vincent, in the same Country, and part of the Ocean, on the South it has the Province of Urvaica, and some part of Parana, and on the West the River Parana parts it from the Province of that same Name. Its greatest Length from East to West is near 200 Leagues, and the Breadth from North to South may be set at about 120, there being no certainty in the Northern Limits.

Its Situation being most under the Tropick of Cancer, renders it excessive hot and moist, and consequently very fruitful in Provisions, and no less subject to Diseases, being much fitter for the habitation of Beasts than Men, and yet it was indifferently Peopled at the first coming of the Spaniards, as appears by the Ruins of many Villages destroy'd by Sickness, and by the inhumane driving away the Natives by the Portugueses of Brazil, as we shall see in its Place. The Inhabitants of two little Spanish Towns here are the Posterity of some who settled here in the Year 1550. The whole Nation lives miserably, having no Bread but what is made of the Root Mandicaz, nor any Flesh but that of wild Beasts.

Here are many Trees that yield Balsam, and the Woods are full of several sorts of Fruit-Trees, and among them abundance of Swine, with a ring like a Navel on their Backs. Wild Bees there are abundance, but their Wax will never be made white, yet the Honey is good. Snakes there are of sundry sorts, which do much harm to Men and Beasts, and this Country affords little else remarkable. The River Paranapan runs down into this Country from the Mountains of Brazil, almost as large as the Paraguay, and falls into the Parana, after it has receiv'd the Tibaxiva, Pirapua, Itangua, and other lesser Streams; both sides of it cover'd with several sorts of Trees, of which the Natives value the Cedars most, some whereof are so big and tall, that there are Vessels made out of single Trunks, which carry 20 Oars. Here the Jesuits built the Town of Our Lady of Loretto, and 4 Leagues from it, that of S. Ignatius, as also a fourth, call'd Itabasca, and the Indians being then protected from any Oppression of the Spaniards, in process of time built eleven more.

The Province of Urvaica

Has the Ocean on the East, the same Ocean and River of Plate on the South, Parana on the West, and Grazya on the North, extending from 25 to 35 Degrees of South Latitude. The length of it North-east and South-west, is about 300 Leagues; and the Breadth North-west and South-east, near 140, where most.

The great River Urvaica rises out of a small Spring on the Mountains of Brazil, and runs a considerable Way very little observ'd, till receiving many other Streams and Rivers, it swells equal to the Paraguay, and falls into the River of Plate, a little above Buenos Ayres. Having left Brazil, it gives a turn, and takes its Course almost parallel to the Parana. Great Stones and Rocks lying in it at certain Distances make it incapable of Ships of Burthen; but the Winter Floods make it spread abroad like a Sea. For 200 Leagues from the source it runs with a mighty Noise, being streightned by continual ridges of Rocks, and Woods, after which having found more room, it glides in a gentler manner. The whole Course of it is above 400 Leagues.

The Woods abounding in Monkeys, Tigers, Parrots, and many other Creatures, differ little from the Neighbouring Provinces, and formerly the Plains were full of Ostriches, Lions, and several sorts of Goats, and Deer; at present all that vast extent of Land, on both sides of the River, is a fullure cover'd with an infinite Number of Cows and Horses. There were many Nations of barbarous Inhabitants, distinguish'd from one another only by different Languages; among whom the Guaranians, before spoken of, excell'd the rest, both in Number and aptness to be civiliz'd, and become Christians.

Historical Account of these Provinces.

The first European we find to have been in them, was Alexius Garcia, a Portuguese, sent by the Governour of Brazil in the Year 1524, to discover the Inland, with his Son, three other Portugueses, and a considerable number of Indians, who travell'd to the Confines of Peru, and gathering a great quantity of Plate, in his return was kill'd, with most of his Men. Before his Death was known in Brazil, George Sedenho was sent out with 60 Portugueses, and many Indians to his Assistance, all which Portugueses were also destroy'd, and only some of the Indians return'd to Brazil.

Not long after, that is, in the Year 1526, Sebastian Gabot, who had discover'd Virginia for the King of England, being employ'd by the Emperour Charles the Fifth, came to the River of Plate, first discover'd by John Diaz de Solis, in the Year 1515, and sayling up it to the Mouth of the Paraguay, run 40 Leagues up that, till he came to the Place where Alexius Garcia, above-mention'd, had been kill'd, and there found all the Plate taken from the said Garcia, which he supposing to be the Product of the Country, bought up, believing he had made a rich Discovery, and therefore leaving 120 Men in a Fort he erected at the Mouth of the River Carciranna, about 30 Leagues above the Place where Buenos Ayres stands, he hastened into Spain, and spread such a Fame of the Wealth of that Country, as caus'd the River to be call'd of Plate, and prevail'd with abundance of Gentry of the best Families in Spain to enter themselves under Peter de Mendoza, a Man of the first Quality, appointed by the Emperour to settle Colonies there, so that he had 2200 Landmen, and Gabot commanded the Fleet.

Mendoza it was that first founded Buenos Ayres, which his Successor Irala abandon'd to build the City of the Assumption. After him the Governour Alvar Nunez Cabeza de Vaca continued the Discoveries to the upper Part of Paraguay, and he and his Successor rebuilt Buenos Ayres, and settled all the other Colonies mention'd in the Description of the Province, most of which was successively subdu'd by Force of Arms, with great loss of the Spaniards, the Natives being numerous, fierce, and abhorring to submit to a Foreign Yoke.

Whilst this Province was settling, one Caspar, a Soldier belonging to Gabot, in the Year 1530, undertook to find out a Way from the River of Plate to Peru, with only three Companions, and was the first that came into the Province of Tucuman, which he cross'd over into Chile, and thence to Peru, travelling about 2000 Leagues by Land. Five Years after, two other Spanish Soldiers, with incredible boldness, perform'd the same Journey through Tucuman to Peru, filling their Countrymen with Hopes of a vast Empire. Accordingly in 1540, Puca de Castro, then Viceroy of Peru, sent Joan de Rojas over the Mountains of Peru with 200 Spaniards, and he being kill'd by the Way, they chose Francis Mendoza for for their Commander, with whom they march'd to the River of Plate, where they murder'd their Officer, and march'd back the same Way they came. In 1549 John Nunez Prada, with a Company of brave Spaniards penetrated from Pern into the Heart of Tucuman, where he built the Town of S. Michael, on the Banks of the River Escava. In 1553, Francis de Aguirre, sent out of Chile by the Governour Valdivia with 200 Men, destroy'd the Town of S. Michael, and built the City of Santiago, since the Metropolis of the Province, and a Bishop's See, on the River Dulce, and in 28 Degrees of South Latitude. In 1558, John Gomez Zurita came out of Chile with fresh Forces, and built the City of London, to curb the barbarous Natives call'd Calchaquines, rebuilt the Town of S. Michael, and rais'd the Fort of Cordova, since grown to a City. He made so compleat a Conquest of all the Country, that little more had remain'd to do, but that he was rout'd, and sent away to Pern by Gregory Canadeda, another Spaniard, whereupon the Indians revolted, and destroy'd several Colonies, which cost much Blood to be restor'd, but at length the succeeding Governours pacified all again, and fix'd the several Towns above-mention'd in the Description, which remain to this Day, and all the Natives in subjection, and converted to the Christian Faith, the Jesuits having drawn them from their barbarous course of Life to live in Towns, and by degrees perfectly civiliz'd them.

As for the three Provinces of Parana, Guayra, and Uruguay, they were never any of them conquer'd by Force of Arms, but the Jesuits undertook the reducing of those brutal Nations to Christianity, and Subjection to the Crown of Spain. This they perform'd with much Labour, living among those brutal People to learn their Languages, and feeding on such miserable Diet as was natural to the Salvages, their Habitations being none but Huts made of Mats. Being thus become acquainted, they began to instruct them in the Faith, shew'd them the Advantages of a polite, civil Life, and prevail'd upon them to gather into Towns, where they put themselves entirely under the Direction of those Fathers; and this the more willingly, because they protected them against any Invasion from the Soldiers, or Subjection to the Spanish Governours. Yet the Difficulties to be overcome were immense, the People being naturally so salvage, having little Notion of a God, being addicted to Sorcery, and Superstition, and indulging themselves in all manner of Vice, and brutal Satisfaction, and were inhumane Man-eaters. To break them of all these horrid Practices, and instil good Doctrine into such stupid Creatures, was an incredible Labour; yet Patience, and continual Application, gave daily greater Hopes of Success, most of those People taking an Affection to the Jesuits, and putting themselves under their Direction.

In the midst of this Success, the Alcaldes, as the Portugueses call them, to cast the Odium of their Villanies from their own Name, being worse than the most salvage Indians, put a great stop to their prosperous Beginnings, and might have quite overthrown all that had been done by their Inhumanities. In short, these Alcaldes were no other than the Race of the first Portuguese Planters of Brazil, got upon Indian Women, and with them all the Portugueses from all Parts, who lov'd to live upon Rapine and Villany, so that call them by what Name soever, they were natural Born Portugueses, and the Sons of such, with a new Name to excuse the Nation. These Miscreants gathering in great Numbers, for several Years made it their business to sally out upon the Indians about them, whom they drove away like Herds of Cattel to Brazil, where they sold them openly for Slaves. The King of Spain sent repeated Orders to punish them, and prevent the like for the future; but the Fault was not only theirs, for they might have been soon suppress'd, which the Governours, nor Inhabitants of Brazil did not care to do, because they were all their own Kindred, and acted by Connivance, as furnishing them with Slaves at easie Rates, which was what they wanted. Nor are they any way excusable, since they not only permitted them to go out upon those inhumane Expeditions, but receiv'd them again at their Return, and allow'd the poor Wretches they had forc'd from their Beings, to be publickly sold in the Markets, like Sheep. These Monsters having made all the Countries near them desolate, at length broke into the Province of Guayra, where, as has been said, the Jesuits had brought all the Natives into Towns, which they fell upon, and after Butchering such as offer'd to defend themselves, drove away all the rest into miserable Captivity, and tho' some Jesuits follow'd into Brazil to demand Justice of the Governour, it was in vain, for, as has been said, they were all consenting, and Partakers in the Booty. This gave occasion to many of the Natives to believe that the Fathers gather'd them into Towns, that they might be the better carry'd away into Captivity, and therefore they concluded it was safer to live dispers'd in the Woods. At length one of their Caciques, who had been rescued, with a few others, by the Jesuits that went to Brazil, undeceiv'd them, and they began to gather again, but were not long at Peace, for the wicked Mamelucs return'd several times, driving away Multitudes, till at last the Jesuits were oblig'd to abandon all the Towns they had left in the upper Country, and retire farther down towards the River Parana.

No Distance was great enough to protect them against these Devils incarnate, and therefore the Jesuits, tho' with much Difficulty and Opposition, at length prevail'd that the Indians might be Arm'd, after which they several times resolutely enough engag'd the Mamelucs with various Fortune, and at last gave them several considerable Defeats, after which many were cut off in the Woods, which so daunted them, that they never since return'd; shewing they were true Villains, merciless where there is no Opposition, and Cowards when any thing withstands them. Hitherto we have in these Accounts for the most part follow'd E. del Techo, in his History of Paraguay, &c. only supplying what was wanting in him out of Lact, Herrera, and Sanson, besides some few things out of E. Scpp, who having writ his Account of those Parts, where he was then Resident in the Year 1692, we will from him add a short Relation of the Present State of the Indians, in the Province of Uruguay, which with Guayra is the particular Spiritual Conquest of the Jesuits, who have the entire Direction of those People.

The

The Country is divided into 26 Cantons, each of them containing 5, 6, 7, or 8000 Souls, or perhaps a greater Number, with two Missioners, who have the whole Charge of their Temporal and Spiritual Concerns, for they must not only instruct, and administer to them as Pastors, but to play the Part of Stewards, Physicians, Architects, Gardners, and in fine, order every thing that is necessary for Life. The Cantons are generally seated on an Ascent near the Rivers Uruguay and Parana. Near the Church of each Canton is a Square 400 Foot long, and as many broad, the rest being divided into Streets; but the Houses are no other than Huts of Clay, thatch'd, only some few of late Til'd. Every Hut consists of but one Chamber, without Window, or Chimney, all the Cellar being a Calabash full of Water. The better sort lie in Hammocks, the rest on Tigers Skins, or Oxes Hides, with a Stone or Block for a Pillow. All the Furniture of their Kitchen consists of two or three Pots or Pans, the Hands serve for Spoons, the Teeth for Knives. The Door is a piece of Ox's Hide, about 6 Spans high, and 3 in breadth, and within that one Room lies the whole Family, tho' never so numerous, with three or four Dogs, and as many Cats. When the Maids are 14, and the Lads 16, they are presently Marry'd for fear of worse; and there is no trouble about Portion, or Jointure, or any other Articles, only the Wife promises to fetch Water, and the Husband to furnish Fuel.

Each Canton has a handsome, lofty built Church and Steeple, with 4 or 5 Bells, and sometimes two Organs, but one certain, a high Altar richly gilt; besides 2, or 4 side Altars, a curious Pulpit, 2, 4, or 6 Silver Candlesticks, 3 or 4 pair of silver Offering Vessels, 3 silver Crosses, and a large silver Ciborium; the Chalice is gilt, and all the Antependiums and Vestments as rich as any in Europe. Every Sunday there is high Mass, and a Sermon, the Indian Musicians performing their Parts well, having been taught by the Jesuits.

These Indians, as dull as they are at Invention, are no less ready and apt at Imitation; show an Indian Woman a piece of Flanders Lace, and she will undo it with a Needle, and make exactly the like again. F. Sepp said he had two Organs, one of which was carry'd from Europe, the other made by the Natives so exactly, that there was no distinguishing between them; the same of a Printed Missal, which they copied so nicely that it was scarce discernable. They also make Trumpers and Watches, and so will imitate any thing to Perfection, provided they have the Model before them, even to copying of Pictures with great Curiosity.

They are monstrous Eaters when they have it before them, and will devour an incredible quantity of Flesh half raw, yet their Nature does not require it, but they do it out of Gluttony, and therefore the Missioners are their Store-keepers, and every Day deliver out their Allowance; Flesh is so plenty that they need not stint them, there being Millions of Cows to be had for nothing, as was observ'd before, besides swarms of Hens, Pigs, Goats, and Sheep, and scarce a Canton but has 3 or 4000 Horses, yet they value Mules at a higher rate. One Sheep, or Lamb, is worth three Oxen, or Cows, on account of the Wool. Cotton there is enough, but no Hemp, or Flax. Hats, which us'd to be excessive dear, are now made by the Indians. There might be plenty of Corn but that the People will not take Pains, and barely are brought to sow as much as may serve them, which is Indian Wheat, and that they pound in a Mortar, and boil with their Meat, or make Cakes on the Embers, having no Ovens, and all this through Laziness; for they might have European Wheat and Bread if they would, yet are they so fond of our Bread, that they will give two or three Horses for a Loaf of it.

Tho' there be such Plenty of Horses, there are no Stables, nor any Hay made, because the Cattel feeds all the Year up to the Knees in Grass, without being watch'd; Theft being either not understood, or at least not practis'd among those Indians. Whosoever has occasion for Milk, sends, or goes into the Fields, and milks the first Cow he meets with, and brings home as much as he has occasion for, the Milking-Pails being no other than large Calabashes. The worst is, that the Fields are much infested with Tigers, which sometimes come down in Flocks, and devour the Calves, but seldom the Cows or Oxen, because they are able to defend themselves. These Tigers are now the only Enemies the Natives fear, or so much as know of.

C H A P. XVIII.

Of the Kingdom of CHILE.

It extends from 25 Degrees of South Latitude to the Streight of Magellan in 53, being above 500 Leagues; the Breadth various. Chile, properly so call'd, being not above 20 or 30 Leagues, but including the Plains of Chyo, which run the whole length, and are subject to its Government, it will be above 60 Leagues broad. On the North it is contiguous, with the rich Provinces of Peru about the Mines of Potosi, on the South it has the Streights of Magellan, on the East Tucuman, and the unconquer'd Magellanick Lands, and on the West the South Sea. This Extent Southward is given it by Ovalle, whom we shall follow in the Account of this Kingdom, as the most approv'd of any, being a Learned Man, born there, and inhabiting the most part of his Life, and therefore speaking mostly upon his own Knowledge, and not by hearsay.

Yet our Maps generally carry Chile no farther than 47 Degrees of South Latitude, and with reason enough, that being the farthest inhabited by Spaniards, all beyond it excessive cold, and as such not yet subdued. But our Author carries it to the Streight of Magellan, because the Mountains Andes run so far, and there is no certain Southern Boundary till you come to the said Streight.

This Kingdom he divides into Chile, properly so call'd, the Islands, and the Province of Chuyo, or Chucuyto. The Islands we shall leave to be spoken of among the rest of those belonging to South America; of the two Parts in the Continent we will treat in this Place, without giving any general Account of them together, forasmuch as the difference between, tho' in the same Latitude, is so great, that nothing can be said in common, common, the two varying as much in all respects as if they were Antipodes to one another, and therefore we proceed to the Table of principal Towns, as has been done in other Provinces.

The Kingdom of Chile, properly so call'd,

Lies North, West, and South within the Limits above-mention'd, but on the East it has the vast Mountains Andes, which part it from the Province of Cuzco, or Chucuyto, being under the third, fourth, and fifth Climates, the longest Day in the third Climate 13 Hours, and 14 in the fifth, but opposite to Europe, for S. Lucy's Day is the longest, and S. Barnaby's the shortest.

It much resembles Europe in many respects, bating that it is Spring and Summer in the one, when it is Autumn and Winter in the other ; nor are the Heat or Cold so excessive as in Europe, as far as the 45th degree of Latitude, for from thence forward to the Pole the violent Cold begins. Generally speaking, the Heat is not to be complain'd of, Day or Night, nor is here ever any Lightning, and Thunder, only heard at a great distance on the Mountains, nor any Storms of Hail, but constant fair Weather in Summer, and moderate Rains in Winter. Another Blessing is, that there are no venomous Creatures of any sort, nor any mischievous wild Beasts, except some few small Lions, which now and then do harm among Cattel ; and as for Insects, no Punaise will live there, though brought from other Parts.

No Soil in all America is so conformable to that of Europe as this, for it produces all sorts of Grain and Fruit brought from thence in Perfection, and at the same time it yields all that grows in other Parts of that New World; and what is most to be admir'd, is, that Cuyo, the very next Province in the same Latitude differs in all respects, as we shall see when we come to speak of it.

The Riches of Chile are immense, for it has Gold, Silver, Copper, Tin, Quicksilver, and Lead Mines. The Lead is neglected, as of little use; the Quick-silver not yet much us'd, because lately discover'd, and Guayacabelica supplies enough for Use; the Tin neither is not much regarded; the Copper is us'd for Cannon, and Balls, the Silver is not sought after, because the Gold draws away all the Application. These Gold Mines lie all along from the Borders of Peru to the very Streights of Magellan, and many of them so rich, that an Indian has been known to gather the value of 12 or 14 Pounds Sterling in a Day. The Gold dug out of the Mines costs no more Trouble but washing away the Earth which is among it, and then the Metal remains pure. Iron is here of greater Value than Silver, and therefore most Utenfils are of this laſt Metal, and the Soldiers have their Sword-Hilts, and Plates on the But-ends of their Muſkets of it, Officers, and all other Perſons of any Degree wearing none but Gold-hilted Swords.

As for other Wealth procur'd by Industry, here are vast Breeds of Cattel, whose Tallow, Hides, and dry'd Flesh is sent to Peru, and other Parts; Hemp growing in no other Part of America, and serving for all sorts of Tackling and Cordage, us'd along the South Sea, as also Packthread; excellent Mules convey'd by Land to Peru, besides generous Wine, and many sorts of Fruits which will not grow in other Provinces.

The Mountains Andes, before spoken of in Peru, when they come to Chile join into one Ridge, whereas before, as has been said, they divide with a Valley between, but here there is nothing but a continual Ascent from Mountain to Mountain, till you come to one in the middle, infinitely higher than the rest, and it is reckon'd 40 Leagues over from the bottom on the one side, to the bottom on the other, the Ascent so prodigious, that 3 or 4 Days are spent in mounting to the top, and as many again in going down. The Air on the top is so violent sharp and thin, that those who travel are fain to hold their Handkerchiefs before their Mouths to condense it, lest it should take away their Breath, and prove mortal. In other Parts Passengers are sick, and troubled with Vomiting, just as if they were at Sea, and others feel various Effects, as the alteration of Air works upon their different Constitutions. The Clouds, which at first ascending, take away the sight of the clear Sky, on the top obstruct seeing the Earth, as being much below. Along this Ridge there are 16 Burning Mountains, which often break out in a dreadful manner, and in the Year 1640, one of them cleft in two, and threw pieces of Rock all on Fire a great distance.

From these Mountains an innumerable Number of Springs run down into the Plains, forming many Rivers, the first of which is that they call Salado, or the Salt River, in 25 Degrees Latitude, next the Copapo in 26; then that of Cogombe in 30, whose Mouth makes a Bay, which is an excellent Harbour; next follows Cunapuz in 31, and after it Longotoma; in 33 and a half Maypo, so rapid that no Bridge can stand on it. In 34 Degrees Kapel, in 35 Maule; in 36 Itata; in 37 Maipo, the greatest River of Chile, 2 or 3 Miles Miles over at the Mouth. Levo is in 38, Coyo in 39; Valdivía is in 40, up which great Ships go to the very City, being 2 or 3 Leagues from the Sea, through a narrow Streight, or Channel, which leads into a spacious Port as still as a Pond. After these is Chalbin, Rio Bueno, Rio Chico, de los Coronados, de la Esperanza, Gallegos, de los Mártires, de los Apóstoles, de los Gigantes, de la Campina, de los Pixares, S. Victorian, and many more, besides a Multitude of less Note that fall into these here nam'd.

On these Coasts there are abundance of good Harbours, Valdreia has been already mention'd; Cochimbo is a noble Bay, secure from all Danger, and resorted to for Gold and Copper. Quintero is much commended by Spilberg, the Dutch Admiral, who went to rob those Coasts. Concon, or Quillota Valparaíso, and S. Antonio, are all safe and convenient, besides the rest, which only to mention would be tedious.

Here is an infinite Variety, and Multitude of Fish in this Sea, and particularly the Whales, they are so many, and so large, that William Seetzen, the Dutchman, says, he thought he sail'd in Danger from, and took great Care to avoid them. No Country in the World has more diversity of all sorts of Birds, wild and tame, both European and American. Before the coming of the Spaniards here were no Cows, Horses, Sheep, Swine, Cats, Rabbits, or Dogs, except only a sort of little Cows, nor Goats, or Asses, yet now the Richness of the Country has so caus'd them to increase, that there are more than they have occasion for, and very much Flesh is wasted, and expos'd to Birds, and Beasts of Prey, and for Horses, which at first were sold for 2, 3, and even 5000 Pieces of Eight, they now scarce bear any Price at all. The Peru Sheep are also natural to this Country. The Guanacos, or wild Goats, are much like the Sheep, but can never be tam'd, and feed in Flocks in the Fields, being so swift, that the best Horses have enough to do to overtake them. The Flesh of the old ones is good dry'd and smoak'd; but the young ones eat like Kid. They breed the Rezoar Stones in a Bag they have under their Bellies.

It would be endless, and require a particular Book to treat of the Plants and Trees, but among the rest, here is one call'd Murtilla, or the little Myrtle, which bears a red Fruit, like a small Grape, hot and dry, of which they make a Liquor, far exceeding all others in goodness, for it is clear, fine, warm, agreeable to the Taste, comfortable to the Stomach, dispels all Vapours in the Heart, without offending it, and creates an Appetite; being of a golden Colour, and as delicious as the best of Wine; besides which it makes better Vinegar than Wine does.

The Natives are by the consent of all Men allow'd to be the bravest of all the Americans, as the Spaniards have found by costly Experience, against whom they maintain'd open War for full an hundred Years, and the Incas of Peru, with all their Power, could never conquer them. They destroy'd many Spanish Towns, kill'd some Thousands of them in open Field, and defended themselves upon all occasions, without Walls, or Fire-Arms, with such Valour and Conduct, as is amazing, and makes their final Conquest the more honourable to Spain.

They bred their Children to Hardship, Funning, and exercise of Arms, which were Pikes, Halberts, Lances, Hatchets, Rattel-Axes, Darts, Arrows, Clubs, Slings, and Nooses to throw upon Men. After Horses had bred in the Country, they learnt to ride, and fought on Horseback with Lances and Bucklers, as well as the Spaniards, all their Weapons being made of a Wood harden'd in the Fire, little inferior to Steel, having compleat Armour made of Hides as impenetrable as Iron. Their Forces were regularly drawn up, an hundred deep in File, being always mix'd, a Pikeman and an Archer, and if one Line was broke, the next advanc'd to its Place. Their Forts were made of Trees interwoven one upon another, with Trenches, and Places to retreat to.

Their warlike Spirit proceeded from their natural Temper, which was Cholerick, Proud, Fierce, and Cruel, cutting the Enemies that fell into their Power, in pieces, and wallowing in their Blood. They are strong, and robust of Body, broad Shoulder'd, high Chested, well set, nimble, active, vigorous, patient of Hunger, Thirst, Heat, and Cold, obstinate in what they hold, and excellent Horsemen, riding down a steep Hill as upright and steady as if they were nail'd to the Horse, and this with any Saddle, or without one.

They were very numerous at the coming of the Spaniards, but liv'd dispers'd in the Valleys, or by the Hills or Rivers, under their several Caciques, to whom they paid a ready Obedience. Their Houses were of Wood, all on a Floor, and each Room apart, so that when they would remove, they could lift up every one, and carry it where they pleas'd. Nor had they any Locks, or Hinges, relying altogether on their own Honesty, and as for Furniture, their Beds were the hard Ground, with a Stone, or Log for a Pillow, and their Cloaks to cover them, besides one or two Blankets, and consequently we may believe they knew not what Hangings were. Gold and Silver they made little use of, but had 4 or 5 wooden Dishes and Spoons of the same sort, a Calabash to drink out of, and a Leaf for a Saltceller. The Ground, or a little Bench serv'd for a Table, without Cloth, or Napkin, but only a little Broom to wipe their Fingers. Their Diet consisted of Indian Wheat, Fruit, Herbs, Fish, and such Game as they kill'd in Hunting. Of the Indian Wheat they also made a sort of Ale, and call'd it Chicha.

There were, and still are Physicians among them, who perform wonderful Cures with Simples, and keep their Secrets to themselves. Their letting Blood was with a Flint made exactly like our Farriers Flems. For Cloaths, they have Drawers without Shirts, and Wastecoats put over their Heads, and girt about. Both Men and Women have their Arms naked, but no other Part, the latter having Cloaths that cover them from Head to Foot, they have learnt of the Spaniards to wear Smocks, but will not hear of any Head-dresses, Necklaces, Sleeves, or Gloves. These Women are so bold, that for want of Men they will play the Parts of Soldiers, being wonderful active, strong, and patient of Hardship.

As to Complexion, they are the fairest of all the Americans, but their Hair is always black, and harsh, and no red hair'd Person was ever seen among them; nor do they differ in any other respect from Europeans, and those who live among Spaniards reach Spanish to such Perfection, that there is no distinguishing between them.

The City of Santiago is the Capital of Chile, founded by Pedro de Valdivia, the Conquerour of the Kingdom, in the Year 1541, in the delightful Valley of Mapocho, at the Foot of a Hill in 34 Degrees of South Latitude. The Shape of it is like a Chess-board, being all cut out into Squares, so that wheresoever a Man stands at a Corner, he sees four Streets, extending strait forward to the ends of the Town. On the North side of it is a pleasant River, which is let by Cuts into all Parts of the City, so that all the Streets are easily water'd, and the Filth carry'd away. There is one Street running from East to West the whole length of the City, so wide, that 15 or 16 Coaches may go abreast in it; a most delightful Place in Summer to take the Air, and see, all the Coaches pass by, and in it is the Church of S. Lazaro, and the Monastery of S. Francis. Besides this noble Street, there are abundance of curious Squares, generally one before every Monastery, and the great Market-place exceeding them all, the North side adorn'd with a stately Town-House, the West with a sumptuous Cathedral. The Monasteries of S. Dominick, S. Francis, and the Jesuits, are very stately. The Extent of the City is very great, the Inhabitants very numerous, it is a Bishoprick, and University, and one of the wealthiest Places in the Universe.

The City Imperial is in 38 Degrees of South Latitude, so call'd, because the Spaniards at their first coming found Eagles there cut in Stone over several Houses. Valdivia founded another City of his own Name in 40 Degrees of South Latitude, not far from the Sea, in a Country abounding in Gold. He also built La Serena in a pleasant and fruitful Valley, in 30 Degrees; and Villa Rica, so call'd, from the great Prospect of Wealth the Country afforded, in 40 Degrees up the Inland towards the Andes; the Concepcion in 37, near the Sea, and Angol in 38 higher up the Country. The Governour, Mendoza, afterwards built the Town of Osorno, in the Latitude of 41. Besides which there are several other Places of less Note, later built, as particularly S. Cebrian, and Calbuco, in about 43 Degrees Latitude, and los Coronados in 46, being the last the Spaniards inhabit to the Southward.

The Province of Cuyo, or Chucuyto

Being a Dependance of Chile, has that Kingdom on the West, and is divided from it by the Mountains Andes; on the North it has the Mountains of Rioja, which part it from Tucuman; on the East another Part of Tucuman, and the vast Plains of the Pampas, part of the Magellanick Lands; and on the South, Ovalle extends it to the Straights of Magellan; but we may better confine it to 39 Degrees of South Latitude, where the unconquer'd Country begins, ~~which stretch'd out so far among People no way~~ subject to its Dominion, and scarce known.

The whole Country is a Plain, so flat, that they use to travel by the Compass, there being nothing to direct, or show the Way, but like an open Sea; and they go in large Waggon's drawn by Oxen, with beds, and all Conveniences in them. It is wonderful that only the Mountains Andes dividing this Country from Chile, they should differ so much in their Qualities; for here the Heats are not so terrible as in Chile, and there are such Multitudes of Fruits, as obliges the People to leave their Gardens, and Courts, that be it no Rest to be had in the Houses. They are prodigious stores of Timber and Lignum, and abundance of Potatoes, Corn, besides a sort of Grains, so much, that they can hardly be seen, and yet as good as the greater.

So much for the all Quilmes, the good are, a Land so fertile, that in some Places it almost out-does Chile, the great Heat ripening all things to Perfection, so that there is store of Corn, Wine, Flesh, and all sorts of Animals, Fruits, Herbs, and

The Sea being every where remote from this Province, it can have no Fish from thence, but is supply'd by some Lakes. Of late Years very rich Silver Mines have been discover'd here, which drew many People from Peru, because they were said even to exceed those in Mexico, and being in a Plain much easier to come at than Venus, besides the conveniency of travelling with Carts, and the cheapness of Provisions. But this is not all, for soon after there were Gold Mines found so wonderful Rich, that they are said far to exceed all others hitherto known.

The Wines here are so generous, that they carry them 3 or 400 Leagues across those immense Plains in Carts during the excessive Heats, without the least Detriment, and they will keep after that as long as they will have them. The Bread is excellent, and so is the Oil, and all sorts of Gardening; the Fish as good as that of the Sea; Flax and Hemp nothing inferior to that of Chile, and in short, here are all the Necessaries for Life in Perfection.

To recompense these Blessings, the travelling is miserable, by reason of the unmoderate Heat, through vast Plains, before spoken of, where in some hundreds of Leagues there is not so much as a Stick, or a Stone, and sometimes 2 or 3 Days Journey no Water to be found, which therefore Travellers must take care to carry with them, or Perish.

The Natives here were much like their Neighbours of Tucuman, and other Provinces, rude and barbarous, living dispers'd under little Caciques, much addicted to Drunkenness, which they would stick to for three Days together, without sleeping, but continually Dancing, and Drinking, within a Ring made with Straw, or dry Rushes, into which no Women were to come, but to bring them Drink, and then they were to shut their Eyes. They were also strangely affected to Sorcery, and had their Children initiated in that hellish Practice by old Men appointed for that Purpose, who did it by drawing Blood from them, and then making them fast in some retir'd Place. They all worshipp'd the Sun, Moon, and Morning Star.

The chief Town here is call'd Mendoza, from Don Hurtado de Mendoza, Marquis of Canete, Viceroy of Peru. It is seated at a small Distance from the Pass of the Mountains that leads into Chile, and built by Peter Castillo, who took Pizarro's Standard in the Civil Wars of Peru. The other two Towns are S. Juan de la Frontera, in the more Northern Part, and Oromonte in the South, none of them all were very considerable till of late Years, the Wealth of the Mines above-mention'd, has drawn abundance of People from the adjacent Provinces, by which means they begin to increase, and may in some time be equal to others of the first Magnitude.

The Historical Account of Chile.

There is nothing to be said before the coming of the Spaniards, for these People were not so polite as the Peruvians, or Mexicans, who living under Potent Monarchies, had a civiliz'd Government, and preserv'd some Memory of their Ancestors, as we have seen in speaking of those Empires. But in Chile there was no considerable Prince, every Village, or hundred stragling Houses had its own Carique, and in time of War they met, and chose a General, so that there was no Form of Government, and consequently no regard to Antiquity, or the actions of past Ages. It will therefore suffice briefly to touch upon the Conquest of the Country by the Spaniards.

When Pizarro, as has been said before, had subdu'd the greatest Part of Peru, and assign'd Cusco to James de Almagro, who had supported and enabled him to go through with that mighty undertaking, a Commission came from Spain, giving Almagro the Title of Marshal, and with it the Government and Conquest of 200 Leagues, beginning at Chinchas in Peru, and running to the Southward along the Coast. Upon this Advice he left Cusco, and march'd away to Chile with 200 Horse, and 300 Foot, in the Year 1535. It is impossible to express what these brave Men endur'd in passing the Mountains Andes, for being so many, and all Strangers to the Country, they were at the point of Perishing for Want, having made no Provision for marching over that Desert; besides the unexpected and violent Cold was enough to have destroy'd them, with the continual Labour, and Fatigue of marching in such dismal Ways with their Arms and Baggage, and climbing such almost inaccessible Rocks and Precipices. Such were the Hardships they endur'd, that very many Perish'd, some sunk in the Snow, and were frozen to Death. Of the Spaniards, Garcilasso de la Vega says 150 dy'd thus miserably, and 30 of their Horses, and of 15000 Indians, who were less us'd to, and worse prov'd against the Cold, 10000 starv'd to Death. Others who follow'd afterwards came off no better, some losing their Fingers, some their Toes, and many their Lives, through the excessive Cold. Almagro having at length pass'd the Mountain, descend'd into the delightful Valley of Copiapo, where he refresh'd his Men. Here Paul the Inga, who came along with Almagro, soon gather'd the Value of 500000 Ducats in Gold, which he presented him. This put all the Spaniards in hopes of a glorious Conquest, which would soon enrich them all. This Valley of Copiapo was subject to the Ingas of Peru, and there ore receiv'd the Spaniards, and refresh'd them; but when they advanc'd farther to the Country of the Premocas, whom the Ingas could never conquer, they were met by that Nation, and a very bloody Battel ensued, wherein the Indians were at last routed with much difficulty. After this good Beginning, Almagro was persuaded to go back into Peru, to secure his Possession of Cusco, where coming to a Battel with Pizarro about it, he was overthrown, taken, and cruelly put to Death.

Almagro being dead, Peter de Valdivia was next sent by Pizarro into Chile, who enter'd that Kingdom in the Year 1540, with a great number of Spaniards and Indians, who all suffer'd the same Hardships on the Mountains the others had endur'd before. In the Valley of Copiapo, before-mention'd, such a quantity of Turkey Stones was found, as has abated the Price ever since. There Valdivia was well receiv'd, as he was in those of Guasco and Coquimbo; but at Quilotta he found Opposition, yet penetrated to the fertile and populous Valley of Mapocho, where he founded the first Spanish Town, which was that of Santiago, the Metropolis of the Kingdom. Next he resolv'd to build a Fort upon the rich Mines of Quilotta, but wanting Men, he sent 6 with Golden Stirrups, Bridles, and all other Accoutrements of the same Metal to Pern, to draw Supplies. These, and 30 more sent with them, all Perish'd but two, who after a long time escap'd to Pern, and gave an Account of the Posture of Affairs to Vuade Cesto, then Viceroy, who sent them considerable Supplies, wherewith Valdivia prosecuted his Conquests, and in the Year 1544, founded the second Spanish Town, call'd La Serena. This done, Valdivia went away to Pern, to assist the King's Forces against the Pizarro's, then in Rebellion, and having vanquish'd them, return'd to his Province, where he found all the Indians up in Arms, and his New Town of La Serena destroy'd, which he rebuilt, then conquering the Promocacs, and marching deeper along the Country, he erected the City of the Conception on the Coast, in 37 Degrees of South Latitude. This great Man not so satisfied, carried on his Conquests beyond 40 Degrees of Latitude, and founded the Towns of Imperial, Valdivia, and Villa Rica, with 3 Forts in Arauco, and lastly, the Town of Angol, at the rich Gold Mines found in that Place.

This was the Posture of Affairs, when the Caciques of Arauco conspiring together, revolted with an Army of above 60000 Men, surpriz'd several Spanish Towns, where they slaughter'd all the Inhabitants, and cut off the Governour Valdivia himself, with all the Forces he could draw together, only two Indians escaping, who hid themselves. Francis de Villagran, Valdivia's Lieutenant, being chief after his Death, march'd with all the Strength he could make to revenge Valdivia's Death, but being oppress'd by the Multitude of Indians, after a furious Encounter, was forc'd to make the best Retreat he could, with great Loss to the City of the Conception, which, the Indians pursuing, they were fain to abandon the next Day, when it was plunder'd, and burnt. Lautaro, the General of the Araucans, follow'd his Success, and laid Siege to the City of Santiago, but was kill'd before it.

The next Governour of Chile, was Don Garcia Hurtado de Mendoza, who twice defeated Campolican, the new Chilenian General, took him Prisoner, and put him to Death for a Terror to his Followers. From this time the Spaniards held their own, and gain'd many Advantages, rebuilding the Towns that had been destroy'd, and building others as they advanc'd. Yet the War held on very bloody on both sides, and lasted an hundred Years from the beginning, till the Araucans being almost destroy'd, and the remains of them discourag'd by continual Losses, concluded a Peace in the Year 1641, with the Marquels de Ujades, then Governour, submitting themselves to the King of Spain, and embracing the Christian Religion, since which time they have been kept under, and the whole Country enjoys Peace, notwithstanding several Attempts

Of TERRA MAGELLANICA and the STREIGHTS of MAGELLAN.

THIS is the utmost Part of the Continent of America, lying South of all that has been hitherto describ'd. The Northern Extent is that alone, which cannot well be ascertain'd, for as Ovalle stretches out the Kingdom of Chile to the Streights, this Country would have nothing on that side next the South-Sea; but the Spaniards possessing nothing beyond 46 Degrees of South Latitude, that must of Course be reckon'd the beginning of this Land. However on the East side it reaches much higher, for there the Spanish Dominions scarce go beyond the Mouth of the River of Plate, for which Reason, the Magellanick Lands may well be allow'd to commence in 37 or 38 Degrees of South Latitude. They border Northward on Chile, Cuyo, or Chucuyto, Tucuman and the Province of the River of Plate; on the East they have the Atlantic Ocean, on the South the Streight of Magellan, and on the West the South-Sea and Part of Chile and Cuyo.

Ferdinand Magalhaens, or as we call him, Magellan, was the first that discover'd this Country and Streight, to both which he gave his Name. Neither did he, nor any that have follow'd him, learn much of the Country. All we find is, that for the most Part, where he sent ashore, it was Desert. Some few Men he saw, which his Company and others have since reported to be of a Gigantick stature, barbarous, and naked, though in a Climate excessive cold. These they call Patagones, which is as much as can be said of them.

Beyond the Streight on the South-Sea del Techo, informs us, the Jesuits, who were on the Mission in those Parts, discover'd two Nations call'd Chiriguans and Huillans, many of whom they convert'd. Of whom they give this Account. The Chiriguans inhabit the Continent and several Islands to the Northward of the Huillans, who are next to the Streight of Magellan. In the Islands there are only a few scatter'd Families. The Soil is generally barren, scarce bearing any Grain, and the Trees for the most part look dismal. The Natives live upon Fish, and what the Sea casts up; the Women diving to the Bottom, and coming up again with store of Fish in Baskets hanging about their Necks. Their greatest Want is of fresh Water. They press an Oil out of Sea-Wolves, which they drink and know no other Liquor. But they have some little Indian Wheat growing in the biggest of their Islands, call'd Chiriguana. The People are for the most part red hair'd, of an Olive-colour and mild Disposition. In the remoter Harbours they breed Dogs with long Hair, whom they trim, and of their Hair make short Garments, which cover only the Shoulders and Breast, covering their Nakedness with Sea-weeds. The Huillans, who are next the Streights of Magellan, are in a more miserable Condition, and their Disposition is more barbarous. They live from 50 Degrees of South Latitude forwards in a very cold Climate, and stark naked, building moveable Huts of the Barks of Trees, like Sugar-Loaves and eat nothing dress'd. Their Skins are almost black, and their Hair so hard and upright, that it looks like a Bush. Their number is small, and their Neighbours, the Chiriguans, hunt them like wild Beasts, either to keep or sell them for Slaves, and they are happier in Slavery than in their own Country. Abundance of both these Nations, as was said have been Converted, many Years since, and it is likely they may have all embrac'd Christianity. What other Nations there are is not known, nor any more but that as was said before, much of the Country is Desert, and all of it wretched enough.

The Streights of Magellan, discover'd by that famous Portuguese in the Year 1520, as has been said, are according to the Account of Spaniards, who know them best, 100 Leagues in Length, from the Cape of the 11000 Virgins, at the Entrance from the North-Sea, to Cape Desire, on the South-Sea. The Breadth varies much, being not above a League in several Places, in others more, but every where narrow. In the Streight there are many safe Harbours, narrow at the entrance and spacious Bays within, encompass'd with Mountains, which shelter them so close on all sides, that Ships may ride in them, whatsoever the Weather be, upon the least Anchor.

After Magellan had discover'd this Streight, in the Year 1523. D. Gutierre Carvajal, Bishop of Placencia, fitted out 4 Ships, in the Name of the Emperour Charles the Fifth, to take a more exact Account of it, and sail to the Molucco Islands. Three of those Ships were lost in the said Streights and the 4th passed through to Lima. In 1526, Garcia de Loaysa was by the Emperour appointed Admiral of 6 Ships to pass through the Streights of Magellan to the Molucco Islands. They all pass'd, but the Admiral was lost as soon as they came into the South-Sea, and the rest went on their Voyage, except one that was cast upon the Coast of New Spain. Simon de Alcazova attempted this Passage in 1535, but his Men mutinying, he was stopp'd and afterwards murder'd, the Ships returning to North America. In 1539. Don Gutierre de Carvajal, the abovemention'd Bishop of Placencia fitted out 3 Ships more, the Commodore whereof was lost, and the 3d perform'd the Voyage. After all these it was that Sir Francis Drake pass'd this Streight, which was the Occasion that King Philip the 2d of Spain sent a Fleet to Plant Colonies, and erect Forts on the Streight to hinder others from attempting the like, but many of these Ships were lost and two Colonies being planted, one at the Mouth and the other higher up the Streight, by the Names of Jesus the First, and the other Ciudad del Rey Felipe, or King Philip's City, all the Men left there perish'd and were never heard of. Since then many of all Nations have pass'd that Way; but scarce any have made the Advantages they expected.

In the Year 1617 almost 100 Years after Magellan; Isaac le Maire, a Dutch Man, discover'd another Streight to the Southward of Magellan's, and much shorter, still known by his Name, since which scarce any have gone through that of Magellan; but of later Years they are both avoided upon discovering that to the Southward of them both is an open Sea, which all that are bound for the South-Sea chuse rather to run into, tho' excessive Cold, than hazard all the Dangers of those narrow Streights. Yet none of these Ways have been at all in Use of late Years, unless for Pyrates, who have ventur'd to rob in the South-Sea, generally with little Success.

C H A P. XX.

Of the Islands of South A M E R I C A.

HAVING spoken of the Island of the Trinity and the others along the Coast of Paria and Venezuela, among those of North America, there remain not many of Note to speak of in the South. It is true the Gulph of Paria to the South of the Trinity, is full of small Islands, but neither are their Names, nor so much as their Number known; not but that all the Europeans have been enough upon that Coast and among them, as being at the Mouth of the great River Oronoco, but they have not found it worth their while to settle, or so much as give any Account of them.

Leaving these and descending Southward, at the Mouth of the River Cayana, in 5 Degrees of North Latitude, there is a small Island, on which as was observ'd in speaking of that Country, the French have settled a Colony, which is as much as is requisite to repeat. Again at the Mouth of the mighty River of the Amazons, about the first Degree of South Latitude there is another Parcel of Islands, but neither is there any thing observ'd of them, nor so much as their Names. The little Island Maranhao in the 3d Degree of South Latitude has been spoken of in the Description of Brazil.

The Island of Ferdinand de Noronha, who first discover'd it, is in 3 Degrees 40 Minutes of South Latitude, the Dutch say 70, the Portugueses 50 Leagues from the Coast of Brazil, and is not above two Leagues long and one in breadth. It is for the most part Plain, but has two such high Rocks that at a distance they look like Towers. There are abundance of Wild Goats in it, which are the Product of some few the Portugueses put in to breed; but it has no Inhabitants.

Next follow, the Trinity, between 18 and 19 Degrees South from the Aequator, and about 80 Leagues East from the Coast of Brazil; the Ascension between 19 and 20 Degrees South Latitude 50 Leagues East from the same Coast; Santa Maria de Agostu, in the same Latitude, near 100 Leagues East from the last, the Island of Martin Vaz, still in the same Latitude and 20 Leagues East from S. Matics; and then the Island dos Picos, in 22 Degrees South Latitude and 40 Leagues more Easterly than Martin Vaz. On the Coast of Paraguay in 28 and 29 Degrees of South Latitude are two inconsiderable Islands call'd S. Catherine's and de Arvoredo, and between 51 and 52 near 80 Leagues from the Continent three small ones call'd Sebalde Waerdes Islands; of all which it is enough to have given the Names and Position.

Tierra del Fuego, or the Land of Fire so call'd, from the many Fires the first Discoverers saw on it, is the greatest Island, we know of, belonging to South America. It forms the South side of the Streights of Magellan, which way it extends from East to West 150 Leagues, and from North to South about 80 in the widest Part, but much less in all the rest. This some have said is divided into many Islands, but with how good ground does not appear, only on the North side we find a Piece cut off by a narrow Channel, which forms a small Island and two Ways into the Streight of Magellan. Again on the East is another small Island call'd Saten Land, discover'd by Le Maire, which with Tierra del Fuego forms the Streight call'd of Le Maire, or S. Vincents, thought better than Magellans, as soon leading into an open Sea; but that also is neglected of late, since later Discoverers have found there is all along an open Passage into the South Sea, without any Streight, by keeping more to the Southward and avoiding all those Islands. Of this Tierra del Fuego, those who have pass'd the Streights tell us, that it is very Mountainous, but has many pleasant Valleys water'd by abundance of Brooks and small Rivers, and full of Grass and Trees. The Mountains are all Wooded and the Soil of them most sandy, on a rocky Bottom. The Country is extraordinary subject to Stormy Winds, which are generally West, and tho' it lies between 52 and 54 Degrees of Latitude, the Winter Cold is much more intense than in our Northern Parts equally distant from the Equinoctial. The Natives are naturally as white as any Europeans, but that they paint their Bodies, and that continual Practice discolours their Skins. Their Stature is indifferent and their Hair black. The Men go stark naked, and the Women only cover their Privities very slightly, some of them wearing a Skin of some Beast on their Backs, and it is wonderful they can subsist so in such a cold Climate. Their Huts, are made of Poles stuck round in the Earth and meeting at the Top, like a Sugar-Loaf, sunk two or three foot into the Ground, and cover'd with Earth. All their Furniture is some Baskets, Nets and Lines for Fishing. Their Weapons are Bows and Arrows, or Darts, pointed with sharp Stones, or Bones, wooden Clubs, Slings and Knives made of sharp Stones. Their Canoes are made of the Bark of Trees, which they joyn together very ingeniously. They eat their Flesh raw, and even that of Men. Religion has not been discover'd among them, nor any regular regular Form of Government; neither have they any sense of Modesty in regard to any of those Things in which we think it concern'd.

Within the Streight of Magellan, especially in the widest Part, where it is 7 or 8 Leagues over, there are several Islands, as those of S. Lawrence, S. Stephen, or Barnvelt; the Penguin Islands, so call'd from the Multitude of those Birds found in them, being as large as Geese and good Meat. Besides which there are the Holy Kings, the Angels, the Paragons, and several others.

Having pass'd the Streights of Magellan, off the Northern Point on the South Sea, call'd Cabo de la Victoria, lies a Parcel of very small Islands, which the Spaniards call Los Evangelistas, the Evangelists; and the English, the Sorlers; and so at the Southern Point there is another Knot of them call'd Los Apostoles, the Apostles, but by the Dutch Sugar Islands. Turning to the Northward, the Continent of the Magellanick Land forms a large Bay, wherein are two large Islands, and a vast Number of small ones, these last have no Names known to us, nor any thing else worth observing.

Madre de Deos, the Mother of God, by the Natives call'd Guama, is the bigger of these two Islands, near 40 Leagues in Length, and 10 over in the widest place, lies under 50 Degrees of South Latitude. The Soil barren, stony and wild, bearing very little Grain, except some Indian Wheat. The Trees look dismal, being scarce ever Green, through cold and violent stormy Winds, and wants fresh Water. The Natives barbarous, for the most part naked, and only covering their Privities with Sea Weeds, living mostly on Fish, and their choicest Drink being the Oil press'd from Sea Wolves, but of late Years many of them have been converted by the Jesuits, and are very inclinable to embrace Christianity, as F. del Techo informs us, who had it from the Jesuits of Chile. The other lesser Island lies a little to the Southward of this, and differs from it in nothing, only that it is not so well inhabited, most of the other little ones being quite Desert.

Ascending still Northwards to the Coast of Chile, between 43 and 47 Degrees of South Latitude lies the Archipelago of Chiloe, being another large Bay, the Southern Part of Chile forms, all strew'd with a Multitude of small Islands, below deserving any particular mention; but without them, as it were a Barrier to defend them from the South Sea is the great one of Coiloe, 50 Leagues in Length, and but 7 in Breadth, being in the shape of an Arm bent, tho' most Maps make it a long Square. It is all uneven, Mountainous, Woody and Marshy, subject to extraordinary Cold and Excessive Rains, which last the greatest Part of the Year; so that it only produces Indian Wheat, and such other sorts of Grain, as require least Sun to ripen them. The Summer is interrupted by such cold Storms, that it differs little from Winter, those Storms in August hinder the ripening of Fruit. The Earth if turn'd up a Span deep, is all a red Sand, so dry that it choaks any Seed, and yet the Trees run up to such a vast Height, that they cut several Lengths of Boards out of them. Such is the Barrenness, that they think five for one a good Increase, and most of the Growth consists in Indian Roots. However Sheep, Cows and Swine live and increase well enough. On the North End of it, some few Spaniards, who formerly escap'd the Fury of the Araucans, when they revolted, built a Town, which still continues and is considerably increas'd, since the Subduing of those People, having a good Fort, where the Spaniards make a shift to live well enough, with what the Island produces and is brought them from the Continent. The Natives go naked, wearing only a sort of Net-work about their Middle, and use Boats made of three Boards sew'd together with a thick Cord, and caulk'd with the Bark of Trees, steep'd in Water. So say del Techo and Ovulle.

Mocha Island is in about 38 Degrees of South Latitude, about 10 Leagues from the Coast of Coile, and near the same Length, inhabited by the Natives, and some few stragling Spaniards. It is fruitful, and abounds in Sheep, Fowl, Fruit, and other Provisions.

Santa Maria lies in 37 Degrees Latitude, 5 Leagues from the Coast of Arauco in Chile, and differs very little from the last. But the Inhabitants of it formerly are said to have had Communication with the Devil, and perform'd many abominable Ceremonies; at present they are all Christians.

Next follow the little Islands of John Fernandez, being 8 in Number, and their Latitude 34 Degrees South; then los Pajaros, Mexiltones and Sobora, in about 30; and in 26 S. Ambrosio and S. Felices, all of them very inconsiderable.

Puna is in 2 Degrees 50 Minutes of South Latitude, being about 10 or 12 Leagues in Compass, formerly famous among the Indians of the Continent, as abounding in all Things necessary for the support of Humane Life, and the Natives of it being reckon'd cunning Merchants and bold Soldiers. Several Ships are now built in it, to trade along the South Sea.

Gorgona lies in 3 Degrees of North Latitude, on the Coast of Popayan, compar'd by those who have been on it to Hell, because the Thickness of the Woods and Closets of the High Mountains produce an infinite Multitude of Gnats, which torment People, besides it is Unhealthy, subject to Storms and Continual Rains.

The Pearl Islands, so call'd, because there was a Pearl Fishery there, one at the Mouth of the Gulph of Panama, in about 8 Degrees of North Latitude, and about 20 in Number, but small, and now no way considerable since the Decay of the Pearl Fishery.

The Islands of Solomon lie about 1500 Leagues to the West of Lima in Pern, extending from 7 to 12 Degrees of South Latitude. The chief of them are 18 in Number, some of them 300, some 200, others 100, others 50 Leagues in Compass, and others less. They are all most delightful, exuberant, rich and healthy, and the Natives a Courteous peaceable and civiliz'd People, but there have been so few Adventurers to them, and their stay so short, that nothing can be said in particular of those charming Places.

Alvaro de Adindana, a Spanish Commander, sailing for the Islands of Solomon, discover'd 4 others, between 9 and 10 Degrees of Latitude, 1000 Leagues from Lima, and 650 from New-Spain, where he says the Indians or Natives were the best sort of People that had been yet discover'd, but for Shape and Complexion, like the Americans.

Between the Islands of Solomon and the Coast of Pern, inclining towards that of Chile, in 15 Degrees Latitude and about 700 Leagues from the Continent, is the Island call'd S. Paul, of which we have no other Account. These are all the Lands we can find belong to South America, which conclude the Description of that Part of the World.

NAVIGATORS round the GLOBE of the EARTH.

IT may not be improper perhaps to take some notice of the principal Navigators that made Discoveries toward the Southern Parts of the Globe, both South-East and North-West. The first of these was Ferdinand de Albuquerquerque Magellan, a Portuguese Gentleman, who not being (as he thought) sufficient encouraged by his Master King Emmanuel, apply'd himself to the Court of Castile, and obtained of the Emperor Charles V. five Ships well furnish'd with necessary Provisions, and 250 Men. They set sail from Sevil, Aug. 10. 1519. And at first endeavouring to find a Passage through the great River of Plate, were oblig'd to Winter in Port S. Julian, but afterward they happily sail'd through that famous Streight call'd the Magellanic, from the Inventor's Name, and so pass'd from the Atlantick into the Pacifick Ocean, and sail'd Eastward as far as the Islands de los Ladrones, or of Thieves, where some say, Magellan himself was poison'd; but according to others, he perish'd in an Engagement at Mulan, one of the Philippine Islands, after he had subdu'd that of Cebu, in 1520. However, one of his Ships having sail'd round the Globe, came by the Moluccas and Cape of Good Hope, and at length arriv'd safe at Sevil, Sept. 8. 1522.

In the Year 1525, Garcia de Loaysa, a Spaniard, entred into the same Streight, giving Names to several Places; and was follow'd by Simon de Alcazova, in 1534. Afterward three Ships were equip'd by the order of the Bishop of Placentia, in 1539, and one of them got through the Streight to Arica, a Port of Peru.

On the Thirteenth of November 1577, Sir Francis Drake with five Ships, and 164 Seamen, set out from London, and having sent back two of them as Impediments, pass'd the Magellanic Streights only with three, and enter'd into the Pacifick Sea, where these Ships were dispers'd by a violent Storm, and one of them was never heard of after; nevertheless Drake continu'd sailing along the Coasts of Peru, New Spain, Mexico, Californie, and other Parts of America, and took several Spanish Vessels richly laden during this famous Voyage round the World, which he finish'd within the space of three Years, returning by the East-Indies and Cape of Good Hope to the Coasts of England, where he arriv'd on November 3d. 1580. In the mean while Captain Juan Winter having been separated from Sir Francis, upon their Entrance into the South-Sea, was driven back again into the Streight of Magellan, which he repass'd, and was the first that sail'd through this Passage from the Pacifick into the Atlantick Ocean.

The third Completer of the World was Thomas Candish Esq; who set out in 1586, and very fortunately finish'd that Courte in two Years and two Months; in the carrying on of which, both Magellan and Sir Francis Drake had spent three whole Years. The same renown'd Navigator pass'd the Magellanic Streights a second time in 1591, but died in this last Voyage.

In 1593, Sir Richard Hakluyt sail'd for a long while in sight of Terra del Fuego, in the Latitude of fifty Degrees, ran through the Streights of Ma- gellan the next Year, and was at last taken by the Spaniards, after a sharp Fight, on the Coasts of Peru.

The fourth Circum-navigation of the Globe, was perform'd by Olivier Noort, or Nordt, a Hollander, his chief Pilot being Captain Melis, an Englisman, who had accompanied Mr. Candish in his Voyage. This Noort steer'd much the same Courte with Magellan, Drake, and Candish, and spent three Years in encompassing the Earth. About the same time also, the Dutch Fleet under Sir James Mahe, Simon de Cordes, Sebast de Waerr, &c. wherein William Adams was chief Pilot, suffer'd great Inconveniencies in these Streights. They discover'd Seladi Isles, and a Gulph call'd by them Green Bay, in 54 Degrees Latitude. In 1614, George Spilberg, Commander in Chief of another Dutch Fleet of six Ships, sail'd through the Streights of Magellan, and the South-Sea, to the East-Indies, and came back from thence by the Cape of good Hope, to the Texel, after having been out near three Years, and finish'd the fifth Circum-navigation of the World.

In 1609 and 1610, Pedro Fernandez Giros, a Portuguese, and Ferdinand de Quir, a Spaniard, (as they both affirm) sail'd at several times about 800 Leagues together on the Coasts of a Southern Continent, to the height of the 15 Degree of South Latitude; where they met with a very fruitful, pleasant and populous Country. This vast Tract of Land may be perhaps some part of Jansen Tasmen's Land, Van Diemen's Land, New Zealand, New Holland, New Carpentaria, and New Guinea, which were discover'd and coasted by the Dutch, who gave Names to many Bays, Rivers, and Capes hereabouts, in the Years 1619, 1622, 1627, 1628, 1642, and 1644, from the Equinoctial Line, as far as the 44th. Degree of South Latitude. And indeed the Hollanders have made the greatest Discoveries toward the South Terra incognita, but have publish'd very little concerning their Expeditions in those Parts.

In 1615, William Cornelius Schouten of Horn, and Jacobe Maire of Amsterdam, encompass'd the Globe a sixth time, discovering a new Entrance Southward from the Streights of Magellan into the South-Sea, by Cape Horn, in the 57 Degree of South Latitude; which Passage has been ever since known by the Name of Le Maire's Streight. This was an important Discovery and is now made use of to good Advantage, for whereas the Streight of Magellan is long, in some Parts narrow, in others shoal, and throughout uneven by reason of the many Windings, and the Capes and Points of Land in it, all which render'd the Navigation of it difficult and uncertain. Now that we are acquainted with the Extent of Tierra del Fuego, and find that it reaches not too far Southward to be encompassed, the short Streight of Le Maire which lies between the South-east Point of Tierra del Fuego and a small Island, is so easily pass'd that the increase of the Voyage by sailing round that Continent is a much less inconvenience than what the Ships suffer'd in passing through the long Streight of Magellan, and accordingly though the Ships now a days make either that Streight, or the inner of Brouwer, which lies more to the East, between the same small Island and a main Land denominated from the same Brouwer. Le Maire impos'd Names on several Islands and Countries; and having spent two Years and eighteen Days in this Voyage return'd by the East-Indies to Holland. Afterwards in 1618, a Spanish Fleet under the Conduct of Bartholome Garcia de Nodal, sail'd through Le Maire's Streight. And in 1623, part of Prince Maurice's Fleet steer'd the same Course, discovering some small Islands in their Passage.

In 1642, Abel Jansen Tasman, a Hollander, made a very remarkable Voyage toward the South Terrae Incognitae. And in 1643, Captain Brouwer, or Brouwer, found out a new way into the South-Sea, by a Passage call'd after his own Name, lying East of Le Maire's Streight. But in 1669, that famous Navigator and valiant Commander Sir John Narborough, having receiv'd a Commission from King Charles II. to make a better Discovery of these Parts, more especially of the Country of Chile, set out with two Ships, viz. the Sweepstakes and Barchelona Pink; the former of 300 Tuns burthen, and the other of 70, and return'd in 1671, after having spent above two Years in passing and re-passing the Streight of Mazellan, and sailing along the Coasts of Patagonia and Chile, whose Observations and Draughts since publish'd are most judicious and accurate.

In 1680 and 1681, Captain Saarp rambl'd over the South-Sea, steering one while near 800 Leagues to the Eastwards and at another time as many to the Westwards; and beating about many Islands and Coasts: But in his return not being able to recover the Streights of Mazellan, or those of Le Maire, or Brouwer, he was constrain'd to seek for a new Passage farther South than by Cape Horn, and sail'd to the 60 Degree of South Latitude, where in departing from a small place call'd by him the Dale of Fish's Island, he met with abundance of Ice, Snow, Frost, and Whales, and saw no Land for three Months together, till his arrival at the Island of Bahaboes. Since these Attempts, divers East-India Ships have pass'd on several Occasions into the South-Sea, both by the Mazellanick Streights, and by the South of Cape Horn. Among which that wherein Mr. William Dampier travell'd, in the Years 1684, 1685, and 1686, sail'd round the Tierra del Fuego by Cape Horn, and pass'd all along the Coasts of Patagonia, Chile, Peru, Tierra-Firma, Mexico, and even to the height of California, whence they stood over to the Ladrones and Philippine Islands, and so came home to England by the Cape of Good Hope. None that ever sail'd this Course have done such Service to future Navigators as that ingenious Person; for in the Relation of this Voyage which he printed, all those Coasts are so plainly describ'd, the Latitudes and Longitudes so exactly set down, the Tides, Currents, Trade-Winds, &c. so judiciously and (in all probability) faithfully given an Account of, that his Work would be of inestimable Value, if the State of Affairs ever happen to be such that our Nation may have Occasion to Navigate those Seas.

The Arctick, or Northern Countries.

I call by the name of the Arctick Countries all those Regions, which lie toward the Northern or Arctick Pole, which are newly discovered. Their Situation is almost all in the Frigid or Cold Zone. The Extent of them is so irregular, that I know not how to write any thing of that. 'Tis enough, That they are discovered, and to set down the Names by which the Natives call them, as we have them from divers Travellers thither. Nevertheless we may describe their Bounds which part them in our Upper Hemisphere, from Muscovy and Tartary by the Frozen-sea; and in the other Hemisphere by the South-sea, Christian-sea, and Hudson's Streights, which separate them from the Northern America.

According to our last Relations, the Air is extremely cold; the Sun appears but little in several places for the greatest part of the Year; but in some places more, in some less, according to their distance from the Æquator. In general it may be said of them, They have much Pasture, large Meadows, many Forests, where the Inhabitants maintain a great Number of Beasts; That they live in some of the Countries upon Hunting and Fishing; That they have no Corn nor Wine. All the Country is Islands and Peninsula. They have divers sorts of Beasts, especially Bears, Foxes and Deer. Hudson, Davis and Frobisher's Streights are in this Lower Hemisphere; so called, because Cavot, Willoughby, Frobisher, Davis, Hudson, and some other Englishmen, discover'd 'em, endeavouring to find a Passage that Way to the East-Indies; as the Dutch did, by the Streights of Wagats or Nassau, which are on the North of our Continent; but both to no purpose, because of the continual Ice which hindred their Sailing, and prevents all Navigation, beyond the 80 Degr. of Latitude. Tho' it be said, That some Dutch Pilots went to the 88 Degree, and found a Passage towards China; that Passage is unknown to the other Nations of Europe, who make ordinarily but three Voyages towards the North: 1. To Archangel in Russia, for Furs. 2. To Spitsberg in Greenland, for Whale-fishing. 3. To Norway, for Wood and Herrings.

However, it may not be improper here to give a brief Account of the several Navigations and Discoveries made toward the North-east and North-

North-west, viz. Nova Zembla, North-east Greenland or Spatberg, and North-west Greenland, commonly call'd Greenland and Engueland. The first Discovery of these Countries is owing to an Accident; for in 1380, Nicholas and Antony Zmi, two Brothers and rich Citizens of Venice, having set Sail from the Streight of Gibraltar for Flanders and England, were accidentally driven Northwards by violent Storms, even as far as Friesland, Iceland and Greenland. But in 1497, John Cabot and Sebastian his Son of the same Nation received a Commission from our King Henry VII. to undertake the like Voyage, who made a Draught and Description of some North-west Parts of America, and brought along with them four of the Natives.

These Discoveries gave rise to a Project of finding out a nearer Passage that way to the East-Indies; which was attempted many times, but without success. A short Account of those Voyages is as follows.

Sir Hugh Willoughby was the first that attempted to discover a NORTH-EAST Passage into the Indies; and to that purpose set out with three sail of Ships in the Year 1553. It is very probable that he landed on Nova Zembla and Greenland; but we have no Memoirs of this Voyage, except certain short and imperfect Notes which were taken off from his Table after his Death; wherein it is express'd, That the Fleet under his Command parted from Smien, which lies on the Coast of Norway in 70 Deg. of North Lat. on the second day of August: That on the fourteenth they were above 160 Leagues from the same place to the North-east, and continu'd sailing until September 14. when they came ashore on a high, rocky and desert Country; from whence the Cold and Ice forc'd them to return more Southerly, which they did till they reach'd a River in Lapland call'd Arctica, where, by the continuance of foul Weather they were shut up in the Harbour, and the next Spring were all found frozen to death in their Ship.

A few Years after this Misfortune, viz. about 1556, one Captain Stephen Burroughs, sometime Comptroller of the Navy to Queen Elizabeth, prosecuting the same Design, pass'd the North Cape, and sailing farther Eastward, discover'd the Wagars, or Streight that runs between the South part of Nova Zembla and the Country of the Samoieds; thus, continuing his Course, he arriv'd in 112 Deg. 25 Min. of Longitude, and 76 of Northern Latitude. Afterward he sail'd to 80 Deg. 11 Min. Latitude, and return'd thence to Nova Zembla; having cruiz'd (as is most probable) on the Coasts of Greenland; since he makes mention of the desolate Country, the blue Ice, and great Numbers of various Fowl thereabouts.

The first Person whose Name we find celebrated in History for endeavouring to search out a NORTH-WEST Passage into China, was Sir Martin Frobisher, who, in three several Voyages, made divers new Discoveries of large Bays, Streights, Islands, Capes, &c. and impos'd on them different Names. In the Year 1576, arriving with two Barks at the height of 62 Deg. North Latitude, he discover'd a great Inlet, since call'd Frobisher's Streights, and sail'd into it 60 Leagues, both main Land on each side. He met with Inhabitants along the Coasts, whose Canoes or little Boats were made of Seal-skins, but had wooden

Keels. The Ships Company exchange'd Toys with these Natives for Salmon and other Fish, and brought home certain Marcasites, which were taken for Gold-ore; but after they had made a more exact search the next Year, with a design to carry away a quantity thereof, it prov'd to be nothing but black Lead. At the same time they found a Silver-Mine, which nevertheless lay so deep within the Rocks, that it could not be dug; as also a dead Fish about 12 Foot long, somewhat resembling a Porpois in shape. It had a Horn growing out of its Snout (of the same Nature as those commonly call'd Unicorns Horns) which is still preserv'd in a Repository at Windsor, and is six Foot in length. In 1578 the same Sir Martin undertook his third Voyage, wherein, having pass'd as far as seem'd convenient to him, he took Possession of the Land in the Name of Queen Elizabeth, and call'd it Meta Incognita.

In the Year 1580, Arthur Pett and Charles Jackman having receiv'd a Commission from Queen Elizabeth to follow the Track of Stephen Burroughs, rambled over the Northern Seas, and in all likelihood land'd in Greenland; but there is nothing particularly known concerning their Voyage, except that they pass'd the Streights of Way-gus and launch'd into the Ocean to the Eastward, where, meeting with vast heaps of Ice, they were constrain'd to return with great Peril and Labour; insomuch, that they lost one another by reason of the foul Weather, and Pett was never heard of after.

In 1583, Sir Humphrey Gilbert, by the direction of Sir Francis Walsingham, Principal Secretary of State, sail'd upon the same Design, to Newfoundland and the great River of St. Lawrence in Canada, took Possession of the Country in the Name of Queen Elizabeth, and settled a Fishing-trade there. This Voyage was made upon suggestion of a certain Greek Mariner, who positively affirm'd to some English Gentlemen, That himself had pass'd through a great Streight to the North of Virginia from the North-west Ocean, and offer'd to be Pilot for the Discovery, but died before he came into England.

In 1585, Mr. John Davis having undertaken with two Barks to search out the North west Coasts, made farther Discoveries in those Parts, and nam'd the Land he came to, Cape Desolation, being a Part of Greenland; where he found many pieces of Furr and Wool like Beaver, and exchange'd some Commodities with the Natives, who often repair'd to him in their Canoes bringing Stag-skins, white Hares, small Cod, Muscles, &c. Afterward he arriv'd in the Latitude of 64 Deg. 15 Min. where was found a great quantity of such Ore as Frobisher had before brought into England; and steer'd thence to 66 Deg. 40 Min. as far as Mount Raleigh, Tetnesfjound, &c. In 1586 he made a second Voyage to the same Coasts, searching out many places toward the West; and the next Year, in a third Voyage, came to 72 Deg. 12 Min. the Compass varying to 82 Deg. Westward. He gave the Name of London-Coast to the Land, and the Streight (being 40 Leagues wide) was from him call'd Fretum Davis.

Thus the English Nation alone, for a long time, frequented those Northern Seas till 1578, that a Dutch Ship came to Kola in Lapland, and a Year or two after another to St. Nicholas, by the instigation of an English Man who set himself against the Company of Russian Merchants; whereupon the Hollanders crept in more and more, and in 1594, sent William Barents, a skilful Navigator, and some others, to find out a Passage from thence to the Indies.

In 1596 the same William Barents, accompanied with two other Dutch Pilots, viz. Jacob Heemskirk and John Cornelius Ryp, first discover'd Bear or Cherry Island, and pass'd from thence to Greenland; but Barents being separated from them, sail'd along the Coasts of Nova Zembla to the 76 Degree of Latitude, until at length his Ship was driven ashore, and broke in pieces by the Ice, so that all the Mariners were compell'd to Winter there, and endur'd the utmost extremity of Cold. Afterward with much difficulty, in two Boats they got to Kola in Lapland; but William Barents died before their Arrival, to the great Grief of the whole Company.

In 1603 Stephen Bennet was employ'd, but went no farther than Cherry Island, and brought from thence a certain quantity of Lead Oar. In 1608, that famous Navigator Mr. Henry Hudson, was sent forth to discover the North Pole, and sail'd even to the 82 Degree of North Latitude; but being satisfy'd that there was no North-East Passage, he was appointed to make the like trial in the North-West Seas. Therefore in 1610 he set sail again, and proceeded 100 Leagues farther than any had done before, and gave several Denominations to certain Places, as Desire provokes, Ile of God's Mercies, Prince Henry's Cape, King James Cape, Queen Ann's Cape, &c. besides the Streight and Bay that still bear his Name. But the Ice hinder'd him from continuing his Course farther, and the Sedition of his Men from returning home.

In 1611 Sir Thomas Button, Servant to Henry Prince of Wales, eldest Son of King James I. being enjoin'd by that renowned young Prince to pursue the North-West Discoveries, pass'd through Hudson's Streight; and sailing above 200 Leagues to the South-Westward over a Sea above 80 fathom deep, discover'd a large Continent, call'd by him New-Wales. Afterward, having endur'd great Fatigues in his wintering at Port Nelson, notwithstanding the loss of many of his Men, he search'd out the whole Bay, which is now known by his Name, even back again almost to Digge's Island, and found out the large Tract of Land which he nam'd Cary's Swans Nest. Moreover in the Years 1612, 1615, 1616, James Hall, and William Baffin, proceeded much farther in the North west Parts, and impos'd Names on divers Places discover'd by them, besides that the English Merchants perceiving these Northern Voyages to be very profitable by reason of the great quantity of rich Furs that were brought thence, encreas'd the number of their Shipping to thirteen or fourteen yearly, under the Conduct of Poole, Fotherby, Edge, Heij, and other skilful Pilots, from whom several Sounds, Bays, Promontories, &c. have receiv'd their respective Names.

In the mean while the King of Denmark observing the Progress of the neighbouring Nations in these Northern Seas, began to consider that the Traffick of his own might be much advanc'd by the like Discoveries, being also desirous to renew his ancient Pretensions to these Countries, in case any thing should be found out worth the claiming. Therefore he caus'd two Ships and a Pinnace to be fitted out in the Year 1605. Of these, Captain John Cunningham, a Scot was Admiral; Godske Lindenaw, a Danish Nobleman was Vice-Admiral, and the chief Pilots were James Hall and John Knight, Englishmen. Godske arriving on some part of the Country, barter'd some small Wares with the Natives, took two of them, and return'd to Denmark. The other two Vessels came to Cape Farewell, sail'd from thence to Frobisher's Streights, gave Danish Names to certain Places, seiz'd on three of the Inhabitants, and at Cunningham's Ford met with a kind of Silver Mine, which was afterwards try'd by the English, and found to be of no Value. In 1606, four Ships and a Pinnace were sent thither under the same Godske Lindenaw Admiral, and James Hall Pilot-General, who brought away five of the Natives. In 1607 James Hall receiv'd a new Commission; but the Sea-men mutining as soon as they made the Coast, brought the Ship back again into Denmark, without effecting any thing. However, his Danish Majesty set out two other Ships mann'd with Norwegian and Islandish Mariners, and commanded by Christian Richardson, a Holsteiner; but these returned before they came in view of the Shore. The rest of their Expeditions are unknown until An. 1619, when John Munck was sent out with two Ships, which arriv'd safe at Cape Finewell, from thence this Pilot steer'd to 63 Degree 20 Min. (as it is probable near Digge's Island) and winter'd there, calling the Place Munck's Winter Harbour, and the Continent New Denmark. The South-part of Hudson's Bay he likewise nam'd Mare novum, and that part toward Greenland, Mare Christianum. But of all his Company, which consisted of Forty six in a Ship, and Sixteen in a Pinnace, scarce so many were left alive, as were able to bring the Pinnace through extream Danger to their own Country. However, in the Year 1653, Frederick III. King of Denmark, resolving to advance the Northern Discoveries, caus'd three Ships to be fitted out with skilful Mariners, enjoyning them to take a most exact Account of all the Coasts and Places where they arriv'd. These having pass'd the Streight of Waygats, met with some Inhabitants of Nova Zembla in their Canoes or little Fishing-Boats, and steer'd from thence to Greenland. These particular Adventures are contain'd in the French Relations of the Danish Voyages publish'd at Paris by M. Peyrere and Martiniere.

We do not read of any more Voyages from England to find out the North-West Passage since the last Expedition of William Baffin in 1616, until the Reign of King Charles I. when Captain Luke Fox was sent upon the same design in 1630, in his Majesty's Pinnace nam'd the Charles, victuall'd for eighteen Months. He traced Frobisher, Hudson, Davis, Button and Baffin, meeting with Whales, much Ice, and Fowls, and built a Pinnace in Port Nelson, where he found several Remains left by Sir Thomas Button, but no Natives or Inhabitants, though in other Parts of those Seas he saw some Salvages. About the same time, viz. in 1631, Captain Thomas James being employ'd by the Merchants of Bristol for the like purpose, sail'd from Cape Farewell by the Ilands of Resolution to Mill and Nottingham Isles, as also those of Marsfield, from whence he steer'd over a large Bay to the Westward near Port Nelson, and nam'd the Land New South Wales, hereabouts meeting with Captain Fox, they congratulated one another, but were soon separated by foul Weather; so that Captain James still continu'd roving up and down, and giving Name to divers Places; as Cape Henrietta Maria, Lord Weston's Island, The Earl of Bristol's Island, Sir Thomas Roe's Island, Earl of Danby's Island, Charlton Island, &c. in this last he Winter'd in the Latitude of 52 Deg. 3 Min. and having built a little Pinnacle out of his Ship, pass'd over to Corn's Swan's Nest, whence he return'd by Cape Charles and Slisbury Isle, and arriv'd on the Coasts of England in 1632. The Voyage of this most skillful Navigator was publish'd in 1633, by the special Command of King Charles I. containing an Account of the Hardships he endur'd; as also of the Streights, Capes, Bays, Tides, Soundings, Variations of the Compass, Natural Riches, &c. very accurate and judicious.

The last Voyage, in order to make a more perfect Discovery (if it were possible) of the North east Seas; for a Passage to the Last-Indies, was undertaken in the Year 1676, by the Ingenious Captain John Wood. Having receiv'd a Commission from King Charles II. he arriv'd in the 76 Degree of North Latitude, but unfortunately lost his Ship, near the Spitzberg, on the Coast of New Zembla, and return'd home in the Properant Plant that accompanied him under the Command of Captain Flares. His Opinion is, that it is impossible to Sail attempted to make an escape into another Country, whereof he had only heard some obscure flying Reports. This Gentleman was so fortunate as to get safe to the Harbour of Sinds-bise, lying between two mountainous Promontories, one on an Isle over against Groenland, which he call'd Huidserken or White Shirt, by reason of its being covered with Snow; the other on the Continent, bearing the Name of Huaf Eric. He Winter'd in the Island, and afterward passing into the Continent, impos'd on it the Name of Groenland or Greenland, from its flourishing Verdure. His Son being sent to Olus Tragger King of Norway, to procure a Pardon, easily obtain'd it upon Information of the new Discovery. Thus, in process of time, a Plantation was settled there, and two Cities were built, viz. Garde and Albe; the latter was honoured with a Bishop's See and the Residence of the Norwegian Vice-Roy, the Cathedral Church being dedicated to St. Antony. However, these new Inhabitants having been long since destroy'd, either by the Natives, the Rage of an Epidemical Disease call'd the Black Plume, or otherwise, very little Intelligence concerning Groenland has come to us since the Year 1349. Nevertheless in 1389 (as they say) the King of Denmark determining to re-establish his Dominion in those Parts, sent a Fleet thither; which having suffer'd Shipwreck, he was discourag'd from any farther Enterprize, until of late that Navigation was somewhat renew'd by Christian IV. who was wont to call this Country his Philosopher's Stone; in regard that it was sometimes not to be found when his

to their very Skin by pricking it with a sharp Bone, so that it can never be worn out. These Natives are not unlike the Samoeids and Lap-landers, being very healthy, active and strong.
They are also courageous, and sometimes desperate, often choosing rather to throw themselves down the Rocks, than stand to be taken. But they are true Barbarians, extremely thievish, treacherous and revengeful, not to be won by any kindness or fair dealing. They live altogether by Hunting and Fishing, making Bread of Fish-bones ground to Meal, and drink the Sea-water without receiving any Prejudice by
it. They ordinarily go a Fishing with Darts, which are strongly barbed, and have Bladders fasten'd to them at the other end; that the Fish, when struck, may spend its Strength in struggling to get under Water, yet can't do it, and so is easily taken. Their Cloaths are either made of Bird-skins with the Feathers and Down upon them, or of those of Seals, Dog-fish, or Wild Beasts. They wear the hairy sides of them outward in Summer, and inward in Winter, and in vehement cold Weather carry two or more Suits one upon another. They also dress their Skins very well, and sew them exceeding strong with Sinews of Beasts and Needles made of Fish-bones. But their Ingenuity appears in nothing so much as in their Canoes or Boats, which are made of Whalebone about an Inch thick and very broad, stitch'd close together with strong Sinews and cover'd with Seal-skins. These Boats are wrought sharp at both ends in form of a Weaver's Shut-ty, separated from thence by the Streights of Waygats or Nassau; but whether it be an Island, or join'd to the Continent of Tartary, is not certainly known. It was discovered by Stephen Burroughs, in the Year 1556, and since visited by several Persons both of the English and Dutch Nation; who have in vain attempted to find out a Passage that way into the Tartarian Sea, and so farther to Cathay, China, Japan, &c.

This Country (according to the Information of Captain John Wood, who lost his Ship there) is for the most part perpetually cover'd with Snow, neither can one walk on the few bare Plats of Ground, by reason that they are boggy; upon the Surface whereof grows a kind of Moss, bearing a small blue and yellow Flower; under which Green-sod, in digging about two Foot deep, appears a firm Body of Ice. The same Ingenious Pilot assures us, That the Snow lies here, contrary to what it does in any other Country; since in all other Climates it melts soonest away near the Shoar, but here the Sea beats against the snowy Cliffs, that in some places are as high as either of the Forelands in Kent; the Sea having wash'd underneath the Snow a prodigious way, and the Snow hanging over, most fearful to behold:
But there are many Rivulets of very good Water, melted from the Snow, which run down every quarter of a Mile from Hills into the Sea. On the Hills are found abundance of Slate Stone, and on the Shoar very good black Marble with white Veins. The Dutch, who wintered in Nova Zembla, mention no other

North-west ; viz. Nova Zembla, North-east Greenland or Spitzberg, and North-west Greenland, commonly call'd Groenland and Engroenland. The first Discovery of these Countries is owing to an Accident ; for in 1380, Nicholas and Antony Zmi, two Brothers and rich Citizens of Venice, having set Sail from the Streight of Gibraltar for Flanders and England, were accidentally driven Northwards by violent Storms, even as far as Friesland, Iceland and Greenland. But in 1497, John Cabot and Sebastian his Son of the same Nation received a Commission from our King Henry VII. to undertake the like Voyage, who made a Draught and Description of some North-west Parts of America, and brought along with them four of the Natives.

These Discoveries gave rise to a Project of finding out a nearer Passage that way to the East-Indies ; which was attempted many times, but without success. A short Account of those Voyages is as follows.

A few Years after this Misfortune, viz. about 1556, one Captain Stephen Burroughs, sometime Comptroller of the Navy to Queen Elizabeth, prosecuting the same Design, pass'd the North Cape, and sailing farther Eastward, discover'd the Wegzars, or Streight that runs between the South part of Nova Zembla and the Country of the Samoeds ; thus, continuing his Course, he arriv'd in 112 Deg. 25 Min. of Longitude, and 76 of Northern Latitude. Afterward he sail'd to 80 Deg. 11 Min. In the Year 1576, arriving with two Barks at the height of 62 Deg. North Latitude, he discover'd a great Inlet, since call'd Frobisher's Streights, and sail'd into it 60 Leagues, with main Land on each side. He met with Inhabitants along the Coasts, whose Canoes or little Boats were made of Seal-skins, but had wooden Keels. The Ships Company exchange'd Toys with these Natives for Salmon and other Fish, and brought home certain Marcasites, which were taken for Gold-ore ; but after they had made a more exact search the next Year, with a design to carry away a quantity thereof, it prov'd to be nothing but black Lead. At the same time they found a Silver-Mine, which nevertheless lay so deep within the Rocks, that it could not be dug ; as also a dead Fish about 12 Foot long, somewhat resembling a Porpois in shape. It had a Horn growing out of its Snout (of the same Nature as those commonly call'd Unicorns Horns) which is still preserv'd in a Repository at Windsor, and is six Foot in length. In 1578 the same Sir Martin undertook his third Voyage, wherein, having pass'd as far as seem'd convenient to him, he took Possession of the Land in the Name of Queen Elizabeth, and call'd it Meta Incognita.

In the Year 1580, Arthur Pett and Charles Jackman having receiv'd a Commission from Queen Elizabeth to follow the Track of Stephen Burroughs, rambled over the Northern Seas, and in all likelihood landed in Greenland ; but there is nothing particularly known concerning their Voyage, except that they pass'd the Streights of Wayanus and launch'd into the Ocean to the Eastward, where, meeting with vast heaps of Ice, they were constrain'd to return with great Peril and Labour ; insomuch, that they lost one another by reason of the foul Weather, and Pett was never heard of after.

In 1583, Sir Humphrey Gilbert, by the direction of Sir Francis Walsingham, Principal Secretary of State, sail'd upon the same Design, to Newfoundland and the great River of St. Lawrence in Canada, took Possession of the Country in the Name of Queen Elizabeth, and settled a Fishing-trade there. This Voyage was made upon suggestion of a certain Greek Mariner, who positively affirm'd to some English Gentlemen, That himself had pass'd through a great Streight to the North of Virginia from the North-west Ocean, and offer'd to be Pilot for the Discovery, but died before he came into England.

In 1585, Mr. John Davis having undertaken with two Barks to search out the North west Coasts, made farther Discoveries in those Parts, and nam'd the Land he came to, Cape Desolation, being a Part of Greenland ; where he found many pieces of Furr and Wool like Beaver, and exchange'd some Commodities with the Natives, who often repair'd to him in their Canoes bringing Stag-skins, white Hares, small Cod, Mulcles, &c. Afterward he arriv'd in the Latitude of 64 Deg. 15 Min. where was found a great quantity of such Ore as Frobisher had before brought into England ; and steer'd thence to 66 Deg. 40 Min. as far as Mount Raleigh, Tornejssland, &c. In 1586 he made a second Voyage to the same Coasts, searching out many places toward the West ; and the next Year, in a third Voyage, came to 72 Deg. 12 Min. the Compass varying to 82 Deg. Westward. He gave the Name of London-Crest to the Land, and the Streight (being 40 Leagues wide) was from him call'd Fretum Davis.

Thus the English Nation alone, for a long time, frequented those Northern Seas till 1578, that a Dutch Ship came to Kola in Lapland, and a Year or two after another to Sz. Nicholas, by the instigation of an English Man who set himself against the Company of Russian Merchants; whereupon the Hollanders crept in more and more, and in 1594, sent William Barents, a skilful Navigator, and some others, to find out a Passage from thence to the Indies.

In 1596 the same William Barents, accompanied with two other Dutch Pilots, viz. Jacob Heemskirk and John Cornelius Ryp, first discover'd Bear or Cherry Island, and pass'd from thence to Greenland; but Barents being separated from them, sail'd along the Coasts of Nova Zembla to the 76 Degree of Latitude, until at length his Ship was driven ashore, and broke in pieces by the Ice, so that all the Mariners were compell'd to Winter there, and endur'd the utmost extremity of Cold. Afterward with much difficulty, in two Boats they got to Kola in Lapland; but William Barents died before their Arrival, to the great Grief of the whole Company.

In 1603 Stephen Bennet was employ'd, but went no farther than Cherry Island, and brought from thence a certain quantity of Lead Oar. In 1608, that famous Navigator Mr. Henry Hudson, was sent forth to discover the North Pole, and sail'd even to the 82 Degree of North Latitude; but being satisfy'd that there was no North-East-Passage, he was appointed to make the like trial in the North-West Seas. Therefore in 1610 he set sail again, and proceeded 100 Leagues farther than any had done before, and gave several Denominations to certain Places, as Desire provokes, Ile of God's Mercies, Prince Henry's Cape, King James's Cape, Queen Ann's Cape, &c. besides the Streight and Bay that still bear his Name. But the Ice hinder'd him from continuing his Course farther, and the Sedition of his Men from returning home.

In 1611 Sir Thomas Button, Servant to Henry Prince of Wales, eldest Son of King James I. being enjoin'd by that renowned young Prince to pursue the North-West Discoveries, pass'd through Hudson's Streight; and sailing above 200 Leagues to the South-Westward over a Sea above 80 Fathom deep, discover'd a large Continent, call'd by him New-Wales. Afterward, having endur'd great Fatigues in his wintering at Port Nelson, notwithstanding the loss of many of his Men, he search'd out the whole Bay, which is now known by his Name, even back again almost to Digge's Island, and found out the large Tract of Land which he nam'd Cary's Strans Nest. Moreover in the Years 1612, 1615, 1616, James Hall, and William Baffin, proceeded much farther in the North west Parts, and impos'd Names on divers Places discover'd by them, besides that the English Merchants perceiving these Northern Voyages to be very profitable by reason of the great quantity of rich Furs that were brought thence, encreas'd the number of their Shipping to thirteen or fourteen yearly, under the Conduct of Poole, Fotherby, Edge, Hely, and other skilful Pilots, from whom several Sounds, Bays, Promontories, &c. have receiv'd their respective Names.

In the mean while the King of Denmark observing the Progress of the neighbouring Nations in these Northern Seas, began to consider that the Traffick of his own might be much advanc'd by the like Discoveries, being also desirous to renew his ancient Pretensions to these Countries, in case any thing should be found out worth the claiming. Therefore he caus'd two Ships and a Pinnace to be fitted out in the Year 1605. Of these, Captain John Cunningham, a Scot was Admiral; Godske Lindenaw, a Danish Nobleman was Vice-Admiral, and the chief Pilots were James Hall and John Knight, Englishmen. Godske arriving on some part of the Country, barter'd some small Wares with the Natives, took two of them, and return'd to Denmark. The other two Vessels came to Cape Farewell, sail'd from thence to Frobisher's Streights, gave Danish Names to certain Places, seiz'd on three of the Inhabitants, and at Cunningham's Ford met with a kind of Silver Mine, which was afterwards try'd by the English, and found to be of no Value. In 1606, four Ships and a Pinnace were sent thither under the same Godske Lindenaw Admiral, and James Hall Pilot-General, who brought away five of the Natives. In 1607 James Hall receiv'd a new Commission; but the Sea-men mutining as soon as they made the Coast, brought the Ship back again into Denmark, without effecting any thing. However, his Danish Majesty set out two other Ships mann'd with Norwegian and Islandish Mariners, and commanded by Christian Richardson, a Holsteiner; but these returned before they came in view of the Shore. The rest of their Expeditions are unknown until An. 1619, when John Munck was sent out with two Ships, which arriv'd safe at Cape Farewell, from thence this Pilot steer'd to 63 Degree 20 Min. (as it is probable near Digge's Island) and winter'd there, calling the Place Munck's Winter Harbour, and the Continent New Denmark. The South-part of Hudson's Bay he likewise nam'd Mare novum, and that part toward Greenland, Mare Christianum. But of all his Company, which consisted of Forty six in a Ship, and Sixteen in a Pinnace, scarce so many were left alive, as were able to bring the Pinnace through extream Danger to their own Country. However, in the Year 1653, Frederick III. King of Denmark, resolving to advance the Northern Discoveries, caus'd three Ships to be fitted out with skilful Mariners, enjoyning them to take a most exact Account of all the Coasts and Places where they arriv'd. These having pass'd the Streight of Waygats, met with some Inhabitants of Nova Zembla in their Canoes or little Fishing-Boats, and steer'd from thence to Greenland. These particular Adventures are contain'd in the French Relations of the Danish Voyages publish'd at Paris by M. Peyrere and Martiniere.

We do not read of any more Voyages from England to find out the North-West Passage since the last Expedition of William Baffin in 1616, until the Reign of King Charles I. when Captain Luke Fox was sent upon the same design in 1630, in his Majesty's Pinnace nam'd the Charles, victuall'd for eighteen Months. He traced Frobisher, Hudson, Davis, Button and Baffin, meeting with Whales, much Ice, and Fowls, and built a Pinnace in Port Nelson, where he found several Remains left by Sir Thomas Button, but no Natives or Inhabitants, though in other Parts of those Seas he saw some Salvages. About the same time, viz. in 1631, Captain Thomas James being employ'd by the Merchants of Bristol for the like purpose, sail'd from Cape Farewell by the Islands of Resolution to Milli and Nottingham Isles, as also those of Mansfield, from whence he steer'd over a large Bay to the Westward near Port Nelson, and nam'd the Land New South Wales, Hereabouts meeting with Captain Fox, they congratulated one another, but were soon separated by foul Weather; so that Captain James still continu'd roving up and down, and giving Name to divers Places; as Cape Henrietta Maria, Lord Weston's Island, The Earl of Bristol's Island, Sir Thomas Roe's Island, Earl of Danby's Island, Charlton Island, &c. in this last he Winter'd in the Latitude of 52 Deg. 3 Min. and having built a little Pinnace out of his Ship, pass'd over to Corn's Swan's Nest, whence he return'd by Cape Charles and Slisbury Isle, and arriv'd on the Coasts of England in 1632. The Voyage of this most skilful Navizator was publish'd in 1633, by the special Command of King Charles I. containing an Account of the Hardships he endur'd; as also of the Straights, Capes, Bays, Tides, Soundings, Variations of the Compass, Natural Rarities, &c. very accurate and judicious.

The last Voyage, in order to make a more perfect Discovery (if it were possible) of the North-east Seas; for a Passage to the East-Indies, was undertaken in the Year 1676, by the Ingenious Captain John Wood. Having receiv'd a Commission from King Charles II. he arriv'd in the 76 Degree of North Latitude, but unfortunately lost his Ship, nam'd the Speedwell, on the Coast of New Zembla, and return'd home in the Profligate's Pink that accompanied him under the Command of Captain Flames. His Opinion is, that it is impossible to Sail this Way to China and Japan, as Captain James before had declared, being both induc'd thereto by the situation of the Land, the reversion and uncertainty of half Tides, the motion of the Ice, &c. Besides, that the Fogs, Snow, Frosts, the vast Islands of Ice, and the tempestuousness of the Weather, are altogether insuperable.

ESTOTILAND is on the North of America, and is divided from it by Hudson's Streight. Antonius Zoni the Venetian, is said to have discover'd it in 1390, or thereabouts; and John Scolte, a Polonian, found it out again in 1477. He was lost in the Sea, as well as Michael Cortrealis. This Country is very fruitful, especially in Gold. The Inhabitants are very industrious. The English possess on the Coast, Terra Lavator, or New Britain, or Terra Cortrealis; but they know nothing but the Coast.

GROENLAND, Greenlandia, call'd also Groenland, and more anciently Engroenland, lies (according to the report of the Inlanders) like a half Moon about the North of their Country, at the distance of four Days sailing. Cape Farewell, its most Southern Promontory, is situated in the Latitude of 60 Degr. 30 Min. but how far the Continent may extend itself Northward, is unknown. The Eastern and Western sides are encompass'd with two vast Oceans, but at what Degrees of Longitude, is not yet discover'd. This Land is suppos'd to have been first discover'd by a Norwegian Gentleman, nam'd Eric Rorup, or Red-head, who having committed a Murder in Iceland, to save his Life

attempted to make an escape into another Country, whereof he had only heard some obscure flying Reports. This Gentleman was so fortunate as to get safe to the Harbour of Sindbis, lying between two mountainous Promontories, one on an Isle over against Greenland, which he call'd Huidserken or White Shirt, by reason of its being covered with Snow; the other on the Continent, bearing the Name of Huaf Eric. He Winter'd in the Island, and afterward passing into the Continent, impos'd on it the Name of Greenland or Greenland, from its flourishing Verdure. His Son being sent to Olus Trugger King of Norway, to procure a Pardon, easily obtain'd it upon Information of the new Discovery. Thus, in process of time, a Plantation was settled there, and two Cities were built, viz. Gard and Albe; the latter was honoured with a Bishop's See and the Residence of the Norwegian Vice-Roy, the Cathedral Church being dedicated to St. Arony. However, these new Inhabitants having been long since destroy'd, either by the Natives, the Rage of an Epidemical Disease call'd the Black Plague, or otherwise, very little Intelligence concerning Greenland has come to us since the Year 1349. Nevertheless in 1389 (as they say) the King of Denmark determining to re-establish his Dominion in those Parts, sent a Fleet thither; which having suffer'd Shipwreck, he was discourag'd from any farther Enterprize, until of late that Navigation was somewhat renew'd by Christian IV. who was wont to call this Country his Philosopher's Stone; in regard that it was sometimes not to be found when his Ships undertook a Voyage thither; and because a certain Dane in 1626 brought some Sand from thence which was of the same colour and weight with Gold.

The Air in Greenland is so excessive cold that the Danes cannot dwell there; neither does the Soil produce any thing but Moss, with some few Bashes and Plants; the Country consisting for the most part in High-lands and Mountains continually cover'd with snow; but the Southern parts more than the Northern, which by reason of the terrible Ice and Cold, are very little known. Among the Beasts, the chief are Bears, Foxes, Rain-Deer and Dogs; there is also great plenty and variety of Fish, as Whales, Seals, Dog fish, &c. But on these Coasts are caught the greatest Quantities of Sea Unicorns, whose Horns are so much esteem'd, and kept as Rarities even in the Cabinets of Princes. All the Navigators that arrive here often observe a wonderful Meteor call'd a North-light, which usually appears about the time of the New Moon, and tho' only in the North, yet enlightens the whole Country; perhaps it may be the same which is sometimes seen in England, especially in the Northern Parts, and commonly termed streaming. It is said to resemble a great Pillar or Beam of Fire, darting out Rays and Streams every where. It also moves from one place to another, leaving behind it a kind of Mist and Cloud, and continues till hid by the Sun-beams.

The Greenlanders are generally of a low Stature, of a ripe Olive Colour, and some of them quite Black; having black Hair, flat Noses, broad Faces, and Lips turned up. The Women frequently stain their Faces in blue, and some-sometimes black streaks, letting the Colour into their very Skin by pricking it with a sharp Bone, so that it can never be worn out. These Natives are not unlike the Samoeids and Laplanders, being very healthy, active and strong. They are also courageous, and sometimes desperate, often choosing rather to throw themselves down the Rocks, than stand to be taken. But they are true Barbarians, extremely thievish, treacherous and revengeful, not to be won by any kindness or fair dealing. They live altogether by Hunting and Fishing, making Bread of Fish-bones ground to Meal, and drink the Sea-water without receiving any Prejudice by it. They ordinarily go a Fishing with Darts, which are strongly barbed, and have Bladders fasten'd to them at the other end; that the Fish, when struck, may spend its Strength in struggling to get under Water, yet can't do it, and so is easily taken. Their Cloaths are either made of Bird-skins with the Feathers and Down upon them, or of those of Seals, Dog-fish, or Wild Beasts. They wear the hairy sides of them outward in Summer, and inward in Winter, and in vehement cold Weather carry two or more Suits one upon another. They also dress their Skins very well, and sew them exceeding strong with Sinews of Beasts and Needles made of Fish-bones. But their Ingenuity appears in nothing so much as in their Canoes or Boats, which are made of Whale-bone about an Inch thick and very broad, stitch'd close together with strong Sinews and cover'd with Seal-skins. These Boats are wrought sharp at both ends in form of a Weaver's Shuttle, so as they may be row'd either way, being from ten to twenty Foot long, and two broad; they have a Deck of the same Materials fasten'd to the sides, in the midst whereof is a round hole as big as the waste of a Man; so that when he goes to Sea, he sets himself in that Hole, stretching out his Feet forward into the hollow of the Vessel, which is row'd only with one Oar about six Foot long, having a Paddle six Inches broad at each end, serving both to balance and move the Boat, which is done with incredible swiftness, insomuch that one of our Skiffs with ten Oars is not able to accompany them. And we are inform'd by the Danish Relations, That the Groenlanders row'd so swift, that they even dazzl'd the Eyes of the Spectators; and tho' they often crossed, yet never interfer'd or fell foul one upon another. As for their Religion they are Idolaters, and seem to have a great Veneration for the Sun. They have also been seen lying flat on the Earth, and muttering certain Prayers or Charms to the Devil, whose proper Habitation they believe to be under Ground. John Munck, and divers others that have travell'd farther into the Country, found many Images, such as we commonly make of Demons and hellish Fiends with Horns, Beaks, Claws and cloven Feet; near which lay quantities of Bones of Beasts, as of Deer, Foxes, Dogs, &c. suppos'd to have been offer'd to them in Sacrifice.

N O V A Z E M B L A, was so call'd by the Russians, the word in their Language signifying New Land; but was however known to the Ancients (as it is probable) under the Name of Cerambrina. It lies on the North of Musco- vy, separated from thence by the Streights of Waygats or Nassau; but whether it be an Island, or join'd to the Continent of Tartary, is not certainly known. It was discovered by Stephen Burroughs, in the Year 1556, and since visited by several Persons both of the English and Dutch Nation; who have in vain attempted to find out a Passage that way into the Tartarian Sea, and so farther to Cathay, China, Japan, &c.

This Country (according to the Information of Captain John Wood, who lost his Ship there) is for the most part perpetually cover'd with Snow, neither can one walk on the few bare Plats of Ground, by reason that they are boggy; upon the Surface whereof grows a kind of Moss, bearing a small blue and yellow Flower; under which Green-fod, in digging about two Foot deep, appears a firm Body of Ice. The same Ingenious Pilot assures us, That the Snow lies here, contrary to what it does in any other Country; since in all other Climates it melts soonest away near the Shoar, but here the Sea beats against the snowy Cliffs, that in some places are as high as either of the Forelands in Kent; the Sea having wash'd underneath the Snow a prodigious way, and the Snow hanging over, most fearful to behold: But there are many Rivulets of very good Water, melted from the Snow, which run down every quarter of a Mile from Hills into the Sea. On the Hills are found abundance of Slate stone, and on the Shoar very good black Marble with white Veins. The Dutch, who wintered in Nova Zembla, mention no other Beasts than Bears, Foxes, and such others as live upon Prey; for that (say they) there is neither Leaves nor Grass to afford any Fodder for tame Cattel; nevertheless Captain Wood found the track of many large Deer, and saw a small Creature much like a Coney, but not so big as a Rat, together with some few little Birds like Larks. Moreover some English Merchants that resided in Russia, have affirm'd that there is a spacious Lake upon Nova Zembla, wherein are bred a great number of Swans and Geese, which molt their Feathers about St. Peter's Day; and that at that Time the Russians pass over thither to gather these Feathers and kill the Fowls, which they dry and bring into their own Country for Winter-Provision. The most Western Point of Nova Zembla, to which Wood gave the Name of Cape Speedill, lies in 74 Deg. 30 Min. Nor. Lat. and in Longitude 63 Deg. East from London. The Sea here is the saltest and the heaviest and clearest Water in the World, insomuch that he could see Shells at the bottom at 80 Fathom depth.

S P I T S B E R G, otherwise call'd North-east GREENLAND, took its Dutch Name from the sharp-pointed Rocks and Mountains with which it is environ'd; Spitz in that Language signifying pointed, and Berg a Hill or Mount. It reaches from the 76 Deg. to the 82 Deg. of Latitude, but how much farther, as also whether Island or Continent, is not as yet discovered. Indeed our Mariners generally take it for an Island; and the Dutch only conjecture that the Land is extended more North, because the Ice stands firm, and does not float as in the open Sea. The South Parts look toward the Promontories of Finland, Finland, Lappland, the North-Cape, &c. The next Land on the East is Nova Zembla, and the large Territories of Greenland or Engroenland on the West, but those at so vast a distance, that they cannot be reckoned as its Confines. The principal Harbours are, 1. Soub-haven, which is capable of containing above 40 Ships at one time, and wherein faulty Vessels are often repair'd. 2. Mauritus-Bay, so call'd by the Hollanders, where some have winter'd; and near it stand a few Cottages, which they built for the trying up their Oil, with a Piece of Ordnance for their Defence. These Houses they termed Schmeckenberg, from Schmen, signifying Grease, and the Hellers-Cocken, but all other Nations usually burn theirs before their Departure. 3. The Northen-Bay, where is an Island the Dutch name Tegel-Sing, from the great Noise the Fowl make there in taking their Flight. 4. Monyer's-Bay, the farthest North of the Western-part of Greenland. 5. Middle-Haven, lying at the Mouth of the Straights of Wegans. 6. Walter Thymen's Ford, which the Engliss commonly call Alderman Freeman's Inlet, and is a large Mouth of a River, as yet undiscover'd.

The whole Country is so encompass'd with Ice that it is very difficult to come near the Shores, and the Air is so extreme cold that the Europeans cannot dwell there with safety of their Lives; as neither in Greenland nor Nova Zembla. The Soil, as much as hath been hitherto discovered, is nothing but Rocks or Heaps of vast Stones, so steep that they seem ready to tumble down; and indeed many great Pieces often break off from the Tops with a terrible Noise. The greatest part of the Mountains are of Red Earth, and communicate that Colour to the Snow upon them, which often appears marbled, and resembles as it were the Boughs and Branches of Trees, giving a bright Lustre to the Air or Skies, as if the Sun shone. There are also seven bright blue Mountains in a Line, which tinge the Snow and Ice with the same colour, and betwixt them many sharp-pointed Rocks, the Holes whereof afford Nests to an infinite multitude of Fowls, whose Dung being mixt with the Moss, washed down by the melted Snow, makes Mould in the Clefts and Valleys, which lying open to the Sun-Beams, when the Ice is dissolv'd produceth some few Plants, as a kind of Cabbage-Lettuce, Scurvy-Grass, Sorrel, Snakeweed, Mousse-ear, a kind of wild Strawberry, divers sorts of Ranunculus, Semprevives, &c.

The Beasts of this Country are only these, viz. Foxes white, grey, tawny and black; Rain-Deer, which grow extreme fat by feeding upon yellow Moss; white Bears of a prodigious Size, some of them being 6 Foot high, and their Skins 14 foot long; Water Bear, that live by what they catch in the Sea, where they have been seen swimming 12 Miles from any Shore, Seals or Sea-Dogs and Morles. Very few Land-fowl breed here, of which the most remarkable is the Sooty or Strand-Runner, of the bigness of a Lark, with a marquette Bill resembling a Rump, that feeds on Worms and does not taste ill; But of Water-fowl there is great variety, as Snow-Birds and Ice-Birds, so call'd for their running upon the Ice; Mountain-Ducks, Willocks, Red-Grebe; Stints, Gulls, Kittiwakes, Sea Pigeons, Sea Parrots, Kirmews, Murrelets, Pigeon-divers, Lurks, Rathlers or Aldermen, Burgermeisters or Mayors, Rotger-Divers, Strunt-jagers or Dung-Hunters, &c. Most of these Birds, except the Strunt-jager, Kirmew and Mountain-Ducks, make their Nests upon the high Rocks, to be secur'd from the Bears and Foxes. They sit in so numerous Flocks, especially at the time when their young ones are hatch'd, about the latter End of June and beginning of July, that at their taking Flight they shade the Ground from the Sun-Beams, as it were a Cloud, and make such a Noise that one can hardly hear another speak. There are also great quantities of Fish in these Seas, as Seals or Sea-Dogs, Morles or Sea-Horses, Hays, Dragon-Fish, Buts-Head, Unicorns, Sword-Fish, Mackarel, Lobsters, Garnels, Shrimps, Star-Fish, &c. But the chiefest Profit that draws Men to those desert and disconsolate Places, ariseth from the Whale-Fishing, of which perhaps it may not be impertinent here to give a Description.

As to the natural History of Whales, the Writings of Authors are confus'd, some reckoning 10 several Species, and others, as Wormins and Bartholinus, making them up 22; giving them various Names from their Difference in Colours, Fins, Teeth, Whalebone, Oyl. Sperma Ceti, &c. But the Fish properly call'd the Whale, for the catching of which our Ships chiefly undertake the Voyage to Spitsberg and Greenland, differs from other Whales in his Fins and Mouth, that is altogether destitute of Teeth, instead whereof there are long, black, somewhat broad and horny Flakes, all jagg'd like Hairs. The Head is commonly the third part of the whole Fish, yet some have bigger than others. Their Lips are plain, smooth and black, somewhat bended, like the Letter S, and end underneath the Eyes, before the two Fins, being lock'd one into another when drawn together. Within, on the uppermost Lip, lies that which we call Whale-bone, of a brown, black and yellow Colour, with Streaks of several Colours, others being of a blue and light blue Tincture, are reputed to come from young Whales; the smallest Whale-bone is before, in the Mouth, and behind toward the Throat, but the middlemost is the largest and longest, reaching sometimes about the length of two or three Men; these are covered all over with long Hairs, like Horse hair, hanging down on both sides round about the Tongue; on one side, all in a Row, are 250 pieces of Whale-bone, and as many on the other, besides some others so small that they cannot be conveniently cut out, which is a peculiar Trade, abundance of Iron-Tools belonging thereto. The lower part of the Whale's Mouth is generally white, and the Tongue, lying amidst the Whale-bones, is very close ty'd to the undermost Chap or Lip; it is large and white, with black Spots at the Edges, consisting of a soft spongy Fat, so hard to be cut that it is often flung away, tho' otherwise it would yield six or seven Barrels of Train-Oil. On the Head stands a Hovel or Bump, and at the Top of it, on each side is a Spout-hole, bended like an S, or the Hole of a Violin, out of which the Whale blows the Water, especially when wounded, so fiercely that it roars like a hollow Wind, or the Waves of the Sea in a Storm; which Noise may be heard at a League's Distance. The Eyes lie very low almost at the End of the Upper-Lip, and are not much bigger than those of a Bullock, with Eye-Lids and Hair like those of a Man; the Crystal of the Eye is not much bigger than a Pea, clear white, and transparent, the Colour of some is yellowish, and of others pure white. The Shape of the whole Fish is not unlike that of a Shooe-Maker's-Last, if you look upon it from beneath; their Belly and Back are generally reddish, but underneath the Belly they are white; yet some of them are Coal-black; some of them are also curiously marbled on their Fins, Back and Tail. The young ones are bigger than a Hoghead, when first brought forth. At the Sides of the Pudendum, of the Female, stand out two Breasts, with Teats on them like those of Cows, which nevertheless are, as it were, sheath'd within till the young one comes to suck; some of these Breasts are all over white, others speckled with black and blue Spots, like a Lapwing's Egg, the Milk that issues from them being white and sweet, but of a somewhat fishy Taste. The Bones of the Whale are hard, as those of large four-footed Beasts, but porous as a Sponge, and filled with Marrow. His Flesh, which appears coarse and hard, like that of a Bull, is alone by it self, and the Fat lying at the Top, between the Flesh and Skin, is about six Inches thick on the Back and Belly, as also a Foot thick upon the Fins, proportionable to the Size of the Fish, but the Fat of the under Lip is often thicker than two Foot. The Tail does not stand up as those of most other Fishes, but lies Horizontal, as that of the Fin-Fish, But's-Head, Dolphin, &c. being three, three and a half, and sometimes four Fathom broad; with this the Whale winds himself as a Vessel is turned by the Rudder, and his Fins serve instead of Oars, so that he rows along as swiftly as a Bird flies, and makes a long Track in the Sea, which remains divided for a while as that of a huge Ship under Sail.

As for the Food of the Whale, the Ancients thought that he liv'd upon the Froth of the Sea, churn'd with his violent beating on the Water; others say, he is nourish'd with such Weeds and Plants as the Sea affords, since good store of them have been sometimes found in his Stomach: But it is most probable that his chiefest Meat are a certain sort of small Crabs, otherwise call'd Sea-Beetles or Sea-Spiders, with which the Bays of Greenland are so cover'd that they seem all over black, these frequently hang thick on his Fins and Hairs, and are afterward suck'd into his Mouth. Indeed not only the Crabs themselves, but also great Quantities of little Stones, call'd Oculi Cancrorum, have been taken out of his Stomach. The Whales, as well as other Beasts, have their peculiar Distempers and divers Enemies; of these last the chief are,

1. A kind of Lowle or Insect, having many Feet and a Head like an Acorn, with 4 Horns, which eats through the Skin to devour the Fat.
2. The Saw-Fish or Sword-Fish, which has a long Bone on the End of his Snout, set on each side with Teeth like a Saw; he seldom gives over encountering the Whale till he has kill'd him, yet eats up nothing but his Tongue.
3. The Hay, a long round and thin Fish, yet very voracious, whose Mouth, shap'd as that of the Sword-Fish, is full of sharp Teeth, three upper and three under Rows one by another; with these he bites great Pieces from the Whale, as if dug out with a Spade, and often devours all his Fat. These Fishes are also very eager after the Flesh of Men, and assault many that go to swim or walk in the Sea; they are usually taken with a Bait of Flesh fasten'd to a Hook with a strong Iron Chain, for they would soon sheer a Rope asunder with their Teeth.

The manner of Catching Whales is thus; When any are seen or discover'd by their Blowing or Spouting up of Water, which may be discern'd at a great distance, upon notice given, all the Mariners get into the Long Boats, which hold about 6 or 7 Men apiece. These row till they come very near the Whale, and then the Harpoonier, who always sits before in the Boat, takes an opportunity to throw out his Harpoon; which is an Iron shap'd at the Point like an Arrow, and fix'd at the End of a Stick or Pole, having two Beards, sharp at the Edge and blunt on the Backs, otherwise it would tear out and all the Labour would be lost. The best Harping-Irons are made of clean and fine Steel, not too much harden'd, so that they may be bended without snapping, for 200 Pound (a middling Whale being valued at so much) is often lost for want of such a well-temper'd Instrument, which is light behind and heavy toward the Point, so that fling it which way you will, it always falls upon the Point: To the End or Handle of the Harpoon is fasten'd a Rope 5 or 7 fathom long, and about an Inch thick, being more plyable than the other Cords that are afterward tyed to it (for it is made of the finest and softest Hemp, not daub'd with Tar, so that it swells and grows hard in the Water.) In every one of the Sloops a whole Heap of Lines lie between the Seats, divided into 3, 4, or 5 parts, and each of them is of 80, 90 or 100 Fathom long. The first of them is tyed to the Fore-runner or small Line, and as the Whale dives they tye more and more Line to it. These Ropes are thicker than the Fore-runner, wrought with strong and tough Hemp, and tarr'd over; but the Line-Furnisher or Person whose Business it is to look after the Ropes, as also the other Men in the Long-boat, must take great Care that they be not entangled, or that they may not run toward the Side of the Boat, lest it should be thereby overset, but they must run out just before in the middle, commonly call'd the Slave by the Seamen. The Harpoonier darts the Harpoon with his Right-Hand just behind the Spout-Hole of the Whale (if he can conveniently) or in the thick Fat of his Back, for he dies sooner if wounded thereabout than if he were launch'd into the Belly or through the Guts; but about the Head the Harpoon can do him little Hurt, because the Fat is very thin there upon the Bones, so that it breaks out more easily, and the Whale finds means to escape. However, for the most part the Seamen do not much mind where they launce or push them, doing it as well as they can, since there is no Time to take great Deliberation. The Beast, as soon as wounded, runs away with the Long-Boat as swift as Wind, and diving underneath draws the Rope very hard, so that great Care must be taken to give him Rope enough lest the Boat be overset. In the mean while all the other other Sloops row out before, and take notice which way the Line stands, for if it is stiff and heavy, the Whale still draws it with main Strength; but if it hangs loose, so that the Boat both before and behind is equally high out of the Water, then the Men hale in the Rope, laying it in good order, that if the Whale should draw on again, it may be given him without being entangled. It is also to be observ'd, That if the Whale runs upon the Level, too much Rope must not be allow'd, lest in turning much and often about he should wind it about a Rock or heavy Stone, so that the Harping-Iron would be loos'd and tear out, which has often happen'd. Whensoever the Whale rolls upon the Ground, the Long-boat lying still, the Lines are drawn in again by degrees, and the Rope-Master lays them down in their proper Places. If he runs underneath a great Ice-field, and, and the Rope is not long enough to follow him, they draw it in as much as is possible, and cut it off, losing the piece of Rope and the Whale; and indeed they frequently run away with the Lines belonging to five or more Sloops. Where great quantities of small Ice are crowd'd together it is very dangerous and difficult to pursue the Whale, for he is so cunning as to retire thither immediately, and the Long-Boats are very often dash'd to pieces against the Rocks of Ice. But when he rises they sling one or two more Harping-Irons into him, accordingly as they perceive him more or less tir'd, and then he dives under Water again, some swim even all a-long, playing with their Tail and Fins, so that great Care must be taken not to come too near them, for they can beat a Long-Boat to pieces at a Blow. Thus the Seamen wait till the Whale is pretty well tir'd, and then kill him outright with Launces, nevertheless not without great Danger, for they strike as well upon his Body as at his Sides, and receive many severe Blows, all the other Men in the Sloops rowing diligently, sometimes forward and sometimes backward, whilst the Whale lifts himself up and often beats so violently with his Tail and Fins that the Water daimes up into the Air like Dust. The Launces are fix'd to a wooden Pole above two Fathom long, or somewhat shorter than a Pike-staff; the other part of the Lance being commonly a Fathom long, and pointed before, as that of a Pike; is made of Steel or tough Iron, so as to bend without breaking: For the Harpooners, having made a deep Hole in the Whale's Back or sides with their Launces, continue thrusting them first one way, then another; but if one or more are got out of their Hands they soon take another, every Sloop being furnished with at least 5, 6 or 7; yet sometimes the Whale has them all out of 3, 4 or more Boats sticking in his Body. After he is struck he spouts Water or Blood with all his force, so that the Noise thereof may be heard as far as the Report of a Cannon; but when he is quite wearied it comes out only by Drops, for he has not strength enough to force it up any more. Some Whales blow Blood to the very Top, making the Men most filthy, and diving their Sloops as deep as if they were painted with Vermilion, nay the very Sea is tinged red along where ever they swim. Those Whales that are mortally wounded, heat themselves to such a pitch, that they rock, and the Birds sit on them and eat their Flesh whilst yet alive. They are surest struck with a Harpoon, as they spout Water, and so do not mind the striking of the Oars, for when they lie still they listen, and are sometimes above and sometimes under Water; but it is very dangerous to assault the Females, especially when big with young, for they defend themselves very long and are harder to be dispatch'd than the Males.

The Long-Boats often wait 6 or 7 Hours, nay even a whole Day before one is seen; but when he is thus kill'd they convey him to the Ship's side, fastning that part where the Tail is cut off to the Fore-Castle, and the Head toward the Stern: Then 2 Sloops hold at each End of the Fish, whilst the Harpooners stand in them before or upon the Whale, clad with a leathern Suit. These 2 Men, who have their peculiar Wages, viz. about 4 or 5 Crowns a-piece, slice his Sides with long Knives, raising the Blubber or Fat from the Flesh, which the more it is loosen'd, as the Hide is flaid from an Ox, the higher it must be hal'd up with the Pulleys, that it may be more easily cut. Afterward the Fat is cut into small pieces in the Ship, and kept in Vessels or Cardels (as they call them) until they try it up into Train-Oil. The Blubber of some Whales is White, others Yellow; and some of Red: The White, being full of small Sinews, does not yield so much Oil, as the Yellow; the Red and watery Fat comes from dead Whales, taking its Colour from the Settling of the Blood, and affords the worst and least Oil, but the Yellow Fat, which looks like Butter, is the best. The Fat being thus chopt into small Pieces, and slic'd thin, is boyld in Cauldrons or Coppers: Afterward the Liquor is lad'd out into a Vessel, half full of Water, that it may be cool'd, and that the Dirt, Blood and other Dregs may fall to the bottom; then it is put into Troughs, to be more cool'd, and convey'd thence into the Cardels or Hogheads, which generally hold 64 Gallons. It is reported that one Hoffman, a Diep-man, in the Year 1634. got 26 Hogheads (Cides) out of the Tongue of one Whale, and 120 out of its Body. The Train-Oil is us'd by divers Tradesmen, as Frize-makers, Curriers, Cloth-workers and Soap-Boilers. The Greenland Ships, of the largest size, carry 30 or 40 Men, Men, and sometimes more, having 6 Sloops to tend them, and hold from 800 to 1000 Cardels of Fat: The lesser Ships contain fewer Cardels, viz. from 400 to 700, and have commonly 5 Sloops or Boats belonging to them. There also go some Gallies to Spitsberg to catch Whales, which have only 3 or 4 Sloops.

The Hollanders attribute the first Discovery of Greenland or Spitsberg to three of their own Pilots, viz. Jacob Heemkirk, William Barents and John Cornelius Ryp, imposing Names on several Creeks and Promontories, according to their Fancy. But it is certain that they only followed our Steps, and that had our Men been as diligent in that particular from time to time, as also no less careful in making of Sea Charts on such occasions, divers Discoveries would have been unquestionably asserted to this Nation, which are now almost disputed from us. Indeed it is not to be doubted but that Sir Hugo Wintourghy, in the Year 1553, and Stephen Barroughs in 1556, landed in this Country long before fore the arrival of the Dutch Fleet ; therefore the latter had no other way to derogate from Sir Hugh's Honour, but by conferring on him an imaginary Title of an Island, which they call Willoughby's Island, a Place near Nova Zembla : However, in 1610. the Russia Company of English Merchants, sent a Ship nam'd the Amity, under the command of Jonas Pool, for Whale-Fishing, who fell upon this Country formerly discover'd, tho' not much regarded, and call'd it Greenland; either by reason of the green Moss with which it was cover'd; or perhaps mistaking it for Greenland, a large Northern Continent before discover'd. He also gave Names to many of the principal Places on the Western Side; as Horn-sound, (because a Unicorn's Horn was there found) Ice-Point, Bell-Point, Black-Point, Knotty-Point, Lowness Island, Cape-Cold, Ice-Sound, Fowl-Sound, Deer-Sound, &c. This was the first Time that any Benefit was made by the Fishing in these Seas. In 1611 the Company hir'd six Basques, expert Fishermen, and furnish'd them with two Ships to fish for Whales; the first that was taken by them yielded 12 Tuns of Oil, and they likewise kill'd 500 Morfles. In 1662 two other Ships were sent, which caught 17 Whales, together with some Morfles, and made 180 Tuns of Oil. The Hollanders came thither the same Year with one Ship, conducted by Andrew Swallow an Englishman, whilst another English Pilot likewise brought a Spanish Vessel. Afterward many other Voyages were undertaken on the Company's Account, and these Coasts were frequented by the English, Dutch, Danes, and other Nations; nevertheless we find little worth relating of Greenland till the Year 1630, when some English, commanded by Captain William Goodier, were forc'd to wander up and down the Country, and to Winter there; a large Relation whereof has been publish'd by Dr. W. Watts, to which we shall refer the Reader. Some English in like manner, winter'd in Greenland, A. D. 1633, and another Company in 1634, but the latter all perished there. The last that has brought us any considerable News from this Country is Frederick Martens a Hamburgher, who set sail from the River Elbe, April 15. A. D. 1671, and return'd thither on Aug. 21. He set forth a large and very accurate Description of the Land, and all things therein, as Mountains, Plants, Beasts, Fowls, &c. chiefly upon a desire to satisfy the Curiosity of some Gentlemen of the Royal Society. This Work was first written in High-Dutch, and after Printed in English.

In these Countries there is a continu'd Day for four or five Months in a Year, and a perpetual Night for three Months; so that for the most part there is either all Light, or all Darknes. The English that winter'd in Greenland in the Year 1630, entirely lost the Light of the Sun Octob. 14, and saw it not again till Feb. 3. It is reported by those that staid there in 1633, that Octob. 5. was the last Day that they beheld the Sun; tho' they could see to read in the Twi-light, which continu'd till Octob. 17. That on the twenty-second the Stars plainly appear'd all the twenty-four Hours, and were visible during the whole Winter. That on Jan. 15. they perceiv'd for six or seven Hours about Noon, so much Light as they could make a shift to read by it: And that on Febr. 12. they discerned the Sun-Beams upon the tops of the Mountains, and the next day his whole Body. Our Men that remain'd in Green- land in 1634, and all perish'd there, left in Writing before their Deaths, that the Sun disappear'd Octob. 10. and was seen again Feb. 14. The Hollanders that winter'd in Nova Zembla A. D. 1596, on Novemb. 2. New Stile, or Octob. 23. Old Stile, (according to Purchas) saw the Sun not fully above the Earth; when it rose South-south-east, and set South-south-west. After Novemb. 4. New Stile, or Octob. 2. Old Stile, the Sun was no longer seen, but the Moon appear'd Day and Night, as long as she continu'd in the highest Degrees. On Jan. 24. they perceived the edge of the Sun above the Horizon, and on Jan. 27. he came totally in view; being in 5 Deg. 25 Min. of Aquarius. It is difficult to assign a Reason of these various Appearances, unless they proceed from the differences of Latitude; wherein the English and Dutch took up their Winter-Quarters: But the Cold in Nova Zembla, was more intense than that in Greenland.

The English that Winter'd in this Country liv'd upon Venison, as Rain-Deer, Bears, Foxes, Morfles, &c. The Bear's-flesh was tolerably pleasant and wholesom, but the Liver caus'd their Skins to peel off; which was also observ'd by the Hollanders, that abode in Nova Zembla. As the Sun and Day began to appear, the Fowls and Foxes crept abroad, for which they set many Traps and Ginns; insomuch that a vast number of Birds were taken, and at several times, above 50 Foxes: These last prov'd very good Meat, and the Dutch in Nova Zembla were likewise much reliev'd by them in their Scurvies. Afterward, in going abroad to seek Provisions, they found great quantities of Willock's Eggs, that afforded no small Refreshment: But the effects of the Cold upon their Bodies were wonderful, raising Blisters on their Flesh, as if they had been burnt: Iron stuck to their Fingers when touch'd, and their Stockings were all over sing'd as they sat by a great Fire, yet their Feet felt no warmth, and their Backs were frozen. However, our Men either had not altogether endur'd so much hardship, or at least were not so ready to complain as William Barents's Company in Nova Zembla; for the Cold was so excessive sharp in those Parts, that (as it was related by them at their return) their Shooes froze as hard as Horn to their Feet, their Sack and other strong Liquors were likewise frozen, and a Barrel of Water became perfect Ice in one Night. They also add, that their Carpenter taking a Nail out of his Mouth, the Skin and Flesh follow'd, glu'd to it with Ice; that in their Hutts they were wont to apply Stones heated at the Fire to their Feet, and other Parts of their Body, to keep them from freezing; and that they suffer'd many other Calamities, the particular Circumstances whereof it would be too tedious to recite.

The Land of JESSO, Terra ESONIS (of which we have already spoken in our Account of China) is altogether unknown, except some Coasts of it which lie in 42 Deg. of Latitude. It is seated between Asia and America, and is a long continued Tract of Land; by some thought to be contiguous to both Continents, and that thereby America was Peopl'd. But the Streight of Joffis or Tessay which parts it from Tartary, and the Streight of Anian that separates it from that part of America which has been yet discover'd, seem to contradict that Opinion. The Nature of the Soil and Air is not known; 'tis thought that they are like Canada, and that the Country is fruitful in all things. The Inhabitants, so far as we know of them, live upon Fishing and Hunting, and they are cloath'd with the Skins of Beasts. Their Canoes, or little Gallies, are fastned together with Cords made of the Bark of Coco's, which never rots in the Water. They Trade with the People of Japan, and are subject to that Emperor, paying him Tribute: Upon which account it is, that this Prince forbids all Strangers which Trade to his Kingdom, to have any Commerce in the Land of Jesso. The Natives are Idolaters.

As for NEW DENMARK, NEW NORTH-WALES, the Isles of CUMBERLAND and RAWLEIGH, we know nothing of them but the Names, and some Coasts: so that all we have to say of them is, That these Countries lie on the North of America, toward Hurſon's-Sea, that they are very Cold, and that we have little Account of them.

S E C T. II

The Antartic, or Southern Countries.

These Countries are call'd ANTARCTICK from the Pole of that Name, near which they lie; they are also nam'd Southern, because of their Situation. The Dutch Relations pretend, that they are not less than America, and as Fruitful and well Peopled as Europe. They reach not farther than the Sixtieth Degree of Southern Latitude: Magellan, who discover'd them first, gave them the Name of Magellanica.

The Air is very different, according to the several Regions of it; but it is said, the Soil is generally fertil in all sorts of Fruit, wild and tame Beasts, some of which are unknown to us. Fernando Quiros the Spaniard, Mayre, Browers and Schouten, Dutchmen, observ'd several Mouths of Rivers, but durst not venture upon the Land; they only entred some Gulphs and commodious Havens. The Streight of Magellan, discover'd in 1520, is two hundred Leagues in length; and in some places two or three, in other six or ten Leagues wide. Mayre's Streights, on the East of Terra del Fuogo, discover'd in 1615, is ten Leagues long, and as many wide. Brower's Streight, found out in 1643, is much like Mayre's. The English and Dutch go that Way sometimes to the East-Indies; and Dampier chose rather to go this Way, and Coast the Terra del Fuogo, than venture thro' the Magellanick Streight; because of the difficulty of that Passage.

NEW GUINEE, NOVA GUINEA, is near the Equinoctial Line; it is one of the biggest Isles in the World. It is so call'd, because it seems to be diametrically opposite to Guinee in Africa, and because 'tis part of the West-Indies: It is separated from the Continent by a Streight or Current of the Sea of the Land of Papoa, which is a very considerable Island on the East of Giolo; it is a good Country, but little frequented by the Europeans.

TERRA del FUOGO, already mention'd, is on the South of America; it consists of several Islands, call'd the Magellanick, the Sereights of Magellan, and the Fires which they observ'd there gave Name to the Land. The Air and Soil are very good.

The STATES ISLAND lies South-east of it, and hath almost the same Nature and Air.

The SOUTHERN UNKNOWN REGION, or TERRA AUSTRALIS INCOGNITA, is a vast Tract of Land, as we judge by the Coasts. I have distinguish'd the Parts of it by the several Names given it by Pilots and Captains, who have sail'd by them, which are to be seen in the foregoing Table. The Inhabitants are white, of a large Stature, strong, industrious and courageous; it is very sad to fall into their Hands, as some Europeans have found by unhappy Experience. Some modern Relations tell us, That in all that vast Country they have neither King nor Prince, all the People are only combin'd together in several Factions, in the Form of a Commonwealth. They chuse Governours only to make the Lazy work, punish Offenders, and render Justice to every Man. They are Idolaters, and have Oratories to pray to their Idols in: They observe certain fasts, and Wash their Bodies on certain Days every Year.

The Country of NEW ZEALAND is Antipodes to France; the Dutch, in the Year 1642, were used cruelly by the Men they found there of an extraordinary Stature. Fernando de Quiros, who spent 14 Years in these Voyages, discover'd it before those Republicans. He was fourteen Months at the Court of the King of Spain, to persuade his Catholick Majesty by eight several Petitions, to send Colonies thither; and represented a thousand Advantages that would arise to them by the Extent of it, Fruitfulness, People, and Conveniency of the Ports, but was not regarded. It is placed in the Dutch Maps between the 34 and 44 Degr. of South Latitude, and between the 189 and 194 Degr. of Longitude.

VAN DIEMEN'S LAND is situated farther Westward, between the 163 and 169 Degr. of Longitude; and between the 41 and 44 Degr. of Southern Latitude. This Country was first discover'd Novemb. 24. A. D. 1642, by Abel Tasman a Hollander, who impos'd on it that Name in Honour of Anthony van Diemens, Governour of the Dutch East-India Company; whence it is also termed, The Country of Anthony van Diemens: But 'tis not known, whether it be an Island, or a Continent; in regard that its Northern Coast only was descry'd, with Fredrick-Henry's Bay, &c.

The other Parts of Terra Australis lie farther Northward, and follow in their Order.

NEW HOLLAND is wash'd on the North, by the Seas of the Molucca's and Anchidol, and on the West and South by the Indian Ocean. Its Sea-Coasts were discover'd by the Hollanders, above Fifty Years ago; and its Bounds are usually set out in the Maps, between the 12 and 35 Degrees of Southern Latitude, and between the 134 and the 169 Degr. of Longitude. This Country is divided into several Parts, viz. Peter Nuytz's Land, which derives its Name from its first Discoverer, Discoverer, who arriv'd on those Coasts A. D. 1625; Het Landt van Lemmen, or, The Lions-Island; The Land of Concord; in Dutch, 't Landt van Iendracht; accidentally found out, and so nam'd by the Hollanders, as they were making a Voyage to the Molucca's, A. D. 1618; the Countries of Ldels, Du-Wit, and Arnent.

CARPENTARIA, or CARPENTER'S LAND, owes its Denomination to one Carpenter, a Dutch Commander, who first made a discovery of its Coast; and is remarkable for its situation between New Holland and New Guinea, in the innermost part of the Indian Ocean.

LA TIERRA AUSTRAL DEL ESPIRITU SANTO, i. e. THE SOUTHERN COUNTRY OF THE HOLY GHOST, a large Tract of Terra Australis, in the Southern part of the Pacifick Sea, was first found out and so call'd, by Peter Ferdinand de Quiros, in the Name of Philip III. King of Spain, A. D. 1606. It is extended very far from the North-west to the South-east; and to 15, or 16 Deg. of Southern Latitude: It contains the Harbours of S. Felipe, S. Jago, and Veracruz, near the Rivers Jordan and S. Salvador; and many Islands lie over against its Northern Coast, according to the Relation of John de Turrecremata, in the Voyage of the said Ferdinand Quiros. M. Sanson places this Country on the South-east of New Guinea, and on the North of it the Islands of Solomon; but both are omitted in the Dutch Maps. Jacob le Mayre took the Island of Good Fortune, and the Horn-Isles, which he discover'd in his Voyage to New Guinea, for those of Solomon; because he found them to agree with Ferdinand Quiros's Description. Others make the Number of Solomon's Islands to amount to 20, but their Names are scarce known; neither are they inhabited by any European Colony. The chief of them are, S. Isabella, which is of a larger extent than the rest; Guadalcanale, and S. Nicholo. Anthony of Leon informs us, That the Spaniards made three several Discoveries of these Islands, viz. The first by Alvarez de Mendana, A. D. 1567; the second by the same Alvarez, in 1599, who was then accompanied by Peter Ferdinand de Quiros, and died there; and the third by the same Ferdinand de Quiros, in 1605.

We have but lightly touch'd upon the Parts of Terra Australis, in regard that its Sea-coasts only were discover'd by the Hollanders about 50 Years ago; but the Nature of the inland Country, is altogether unknown to them, as well as to the rest of the European Nations.

Neither indeed can much more be deliver'd; concerning a great number of Islands of the Pacifick Sea, which are but of small compass, and were only discover'd accidentally upon several Occasions. Those that lie on the North of the Equinoctial Line, were discover'd and nam'd by the Spaniards, as they were sailing from America, to the Ladrones and the Philippines: But those that appear on the South of the same Line, were found out, for the most part, by Jacob le Mayre, and William Cornelius Schouten, and call'd by their Names, when after having pass'd the New Streight, they sail'd from South America to New Guinea.

Time may possibly bring to Light as particular Accounts of all these Countries, as we now have of America, which was as much unknown to former Ages. But for the Present these Descriptions are as succinct as are to be had, or at least as good as needs of Countries which are never travell'd to, nor from which any thing is brought for our use. And with them we shall close our Description, which we hope has answer'd the Reader's Expectation, and given him an Idea of all the Known Parts of the Earth. We heartily wish him as much Pleasure and Profit in reading it, as we have had Care and Pains in composing it, and then I am sure we shall both be pleas'd.

BOOKS Printed for Awnsham and John Churchill, in Pater-Noster-Row.

A Treatise of Antient and Present Geography. Together with a Set of Maps, both of Antient and Present Geography, design'd for the Use of Young Students in the Universities.

A New Set of Maps both of Antient and Present Geography, wherein not only the Latitude and Longitude of many Places are Corrected, and according to the latest Observations; but also the most Remarkable Differences of Antient and Present Geography may be quickly discern'd by a bare Inspection or comparing of Correspondent Maps; which seems to be the most natural and easie Method to lead Young Students (for whose use the Work is principally intended) unto a Competent knowledge of the Geographical Science. Both by Edward Wells, D. D. and Student of Christ-Church, Oxon.

Mr. Lock's Essay of Human Understanding. in Folio.

— Two Treatises of Government; in the former, the false Principles and Foundation of Sir Robert Filmer and his Followers are detected and overthrown; The latter an Essay concerning the True Original, Extent, and End of Civil Government.
